The increased activities at the Lasky studio in Hollywood have necessitated the creation of the "department of productions." Fred Cley, business manager of the studio, is to have supervision. It will be Mr. Cley's duty to supervise all matters pertaining to the different productions and directors after the scenario has been passed upon. This arrangement will have the incidental effect of abolishing the continuity department as such. The new plan calls for two continuity writers to be assigned to each director, the three working in collaboration to construct the continuity as it seems most advisable from the technical and directorial viewpoint.

"CURRENT EVENTS" TAKES HOLD ON PUBLIC.

A new record for booking has been established for a single-reel release on its first showing by the new Universal special feature, Current Events. This interesting reel of latest happenings of importance in the world made its first appearance on May 14, and twenty-eight of the leading theaters in New York showed it on first run.

All the big motion picture houses on Broadway from Forty-second to One Hundred and Tenth street ran Current Events from two days to a week. The Rialto theater played it a solid week, and Manager Rothapfel was enthusiastic in his praise of the timeliness of the subjects presented in the reel.

CAPTAIN PEACOCKE RETURNS TO SCREEN.

Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, widely known as a short story writer, scenario editor, poet, actor and screen star, will return to the screen in support of Jackie Saunders in her latest production for Mutual entitled "Betty Be Good." Captain Peacocke will appear as Jackie's millionaire father.

Captain Peacocke has more than two hundred short stories to his credit and is the author of more than four hundred original photoplays and forty adaptations. He is the author of "Sunshine and Gold," one of the Jackie Saunders features which will shorty be released through Mutual.

TOURNEUR TO DIRECT ELSIE FERGUSON.

Elsie Ferguson arrived in New York last Thursday following the conclusion of "Shirley Kay," one of the season's most successful theatrical offerings, and will commence her motion picture activities for Artcraft Pictures within a few days. Simultaneous with her arrival it was announced by Artcraft that Miss Ferguson's first picture, "Barbary Sheep," by Robert Hitchen, will be staged under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, producer of the Mary Pickford pictures, "A Poor Little Rich Girl" and "The Pride of the Clan," as well as various other recent film successes.

EXHIBITORS REPEATING ON ARBUCKLE.

The increased business on Paramount Arbuckle Comedies placed with the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company as soon as the first picture, "The Butcher Boy," had been exhibited a few days was taken as an indication that the picture was going extremely well in the houses where it was being shown. The word of the exhibitors who had played the picture strengthened this indication. When rebookings on the same picture began to come in, however, it was definitely and indisputably certain that Arbuckle was a winner with the public and that his first picture had the "punch."

PARAMOUNT SHOWS "THE KEY TO BEAUTY."

The subject called "The Key to Beauty," forming part of the sixty-ninth release of Paramount-Bray Pictographs, is sure to find favor among the gentler sex, for it is an exposition of the methods adopted by some of our famous stage beauties in preserving and developing their charms—and these methods can, if milady is ambitious, be used by her in her boudoir to her great advantage.

Illustrative of Pathe's clean pictures policy is the March and April Bulletin of the National Juvenile Motion Picture Board. Out of a list of sixty pictures suitable for children, there are twenty-eight from the Pathe program.

Comments on the Films

EXCLUSIVELY BY OUR OWN STAFF

General Film Company.

THE MAN WITH THE LIMP (Kalem).—A number of the "Grant, Police Reporter" series. George Larkin performs some more thrilling stunts in this number. He furnishes a thrill when he jumps from a second-story window, and later he climbs to the roof of a pier, lassoes the mast of a steamer just slipping out, and swings into the ship's rigging. In this manner he captures a crook. A fair number.

THE HOLE IN THE MOUNTAIN (Kalem).—A two-reel episode of "The American Girl" series. The release is one of the best yet. Thrills are plenty. The picture is full of action—good riding, fighting and shooting. The backgrounds are very good. The story tells of how Madge King and her father bring to justice a band of bandits, and also the loan shark, who is the brains of the gang. Marin Sais and the usual company of Kalemites appear. Reviewed in this issue.

THE HOBO RAID (Kalem).—A one-reel comedy with Ham and Bud. There is lots of slapstick work done by the leading comedians and their aids, and of its type the number is acceptable. The comedy is built on the idea of a bunch of tramps who want food. How they get it and are finally subdued by Ham and Bud allows of a number of laughs. Henry Murdoch is also seen on the screen.

THE LAST OF HER CLAN (Selig).—A one-reel drama that was evidently made some time ago. The story tells of a Kentucky feud. The girl goes to live with her uncle and cousin, to whom she is betrothed. Complications follow, and a few are killed. Molly is finally the last of her clan. The cast is composed of Virginia Kirtley, Morris Cytron, Robyn Adair and E. J. Brady.

THE PRODIGAL'S RETURN (Selig).—An ordinary two-reel drama with nothing much of especial interest. The story is conventional and not new. It tells of the two brothers—one good and the other bad—and of the girl who is in love with the prodigal, while she is beloved by the good son. After the bad youth comes back from the city the other brother plans to betray him, but both are made to see the error of their ways by the reading from the Bible of the story of the prodigal son. The cast includes Casson Ferguson, M. C. Von Betz, Fred Eckhart and Byrdine Zuber.

THE COP AND THE ANTHEM (Broadway Star Feature).—One of the O. Henry series that is especially pleasing. The production is full of natural comedy. It is also thoroughly human, for we know that every day on the numerous park benches of New York City we meet with just types as the "Soapy" of the story, which character is admirably played by Thomas R. Mills. "Soapy" is one of those individuals who would a thousand times rather winter on Blackwell's Island than do a stroke of work; and the efforts and failures of this man in trying to get arrested are highly amusing.

Christie Film Company.

FATHER'S BRIGHT IDEA, April 30.—Father chooses the wrong manicure girls to try whether his prospective son-in-law has all the good habits he claims in lieu of bank account. There is amusement in it, but it is not very fresh. Longer review on another page of this issue.

WITH THE MUMMIES' HELP, May 7.—Not very funny. It is not acted or written to be really comical. For longer review see another page of this issue.

HIS LAST PILL, May 28.—An invalid husband is cured of his pill habit by wifey, who conspires with a friend to make him jealous. The presence of his successor and the picture of the good times when he is gone make hubby feel sick, but gets well. A fair picture. For longer review see another page of this issue.

A LUCKY SLIP.—A fair comedy picture with enough of the unexpected to give laughter. It is a picture that will be liked. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue.

Fox Film Corporation.

HIS BOMB POLICY, May 14.—Charles Conklin, Alfred Goulding and Ann Ivers are the chief funmakers in this two-reel knockabout farce which is full of lively action. Charles Parrott has given it expert direction.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

CLOVER'S REBELLION, May 21.—Anita Stewart as a young southern girl with three suitors is the star of this five-reel comedy-drama. The plot is fairly entertaining. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

K-E-S-E, Inc.

THE LAD AND THE LION (Selig), May 14.—An absorbing, adventurous story from the book of Edgar Rice Burroughs, finely visualized, and abounding in beautiful exteriors—both marine and desert scenes. In the excellent cast are Vivian Reed, Will Machin, Charles Le Moyne and Al. W. Filson. A review will be found on another page in this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

SOWERS AND REAPERS (Rolfe), May 7.—A Laura Jean Libby sort of story has been filmed in this five-reel melodrama in which Emmy Wehlen is featured. The story is more or less conventional and obvious, but will probably make a hit with a number of fans. A full review was printed in last week's issue.

THE REGENERATION OF REGINALD (Metro), May 7.—This is a sorry comedy reel. It is more sad than funny. Ralph Herz is seen as a sissy who becomes a "cave man." The only laughs will be at and not with the comedy.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 124 (Gaumont), May 16. This issue of the Weekly is notable for the excellent manner in which the visit of the French commission to New York has been covered. The scenes taken evidently from the top of a skyscraper in the neighborhood of Battery Park are remarkable, showing the surging crowds of people straining every muscle and nerve to get a glimpse of General Joffre. The individual pictures of General Joffre contained in this number are the best that have been taken. Other items of special interest will also be found in this number.

JERRY'S FINISHING TOUCH (Cub), May 17.—In this number of the George Ovey comedies Jerry gets in wrong on account of a couple of attractive feminines. Some of the slapstick work in which he puts one of his adversaries in a trunk and locks him up and is chased from room of a house by another will be found amusing to the George Ovey fans. The production is on the whole very ordinary.

REEL LIFE NO. 56 (Gaumont), May 17.—The subjects on this reel are "Speeding the Spoken Word," which is a good illustration of the task of making possible telephone communication; "The Toothsome Crab," which shows us how crabs are cooked and canned; "Beating the High Cost of Furs," presenting scenes on a rabbit farm where the rabbits are reared for their skins; and "A School on the Beach," showing a California method of teaching the young one day in the week at least. An interesting number.

TWO OF A KIND (Strand), May 23.—This is quite an amusing one-reel comedy in which a young husband and his wife each have made an innocent date for the same night of which they are afraid to tell each other. The result is that they are both chased home by the police. Some very amusing situations occur in this picture which will be found entertaining to most audiences.

REEL LIFE NO. 56 (Gaumont), May 24.—The subjects contained in this number of the series are "The Sugar Industry of Barbados"; "Plowing with a Motor Car"; "Caviar, the Russian Delicacy"; "Golfing on Wheels," and "$1,000 Playhouse." An interesting number.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

MANNING OUR NAVY (Rothacker), May 14.—A fine patriotic film showing what happens to the navy recruit from the time he enlists until he is ready to take his place on the high seas. The scenes in the picture are taken at the Great Lakes Training Camp near Chicago.

CAUGHT IN THE END (Vogue), May 19.—In this two-part farce-comedy number a wife jealous of her husband finally uncovers one of his misdeeds in which he has stolen off unknown to her to a masque ball. Coming home drunk accompanied by his stenographer who has dressed in male attire for the occasion and another pal the wife finds out his disloyalty. Rather amusing but not beyond the ordinary.

A ZEPPELIN ATTACK ON NEW YORK (Rothacker), May 21.—An excellent patriotic number in which some trick photography of unusual excellence has been interspersed with scenes in New York's harbor and views of battleships. A full review of the picture will be found elsewhere.

CHUBBY INHERITS A HAREM (La Salle), May 21.—A two-part farce comedy of ordinary merit. Chubby living with his sister one day receives a letter from a friend saying that a friend of his has died in the Orient and is sending his small family to him to care for. This turns out to be a number of young women of the harem. Some slapstick stuff is also included in the comedy which may be amusing to some audiences.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS NO. 7 (Signal), May 21.—In this number of the serial Lady Melrose, mistaken in the dark for Helen, is kidnapped by a couple of gangsters and taken away to be sold to a certain Chinaman for a wife. The suspense in this number is well sustained, and we are left wishing to know the outcome of the affair.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE GREAT CHINESE WALL (International), May 27.—A half-reel of interesting views of the great wall of China, a "Krazy Kat" cartoon, "Moving Day," is on the same reel.

POLICE PROTECTION (Myers-Theby Corp.), June 3.—The hero of this Meyers-Theby comedy engages a detective to watch his home while he is away. He returns unexpectedly and a number of comic entanglements follow. Up to the standard of the series.

THE RIDDLE OF THE DOUBLE CROSS (Astra), June 3.—In the twelfth instalment of "Mystery of the Double Cross" Peter learns that another woman besides Philippa has the cross on her arm. A longer review is printed in this issue.

AN AMATEUR ORPHAN (Thanhouser), June 3.—This five-reel comedy drama was written by Agnes C. Johnstone and introduces Gladys Leslie as a Thanhouser star. It is bright and entertaining. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

BEYOND RECALL (Astra), June 3.—The dramatic interest in number 4 of "The Neglected Wife" receives new force when the wife learns that her husband is interested in another woman. Another review is printed in this issue.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

FRECKLES (Lasky), May 28.—A five-reel screen version of Gene Stratton Porter's famous novel, this picture is bound to repeat the success of the book. Jack Pickford and Louise Huff head the cast. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

UNCONQUERED (Lasky), May 31.—Voodooism is used to bring about the dramatic scenes of this five-reel photoplay. Fannie Ward is the featured player. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation.

THE MILLIONAIRE VAGRANT (Ince-Kay Bee), May 27.—An interesting story of the adventures of an almost useless young millionaire who undertakes to live on six dollars a week and do nothing immoral. Charles Ray in the title role. A nicely balanced and attractive presentation.

A ROYAL ROGUE (Mack Sennett-Keystone), May 20.—An entertaining farce of swift action, some humor and plenty of laughable situations.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

ROPED INTO A SCANDAL (L-KO), Week of May 28.—A two-reel comic dealing with the flirtations of a certain Mr. Wildcherry and a neighbor named Mr. Beereyed. Some of the business is pretty rough in this, though most of the antics are funny enough to get over without great offense. The trick effects up and down the high building are very laughable.

UNEASY MONEY (Joker), Week of May 28.—A comedy number, by Jack Cunningham, featuring Wm. Franey, Zasu Pitts, Lillian Peacock and Milburne Moranti. The editor of the Bingtown Bugle is imposed upon in an amusing manner by a confidence man and his girl accomplice. The editor buys a phoney diamond ring from the man to present to the girl, and then discovers that both have flown. This strikes a good average.

THE PURPLE SCAR (Rex), Week of May 28.—A two-reel number, featuring Constance Johnson, Page Peters and others. This opens on a beach in Italy, where a young man saves a native girl from drowning. Six years later the Italian girl and her brother are in the slums of New York, where the latter is known as "Grip, the Silent." Illicit drug traffic enters into the yarn, which takes on a melodramatic turn. The construction is weak and some of the photography uneven. The cast and general scenic effects are pleasing. This is not very strong as a whole.

TELL MORGAN'S GIRL (Nestor), May 28.—A slum comedy, featuring Eddie Lyons as a country musician who comes to a wine room in the city. He tames the local bouncer, who made sport of his music, and forces the patrons of the place to sing "The Last Rose of Summer." This is amusing and diverting in its way, but the idea is not of a high standard. Lee Moran, Edith Roberts and Fred Gamble also appear.

THE GUNMAN'S GOSPEL (Victor), May 29.—A Western subject, by Raymond Wells, featuring Jack Mulhall, Harry Griffith and Jean Hersholt. This concerns a revivalist who comes to talk prohibition in a bad Western town. The hero holds up the scoffers and makes them worship at the point of a gun. There are some good comedy touches in this, but it closes rather abrubtly.

THE STOLEN ACTRESS (Gold Seal), May 29.—A three-reel number, by Fred Jackson, featuring Ruth Stonehouse, George Webb, Chester Bennett, Hayward Mack and others. The story is somewhat lacking in continuity, but has a pleasing cast and makes good appeal in certain picturesque locations. The plot concerns a young actress who goes into the mountains and lives with a family. The old man conducts an illicit still and during the course of the story has a change of heart and smashes it. Only fair in plot but generally pleasing in presentation.

AN EIGHT-CYLINDER ROMANCE (Victor), May 31.—A two-reel comedy number, by James Douglas. The plot is light, but clever and well worked out. J. Morris Foster and Wm. Human appear as two college chums and Rena Rogers as the latter's sister. The girl dresses as a young man chauffeur and drives her brother's car. The boys are wise and the chum plays holdup, putting the girl masquerader through a series of exciting and amusing experiences. The love affair follows as a result. This is a pleasing subject.

BY SPESHUL DELIVERY (Victor), June 1.—A comedy number with a strong juvenile interest, featuring Zoe Rae, Gertrude Astor and Val Paul. A little girl comes to visit her aunt and she and her small boy friend bring about the successful termination of her aunt's love affair. This is slight in plot, but amusing and well worth while.

THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE (Universal State Rights).—A six-reel Lois Weber picture in favor of birth control, the story itself is without offense and is excellently produced. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

World Pictures.

MATERNITY (Peerless), May 28.—A melodramatic finish is the best feature of this five-reel photoplay in which Alice Brady has the leading part. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

ATONEMENT (Brady Int. Service), May.—A five-reel melodrama, made in France, the picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue. The story is well acted, Regina Badet playing the principal part.

Miscellaneous.

FORUM FILMS (Conquest).—The feature number of this program is an adaptation of the Richard Harding Davis story, "The Boy Who Cried Wolf." This is designed to please the average audience, but more particularly the youthful ones. Other numbers of the program are "Crystals and Their Beauties," "The Making of Hundred Ton Guns," "The Story of Plymouth Rock," "Skylarking on Skis," and an animated cartoon entitled "Farmer Alfalfa's Pup." A review of these pictures will be found elsewhere.

REDEMPTION (Julius Steger), May.—This six-reel photoplay shows Evelyn Nesbit as a clever screen actress. The story is suggested by certain incidents in her own life, but is not offensive. It is given a longer review on another page of this issue.

BUD FISHER IS "ON THE JOB."

When Bud Fisher took over the management of the "Mutt and Jeff" animated cartoon business, he did so with a profound purpose. The notable artist realized that if his product were to receive the proper circulation due it it was necessary that he take a personal hand in its affairs. Convinced that the "Mutt and Jeff" animated cartoon comedy had reached a state of distinction rarely attained not only by a cartoon comedy, but also by a regular humorous attraction, Mr. Fisher undertook personally to attend to its distribution. It was not difficult for him to understand that the average exhibitor requires more than a picture. He also wants the service that comes with personal attention.

By taking the reins of the distribution of "Mutt and Jeff" in hand, every detail that might arise in connection with the exhibitor comes under his personal supervision. Those who know Bud Fisher know him to be a man who takes the utmost pains in every bit of work he does. His success in every enterprise with which he has been associated stamps him as one whose connection with the exhibitors will consequently be appreciated.

"I solicit any suggestion that any exhibitor may see fit to submit to me which he believes will boost the caliber of my 'Mutt and Jeff' cartoon comedies," says Mr. Fisher.

UNIVERSAL'S SCREEN MAGAZINE GROWING.

Many subjects of more than usual interest are found in the current issue of the Universal Screen Magazine. This weekly release is rapidly growing to be one of the popular films of its kind on the market. Every effort is made to furnish only subjects which have an appeal to all classes and which will be received with favor by audiences in large and small theaters.

This week's issue of the Screen Magazine leads off with an exceptionally instructive subject showing how a bronze statue is made. Allen C. Hewman, the noted sculptor, is shown at work on his famous bronze figure, "The Hiker." No phase of this little known industry has escaped the omnipotent eye of the camera.

Some wonderful pictures of the historic Virginia Dare caverns of Virginia are shown as they were reproduced for the American Museum of Natural History. Another subject of timely interest shows the preparedness measure taken by the New York Police Department in patrolling the harbors. Close studies of the strange fish in the New York Aquarium are also shown. This subject has a particular appeal for children and will prove instructive to grown-ups, too. Besides these subjects others of interest are also depicted.

State Rights Department

Conducted by BEN. H. GRIMM

"What's Wrong With the Market?"

Big Buyer Says Pictures Are Not Worth Prices Asked—Producers Looking for "Sucker Money."

"WHY is it," we asked a man who knows—one of the biggest buyers of state rights pictures—"that with several multiple-reel pictures on the market there is so little buying being done?" He told us—told us in great detail and, among other things, said:

"While there is undoubtedly an acute slackness in the market at the present time, there is lots of money there. Buyers have the money, but they are holding on to it because there is little to buy that is worth the price asked. Of course, we must disregard the immediate present. There will be lots of money in sight by September. But the big fact remains that of the many pictures on the market few are really good state rights propositions. A picture to be a good state rights proposition must be an attraction, as differentiated from merely a good motion picture. It must be novel—something that can be absolutely relied to draw crowds at advanced prices.

"But nowadays it seems that a man gets hold of a two-reel idea, pads it out into seven or eight reels, and offers it for sale on a state rights basis, believing that he can get away with it merely because the picture is in seven or eight reels. The day when a man could do that has passed. To-day a picture to be a good state rights proposition has to be off the beaten track—but not a freak. We have several freaks in the field right now, but they won't go. The idea has to be new—there must be something more behind it than merely the same old stuff worked over in a little different way, with beautiful sets and a lot of other costly junk that the public will not pay advanced prices to see.

"And with a few exceptions most of the pictures on the market are simply pictures with old ideas worked over and padded out. The few pictures that are different—that are real attractions—are selling and are cleaning up all over the country.

"Another thing that accounts for a lack of buying at present is the lack of willingness on the part of exploiters to take legitimate sums for their pictures. A man makes a picture for, say, $20,000, and expects to sell it for at least $200,000. That is where he makes his big mistake. He does not know his market. For instance, if I go to a man and say: 'I like your picture; I'll pay you $6,500 for it for New England.' When I make that offer I know the market and I know the goods he has to sell. I know just about how much the gross receipts on the picture will be in my territory, and I base my offer on a legitimate profit both to the seller and to myself. But no, he does not want my $6,500. He is waiting for 'sucker money.' He says to me: 'Huh, Bill Blink got $15,000 for New England for his picture, and I guess I can get $15,000 for mine.' Half the time he doesn't even give me credit enough to think that I know, as well as he knows, that the fellow that bought Bill Blink's picture for $15,000 lost more than half of that amount. He thinks, like P. T. Barnum, that there's one born every minute.

"There are not many more 'suckers' buying films. The ones that have been stung have made and still are making such a loud holler that even the most venturous would-be 'suckers' have been warned away. When the exploiter of state rights pictures comes to a realization that he must deal with men who know their market he will learn the market and will sell his pictures at a legitimate price, and buying and selling will go merrily on to the advantage of everyone. That time is not far distant, and when it comes the wise ones will be ready—the others will be looking for jobs."

Lesser Promotes Merger

Plans Nation-wide Organization of Exchange Men for Purchase of Features—Pittsburg Exchanges Merge.

SOL L. LESSER, of San Francisco, is promoting what is planned to be a nation-wide organization of leading exchange men. The organization will consist, it is said, of representative buyers from all portions of the country. Thousands of dollars have already been pledged by members of the organization, it is announced, and the group will include leading theaters in the various territories represented.

The first step in the formation of the organization was the merging, during the past week, of the Supreme Photoplay Productions and the Masterpiece Film Attractions, both of Pittsburgh. Mr. Lesser is the head of the Masterpiece concern. Plans for the merger were completed by Leon D. Netter, general manager for Mr. Lesser, and Harry Grelle, head of the Supreme.

Under the new arrangement made between the Supreme and the Masterpiece, the former concern will do the booking for the Masterpiece in the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia territories on features controlled by the Masterpiece, which include "The Ne'er Do Well," "The Spoilers" and "Neptune's Daughter." The Supreme will continue booking its "Masque of Life," "The Dumb Girl of Portici" and "Idle Wives."

Mr. Grelle will be general manager of the Supreme, which will move to quarters in the Seltzer Building, Pittsburgh. George P. Jacobs, who has been local manager of the Masterpiece, will be transferred to Cleveland. According to the plans of Mr. Lesser the plan of operation will be the purchase of big feature productions for the United States, fixing a definite percentage of the cost on each territory, which will be assessed to the individual theaters that are pledged to the combination.

CENTURY COMEDIES ATTRACT BUYERS.

Under the trade mark of Century Comedies, Alice Howell will appear in a series of merrymakers personally directed by J. G. Blystone, and the first release will be "Balloonatics." This feature has again proved Miss Howell's adaptability to comedy. She is declared to perform a great variety of reckless "stunts" in pursuance of Director Blystone's process of injecting laughs into various situations. The comedy proves just how much fun can be extracted from a gas-bag of giant proportions.

Julius Stern declares that Century Comedies have been projected at just the right time, when laughs are needed if they ever were to keep the spirits of the public in buoyant condition. Presentations of Century's first release at the Strand, New York, set the mark of approval upon the series and has proved an endorsement valuable both to the exhibitor and to the manufacturer in the process of publicity.

Forthcoming Centurys include "Neptune's Naughty Daughter" and "Automaniacs," with Miss Howell employed in further demonstrations of her recklessness. Director Blystone is now working harder than ever in the production of future releases, to keep the series running at the standard established by the earier issues.

SPITZER GOES TO COAST.

Nat H. Spitzer, vice-president and sales manager of the King-Bee Films Corporation, has left for a trip to Chicago, St. Louis, Dallas, Los Angeles and San Francisco. He carries with him the first three King-Bee Comedies, "Back Stage," "The Hero" and "The Bakery," and will screen them before numerous state right buyers and others interested in these comedies.

SERVICE.

The columns of this department are open to anyone who has anything to say of interest to or helpful to those concerned with state rights pictures.

It is our endeavor to make this a department of information and service to producer, seller, buyer, exhibitor and every other factor that is a part of the system of state rights marketing.

What's YOUR grievance?

"ONE LAW FOR BOTH" WELL RECEIVED.

"One Law for Both," the latest super-attraction produced by Ivan Abramson for Ivan Film Productions, Incorporated, was very well received by the critics of the New York press, and the fine business that the production is doing at the Lyric theater, New York, where it is playing an indefinite engagement, would indicate that the general public fully indorses the opinions of the critics. Most of the leading players in the production, including Rita Jolivet, James Morrison, Leah Baird, Vincent Serrano, Paul Capelland, Pedro De Cordoba, Margaret Greene, Helen Arnold and Anders Randolf, were present at the opening performance, as well as a number of celebrities of the film world.

Almost all of the reviewers from the New York dailies concurred in the opinion that because of the intense interest in Russian affairs which is so widespread in this country, the production would be a financial success. The fidelity to detail, which is so discernible throughout the picture, was also commented on, as well as the great basic strength of the theme, which embodies a three-fold plea for equality, economic, political, and in the relations between the sexes.

SHERMAN PLANNING BIG PICTURES.

Harry A. Sherman, president of the Sherman-Elliott Company, is rushing back and forth from coast to coast, working on two big features which he expects to have ready for release about September. "I am preparing for two big pictures—ten reelers at least," Mr. Sherman says, "and they are now being adapted from two very well known books by authors of high reputation. They are common sense books that have appealed to millions, and their stories always will. I expect to start producing shortly so that they will be ready for release early in the Fall, probably in September. They will cost a fortune to produce, but they are worth it."

LYNN CARD TOURING COUNTRY FOR HALL.

Lynn S. Card, representing Frank Hall Productions, Inc., is at present in Chicago on a country-wide tour in the interests of Edgar Lewis' "The Bar Sinister" and "Her Fighting Chance," in which Jane Grey is starred, the world rights to both of which productions are controlled by the Hall organization.

Mr. Card will go from Chicago to Detroit to arrange for the sale of the Michigan state rights to the Lewis production. It is understood "The Bar Sinister" will have its initial showing in Michigan within two weeks. Mr. Card will then go to Minneapolis, Indianapolis, and to the coast to close pending deals for both pictures.

MAYFAIR GRATIFIED BY INQUIRIES.

M. Schlesinger, president of the Mayfair Film Corporation, expressed his extreme satisfaction with the results obtained from making the initial anouncement of the company's advent into the film business through the medium of the trade journals. He said: "It is most extraordinary that so many replies have been received from buyers throughout the country regarding our proposed productions without our having resorted to any other advertising than in the few recognized trade papers. Of course I attribute the gratifying results to the extreme popularity of Mayfair's first star, Peggy Hyland, and also to the fact that the director, Charles J. Brabin, has done such efficient work, particularly during this year."

MONMOUTH'S "THE DEVIL'S PLAYGROUND" FINISHED.

Harry McRae Webster, president of and director for the Monmouth Film Corporation, has just finished a production entitled "The Devil's Playground." It is said the picture promises much. Also in preparation by Mr. Webster is another big production, the title of which has not as yet been announced.

Jules Bernstein, general manager of the Monmouth Corporation, has returned to New York from a tour of the West in the interests of his organization. A week before Mr. Bernstein arrived his assistant, W. E. Kesting, got back to New York from a tour of the South.

OHIO BUYER IN NEW YORK.

H. L. Charnas, general manager of the Standard Film Service Company, Cleveland, Ohio, is in New York and will remain until May 26 looking over the market with a view to purchasing single-reel novelties and feature productions for Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky. During his stay in New York Mr. Charnas will be located in Room 801, Godfrey Building; telephone Bryant 5426.

SCANDINAVIA TAKES KING-BEE COMEDIES.

The Scandinavian rights for King-Bee Billy West Comedies have been acquired by E. Mattson, Times Building, New York. The territory embraces the countries of Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

"THE HERO" (Second King-Bee).

"The Hero" is the title of the second King-Bee Comedy in two reels which is set for release on June 1. Billy West is featured in the production, in which also are Ethel Burton, Babe Hardy, Leo White and other clever players. Billy is a waiter who has ambitions to shine in society. The opportunity comes to him when he rescues a beautiful girl in a park from the unwelcome attentions of a pair of thugs. Of course, he receives an invitation to the girl's house, where he masquerades as a Count. Discovery comes in due time and the poor little waiter beats it back to his cafe, where, to add to his further discomfiture, Ethel and her society friends come slumming. Billy hardly rehabilitates himself by declaring that he is slumming, too.

The comedy gives Billy West, Ethel Burton, Babe Hardy and other members of the cast the opportunity of putting over some fast and furious fun. "The Hero," the second of the King-Bee series, is already popular among state right buyers and exhibitors, and is a meritorius successor to "Back Stage."

"Dough-Nuts" is the title of the third King-Bee release.

"SHOULD SHE OBEY?" DRAWING CROWDS.

"Should She Obey?" the new picture that is daily bringing crowds to the La Salle Theater, Chicago, is in big demand among state rights purchasers, who recognize that it is a picture with an appeal that is bound to bring the business.

So sincere are the men who inspired the picture in their desire to bring its lesson before the American public, and so thoroughly in earnest are the producers of the picture in their belief that they have something in "Should She Obey?" which is not just another picture, but a real story with a real lesson that will, without question, help considerably to build up their reputation as producers, that very liberal state rights propositions are being made to responsible purchasers.

Rights to "Should She Obey?" are being disposed of by the Arizona Film Company, Chicago.

FEW STATES OPEN FOR "BEWARE OF STRANGERS."

The Selig Company announces the following as unsold states for "Beware of Strangers": Oregon, Washington, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, eastern Pennsylvania and Michigan.

"Beware of Strangers" is a drama that interestingly exposes the swindling games that have been used to mulct millions from the unwary. Gilson Willets wrote the story. The picture was produced by Colin Campbell. The strong cast includes Thomas Santschi, Vivian Rich, Jack Richardson, Bessie Eyton, Edward Coxen, Fritzi Brunette, Al. W. Filson and Eugenie Besserer. The picture carries a strong story, full of action, with a succession of climaxes. It ran for a week at the La Salle theater, Chicago.

TRADE SHOWING OF "HER FIGHTING CHANCE."

"Her Fighting Chance," produced by Arthur L. Jacobs and starring Jane Grey, was given a trade showing at the Broadway Theater Wednesday morning, May 16, and was pronounced a success. Replete with red-blooded situations, all of which were deftly handled by Edwin Carewe, the director, "Her Fighting Chance" will rank among the best six-reel productions of the season.

A photodrama in the creation of which are linked together the names of three persons so eminent in their respective fields as Miss Grey, James Oliver Curwood, from whose novel, "The Fiddling Man," the photoplay was adapted, and Mr. Carewe, offers a combination of star, author and director of unusual interest to devotees of the silent drama and already there has been spirited bidding for the territorial rights.

STANWICK BUYS "GOD'S MAN" FOR NEW YORK.

New York state rights to the Frohman Amusement Company's feature, "God's Man," starring H. B. Warner, have been secured by Harry A. Stanwick, one of the controlling principals of Ivan Film Productions, Inc., 729 Seventh avenue, New York.

The negotiations covered a period of five days, and among other details involved was an agreement on Mr. Stanwick's part to spend a substantial sum in advertising. The purchase price for the seven-reel picture of Broadway life is said to have been quite high

JACK GORMAN TO PRODUCE "CORRUPTION."

Jack Gorman has leased the Crystal Studios, Fort Lee, N. J., where he will produce a series of big picturs. Mr. Gorman's first offering will be "Corruption," a seven-reel screen version of a stage play of which he is the author. "Corruption," it is announced, is a propaganda picture. Mr. Gorman will direct and release under the firm name of Super-Art Film Corporation.

The cast for "Corruption" includes Helen Marten, John J. Dunn, Henry Sedley, Florence Hackett, Arthur J. Pickens, Lucille Dorrington and Miss Stephenson.

SHERRILL LOOKING FOR BIG STORIES.

President William L. Sherrill of the Frohman Amusement Corporation and his aides have been most diligently scouring the market for plays, books and original scenarios for the past few weeks in order to secure the material for the next Frohman production to follow the one being produced at the Flushing studios of the company. Mr. Sherrill confesses to having read some seventy odd scripts himself during the past three weeks without having been rewarded with even a suggestion of an acceptable script.

Because of the realization of the import of the story, Mr. Sherrill has declared there is no limit to the amount he will pay for the proper vehicle to next receive its production under the Frohman banner, and accordingly, he has battered down the "serious" objection which some of the leading playwrights have heretofore considered as the one unjust angle of motion picture production—i. e., the lack of monetary recognition of their efforts.

The Frohman offices request that synopsis only be submitted to them and that the most likely material for their acceptance is not those which savor of the sex problem, but rather the writing of those themes of everyday life and which may grant ample opportunities to register the beauties of nature and picturize a lesson which will live with audiences after the exit from the theater.

OFFICIALS INTERESTED IN "HOW UNCLE SAM PREPARES."

The Hanover Film Company's patriotic feature, "How Uncle Sam Prepares," has aroused the interest of Government officials at Washington, and it is believed that Captain Charles E. Kimball, of the Hanover Company, will shortly arrange a showing of the picture in the National Capital. Correspondence relating to this has already passed between Captain Kimball and Francis Holley, of the National Defense Division of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, Department of Public Instruction.

In answer to the Hanover Company's offer to do with the picture whatever the Government thought would serve its interests best, Mr. Holley wrote that the firm was to be commended highly for the patriotic spirit displayed. Mr. Holley further wrote that the film was itself evidence that it was not a rehash from weeklies, and that not a single scene had been lifted or "duped" from any previous production. The picture is an accurate, authentic and comprehensively brief portrayal of the actual methods of training our country's defenders.

REVIEW BOARD LAUDS "BAR SINISTER."

"A stirring and forceful exposition of one of the greatest problems confronting the human race—a picture millions will wish to see, and yet by its careful and intelligent treatment of a delicate subject there is not one line, scene or situation which could possibly offend the most fastidious."

Such was the unanimous verdict of the National Board of Review, a committee of whose members recently sat in judgment of Edgar Lewis' new nine-reel photodrama of race equality, "The Bar Sinister," which begins an engagement of indefinite length on May 27 at the Broadway theater, New York, under the direction of Frank G. Hall.

Not a single objection, not a suggestion was made by the members who reviewed the production. All complimented Mr. Lewis for his able handling of a theme which, under the guiding hand of a less efficient director, might easily have been marred by scenes that would be apt to offend those who have extreme views on the mooted question of race equality.

The underlying theme of "The Bar Sinister" is the spiritual equality of mankind regardless of race, creed or color.

MARITIME PROVINCES OPEN TO STATE RIGHTS.

The Maritime Provinces, a territory hitherto closed to state rights pictures, has become a possibility for state rights men through the purchase of "Mothers of France" by Don McRae, proprietor of the Imperial Theater, Halifax. The Mme. Sarah Bernhardt feature was purchased for the Maritime Provinces from Regal Films, Limited, of Toronto. It is the first picture to be brought into the Provinces on the state rights plan.

No announcement as to the first showing has as yet been made by Mr. McRae, but it is presumed that the picture will be given its first run at the Imperial shortly.

Many exhibitors in the provinces feel that this move on the part of Mr. McRae opens the door for the entry of other big state rights features into the territory. Rumors are afloat to the effect that negotiations are pending for the introduction there of "The Whip."

BACKER BUYS "GOD'S MAN" FOR NORTHERN JERSEY.

After spirited bidding by four exchanges, it is announced by President William L. Sherrill of the Frohman Amusement Corporation that he entered into contract for his corporation with F. E. Backer, president of Dreadnaught Pictures, Inc., of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, whereby the latter corporation has acquired lease to the exclusive booking privileges of the recent Frohman success, "God's Man," starring H. B. Warner, for the territory of the northern section of the State of New Jersey.

BUYERS INTERESTED IN "PARENTAGE."

"One of the best evidences that the exhibitors throughout the country are interested in big features which deal with the real big problems of life—especially if they have exceptional advertising possibilities—is the large number of inquiries which are coming into my office daily in reference to 'Parentage,'" said Frank J. Seng, who is offering this superfeature on the state rights basis.

"Ever since we started our advertising and publicity campaign," he continued, "we have been receiving requests from every big state rights buyer and exhibitor for additional information concerning the picture. Already I have had to turn down several who wanted us to reserve certain sections of the country for them, because I may retain a lot of territory for myself. The foreign buyers are also interested, and it is very probable that South America will be sold soon after the picture is shown to the trade in New York.

"We have not set the date for the initial showing, but it will probably be some time within the next four weeks at the Rialto theater. Until then I would like to announce that we will dispose of no territories.

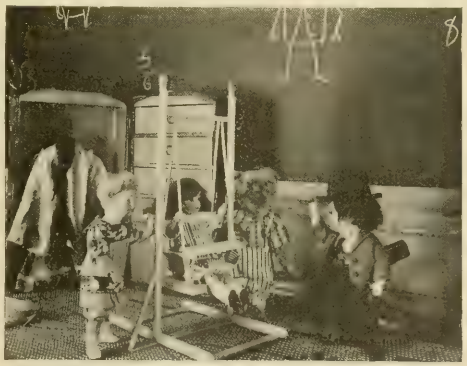
"It is also interesting to read the many letters we are receiving from various uplift societies all over the country that have been inspired by the strong title of this production. We are saving these letters and will turn them over to the state right buyers, for they will see, as well as the exhibitor, that with this background they will have ready-made audiences."

MO-TOY COMEDIES FOR STRAND THEATER.

Coincident with the closing of additional territories for Mo-Toy Comedies, the Peter Pan Film Corporation, of 729 Seventh avenue, New York, announces that these animated doll films will become a part of the program of the Strand theater, New York, beginning the week of May 21. This announcement, together with the news that Mo-Toy Comedies also have been booked by the Marcus Loew circuit of theaters, has further aroused the interest of territorial buyers and exhibitors in the Peter Pan concern's output.

These latest novelty comedy creations are in 500-foot lengths and will be released one each week. Aside from their novelty and absolute dissimilarity from anything else in motion pictures in that dolls and other toys are the characters and props, Mo-Toy Comedies have received commendation on the story-value of the pictures as well. It is not claimed for them that they are pictures that will keep an audience in a constant roar of laughter—rather are they films that irresistibly appeal to the humorous sense through their simple charm. Mo-Toys are the sort of program fillers that make an audience wish there were five reels of them instead of only 500 feet.

And the appeal of Mo-Toy Comedies is not limited. In some quarters the impression has arisen that Mo-Toys are suitable only for children. This is far from being the case, as is convincingly evidenced by their being made part of the entertainment offered by New York's discriminating theaters.



Scene from "A Midnight Frolic" (Mo-Toy).

Mo-Toy Comedies are now booking at the following exchanges: Educational Films Corporation of America, New York—New York and Northern New Jersey; Standard Film Service Company, Cincinnati—Southern Ohio and Kentucky; Standard Film Service Company, Cleveland—Northern Ohio; Standard Film Service Company, Detroit—Michigan; Standard Film Service Company, Escanaba, Mich.—Upper Peninsula; National Film Booking Service, Pittsburgh—Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Lea Bell Company, Chicago—Illinois, Indiana and Southern Wisconsin; and M. R. Dick, Minneapolis—North Dakota, South Dakota and Northern Wisconsin.

"THE PLANTER" READY JUNE 1.

The Nevada Motion Picture Corporation announces that its screen version of Herman Whittaker's novel, "The Planter," starring Tyrone Power, will be released about June 1. The big feature, which was more than a year in the making, is at present in the cutting room, where it is undergoing the process of trimming and elimination in such a manner as to cut out every foot of unnecessary matter.

An unusual feature is that the titles are being written by the author, whose ability to handle words and turn phrases has won for him the popularity and following that was materially evidenced by the big sale of "The Planter." The signing of Mr. Whittaker for this work is but one of the steps taken by the Nevada corporation looking to the perfection in every detail surrounding their production. Another evidence of this care is the fact that the preparation of the scenario alone consumed more than six months.

Realism has been particularly regarded in the production of the picture, and the story is said to be one of the strongest ever filmed. The entire feature abounds with thrills, pathos, heart-interest and the other elements that go to make the best in pictures.

BUD FISHER INVITES SUGGESTIONS.

When Bud Fisher took over the management of the "Mutt and Jeff" animated cartoon business he did so with a profound purpose. The artist realized that if his product were to receive proper circulation due it it was necessary that he take a personal hand in its affairs. Convinced that the "Mutt and Jeff" animated cartoon comedy had reached a state of distinction rarely attained not only by a cartoon comedy, but also by a regular humorous attraction, Mr. Fisher undertook personally to attend to its distribution.

"Since taking over the business management of 'Mutt and Jeff,'" said Mr. Fisher, "I realize the help an exhibitor can render to the manufacturer by any suggestion he may desire to communicate, because it is he who caters to those for whose satisfaction we all strive. When a man can truthfully say, 'Well, I'm pleasing the public,' he has attained the success to be proud of. With this end in view, I solicit any suggestion that any exhibitor may see fit to submit to me which he believes will boost the caliber of my 'Mutt and Jeff' cartoon comedies."

SEATTLE STATE RIGHTS MEN ACTIVE.

State rights men of Seattle have been active during the past week. Michael Rosenberg, of Deluxe, has bought "The Whip," "The Battle of Gettysburg" and "The Wrath of the Gods.' Mr. Rosenberg has called all his road men in to help him move to the new quarters in the film exchange building at 2011 Third avenue.

Philip Mendelsohn, of the Premier Film Company, has bought "In the Hands of the Law," "Boots and Saddles" and "The Social Evil" for the Northwest territory. L. J. Schlaifer has purchased the War News series and the "Terry Burlesque Cartoons."

AUSTRALASIAN FILMS GET "BAR SINISTER."

Australasian Films, Limited, have purchased the Australian rights to "The Bar Sinister" from Frank G. Hall, who controls the world's rights to Edgar Lewis' master nine-reel production. The purchase price is said to have been one of the biggest ever paid for any picture of similar length for the Australian territory. Edna Williams took a leading part in the negotiation of the sale.

Representatives of the Australian concern, relying on Edgar Lewis' past performances, purchased "The Bar Sinister" without having seen it.

"TRIP THROUGH CHINA" WESTERN RIGHTS SOLD.

California, Arizona and Nevada rights to a "Trip Through China" have been secured by Davis Brothers, of San Francisco. The firm is already busy arranging bookings. The picture has been shown for five weeks at Los Angeles, four weeks in Oakland and one week in San Diego, but there are many smaller places throughout California which will be reached by Davis Brothers. The firm plans to put the picture out with a lecturer, and have collected much Chinese paraphernalia for lobby displays.

SELZNICK GETS KING-BEE FOR NEW YORK.

Lewis J. Selznick has secured New York State rights to King-Bee Comedies, the Billie West series of pictures put out by Louis Burstein. It is said that there was keen competition to get the comedies for New York. "King-Bees are just what exhibitors are looking for," said Mr. Selznick. "I have seen the first three pictures—'Back Stage,' 'The Hero' and 'Doughnuts'—and I think they are great.

PHILADELPHIA PUBLICITY FOR "20,000 LEAGUES."

Abe L. Einstein has obtained much desirable publicity for "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," which is at present showing at the Forrest theater, Philadelphia. The film is controlled by the Peerless Feature Film Exchange.

SECOND BEACH PICTURE NEARING COMPLETION.

"The Auction Block," the second production of the Rex Beach Pictures Company, is rapidly nearing completion at the Weehawken studio of the company. There will remain then but a few exterior scenes.

Director Larry Trimble will take the company to Pittsburgh to film a steel mill scene which will be done in one of the big plants near the smoky city. It is expected that the production will be ready for exhibitors about September 1. The picture is far different from "The Barrier," or in fact any of the other Rex Beach stories, since it is a story of Broadway life with a chorus girl for the heroine.

The principal roles are played by Ruby DeRemer, Tom Powers, who is also acting the principal role in "Oh Boy"; Walter Hitchcock, Florence Deshon, Dorothy Wheeler, Florence John, Ned Burton, Charles Graham, Alec Francis, Bernard Randall and Francis Joyner. The handling of the second big feature of the Rex Beach Pictures Company is still in doubt, although there is some conjecture that it may be distributed by Lewis J. Selznick since Selznick now controls the distribution rights to "The Barrier."

REIBEN NEW YORK DISTRIBUTOR FOR CHRISTIE.

The Reiben Film Corporation, with offices at 729 Seventh avenue, New York, will in future distribute in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey the Christie Comedies. The Reiben corporation succeeds in the handling of the comedies the William Kemble interests. S. P. Reiben, who was formerly booking manager for the Kemble company, is the head of the Reiben concern.

"CABIRIA" OFF LOCAL MARKET JUNE 15.

The Mammoth Film Corporation announces that after June 15 D'Annunzio's "Cabiria" will be removed from the market. They have followed this announcement by getting out special one-sheets to that effect, and bookings all over their territory in New Jersey and New York State have been more than they can take care of.

BROCKLISS GETS FOREIGN RIGHTS TO KING-BEES.

King-Bee Film Corporation announces that arrangements have been made with J. Frank Brockliss to operate the foreign representations of their comedies. Australian rights to the comedies, it is also announced, have been obtained by Clement Mason's Superfeatures, of Sydney.

TYSON AND DUBIN BUY "WHERE IS MY DAUGHTER?"

Robert Lynch, manager of the Philadelphia Bluebird Exchange, has sold the entire rights to "Where Is My Daughter?" to H. Tyson and H. Dubin. The picture was bought for $10,000.

GOODNESS, WHAT A FACE!

It's hard to imagine that the first young lady to the right is Gladys Leslie, Thanhouser's "Smile Girl," while she carries that sort of an expression! It was "mugged" (not posed) for a scene in "An Amateur Orphan," released by Pathe June 1.

Scene from "An Amateur Orphan" (Thanhouser).

"I look awful," comments Miss Leslie on the photo, "but it was relaxation. You see, when it's your business to smile always, it's a diversion to make a face like that.

"It's not an uncommon face. A great many politicians in New York State bore it when the Wheeler bill for a state motion picture commission lost out. Movie men wore it when the New York bill to legalize Sunday showing was licked.

"But I'd rather see the politicians wear it than the movie men!"

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Famous Location in Kalem Drama

Old Vasquez Cave to Be Seen in Latest Episode of "The American Girl."

THE Kalem Company's policy of procuring none but the most striking locations for their series of Western dramas, "The American Girl," was well exemplified in the discovery of a location which will be seen in a forthcoming episode. About two months ago, Frederick R. Bechdolt, the author of virile Western stories, who is writing "The American Girl," submitted to Kalem's editor a story entitled "The Door in the Mountain." The story called for a massive door in the side of a mountain, from which a party of bandits ride on horseback. The story contained such a striking novel plot that Editor Lang determined that it would be produced regardless of the extra expense entailed in the search of the required location. So he laid the story aside to be produced later in the series, and assigned the Kalem "location-hunter" to the difficult task of finding a huge opening in the side of a mountain which would be big enough to allow a man to ride into it on horseback.

The location-hunter searched for two months and finally announced that he had found the very place. It was an enormous cave in the San Martin Canyon, and was formerly the retreat of Vasquez, the famous Mexican bandit. Upon inspection, the Vasquez cave was found to be ideal for "The Door in the Mountain." The surrounding country is wild and rugged, and the huge cave itself has a dark, foreboding aspect that fitly corresponds with the story.

BESSIE BARRISCALE AS A SCULLERY MAID.

Some of the most beautiful costumes and sets that have been seen since the establishment of the Ince studios will be shown in the production of "Miladi of Tags and Tatters," a forthcoming Triangle feature in which Thomas H. Ince will present Bessie Barriscale.

The opening scenes of this play are laid in an old castle on the isle of Saint Mary, near the mainland of Scotland. The time is during the American revolutionary war. Word is brought that Paul Jones in his famous Bon Homme Richard is hovering off the coast, and the inhabitants of the castle, from the Lord and Lady down, with the exception of one little scullery maid, played by Bessie Barriscale, all flee. Then the courageous mistress of the pots and pans has a glorious time masquerading in the fine Gainsborough silks and satins of the castle guests, and is mistaken for the Lady of the Manor by both the British troops sent from a nearby garrison and the landing party from the Bon Homme Richard, who drive the redcoats back. And Bessie finally trips lightly down to the shore and sets sail for America with Paul Jones and his famous ship. More than one hundred people took part in the filming of these scenes, under the direction of Raymond B. West. J. G. Hawks, who has written many big successes for Triangle, is the author of the story.

Fished for a Dance, Caught a Flood

How Hearst-Pathe Cameraman Found Something Just as Good When Indians Refused to Perform.

IN gathering film for the Hearst-Pathe News there are many times when a cameraman is sent out on some specific assignment and discovers upon his arrival that the "great picture" which someone confidentially tipped off could be had, turns out to be a flivver assignment. It frequently happens on such occasions that the assignment has necessitated long travel and considerable expense.

A recent instance of this was when E. Carl Wallen, staff man of the Hearst-Pathe News at Los Angeles, was assigned to cover a "wonderful" picture at Roosevelt Dam, Roosevelt, Ariz., when all the Indians in that vicinity were to gather and hold a war dance to show their loyalty to this country upon its declaration of war upon Germany.

After an all-night trip Wallen found upon his arrival at Roosevelt only thirty Indians and, as he explained, "of the over-all type." The Indians flatly refused to dance because the certain amount of money which they wanted was not forthcoming. Wallen did not insist upon the dance. He discovered, however, that the dam was overflowing for the second time in its history, and that 125,000 gallons of water flowed over the spillway every minute. With this as a basis for a news item, he made some spectacular pictures, and they proved to be one of the most interesting items in that issue.

GOOD REPORTS ON "FILLING HIS OWN SHOES."

"Filling His Own Shoes," Bryant Washburn's latest Essanay comedy-drama, is now being given trade showings at all K-E-S-E offices. Mr. Washburn has proclaimed this feature the best he ever did, better even than his two famous pictures, "Skinner's Dress Suit" and "Skinner's Bubble."

Reports from the pre-release showings are inclined to agree with the star, notwithstanding the spectacular successes with which the Skinner productions met. At any rate at the K-E-S-E headquarters it is said a land office business is being done in pre-release bookings. The picture will be released June 11.

Hazel Daly, who created the role of "Honey" in Mr. Washburn's Skinner productions, again appears as his leading woman. Harry Beaumont devised the screen version and directed its production. "Filling His Own Shoes" has a screen time of sixty-five minutes approximately.

"MOVIE STUNTS" FEATURING TOM MIX.

"Movie Stunts," the latest feature to be announced by Selig in General Film Service, features Tom Mix, the cowboy of the screen. There are gathered together all the hazardous and thrilling exploits that Tom Mix has performed before the motion picture camera in the last three or four years. He is known as one of the most daring players of western roles. "Movie Stunts" presents him in feats of daring horsemanship, in roping and in marksmanship. The production, according to the Selig Company, is bound to be interesting to admirers of Tom Mix and his exploits.

Four Pallas-Morosco Productions for June

Vivian Martin, Myrtle Stedman, Wallace Reid, George Beban and House Peters, Stars in Forthcoming Paramount Pictures.

THE Pallas-Morosco announcement of releases for June includes four productions starring such well known players as Vivian Martin, Myrtle Stedman, Wallace Reid, George Beban and House Peters.

Wallace Reid and Myrtle Stedman co-star in "The World Apart," which was written especially for them by George Middleton, who has contributed a number of successful photoplays to the Paramount list. "The World Apart" is the story of a western mining camp which contains in the supportig cast John Burton, Eugene Pallette, Henry A. Barrows and Florence Carpenter, and is scheduled for release by Paramount on June 4, and is a Morosco picture.

Another Morosco production which is to be released on June 7 stars Vivian Martin in "Giving Becky a Chance." Jack Holt plays opposite Miss Martin.

On June 18 Mr. Beban stars in "A Roadside Impresario," which is a Pallas picture directed by Donald Crisp. In this picture Mr. Beban uses the bear Bruno, concerning which numerous stories have emanated from the Pallas studio in the past few weeks. Among those in support of Mr. Beban are Adele Farrington, Julia Faye, Jose Melville, Harrison Forde, Fred De Vere and Fred Huntley.

"The Heir of the Ages," is a dramatic production starring House Peters which will be released on June 21. In this Pallas picture Mr. Peters is supported by such well known players as Nina Byron, Eugene Pallette, John Burton, Henry A. Barrows and Adele Farrington.

These four interesting contributions of Paramount Pictures during the month of June make the Pallas-Morosco portion of the month's releases an exceptionally desirable one.

McCLURE TO FEATURE SHIRLEY MASON.

After an exhaustive canvass of exhibitors, McClure Pictures has determined that Shirley Mason, one of the seven stars in "Seven Deadly Sins," has established herself as a star of box office value. As a result Shirley will be a star most featured in the next McClure series.

"Shirley Mason has her hooks in deep," a Chicago exhibitor reports. "All my patrons are talking about her. She was the hit of 'Seven Deadly Sins.' I'm looking for more of her pictures."

In Boston she is rated as "the only unknown boosted into the limelight by publicity who came up to her advance notices. She's mighty good and everybody likes her."

According to Philadelphia reports "Shirley Mason has a following that ranks her with the ten best stars in motion pictures."

So McClure Pictures is building its next series for Shirley. The plays will be especially suited to her type and the magazine and newspaper publicity, as strong as that behind "Seven Deadly Sins," will be concentrated upon her.

MISS BARRISCALE RETURNS TO COAST.

Bessie Barriscale has returned to Los Angeles. She was in New York about one week. In that time she replenished a wardrobe, was present at the signing of contracts between her company and Paralta Plays, Inc., which will release her new independent productions, secured the stories for her first three pictures, signed a contract with a well known scenario writer for an entirely original story, sat for photographs at four studios, had dinner with her cousin, Mabel Taliaferro, and jumped on a train for the Coast.

"SKINNER" SHATTERING RECORDS.

"Skinner's Bubble," according to K-E-S-E announcement, is shattering all their records for rebookings, including even the high-water mark established by its predecessor "Skinner's Dress Suit." Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly in "Skinner's Bubble" are just plain humans, that's why they "go over" so strong with motion picture theater patrons.

SEENA OWEN AN ATHLETE.

If there is any doubt in the minds of the motion picture fans who have been watching the screen career of Miss Seena Owen, the Triangle player, as to whether or not that young woman can make good on her advertised reputation as a feminine athlete, they need but to see her in her latest production, "Madame Bo-Peep," to be convinced. In this drama she runs the gantlet of athletic achievements and acquits herself with championship honors.

She rides a bucking broncho, swims across a lake when the horse beneath her becomes mired in quicksand, races down the side of a mountain and engages in a hand-to-hand encounter with a villainous assailant, fights another pitched battle with an unwelcome suitor on the rear of a speeding train and participates in scores of violent and thrilling situations.

BLUEBIRD ABANDONS ADVANCE SHOWINGS.

The announcement is made that Bluebird will make a radical departure from the usual order of affairs in determining that private showings of program features, for the benefit of the reviewers, shall be abandoned. Hereafter the critics will be asked to visit theaters where Bluebirds are on exhibition. It is believed that the move will be an advantage to all concerned.

In this way the reviewers will have the aid of public opinion in discovering what an admission-paying public think of a picture; the exhibitors who are guided by the reviews will have the benefit of this experience, and in every particular it would seem to be an advantageous arrangement.

Bluebird believes, furthermore, that there will be an advantage in showing a film exactly as it is to be distributed. In private showings the print used has not always been edited, the proper titles are not always inserted, and in this way the subject is not shown to best advantage. The experiment will be tried, starting with "Southern Justice," during the current week, when Marcus Loew's New York theater will show this Bluebird set for release May 28.

HEARST-PATHE NEWS PERFORMS FEAT.

The reception tendered on Wednesday evening, May 9, in New York to Marshal Joffre afforded the Hearst-Pathe News the opportunity to perform an unprecedented feat in promptly presenting the news of the day to its hundreds of thousands of spectators.

France's military hero, who is receiving such a remarkable ovation, started for the home of H. C. Frick on Fifth avenue from City Hall Park about 5 p. m. Motion pictures of the tremendous crowd which greeted Marshal Joffre were made by the Hearst-Pathe cameramen, and the same evening the parade in which he participated was shown as a special release at ten of the leading theaters on Broadway, where they were received with enthusiastic applause.

On the following day, Thursday, May 10, the pictures were shown in practically every large motion picture theater in New York City, as well as in Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Washington, Baltimore and other nearby cities, as a special release.

WORLD LIBRARY SUCCEEDS SELIG-TRIBUNE.

The Selig World Library is the title of a new film service announced by the Selig Polyscope company. The Selig World Library will supersede the Selig Tribune. The first release will be Wednesday, May 16, and the film will be released every Wednesday thereafter instead of twice weekly. The Selig company announces an unusually good number for the first release. It includes the granite dells of Arizona, big moments in our everyday life, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo turning over currency to the Allies, the cultivation of tea; in the public eye, presenting Champ Clark, Mayor Thompson of Chicago, Congresswoman Rankin and others; also, "The Birth of a Butterfly."

THE AWAKENING OF AMERICA (Paramount-Bray).

The cartoon section of the 68th release of Paramount-Bray Pictographs entitled, "The Awakening of America" is a most remarkable piece of animation, showing 36 separate actions, an achievement which was considered almost impossible in animated cartooning.

It opens with a scene showing America at work. Farmers plowing, factories busy, freight trains and vessels hurrying on peaceful errands when suddenly the call to arms sounds and at once intense activity is seen—all drop their tools of peace to take their place in the forces of the United States. The great armies are seen mobilizing from all quarters and the final "punch" shows America bristling with bayonets and cannon ready for any "foe"—and over all, waves the starry emblem.

NEW ROLE FOR JACKIE SAUNDERS.

Jackie Saunders has a new-fashioned role in "The Checkmate," a Mutual-Horkheimer production released May 21. The photo drama was written especially for Miss Saunders by Captain Leslie Peacocke, whose ideas of dramatic requirements were derived from his long association with Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum Theater, London.

Sherwood MacDonald, who directed "The Checkmate," saw Miss Saunders' opportunity in this story as soon as he laid eyes on it. Daniel Gilfether plays father to Miss Saunders. Mollie McConnell plays an old lady part.

Other players are Frank Mayo, Margaret Cullen Landis and Edward Jobson.

"BLACK BEAUTY" FOR FORUM FILMS.

"The Heart of a Thoroughbred" has just been filmed at the Edison studios for release on the Forum program. This Edison conquest picture is an adaptation of Anna Sewell's famous "Black Beauty," and Don Fulano, the $100,000 horse, has been featured in the production. Special arrangements were made with the Humane Society for taking "Don" to and from his "place of business." Besides, "Cowboy" Elliott, owner and pal of "Don," used every precaution for his safety.

Forthcoming Bluebirds

Schedule Through July Announced—Four Excellent Productions Promised.

THE producers of Bluebirds are resting easy as to the forthcoming months, the program being all set until the middle of July, with numerous features awaiting schedule and still more in active preparation. Arranging the program has become a matter of proper selection for purposes of diversity, as the plans for future releases leave no cause for uneasiness. Assurance comes from Bluebird's publicity department that exhibitors are in line for a series of plays that will maintain the best traditions of the program.

Lynn F. Reynolds' mid-Summer feature, based on Charles J. Wilson, Jr.'s story, "The Code of the Klondyke," is set for distribution July 16. The picture was made last winter in the Sierra Nevadas, with everybody concerned wading through snow-banks and clambering down icy slopes—cooling visions for mid-July reflection.

Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon will disport themselves, after their usual comedy-drama fashion, in "The Car of Chance," July 9, relating a story of good fortune that followed a sportive young man's entry into the jitney bus business. The July 2 release will be "Fires of Rebellion," the second Bluebird Ida May Park has directed with Dorothy Phillips the star.

The June program has been previously referred to: Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon, in "Bringing Home Father"; Dorothy Phillips, in "A Doll's House"; Ella Hall, in "The Little Orphan," and Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford, in "A Kentucky Cinderella," to be released in the order given, on the four Mondays of the month.

HART AND GLAUM THE JUNE 10 TRIANGLERS.

William S. Hart and Louise Glaum are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for June 10. Mr. Hart is starred by Mr. Ince in "Wolf Lowry," a smashing drama of the wild desert country, written by C. T. Dazey and personally directed by the stars. Louise Glaum has a vehicle well suited to her in "Love or Justice," written by Lambert Hillyer and directed by Walter Edwards under the supervision of Mr. Ince.

As "Wolf Lowry," William S. Hart takes the part of a ranchman, a grim, taciturn man who is a virtual king of his vast domain. The story is woven about the one big love adventure of this solitary man's life. Hart's realistic characterization is worked out against a background of typical western color. Many of the scenes show life as it is lived on a big cattle ranch with all the old-time "pep" and strenuous romance incident to the handling of wild "longhorns" and an equally untamed band of Mexican and American knights of the saddle. Hart is capably supported by Margery Wilson, who has one of the most sympathetic roles of her screen career.

In "Love or Justice" Louise Glaum takes the part of a beauty of the underworld, who, despite her environment, is gifted with brains and a sense of single-hearted devotion to the one who has aroused her love. Like many women of her type, she does not flinch from making a supreme sacrifice when convinced that it will add to the prestige of the man to whom she has become attached. Unusual photography and a strong supporting cast, including Charles Gunn, Jack Richardson, J. Barney Sherry and Dorcas Matthews, raise this production far above the average.

"LONESOME LUKE" FOR JUNE 17 A LAUGH.

The "Lonesome Luke" two-reel comedy for release on June 17 is considered by the Pathe film committee to be one of the very best comedies that has ever been made. Several members voted it to be the best of the first six "Luke's" to go on the program. It is really a screamingly funny farce,

"A REGULAR GUY" NOW "WILD AND WOOLLY."

Walter E. Greene, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, announces that the second Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft offering will be released on June 17. The title of this production, originally "A Regular Guy," has been changed to "Wild and Woolly," and as its new name would indicate, the picture offers a story staged chiefly in the atmosphere of the great plains.

The real west is being used as the background, most of the scenes having been screened in Arizona and California. Under the direction of John Emerson, the picture is now rapidly nearing completion at the Lasky studios, Hollywood, where Mary Pickford is also appearing in a forthcoming Artcraft release. In his new role "Doug" performs many new athletic stunts which he has been practicing for months, such as leaping into the saddle of a galloping horse, bulldogging a steer, riding a bucking broncho, throwing the lariat, etc.

Supporting the smiling comedian in this picture are Eileen Percy, who recently deserted the Broadway footlights for the screen; Sam de Grasse, Joseph Singleton, Tom Wilson, Doc Lytell and Ruth Allen. Anita Loos, the petite scenarioist of the Fairbanks organization, prepared the story for the screen. Victor Fleming is supervising the camera work.

HART AND FARNUM MOST POPULAR COWBOYS.

Just before leaving the West on his rapid-fire tour of the United States, William S. Hart was chosen as one of the two most popular cowboys in the world by the Cowboys' Reunion Association of Los Vegas, N. M. Dustin Farnum figured as runner-up in this unique popularity contest.

The reunion, which occurs annually, is held in the heart of the only primitive cattle country that remains unfenced. The delegates are the wisest collection of cayuse-pilots that ever cinched a saddle, and Hart and Farnum both appreciate the honors that have been conferred on them more than any manifestations of approval that their art has brought forth in years.

Mae Marsh Working on Big Picture

Huge Cast Engaged to Support Her in Her Third Goldwyn Subject.

MAE MARSH'S third Goldwyn Picture will be a spectacular screen production. In her first picture, finished in January, but not to be released before Fall, the drama is confined to a few persons, with but two resorts to so-called "mobs" or numbers for the big scenes. This picture is the work of Irvin S. Cobb and is from one of the most popular stories the big Kentuckian ever wrote for the Saturday Evening Post.

The second Goldwyn Mae Marsh production, the work of Mary Ryder, identified in the past with several of the most successful Mary Pickford stories, is even more compact, in that the principals are fewer and the drama confined to Miss Marsh and Bobbie Harron, as lovers; to the screen father of Mae Marsh and a wayward brother.

When the time came to take one of Margaret Mayo's most popular stage successes for conversion into a motion picture, Miss Mayo saw pictorial possibilities in her work that could never have been attained even on the largest stage in the world. So, for the first time since her appearance in "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance," Mae Marsh will now have the leading role once more in a picture of larger proportions.

Everitt Shinn, the famous artist and stage director, together with Miss Mayo and Charles Horan, are working on this picture in the Goldwyn studios. George Hill, one of the ablest of cameramen, is photographing the production.

One of the incidentals of picture-making is travel to distant points, and Miss Marsh and her company are expected to do more than 3,000 miles of traveling, principally in the State of Michigan, to achieve the results that the picture calls for. The entire Goldwyn company of actors are expected to arrive in Michigan next week and cover an extended itinerary in that State, returning to New York early in June.

CLEVER TRICKS IN BICKEL COMEDY.

In "The King of Cooks," the George Kleine offering through General Film Company, several novel tricks of the camera are employed to accentuate the individuality of the featured comedian, George Bickel, formerly of Bickel & Watson. As the ludicrous hobo who insinuates himself into a job as a chef Bickel drinks a bottle of ink and becomes black in a rising tide of pigment that envelopes his skin. He returns to his natural color when he is given a glass of milk, the sombre tint ebbing swiftly. Another stunt he does is to bake an apple pie with a match held under the pan after having tossed the ingredients into the air and caught them ready prepared in the dish. Besides his acting, which is reminiscent of his "Me, Him and I" days, the comedy is scintillant with clever situations.

BIG ADVERTISING FOR HEARST-PATHE NEWS.

The Hearst-Pathe News is being extensively advertised in New York, Boston, Chicago, Atlanta, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The various Hearst newspapers, both morning and evening, in those places, have been publishing numerous advertisements averaging from a quarter to a half page in size. These ads have given the contents of the current issues and have been illustrated with pictures of the events shown. Insertions have been made in each paper at least twice a week. The result has justified the large expense.

"Freckles" and "Unconquered" Lead Paramount

Fannie Ward and Louise Huff and Jack Pickford Are Featured for Week of May 28.

Louise Huff and Jack Pickford in "Freckles" and Fannie Ward in "Unconquered" are the two featured pictures which Paramount will release the week of May 28. They are reviewed in another column. Surrounding these features will be the sixty-eighth edition of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the sixty-ninth of the series of weekly trips around the world, conducted by Burton Holmes, in which he takes his fellow-journeyers through Java, and a Black Diamond comedy entitled "Susie of the Follies."

In the sixty-eighth edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, there are three tremendous subjects dealt with—the story of "The Awakening of America," a cartoon without question a most remarkable piece of animation, and the sort of picture that will create patriotic response, as well as make any exhibitor feel that he is helping his country's cause in this time of the nation's peril. "The Training of an Eight-Oared Crew" is another interesting subject, which, next to baseball, is at this time of the year in the minds of most young men.

Another "Picto Puzzle" by Sam Lloyd is also contained in this week's magazine. Here is a chance for every live exhibitor to get not only added business, but also a lot of good will. In the Pictographs there is a contest of the Sam Lloyd Puzzles, this contest being so designed not to make the people sit up nights trying to dope out the answer but to arouse interest in the puzzles and the theater that runs them.

Burton Holmes, that ever interesting traveler, takes his travelers on a trip through Java in this week's picture. This journey might well be called a trip through the Netherlands of India, where everything is different from what you have ever seen anywhere else.

The Black Diamond comedy for this week is entitled "Susie of the Follies," and tells the story of how a husband, being given a short vacation by his dutiful wife, goes back to his old life and takes a flier at the Follies and meets one of his old flames; the story tells of a little escapade which follows, and how he gets himself into all sorts of trouble.

EMILY STEVENS RETURNS TO METRO STUDIO.

Emily Stevens, the screen and stage star, who recently completed her season in John Galsworthy's play, "The Fugitive," has returned to the screen, being now at work on "The Slacker," a five-act Metro story of the war, written and directed by William Christy Cabanne. Before assuming the principal role in her latest Broadway success Miss Stevens was seen in several Metro photoplays. Her new contract with Metro calls for four pictures a year, for which she will be paid $75,000.

"The Slacker," as written by Mr. Cabanne, deals with an American youth who marries in lieu of going to the front. At first his wife agrees with him, but when her patriotic spirit manifests itself she orders him to fight for the flag. Throughout the stirring narrative many incidents of the present war times are shown, and Mr. Cabanne says the production will materially aid in recruiting for both the Army and Navy.

Emily Stevens comes of an old theatrical family. She is a niece of Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske and a daughter of Robert E. Stevens and Emma Maddern, both of whom are prominent in the history of the American stage.

Miss Stevens made her debut on the speaking stage with Mrs. Fiske, playing the part of a maid in "Becky Sharp," in Bridgeport, Conn., in 1900. She remained with Mrs. Fiske for eight years.

The first distinct impression created by Miss Stevens on Broadway was in the successful play, "Leah Kleschna." The photoplays in which this star has already been seen are "Destiny; or, the Soul of a Woman"; "Cora," "The House of Tears," "The Wheel of the Law" and "The Wager."

INTERNATIONAL TO SHOW PICTURES OF CHINA.

The International will release this month through Pathe pictures representing every phase of life as it exists in China and showing scenes that have heretofore never been visited by white men. Even the sacred portals of the Forbidden City have been passed.

This remarkable series also includes scenes in which the President of China and the members of his cabinet are shown. They also show 10,000 Chinese troops in a great military spectacle, staged especially by the Chinese Minister of War. They show, too, scores of aviators connected with the Chinese army in action, and emphasis is placed upon the fact that the aviation corps of the ancient and supposedly behind-the-times Chinese is far superior to that of Uncle Sam.

JANE COWL RAISES $14,000 FOR ALLIES.

Jane Cowl, noted emotional actress and star in Goldwyn Pictures, proved her popularity in New York last week by giving a benefit performance for the ambulance fund of the Allied Relief agencies, and raising $14,000 in the course of fifteen minutes' work.

The collection of this money from the audience during the brief interval between the act resulted in a patriotic demonstration rarely if ever equalled before in an American theater.

Mary Pickford in Spectacular Scene

Al Lichtman Describes How Ten Cameras Were Trained on Greatest Spectacle Ever Staged at Artcraft Studio.

THE largest and most spectacular scene ever staged at the Lasky studios, Hollywood, was produced last week under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille for the new Mary Pickford-Artcraft picture, "The Little American." The scene depicted the luxurious ballroom of the Lusitania when the famous liner was torpedoed and has created considerable interest among film producing circles around Los Angeles.

Al Lichtman, general manager of Artcraft, upon his return to New York from California, where he viewed the presentation of the scene, expressed enthusiasm over the spectacular effect of this offering. "Never have I seen staged such a spectacular bit of realism," said Mr. Lichtman. "The entire Lasky studio ceased activities to view the big scene in which some three hundred extras were used.

"The set was built in an immense water-tank measuring 50 by 100 feet and showed the wonderful ballroom of the Lusitania with all its lavish furnishings and crowded with fashionable people in evening dress. At the command of Director De Mille, the ten camera-men began to grind, a large orchestra started to play a lively dance and soon Miss Pickford was in the midst of a scene of great merriment. Just as the festivities were at their height an explosion that, to my mind, seemed only too realistic but which, as the film will show, had the desired effect, shook the entire set and immediately one end of the floor rapidly began to sink into the water. Chairs and tables toppled over and slid down the floor to where men and women fought and screamed. Waist high in water, Miss Pickford was picked up by a sturdy young fellow, who struggled toward the stairs with her in his arms just as the immense grand piano crashed into the corner where they had been standing. Men fought with each other and women screamed in actual terror as parts of the heavy mirrors, walls and ceiling tumbled down upon them. No one thought that the scene would turn out to be one of real danger to this extent, and even the spectators were screaming with excitement.

With one end of the floor pointing toward the ceiling and the other deep in the water where hundreds of people struggled to save themselves, the scene was brought to an abrupt end. The floor was quickly raised through a mechanical device and the players hurried to their dressing rooms to patch up cuts and bruises. One actor had his arm broken by a falling chandelier.

"If that scene doesn't pull a fellow right out of his seat," said Douglas Fairbanks, who had been looking on, "it will be because he is nailed down."

METRO TO RELEASE "LADY BARNACLE" JUNE 4.

"Lady Barnacle," one of the most attractive Metro productions of the year, starring Viola Dana, will be released by the Metro Pictures Corporation on June 4. This five-act feature, adapted for the screen by June Mathis, from a story of the same name by Edgar Franklin, is presented by B. A. Rolfe. Simultaneously with its release on the Metro program, the story will appear in the All-Story Weekly. John H. Collins, who has directed many of Miss Dana's successes, directed this feature. John Arnold photographed it.

In this photoplay Miss Dana is provided with a role that affords her splendid opportunities to display her art. She is cast as Lakshima, an Indian princess. She was never more happily cast. In her support is Robert Walker, who has been her leading man in most of her Metro feature productions. Augustus Phillips plays her father, Maharajah of an Indian province. The part of Morling's fiancee falls to Marie Adell, who has been seen in Miss Dana's support in "God's Law and Man's."

MUTUAL'S "MANNING OUR NAVY" TIMELY.

"Manning Our Navy," a patriotic and instructive film, released by the Mutual Film Corporation May 14, shows recruiting in Chicago and the training of newly enlisted seamen at the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

The Great Lakes naval training station has, since the declaration of a state of war with Germany, become a most important place in preparing young men for service aboard American men of war. "Manning Our Navy" shows how thoroughly the recruits are trained, not only from a military standpoint, but physically as well.

The picture was produced by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing company of Chicago.

COMBITONE DIRECTOR TO PHOTOGRAPH ROOKIES.

Col. A. L. Westgard, who is directing the Pathe-Combitone Expedition which is visiting every State in the Union in search of interesting material for the Combitone pictures on the Pathe program, has just made a flying visit from Texas to New York. Col. Westgard expects to spend several more weeks in Texas, as he finds much interesting material in that State. The Rocky Mountain section will probably be visited when the weather becomes more seasonable.

Gladys Leslie Leads Pathe June 3

Other Features Are Two Serials, a Comedy and the First of a Scenic Series.

THE first "smile feature" starring Gladys Leslie, strong episodes of "The Neglected Wife" and "Mystery of the Double Cross" serials, a Myers-Theby comedy and the first number of an interesting scenic series are features of Pathe's program for the week of June 3.

"An Amateur Orphan" is the five-reel Gold Rooster play starring Gladys Leslie, which is reviewed in another column. "Beyond Recall" is the title of the fourth episode of "The Neglected Wife," which is booking fast in all territories. It is a great human interest story, written by Mabel Herbert Urner, the most widely read woman author in the world, and Ruth Roland is the star.

Mollie King is seen in "The Riddle of the Double Cross," the twelfth episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross" serial, produced by Astra under the direction of William Parke. The chapter is one of the most interesting of the serial, with almost breathless suspense from start to finish.

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby appear in "Police Protection," the fourth of their one-reel comedies produced under the supervision of Mark W. Dintenfass. A detective, a crook, a friend of hubby's and the unexpected return of wifey bring many laughs.

"Two Medicine Lakes, Glacier Park," is the first of the Pathe scenic pictures to be released under the main title "Our National Parks." It provides an opportunity to take a trip to all the points of interest in beautiful Glacier Park for the price of admission to a motion picture house showing Pathe films.

The International cartoon and scenic split-reel release is "Twenty Thousand Legs Under the Sea," "Katzenjammer Kids" cartoon, and "The Abalone Industry," industrial.

Hearst-Pathe News No. 46 and No. 47 complete the program.

LIBRARIAN DISBURSES O. HENRY ADMISSIONS.

One of the most successful plans for stimulating attendance at photoplay houses booking the O. Henry pictures issued through General Film Company is reported from Atlanta.

The Jake Wells houses, which have taken hold of the O. Henry pictures enthusiastically, adopted at the outset a form of cooperation with the public libraries in the various cities of the circuit. The scheme has worked splendidly. A number of tickets are placed at the disposal of the librarian in each city for distribution according to his or her own judgment to readers who might be particularly interested in O. Henry subjects. Attendance by the ticket holders, all of them critical and well-informed people, resulted in such warm recommendation of the spirit and worth of production of the O. Henry pictures that general attendance was multiplied.

"THE GUIDING HAND" (Essanay).

This is the first of Essanay's "Do Children Count?" series, which, as the title indicates, will deal with problems growing out of the advent of children in the home. The story has to do with a vicious plot by relatives to despoil a little orphaned girl of a fortune. Little Mary McAlister, Essanay's famous child star, is featured, with a capable cast. This series is being written by Charles Mortimer Peck, author of the highly successful cycle of matrimonial picture plays, "Is Marriage Sacred?" There will be twelve units in all, one to be released each week, beginning June 6, through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. Each will have a screen time of 25 minutes, approximately. As the title indicates, these photodramas will present problems growing out of the advent of children in the home.

Gail Kane Leads Mutual for May 28

Will Be Seen in "The Serpent's Tooth," Her Second American—Two Serials, Comedies and Weekly.

THE second Gail Kane American feature, "The Serpent's Tooth," will be released through Mutual on May 28. It is a melodramatic story which affords Miss Kane opportunity for heavy emotional acting. There are a variety of points which can be used for advertising which will be sure to appeal to all tastes.

"A Knotted Cord" is the title of Chapter 8 of the photo-novel "The Railroad Raiders." Helen Holmes, in this chapter, performs one of the most daring "stunts" she has ever attempted. In an auto she makes a leap of twenty feet between the pier and a moving vessel and lands right side up on the deck of the boat with the engine still running.

As the title of the eleventh Jimmy Dale story, "A Rogue's Defeat," suggests, Jimmie Dale, as the Grey Seal, foils the attempt of a scoundrel to force a man to make him a payment of $50,000 which is not yet due. This two-reel featurette is released on June 1.

On May 28 will come to the screen the second of Marie Cahill's comedies, entitled "Patsy's Pardner," in which the fun centers around Miss Cahill's partner, "Judge Barker," her bulldog.

The Strand comedy of the week, ready May 30, and featuring Billie Rhodes and Jay Belasco is "Bluffing Father." "Jerry's Master Stroke," with George Ovey playing the lead, is the Cub comedy for May 31.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," scheduled for May 29, shows views of Notre Dame, the great church of Paris and intimate views of its gargoyles, expansive Gothic structure and the clock gallery. Another section shows Teneriffe, one of Spain's Canary Islands; and still another a pretty Bavarian lake, Koenigsee.

"Mutual Weekly," released May 30, contains the latest news of the world as well as fashion pictures.

"Reel Life," ready May 31, shows the making of barrels by the natives of Barbados. A patriotic section advocates the conservation of all resources during wartime by the saving of tin cans and using them again. How to camp out while touring in an automobile is an interesting section. How 80,000 pounds of dynamite acts when it is moving 400,000 tons of rock is a spectacular feature. The reel concludes with pictures of a lion cub which has a dog as foster mother.

"YOUR OBEDIENT SERVANT" (Forum).

"Your Obedient Servant," a three-part dramatic story suggested by Anna Sewell's justly famed book, "Black Beauty," will be the next feature Edison Conquest picture to be distributed by Forum Films, Inc. With three other subjects, it was released on the Forum program May 21.

Like "Black Beauty," the story is the autobiography of a horse, told in such a way that one's interest in the human characters making up the background is as strong as, or stronger than, that in the career of the steed itself. Through the story told by Black Beauty runs a wide thread of romance concerning Black Beauty's master and the girl whom he loves better than anything else in the world except—his country. The photoplay—unlike the book, the scene of which is in England at the time of the Crimean War—is laid in the South, and one of the earlier scenes shows the master riding off to war as a confederate officer.

The short subjects on this fifth Forum program consist of the following short Edison Conquest Pictures: "Robinson Crusoe, a silhouette version of the book"; "Feeding Birds in Winter," a short nature study, and "Struck Out in the Ninth," a two-reel baseball comedy.

PREPAREDNESS SHOWN IN "REEL LIFE" NO. 58.

Since it takes five men behind the lines to keep one soldier in the field, it is only natural that industrial preparedness should be given due consideration in the war plans of the nation. The Gaumont Company in its entertaining series, "Reel Life," is presenting various industrial activities which show how American industries are organized already for intensive production.

In "Reel Life" No. 58 is a picture called "Modern Footwear." This is a visit to a large shoe factory. America has taken the lead in the development of shoe machinery, and spectators who see this reel will be highly entertained by learning just how shoes are made in a factory employing intensive methods.

On the same reel is a picture which will be most valuable in creating and holding patronage for a theater. This is "Electrical Gardening." In view of the fact that the entire nation is making gardens, any picture showing how to "make things grow" will interest every person who sees it. "Tours Around the World" always has foreign pictures of places which figure in the current news, and The Mutual Weekly is devoted entirely to happenings that take place within a day or two of the release of the reel.

The famous Players Film Company has set June 28 as the release date for Ann Pennington's third screen starring vehicle, "The Little Boy Scout." Miss Pennington's previous Paramount pictures have been "Susie Snowflake" and "The Rainbow Princess," in both of which she proved herself as charming upon the screen as she is upon the stage. "The Little Boy Scout" is being produced under the direction of Francis J. Grandon, with Owen Moore in the leading male role. It is the story of an American girl who has become the ward of a powerful Mexican, living near the Rio Grande border.

"A MUTE APPEAL" IS NOVEL STORY.

What is probably a role unique in screen history is taken by Jean Sothern in the coming Van Dyke-Art Drama, "A Mute Appeal." She plays the part of a girl who has never heard a human voice nor learned to talk, having been brought up in a family of deaf mutes. Walter Edwin is directing this picture, and his company is now in Shohola, Pa., making exteriors for the first part, which is supposed to take place in a town twenty miles from a railroad. Donald Cameron, Tom Magrane and Elsie Mason are the principals supporting the star.

"Little Miss Fortune," the Art Drama which marked Marian Swayne's debut under the Erbograph banner, was such an unprecedented success that exhibitors from all over the country have been writing the exchanges for another production with this star.

Believing it wise to grant these requests, the Erbograph company will postpone the release of "Charity Castle" to an indefinite date, and will substitute a picture yet untitled, with the star in another appealing role.

"THE WORLD APART" (Morosco).

THE first Morosco-Paramount picture in June will be "The World Apart," an original story by George Middleton, having been scheduled for release on the 4th. Wallace Reid and Myrtle Stedman are co-stars in the picture, and the supporting cast includes John Burton, Eugene Pallette, Florence Carpenter and Henry A. Barrows.

John Burton and Eugene Pallette are familiar figures upon the screen, as they have played important roles in many recent Morosco and Pallas pictures. Florence Carpenter, however, is not so well known to the screen, though she has established an enviable reputation upon the stage. Miss Carpenter is the daughter of George B. Carpenter, the manager of the Paramount Empress theater at Salt Lake City, and has been associated with things theatrical for a number of years.

The scene of the story is laid in a small mining town in the West.

BRADY FAVORS STOCK COMPANY IDEA.

"We have been quietly working out a plan for some time past which seems to have been very cordially favored by the public," said William A. Brady, director general of World-Pictures Brady-Made. "This plan calls for associating certain players continually, even in the leading support of our stars. I have reason to be sure that audiences attracted by the name of a star of whom they have grown fond in the artistic sense also like to see the same players in the supporting company.

"Naturally, it is not possible to carry out the idea through the entire cast, as in the old stock company days upon the speaking stage, for the production of photoplays is a vastly different matter from the production of oral drama. But the filling of the leading roles by the same players in picture after picture soon indicates to the public that a satisfactory all-around performance is coming."

ART TITLES FOR O. HENRY FILMS.

Owing to the extreme popularity of the O. Henry stories in screen form and their decided literary and human appeal, it is announced by the General Film Company forthcoming releases are to be provided with special art titles. These pictures, directed by Thomas R. Mills and produced by the Broadway Star Feature Company, have been well done, and now to add another touch to the high quality so successfully sought some attention is to be given to the titles, harmonizing them with the individual atmosphere of each picture. Probably the first of the releases to appear with art titles will be "A Service of Love," featuring Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald. The O. Henry stories probably are the first two-reel pictures to be systematically embellished with art titles.

"A KENTUCKY CINDERELLA" (Bluebird).

F. Hopkinson Smith's popular novel, "A Kentucky Cinderella," has been translated to the screen by Bluebird and has been programed for release June 25. E. J. Clawson prepared the scenario and Rupert Julian directed the production. Mr. Julian, together with Ruth Clifford, will be featured in a cast of unusual excellence—even among Bluebird's generally well balanced companies.

Harry Carter will play the dual role of Findfield and Henry Gordon; Emory Johnson, Eddie Polo, Frank Lanning, Gretchen Lederer, little Zoe Rae, Myrtle Reeves, Aurora Pratt and Lucretia Harris will be among the principals. Of these players, Mr. Johnson and little Zoe Rae have been stars in earlier Bluebirds and the others have all played important roles in numerous plays in that series.

Director Julian was particularly fortunate in his location, going to the Sierras for some wonderful mountain scenery for the first act, and finding in the California lowlands "atmosphere" that faithfully reflects the Kentucky scenes that dominate the story. Steve Rounds was Mr. Julian's photographer on this job, and it is declared that the reflections will measure up to the traditions of Bluebird that have previously won high praise.

ESSANAY COMPLETES "LAND OF LONG SHADOWS"

"Land of Long Shadows," the first of Essanay's series of Western dramas, has been filmed. This picture, which is laid in the beautiful scenic country of the Canadian Northwest, will be given trade showings shortly at all K-E-S-E Service branch offices. June 18 has been fixed as the release date.

Jack Gardner, former musical comedy star, will make his debut to photoplay patrons in "Land of Long Shadows." Supporting him will be Ruth King, Carl Stockdale, C. J. Lionel and others. W. S. Van Dyke wrote the scenario and directed its production.

LOEW'S NEW YORK TO SHOW ART DRAMAS.

What Art Dramas Incorporated considers the most important deal it has put through to date was consummated this week, when Marcus Loew contracted to run one Art Drama a week in his New York theater, at 45th street and Broadway, New York. "The Mystic Hour," the Apollo production starring Alma Hanlon was the first picture to be seen there. This was shown on May 18. Regularly thereafter every release of the program will be screened weekly.

KATHLEEN KIRKHAM ENGAGED BY AMERICAN.

Kathleen Kirkham has been aded to the American-Mutual forces, and will make her first apearance on this schedule in William Russell's forthcoming production, in which she is cast for an important part.

Miss Kirkham appeared as Mrs. Taine in "The Eyes of the World." Miss Kirkham has a screen career of three years and has portrayed leading roles with most of the principal producers.

"BLIND MAN'S LUCK" (Gold Rooster).

Mollie King, star of the Pathe serial, "'Mystery of the Double Cross," is the featured player of the forthcoming Gold Rooster play, "Blind Man's Luck." With her in the cast are such players as Earle Foxe, William Riley Hatch, Zeffie Tilbury, Helene Chadwick and Francis Byrne.

"Blind Man's Luck" was directed by George Fitzmaurice of Astra and shows ample evidence of his careful and able workmanship. It will be released June 10.

"A SONG OF SIXPENCE" (Art Drama).

"A Song of Sixpence," adapted from the novel by Frederic Arnold Kummer, is announced to be the next Van Dyke release on Art Dramas program. Marie Wayne and Robert Conness are co-starred in this, while Ralph Dean did the directing. It is due for release following the Apollo drama, "The Mystic Hour."

The novel from which "A Song of Sixpence" is taken created a furore at the time of its publication. It became the subject of debate of countless women's clubs over the country, and the pulpit and press discussed it pro and con.

Marie Wayne, who plays the role of Emmy in the picture, has had a long career both on the stage and the screen. Robert Conness is known to all screen goers as a leading man of ability and appearance. In the cast are Margaret Townsend, Alfred Hemming, Rowden Hall, Nell Pemberton, Gene LaMotte and numerous other popular and well-known players.

Fox Pictures Vogue World Wide

Shown in Every Part of the Globe Under Various Conditions. Transportation a Question.

WILLIAM FOX, president of the Fox Film Corporation, makes the significant statement that motion pictures are the most potent medium for spreading the gospel of an international spirit. That Mr. Fox is a practical exponent of his theories is evidenced by the fact that the Fox Film Corporation is continually adding new links to the chain of countries with which he is encircling the globe.

Fox films have been shown for some time in Norway, Sweden, Spain and Portugal, and contracts have recently been closed for the following countries: Chili, Peru and Bolivia, and arrangements are being made whereby the Fox pictures will be shown in remote parts of Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, as well as Brazil, in which latter country the Fox pictures have been established for the past two years.

In many of the countries mentioned there are little or no transportation facilities, but the insistent demand for Fox pictures has made it necessary for the Fox organization to arrange for special messengers to take the film into the interior. It is interesting also to note that the following countries are still available for foreign buyers: Italy, France, Russia, India, Dutch East Indies, Japan, South Africa, Philippine Islands, Central American republics and Panama.

Even in disrupted Russia, where almost every living condition is unsettled, negotiations are now being made for showing the Fox productions.

Elmer H. Carlson has just returned from a trip through Scandinavia, where he made arrangements to show the Fox films to members of the royal family. The headquarters of the Fox features in Norway are at 4 Startingsgate, Christiana, and in Sweden at Metropolitan, Hollandsregat, Stockholm. Mr. Carlson's Scandinavian organization is represented in America by his brother, John Carlson, of 96 St. James avenue, Boston.

In Spain the home of the Fox features is Ronda Universidad 14, Barcelona. The purchaser of the Spanish and Portuguese rights for the William Fox studios is Julian Ajuria, who is also a large film importer in the South American field.

In Great Britain and Australasia the Fox organization has conducted its own exchanges for two years, and the success of the Fox pictures has been unprecedented. In Great Britain alone nine large exchanges are being operated by Mr. Fox's British company. Three exchanges are being operated by his Australasian company. In those countries where the Fox pictures are being shown, Theda Bara, William Farnum, Valeska Suratt, George Walsh, Virginia Pearson, Stuart Holmes and the various other Fox stars are as familiar to the motion picture-going public as they are in the United States.

Imagine the effect on the simple-minded natives of the Fijii Islands, for instance, when Theda Bara appears on the screen in her newest vampire picture. Yet eighty of the Fijiis are inhabited and several of these eighty have on display, besides bananas, papawapples and yams, a fairly new Fox film. Across the deserts of Oodnadatta, in Southern Australia, camels transport the Fox films to the remote post station of Alice Springs, where the population consists of one hundred and fifty persons—men, women and children.

In some cases theaters are actually built to properly introduce the Fox films. This is more recently true in Spain and Portugal, where plans are being rushed to complete new theaters to show Fox features to the Spanish and Portuguese picture-loving public. All of which shows that the appeal of the motion picture is universal, because it overleaps all conditions and rises down convention and language.

L-KO READY WITH ITS JUNE RELEASES.

From Julius Stern, president of L-Ko Comedies, comes the announcement that General Director J. G. Blystone has completed and shipped to Universal exchanges, ready for release, the June supply of merrymakers under that brand. They are declared to equal the best L-Ko standards.

June 4 will bring "Dry Goods and Damp Deeds," with Phil Dunham the featured comedian. Lucille Hutton, Myrtle Sterling and Charles Inslee will be prominent in the merrymaking. Vin Moore directed, under Mr. Blystone's supervision.

"Chicken Chased and Hen Pecked," June 11, will also show Phil Dunham to the fore, with Miss Sterling, Kathryn Young, Mr. Inslee and Al Duffy the other prominent participants. This comedy was also directed by Vin Moore.

"Where Is My Che-ild" will be the June 18 release, with Dan Russell the featured one. Gladys Varden and Mrs. Moore will be in the support. "A Baby Mix-Up" follows on June 25, with Dan Russell featured in a company including Gladys Roach and Mrs. Moore. Noel Smith directed this one, with Mr. Blystone keeping an eye on the proceedings.

NEW TITLE FOR WARWICK PICTURE.

"The Shadow of Night" has been selected as the title of Robert Warwick's latest Selznick-Picture, just completed by Director Leonce Perret, under the working title of "A Modern Othello." This picture will follow "The Silent Master," the Warwick production now ready for general release.

Activities at Mutual Studios

Ten Stars Now at Work, Four of Them at American Studio —Gail Kane Working on "The Upper Crust."

NEARLY a score of big pictures have been completed or are in course of production at the Mutual studios. Ten stars and their respective companies are producing Mutual features. Four companies are at work at the studio of the American Film Company, Inc., at Santa Barbara.

Gail Kane is at work on "The Upper Crust," which will be completed in time for release June 25. Her fourth picture will be "The Woman in Black."

William Russell, under direction of Edward S. Sloman, has finished "Shackles of Truth" for release June 4, and is at work on "The Weakness of the Strong," to be followed by "Pride and the Man."

Mary Miles Minter, under direction of James Kirkwood, is busy on "Periwinkle," for release June 11. She will then start on "Melissa of the Hills," by Mabelle Heikes Justice.

Juliette Day has just reported at the Santa Barbara studios, leaving Broadway, where she played in "Upstairs and Down" with marked success. She will be under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon, who has been directing Gail Kane. "Betty and the Buccaneers," by J. Edward Hungerford, has been selected as Miss Day's first production.

"Little Miss Missionary" has been chosen for Margarita Fischer's next production, and she is at work on it at the studio of the Pollard Picture Plays Company in San Diego.

At the Horkheimer studios in Long Beach, Jackie Saunders is busy on "Betty Be Good." She has just completed "A Bit of Kindling," scheduled for release June 18.

At the Powell Producing corporation at College Point, L. I., "The Dazzling Miss Davison," starring Marjorie Rambeau, has been completed for release June 18. She is now at work on "Mary Moreland."

"Reputation," Edna Goodrich"s first production for Mutual, has been set for release June 4 and she is now at work on "Queen X." "Outcast," Ann Murdock's first production, has been completed and she is engaged in making "The Imposter."

Charlie Chaplin is working on his forthcoming release, to be released late in June.

In addition to the rush of work on star productions, the studios producing "featurettes," little pictures with big stars for Mutual, are working at top speed. Mutual releases are running close to an average of 20 reels a week and some weeks go as high as 30 reels.

THREE SINGLE REELS FOR JUNE 3.

The first single-reel from the Gaumont studios in June is "Tours Around the World," No. 31, released June 5. This is an extremely entertaining reel, having four sections representing Europe, Africa and the West Indies. Europe contributes picture of "Winter in Galicia" and "The Monastery of Piedra, Saragossa, Spain." The former shows the character of the country exposed to Russian invasion beyond the Carpathian mountains. The latter is one of the most picturesque spots in Spain. The monastery was built in 1194. Africa offers pictures of Morocco's chief seaport, Tangier. St. Kitts, an island of the British West Indies, completes the pictures upon this unusual travel reel.

The second picture of the week is Gaumont's topical screen newspaper, the Mutual Weekly. This will appear June 6. It will contain the news of the week, as well as an appeal for the Liberty Loan.

The following day, June 7, Gaumont will issue Reel Life No. 58. It has five sections. "Modern Footwear" explains the making of shoes by machinery. "Bass Fishing in Florida" is a recreation picture showing a piscatorial paradise at Lake Poinsette, Fla. "Launching a Life Boat" shows a new device for rapidly getting the boat over the side of the vessel. "Electrical Gardening" is most timely. It illustrates how an electric current is used to hasten the growth of plants. The reel concludes with pictures of physical education, mainly by means of dancing. Both the popular Dalcroze and Demeny methods are illustrated.

STRONG SUPPORT FOR FAMOUS PLAYERS.

Among those who are appearing with Marguerite Clark in the Famous Players adaptation of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "The Amazon" is Edgar Norton, who has established an enviable reputation for his remarkable impersonation of eccentric English characters.

When Director J. Searle Dawley was assembling a cast to support Billie Burke in her first Famous Players-Paramount picture, an adaptation of Gelett Burgess' "The Mysterious Miss Terry," he selected Bessie Learn to play the role of the proprietor of the hardware store in which the mysterious Miss Terry finds employment. Every motion picture fan will remember Bessie Learn for her delightful and thoroughly charming ingenue roles in Edison pictures.

Sam Hardy, one of the most popular comedians on the stage today, is playing opposite Mae Murray in "At First Sight." Mr. Hardy will never be forgotten as the breezy young American whose comic antics formed one of the greatest attractions in the highly successful musical comedy "Princess Pat."

"THE SERPENT'S TOOTH" (American).

Gail Kane's second production for Mutual under her contract with American, "The Serpent's Tooth," has been scheduled for release May 28. It follows closely the release of Whose Wife?" which won the general approval of reviewers and exhibitors and has been heavily booked.

"The Serpent's Tooth" was written by Forrest Halsey, and scenarioized by Doris Schroeder. It was originally announced under the title of "Edged Tools." It was produced under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon.

"The Serpent's Tooth" provides a wide range of opportunity for Miss Kane to display her talent. She is a Puritan maid, the sweetheart of the village doctor, the bride of a wealthy New Yorker, the suffering wife of a drunken husband, the unconscious victim of morphine and eventually again the sweetheart of her first love.

PROMPT DELIVERIES ON SIMPLEX.

The Precision Machine Company, manufacturers of the Simplex Motion Picture Projector, make a point of filling orders the same day as received, if at all possible.

An example of this excellent service is the order placed by the Post Exchange at Fort Totten, L. I. The order was received by the factory on May 18, at twenty minutes after twelve o'clock, and within an hour the Simplex Projector was packed and on the company's special motor truck on its way to Fort Totten, which is about thirty miles from New York. The new apparatus was used that evening to entertain the soldiers that are stationed at the post.

NEXT PICKFORD PICTURE JULY FOURTH.

Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft, announced that the next Mary Pickford picture would be released July 4. "The Little American" is the title of the forthcoming Pickford vehicle now nearing completion under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille, at the Lasky Hollywood studios in California.

For the first time in many months "Little Mary" will be seen in this picture as a grown-up American girl in modern gowns. As the young society girl of the U. S. A. she is caught in the terrible tide of the German invasion of France.

Beautiful Theater for Framingham, Mass.

Trimount Theaters, Inc., to Build Beautiful New House—Will Be Called Theater St. George—George A. Giles Is Treasurer of Company.

From J. J. Phillips, Photoplay Editor, Boston Journal.

FRAMINGHAM, MASS.—The latest New England theater is to be known as the Theater St. George, and will be erected in Framingham, Mass., for the Trimount Theaters Inc., George A. Giles, treasurer, Cambridge, Mass., present lessees of the Princess and Gorman theaters in the same town. This theater was designed by Blackhall, Clapp & Whittemore, architects of Boston.

In the design the architects have tried to get away from the hackneyed and usual and to create a theater which would be simple and dignified in its arrangement, and in a way is a reflection of the simple New England habits of eastern Massachusetts.

Geo. A. Giles.

The exterior is merged in the design of the block of stores and offices. While everything is light and businesslike in its arrangement, with plenty of glass and ample approaches, there is a fine opportunity for an architectural treatment thoroughly in keeping with South Framingham and with the theater and the stores.

The entrance is through the center of the block. There is first a high vestibule extending through two stories lined with marble on the side walls and crowned by a spherical vault of mosaic work. The first set of doors lead from the vestibule into a lobby decorated in quiet, subdued taste, beyond which and through a second set of doors is a rotunda, from each side of which lead up a broad flight of stairs to the balcony. On this level, also reached from the lower story of the rotunda, are the business manager's office on one side and on the other a ladies' rest room and reading room where patrons of the theater may wait for a friend, or enjoy a few minutes' rest during the intermissions. The rotunda extends through two stories, and on the second level midway of the balcony are arranged lavatories, ushers' rooms, etc. From this rotunda one looks down directly into the rearmost rows of seats of the theater, and from the rotunda broad steps lead to the top of the balcony, while on each side of the house are passages leading directly to the front of the balcony with no steps, thus giving access to a continuous row of boxes across the entire front of the house.

In interior arrangement and equipment this house will be a complete theater, with a stage adapted for large performances, or capable of being set as a frame about a moving picture. An attempt has been made to bring the stage close to the audience. The decoration is planned to be subdued in tone, but with richness. There will be provision for the usual orchestra, in addition to which there will be a fine pipe organ of the most modern type, not the sort of instrument which drowns out the music from the stage and calls attention to itself in harsh, brazen notes, but the kind of instrument of which the sweet tones can steal into one's mind together with the story of the play, one helping the other, both conspiring to the pleasure of the audience, while not incapable of swelling to the noblest notes of triumph.

Every seat will be a good seat. There will be no posts to obstruct the vision, no drafty ventilators to chill the ardor of the spectator, no fiery radiators to try out the enthusiasm, and no narrow armed chairs to discommode, but every seat will have an unobstructed view of the stage and be easy and comfortable.

The heating and ventilation will be all that could be desired for a house of this kind, with fresh air in abundance, not too warm and surely not too drafty, and the lighting of the house will be discreet and indirect so as to give the desired amount of illumination without fatigue or glare.

It is the aim of the management and the hope of the architects to make this theater one of the best, coziest, most comfortable and well appointed theaters in New England and no pains or thought have been spared to work out these ideas.

George A. Giles, treasurer of the Trimount Theaters Inc., and prime mover in this, his latest enterprise, has for nine years been one of the leading exhibitors of New England. Primarily a business man with real estate offices in Cambridge, where he was educated at Harvard College, he has applied the same business principles in the management of his theaters. As a result of this, the Trimount Theaters Inc. are always welcome in any town where they see fit to operate.

Special Features in Boston.

Boston, Mass.—Douglas Fairbanks' first picture for the Artcraft, "In Again—Out Again," played to a very successful week at the Boston theater, the smiling Doug. packing them in every afternoon and evening. Manager Harris expressed his approval of the Fairbanks' feature from the box office standpoint.

"The Crisis," a photodramatization of Winston Churchill's famous novel, opened at the Majestic Monday evening, May 14. The picture is being put on by the Sherman-Elliott Company and the production will remain at this theater for the next six weeks.

New Atlas Film Director Chosen.

Boston, Mass.—A meeting of the stockholders of the Atlas Film Co. was held recently at the studio of the company at Newton. There were 65 members present and the following officers were elected: Lon N. Dadmun, president; E. Helly, clerk; J. C. Morse, treasurer, and the following board of directors: F. H. Miller, J. J. Leaman, F. Mason and Eugene Turner. Active work on picture production will begin at the Atlas studios in Newton on Monday, May 14, and a formal opening for the press and public will be held May 28 at the studios.

Peerless Film Corp. Buys "Birth."

Boston, Mass.—"Birth," the interesting picture produced under medical supevision by the Eugenic Film Company, was shown to the newspapermen of Boston Wednesday, May 9, at the Tremont Temple. This picture has been purchased by the Peerless Film Corporation for New England and will be shown at the Tremont Temple shortly. The picture made a deep impression on the Boston press. The aim of the picture is to impress on the public's mind with the sanctity and duties of motherhood, and will be shown as it was in New York, the week being divided, first three days for women and the last three for men, and never a mixed audience.

A newspaper advertising campaign for the newest Pathe serial, "The Journal of a Neglected Wife," has started in the Boston newspapers.

PINE TREE STATE NOTES.

From J. P. Flanagan, Bangor, Me.

Presque Isle Items.

PRESQUE ISLE, ME.—Proprietor Lee Ferguson of the Horseshoe moving picture theater is now using Paramount and Triangle pictures, with Gold Rooster plays, Pathe serials and Selznick productions. He has played "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" twice to capacity each time. He is running "Seven Deadly Sins."

On Wednesday of this week Daniel M. Maher, the only moving picture photographer in Eastern Maine, came to Presque Isle from Bangor and took pictures of the Taft Day celebration, when Ex-President Taft spoke. When completed these pictures will be shown at the Horseshoe one week and then will be booked all over the country, Mr. Ferguson having booked the print outright, and will book it from here.

The World correspondent acknowledged with appreciation an invitation from Mr. Ferguson to visit his house whenever in Prisque Isle. His promise to show the writer man a good time sounds good and Mr. Ferguson's hospitable remarks are hereby acknowledged with thanks.

BALTIMORE NOTES.

Peabody Owner Fined for Unlicensed Operator.

Baltimore, Md.—S. M. Buskman, proprietor of the Peabody theater, 11 East North avenue, was arrested by a member of the State Board of Moving Picture Operator Examiners on Thursday morning, May 10, charged with allowing an unlicensed man to operate his projejction machine. Justice Packard at the Central police station fined him $5 and costs.

Baltimore Business Notes.

Baltimore, Md.—Charles E. Thropp, manager of Nixon's Victoria theater, 415 East Baltimore street, announces that the summer schedule for this house will be placed in effect Monday, May 28. After this date the program will be changed twice a week.

The Bridge theater, Edmondson avenue and Pulaski street, has just celebrated an anniversary week and a special program was arranged for the occasion by Louis Schlichter, president of the Edmondson Amusement Company.

Blanke & Zink, architects of Baltimore, are the designers of the big new Strand theater now under construction by Tom Moore of Washington, D. C.

Frank A. Durkee, owner of several Baltimore theaters, states that "The Cure," with Chaplin, is the tenth of this series he has run, and it beat them all.

Charles S. Anderson, manager and owner of the Grand theater, Highlandtown, Md., is highly pleased with the Shorty Hamilton series and regrets exceedingly that the second series is not ready.

Through the courtesy of Harry A. Henkel, manager of the Academy of Music, this house was used for two big mass meetings on Sunday, May 13. In the afternoon a patriotic meeting was held by the Maryland Red Cross and at night the meeting was in the interests of the Zionist movement.

the Red Cross last week. By offering the lure of a free ticket of admission to every child in the neighborhood who would collect waste paper and bring it to the theater Saturday morning he secured over twenty-five hundred pounds of paper. This was taken away and sold by a troop of Boy Scouts, who commandeered a motor truck for the purpose, and the proceeds donated to the Red Cross.

Why Maryland Censor Law Has No Appeal

Violators Not Entitled to Jury Trial—Usual Fine Is $50 and There Is No Appeal Unless Fine Exceeds That Amount.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mount Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Another important decision has been handed down by Attorney General Albert C. Ritchie regarding the appeal by violators of the censor law for jury trials. In this opinion, which was forwarded to Mrs. T. B. Harrison, secretary of the Maryland Censor Board, the following is set forth:

Violators of the state motion picture censor law are not entitled to jury trials and only have the right of appeal from a police magistrate's decision if the fine imposed is in excess of $50.

Magistrates may at all times prevent violators of the law from appealing from their decisions by imposing fines for $50, which is the minimum for second and all subsequent violations.

Police magistrates and justices of the peace have summary jurisdiction to try and punish offenders of the censor law, and the law itself does not provide for any appeal whatsoever. Further, there is no phase of the common laws which permits any person to appeal from a magistrate's decision where the fine is not in excess of $50. When the fine, however, exceeds this amount an appeal may be taken to the Criminal Court.

Thus it can be readily seen that this ruling prevents any appeals from magistrate's decisions under the censor law for first offenses as the maximum penalty for such first offenses is $50.

Danville Man Marries Screen Beauty.

Danville, Va.—Announcement was made in this city on May 13 of the marriage of Lieutenant J. N. Wheatley of this city to Shirley Courtney, now appearing in moving pictures, in Jacksonville, Fla. Miss Courtney was formally with the "Whirl of the World" company at the New York Winter Garden.

Dr. Leonard Hirshberg Buys Theater.

Baltimore, Md.—The Dream theater, 582-584 North Gay street, has now been taken over by Dr. Leonard K. Hirshberg, a very well known newspaper writer and physician of Baltimore. A new progressive policy is being planned. Samuel G. Smith, formerly manager of the Park Movies theater on Fulton avenue, has been engaged to manage the Dream.

Throngs Give Greeting to W. S. Hart.

Baltimore, Md.—On Tuesday, May 15, William S. Hart visted this city and was loudly acclaimed as a gentleman and film hero by the lusty throated crowds who saw him. The committee who had charge of Mr. Hart while he was in the city were: J. H. Buttner, manager of the Washington Triangle branch; Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Wilson theater, and A. B. Price, manager of the Rialto theater. Immediately upon his arrivel an impromptu reception was held at the Hotel Emerson for many of the exhibitors and newspaper men and friends. He was then conducted to the Wilson theater, 418 East Baltimore street, and it required the activities of two traffic policemen to clear the crowd so that his auto could get near the theater. After this he went to the Strand, Grand, Schanze's and West End theaters, where he addressed the audiences and was again greeted by great throngs. Later in the afternoon Mr. Hart and J. H. Buttner left for Washington in the big auto of Tom Moore, owner of the Strand and Plaza theaters of that city.

J. C. Cremen Takes Over Belvedere.

Baltimore, Md.—J. C. Cremen, owner and manager of the Carey theater, 1442 North Carey street, one of the model colored theaters in this city, has now taken over the Belvedere theater, 313 Belvedere avenue. A new policy is contemplated by Mr. Cremen.

Jinx After J. A. Barron?

Baltimore, Md.—J. Arthur Barron, resident manager of the Strand theater, 404 North Howard street, has been having a very strenuous time here of late.

First, he became very brave (in view of the high cost of loving) about two weeks ago and secured a marriage license.

Second, the first night, after he returned from his honeymoon, he was delayed at the Strand by business until 3 a. m.

Third, the censors has him pinched because he failed to have a tag on one of the pictures he screened.

Unique Attraction to Open McHenry.

Baltimore, Md.—As a unique idea, an attraction originated by Bernard Depkin, Jr., supervising manager of the Parkway interests, will be screened when the McHenry theater on Light street, near Poultney, is opened to the public on May 26. This is a scenic, photographed by Harry Lewy, co-proprietor of the Great Wizard theater, showing the Baltimore harbor and the monuments, new Hanover street bridge and school children of South Baltimore.

D. A. Neely Called to Colors.

Baltimore, Md.—On Thursday night, May 10, D. A. Neely, who since March has been managing the Princess theater for R. L. Byrum, left for Fort Screven, Ga., to report for miltary duty. Mr. Neely has had wide experience in the film business. While at Fort Screven he will be associated with the theater there. R. L. Byrum will manage the Princess himself for the present.

Webb Planning Another Big Theater.

Baltimore, Md.—On Sunday, May 13, the noted New York architect, Thomas R. Lamb, visited Baltimore as the guest of Harry W. Webb, president of the Parkway Theater Company, to take a survey of a plot of ground on Northeast Baltimore in the vicinity of Gay and Federal streets, preparatory to drawing up plans for a new theater which will seat about 2,500 and cost in the neighborhood of $80,000.

25 Recruits Gained at New Theater.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the courtesy of L. A. De Hoff, manager of the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, an extremely well arranged mass meeting in the interests of patriotism and recruiting was held on Sunday night, May 13. This meeting was under the auspices of the Fourth and Fifth Regiments in their recruiting campaign and the band of the former regiment furnished the music for the occasion. All the attendants of this house were on hand and gave their services in the help of the cause. Patriotic music and stirring speeches were given which fired the huge crowd to great enthusiasm. The effort met with success for 25 strong lads came forward to give their services to Uncle Sam. A beautiful silver offering also was given to aid the cause.

Red Cross Benefit at Ford's.

Baltimore, Md.—On Monday night, May 14, through the courtesy of Charles E. and John T. Ford, co-proprietors of Ford's opera house, a benefit performances of "Intolerance," the D. W. Griffith spectacle, was held at this theater under the auspices of the Red Cross Division of the Woman's Suffrage League. Patriotic addresses were delivered by prominent Maryland men.

Halifax Exhibitors Get Seat Tax Reduced

Provincial Tax Offset by Cutting of City Tax on Seats to Half—Ticket Tax Is Now One Cent for Tickets Costing 25 Cents or Less.

From F. F. Sully, La Tour, St. John, N. B.

HALIFAX, N. S.—To counteract the tax imposed by the Provincial Government on all the theatergoers in Nova Scotia, the exhibitors of Halifax succeeded in having legislation framed and passed that compelled the city authorities to reduce the seat tax from fifty to twenty-five cents per chair per year, and the exhibitors were also instrumental in having legislation framed and passed that prevents an unjust tax on the local exhibitor. The last session of the House of Assembly might well be called a motion picture session, for it dealt with more motion picture problems than has perhaps any other session of the house.

The premier introduced a bill providing for a tax of twenty-five per cent. of the cost of each ticket, the tax to be collected through the agency of tickets sold to the theatregoer. Halifax exhibitors by their untiring efforts succeeded in having this bill so amended that the taxation was reduced to one cent on tickets costing twenty-five cents or less, and two cents on tickets costing more, the tax to be collected by the ticket seller at the time of the sale of the ticket, and later a sworn statement made to the government, stating the amount due to the province.

While this was being pushed the exhibitors had a bill put through the house compelling the city government to cut the seat tax in half, and safeguarding the theater owner in other respects. Another bit of legislation passed by the house and favorable to the exhibitors was a bill that enables the lessee or manager of a theater to secure a license from the city, where heretofore the owner of the property was the only one to whom such a license could be issued. Under the new law, the city cannot refuse this license if the Provincial Government has already granted one to the same exhibitor. It is understood that this had proved a source of difficulty to some of the prospective theater owners in the city. While some of the legislation just passed may entail more or less hardship on the industry in this province, it has fortified the exhibitor and makes his position a more stable and enduring one.

Eliminating Inconveniences of Ticket Tax.

Since the passage of the bill providing for the tax of one cent on all motion picture patrons, the theater owners in Halifax have taken the matter up collectively and have practically decided upon a scheme that will eliminate a great deal of the inconvenience and bother that it was at first supposed would be entailed by the new law. It is now intended to raise the evening admission prices five cents, with the exhibitors paying the tax out of that amount. According to the present plan, no tax will be imposed at the afternoon performances, and the greater number of children as well as the afternoon patrons of the theaters will not be obliged to pay, the entire amount coming out of the extra five cents paid by those who patronize the evening shows. This method, it is felt, will do away with the inconvenience of handling extra copper—and the Canadian ones are large and cumbersome—and the people, in most cases, would prefer to pay the additional four cents and not be troubled with providing for the extra cent at the time of purchasing their tickets, or by taking away the four coppers as change. There is a general feeling among the theater and exchange men that this will prove a very satisfactory method of handling the new tax.

Plan for More Acceptable Films in Halifax.

Halifax, N. S.—Claiming that the pictures and vaudeville performances of the city were leaning toward the immoral and were not elevating to the youthful mind, a delegation from the Federation of Ladies' Clubs of Halifax and several prominent clergymen recently waited upon the exhibitors and urged sweeping changes in some of the programs now being offered to the public. J. M. Franklin, manager of the Strand theater, made provisions for representatives of the organization to attend the first show each week and report such features as they believed to be objectionable. Other theater men took similar steps. The ladies especially urged the boosting of educational subjects for children at the Saturday afternoon performances. In order to cater to the children, N. V. Gastonguay booked a return engagement of Marguerite Clark in "Snow White" for Saturday, May 12, and a return engagement of Zoe Rae, the six-year-old Universal star, in "Gloriana," for May 19. It is felt that the standard of pictures and vaudeville performances required by the Nova Scotia board of censors compares very favorably with other provinces in the Dominion, and with the United States. An extra effort will be made, however, to bring the pictures and shows of all kinds to the mark asked by those who are working in the interests of the up-lift movement.

Propose Ticket Tax for Hospital in Moncton.

Moncton, N. B.—A bill providing for a one-cent tax on all theater tickets purchased in the city of Moncton will be presented to the New Brunswick legislature, which is now in session at Fredericton. Following in the footsteps of Nova Scotia, Moncton has asked for the cent tax, but instead of turning it over to the government, it will revert to the city hospital, which, it is said, is in a needy condition. So far as is known the bill has not met with any opposition by the Moncton exhibitors, but there is ample time for developments before the bill is considered by the government, which will probably be in session for another six or ten weeks.

Chatham's Palace Theater to Be Enlarged.

Chatham, N. B.—G. Babineau and Son, who are doing big business in their Palace theater, which is situated above their poolroom and bowling alleys, have decided to take out the latter and greatly increase the capacity of their house. Work is to be started at once.

Theaters Across Border in Competition.

St. Stephen, N. B.—Charlie Staples, proprietor of the Bijou, recently met some unkind opposition from his American competitors in the adjoining border town in the United States. Charlie, at a considerable expense, booked the big Monarch production, "The Common Law," featuring Clara Kimball Young, only to be opposed on the same days by the opera house in Calais with the same picture, secured through the Bangor, Maine, exchange. A short time later he booked the feature, "The Foolish Virgin," and found that he was up against the same proposition. Both cities are small and draw on each other to a more or less degree for their motion picture patrons.

W. J. Reid Promoted.

St. John, N. B.—William J. Reid, who has been manager of the St. John office of the Regal Films Limited since it was established some few months ago, and who has been responsible for its unusual prosperity, was transferred last week to Toronto, to take charge of the head office. Mr. Reid is succeeded by I. Sourkes, formerly manager of the Midway theater, Montreal, and until early in May Maritime Province representative for the Fox Film. Mr. Reid made many friends among the film fraternity while he was in St. John. The Saturday previous to his departure for Toronto he spent the week end in Halifax, the guest of Don McRae and Meyer Herschorm.

Dominion Film May Open Halifax Office.

Halifax, N. S.—The Dominion Film corporation of Victoria, B. C., is contemplating opening an exchange in Halifax next month, and will in all probability be represented by G. Griffith, a local film man.

Joe Lieberman Will Distribute Monarch Films.

St. John, N. B.—Joe Lieberman, who has been on the road with the Tank pictures for the past two months, will now have charge of the distribution of the Monarch films in the Maritime Provinces. Joe was previously asistant manager and booker for the local office of the Famous Players. Joe left last week for a short stay at his home in Toronto to be present at his sister's wedding.

Business Notes of Interest.

St. John, N. B.—A. B. Farmer of the Star theater has just installed a new Powers 6B motor-driven motion picture machine, from the Independent Film and Theater Supply Company, Limited. Mr. Farmer has been running his house with one machine, but felt the necessity of installing another.

Manager R. Allan Christie of the Independent has met with considerable difficulty in moving into his new quarters in Dock street. The inability to secure carpenters to make the necessary renovations will probably cause a month's delay in getting into his new offices.

St. John, N. B.—On of the largest private projection rooms in the city has just been added to the quarters now occupied by the Famous Players in the Odd Fellows' building. Manager Mitchell S. Bernstein announces that John Kattahar of Sydney has contracted for two Paramount features a week.

Halifax, N. S.—S. Starfield, special representative of the Independent Film and Theater Supply Company made his first trip to Halifax last week, and has booked a number of features in the city, including "The Heart of Maryland" and "Would You Forgive?" at the Orpheus.

Halifax, N. S.—Charlie Berman of the Regal Films was in the city for several days and brought with him "War As It Really Is," which is booked at R. J. McAdam's Casino for an early date.

Week's Film Doings in Jersey.

Rialto Theater Company Incorporated.

NEWARK, N. J.—The men behind the big new Rialto theater, which is rapidly nearing completion, have formed a corporation called the Rialto Theater Company, with Frank G. Hall as registered agent. The offices of the concern, which is capitalized at $115,000, are located in the Strand theater building. The incorporators are Frank G. Hall, John B. McNally and George A. Enright. At the same time was incorporated the Rialto Realty Company, for the purpose of obtaining the property. This latter concern is capitalized at the same amount, and contains the same personnel as the Rialto Theater Company.

The Rialto, as told in a previous issue of the Moving Picture World, will be one of the largest picture houses in the state upon its completion. The new house will occupy the ground at 909 to 915 Broad street. The lots cost $650,000 and the theater building $350,000 additional. The plans, as drawn by Percy Vivaratas, call for the construction of a one-story brick building 100x160. The frontage of the lots on Broad street is 104 feet, while the depth is 282 feet, and the width is 109 feet. The theater will seat 3,000 persons. It is expected that the latest addition to the local film houses will be ready for occupancy in the early fall.

Contemplated Salem Theater.

Salem, N. J.—Arthur B. Smith contemplates the construction of a moving picture theater at this place. The proposed theater will be a one-story brick hollow tile structure, occupying a plot 30x120. The cost will be $15,000.

Two Features at Strand.

Newark, N. J.—The two features during the week of May 14 at the Strand theater, John B. McNally, manager, were the Vitagraph features, "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," and "Beware of Strangers." The house did a smashing business at 25 and 50 cents admission. For the week of May 21 Mary Pickford in her latest Artcraft production, "A Romance of the Red Woods," will be the stellar attraction.

Edison "Conquest" Pictures.

Newark, N. J.—Four performances on Saturday, May 19, are announced of the new Edison "Conquest" pictures at Wallace Hall, Y. M. C. A. building, 108 Halsey street. The pictures have been produced for the explicit purpose of advancing the movement for better films.

"Honor System" at Terminal.

Newark, N. J.—"The Honor System" will be the attraction during the week of May 20 at the Fox Terminal theater. Moe Kridel is the manager of the house, which adjoins the new Public Service Terminal.

Big House for Forest Hill.

Newark, N. J.—Plans have been filed for the erection of a two-story building to be built at the southeast corner of Mt. Prospect avenue and Heller Parkway. The said building is to contain a moving picture theater, three stores, six offices and a meeting hall. The plot occupies 125x150 feet. Arthur W. Moore, of 22 Green street, is the owner of the new theater. The plans, as drawn by Architect Henry Baechlin, 665 Broad street, call for the expenditure of $65,000. The building will have a brick and stone face and slag roofing.

Fox Terminal Safe Opened.

Newark, N. J.—The safe of the Fox's Terminal theater was opened last Monday and $485, representing Saturday's receipts, was taken from the safe. The police believe that someone who knew the combination of the safe is responsible for the theft. The police conclude this to be the case since no marks were on the safe to indicate that it had been tampered with, and the combination was in working order. Moe Kridel, manager of the house, discovered the theft. The culprit has not as yet been apprehended.

West New York, N. J.—The Comet theater, care of the J. C. Garisch estate, 677 Bergenline avenue, is having plans prepared by William Mayer, Jr., and Edward Manahan, 711 Bergenline avenue, for the construction of a moving picture theater on the former premises. The house, which entails the expenditure of $20,000, is of brick and iron construction and slag roofing.

New and Heavier Tax in Toronto

City Controller Wants to Increase Tax on Theaters by 120 Per Cent.—Counts the Number of Seats in Whole City—Calculates That Each Is Filled Three Times Every Day—Measure Goes to Special Committee.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St. E., Toronto, Canada.

TORONTO, ONT.—The seventy-five moving picture exhibitors of Toronto stand liable to a stiff increase in municipal taxation on the one hand and the enforced closing of their theaters during the day time, according to proposals made at the Board of Control meeting at the City Hall on Wednesday, May 16, by Controllers Foster and Cameron.

Controller Foster, whose platform has always been "Economy" in civic administration, regardless of consequences, laid before his fellow members a scheme for a great increase in the city's revenue at the expense of the moving picture theaters and film fans. The plan outlined by him provided for an increase in taxation from the picture houses by over 120 per cent.

According to the controller's computation the moving picture theaters of the city have a combined seating capacity of 41,507. Allowing for the occupation of each seat three times per day at an average fee of 15 cents, the total annual revenue to exhibitors would be $10,330,094, or $142 per seat per year. The city now exacts a fee of $50 per theater per year. This figures out roughly at 11 cents per seat per year. Controller Foster suggested that the city charge a flat rate of 25 cents per seat per year, or an increase of 120 per cent. in the tax.

In recommending this increase Controller Foster pointed out that the city's revenue from both picture houses and the legitimate theaters would be increased from $5,387.50 to $14,227 per year.

Mayor Church declared: "If you increase the fee of the theaters it will simply come out of the pockets of patrons."

Controller Cameron also recommended that all moving picture theaters be permitted to open only in the evenings of the six week days. In making this proposal Controller Cameron argued that the film theaters during the daylight hours were merely a refuge for military slackers and loafers.

No action was taken by the Board of Control except to refer the subject to the special committee which has been appointed to find ways of increasing the revenue.

Local moving picture men were given absolutely no intimation that the subject of theater taxation would be brought up before the Board of Control and, accordingly, they had no representation at the meeting. It is more than likely, however, that the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario and the Exchange Managers' Club will take immediate steps to meet the new menace. The proposition has created a profound sensation here.

The city is said to be desperately in need of more money and the exhibitors now face the likelihood of a big increase in taxation on top of a healthy Provincial license fee and a war tax on admission tickets. The exhibitors cannot say, however, that they are doing poor business, because the continued cool weather has rather helped receipts.

New Exchange, Atlas Films, Opens.

Toronto.—Still another moving picture exchange has been opened in Toronto. The new business has adopted the name of the Atlas Films of Canada, and offices have been established in the Imperial Bank building, Yonge and Queen streets. The officials of the new concern are the Roos Brothers and Mr. Mulhall. The former are well known local cameramen, while Mulhall was formerly associated with R. S. Marvin in the Strand theater, Toronto, and the Strand, Camp Borden. Leonard Roos also formerly took topical views for Mr. Marvin and latterly has been taking news pictures for the Pathe. The new company will engage in commercial work and will also release various subjects, including comedies.

To Organize Permanent Exchange Club.

Toronto.—James Travis, formerly the Pathe Toronto manager, has been authorized to effect a permanent organization of the Exchange Managers' Club, of which he has been the secretary for many weeks. It is announced that Mr. Travis will become a mediator between the exchanges and exhibitors in this province, throughout the whole of which he is well known.

Canadian Universal Notes.

Toronto.—Announcement is made at the Canadian headquarters of the Universal here that E. S. Granau, formerly assistant manager of the Montreal Universal branch, has been made manager of that office in succession to T. O. Byerle, who resigned recently.

Harry Decker, who has had charge of Bluebird Photoplays in Montreal, has become assistant manager of the Montreal branch, and Charles Brenon will now have charge of the Bluebird department at Montreal.

St. Denis Theater Under Hammer.

Toronto.—According to an announcement made here the St. Denis theater, Montreal, the largest picture theater in Canada, has been offered for sale by H. Hicks & Co., who are acting for the liquidators of the theater. The theater will be placed under the hammer about the middle of June.

Ticket Tax in Ontario for one Month.

Toronto.—Announcement has been made that the Ontario government derived a revenue of more than $50,000 during the month of April alone on amusement war tax. This is the largest monthly total since the tax went into effect in May, 1916, and in this instance was secured solely through the sale of theater tickets, as there were no outdoor sports to augment the tax receipts. The collection for the month of April figures out at the rate of $600,000 per year. The many pennies do count up.

Operator C. L. Spofford Wins Contest.

Toronto.—Charles L. Spofford, operator of the Red Mill theater, Toronto, was the winner of the contest conducted by Mr. McMahon of the local I. A. T. S. E. for the best answers to five questions on projection. The competition was open to operators all over the Dominion.

Toronto.—Scarboro Beach Park, Toronto's popular East End amusement park, was opened for the season on Saturday, May 19. As usual, moving pictures are being screened in the open at regular intervals during the evening as one of the free attractions. Universal comedies are again being used.

Toronto.—George McArthur, Jr., for six years with the Gold Fibre Screen Company, of Detroit, has organized the Acme Gold Fibre Screen Company at Windsor, Ontario, and has already taken orders in the Dominion. One of his new screens is being placed in the Regent theater, Toronto.

How Traveling Film Salesmen Can Register

War Department Arranges for Registration of Men Who Must Be Absent on Day Appointed—Issues Cards to Be Filled Out.

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In response to a large number of inquiries the War Department has issued instructions regarding the registration of traveling men and other absentees under the conscription law, in which traveling film representatives and other men on the road for the motion picture industry will be interested.

The department wishes to impress upon the people that there will be only one day for registration, which will be specified in the President's proclamation of the law. Upon that day all males between the ages of 21 and 30, inclusive, must register. Persons too sick to present themselves for registration must send a competent person to the clerk of the city or county in which they reside on the sixth day after the date of the President's proclamation. The clerk will give instructions for registration.

Any person who expects to be absent from home on registration day should go to the clerk of the county, where he may be staying, on the sixth day after the date of the President's proclamation. If he is in a city of over 30,000 population, the city clerk is the official to whom he should apply. The absentee will be told how to register, and a registration card will be filled out, which must be mailed by him so as to reach the registrar of his home precinct by registration day. The clerk to whom the absentee applies is not empowered to issue the absentee a registration certificate, which is to be issued only by the registrar in his home precinct.

Richmond Council Has Minor Patron Measure.

Richmond, Va.—Councilman Edgar B. English has introduced in the city council an ordinance prepared by him, with the assistance of Judge Ricks of the juvenile court, prohibiting children under fourteen years of age from entering motion picture theaters unless accompanied by a parent or guardian. A fine of not less than $5 nor more than $50 is provided for each offense.

D. Morris Now Owns the Hippodrome.

Philadelphia, Pa.—D. Morris, of the Franklin theater, 3rd and Fitzwater streets, has acquired the Hippodrome, at 6th and South streets, which he proposes to renovate, remodel, redecorate and put in first class condition. Typhoon fans are to be installed to give proper ventilation, and a large organ will also be installed, presumably in time for the reopening.

Auditorium Being Overhauled.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Auditorium, at 8th and Race streets, is being completely overhauled and refurnished. New seats will be installed and many other improvements will be made for the comfort of patrons. General Manager Frank W. Buhler, of the Central Market Street Amusement Company, is constantly making improvements at his six theaters, of which the Auditorium is one, and it is reported that in the very near future the Victoria will have several hundred seats added to its already large capacity.

"20,000 League" Window Display Attracts Attention.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A clever piece of publicity work was staged here by Abe L. Einstein, in connection with Universal's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," which is being royally received by picture fans here. He secured window space in a prominent Chestnut street store, in a location where hundreds of people pass every hour. In the window he arranged an attractive display of Jules Verne's novels, banked like the waves of the ocean, and on this literary sea he displayed a model of Captain Nemo's submarine boat "The Nautilus." The effect was exceptionally novel, and caught the attention of nearly every one who passed. Backed by a large quantity of display advertising, a billing campaign which has the town posted like a circus, business for the first week exceeded all expectations, and surpassed the record even of the first week's showing of "The Birth of a Nation." In front of the theater two men in diving suits and another in the guise of Captain Nemo himself furnish effective and appropriate display.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Pathe's latest serial, "The Neglected Wife," starring the popular actress Ruth Roland, has met with considerable success here from the start, and is being booked with a lively interest. H. Osbron, the local manager, expects fine business because of the merits of the new serial, which arrived here at an opportune time.

Philadelphia, Pa.—General Film reports a big increase in booking on the O. Henry Series. They state that these are positively the best two-reel products ever handled by the local exchange. The circuit of theaters here playing these pictures is very large.

R. F. Hogue Buys Splendid Norfolk Theater

Quarter of a Million Involved in Deal Whereby Picture House Changes Hands —Shows Faith in Norfolk's Growth and Prosperity.

NORFOLK, VA.—Robert F. Hogue, a capitalist, of Prince George, Va., has secured possession of the Granby theater, on Granby street, between Freemason and Charlotte streets, from George Karanicholas and George Christopolous, both of Norfolk.

In addition to a cash consideration, the Rogue and Bonshaw apartments were also transferred to Messrs. Karanicholas and Christopolous. The total amount involved in the transaction is approximately $250,000.

Mr. Hogue is the father of Dr. Robert C. Hogue of this city. He is well known by the business men of Norfolk, and has been royally entertained by many of them since he came to this city about a week ago to close negotiations for the Granby as an investment. Mr. Hogue said he had the greatest faith in Norfolk's growth and future, and did not know of any city where the outlook for increased values was greater. He also said he had looked over the city, and that he could see no better prospects for investment than on Granby street.

The Granby theater was erected two years ago by George Karanicholas and George Christopolous as a motion picture house, and is one of the handsomest and best arranged in the South. It has a frontage of 55 feet, and a depth of 185 feet.

This deal is one of the largest that has been made in Norfolk real estate for more than a year.

Robert Lynch Heads Local Metro.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The appointment of Robert Lynch, formerly of the Bluebird exchange, as manager of the Metro exchange here comes as one of the surprises of the year. Mr. Lynch has made an excellent record with Bluebird pictures, and has been successful in placing them in a large number of theaters. This is only one testimonial to his ability, since he has an enviable record of business success. There seems no doubt that Metro will be more firmly established in this territory as a result of Mr. Lynch's efforts.

M. Lessey Will Take Charge of Bluebird.

Philadelphia, Pa.—M. Lessey, formerly manager of the Philadelphia Film exchange, will assume the management of the Bluebird exchange. Mr. Lessey has been in the film business for six years, and is in a position to give practical advice and co-operation to his many friends among the exhibitors.

Charles Campbell Now With K-E-S-E.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Charles Campbell, who is well known in this territory, is now representing the K-E-S-E comedy department as special representative.

Work on Family Theater Almost Done.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Alexander R. Boyd, who has personally been supervising the extensive alterations being made at his Family theater, will soon have the satisfaction of seeing the complete results of his labors. All the alterations have been completed on schedule time, and with the house never having been closed a minute.

No "The Easiest Way" Decision Yet.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"The Easiest Way," starring Clara Kimball Young, was taken into court on an appeal from the decision of the State Board of Censors by Mr. Milder, the Selznick representative. Judge Patterson, of Common Pleas, No. 1, before whom the case was tried, has not yet announced his decision.

Buffalo Film Men Concerned Over Economies

Local Business Men Including Those in Film Trade See Danger Ahead in Indiscriminate Money Hoarding—Will Help Educate Patrons.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 152 North Elmwood St., Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Business men generally, and with them Buffalo exhibitors, are undertaking a campaign to educate people to the dangers of ill-advised and indiscriminate economy. It is absolutely necessary for the good of all that general business activities, with good wages and wide employment, be encouraged. The country needs to be kept up to a high degree of efficiency in every line, and it is the plain duty of every citizen to sacrifice himself, if need be, to keep things going and to keep all kinds of employment, not merely special kinds, steadily up to the top notch There will really be no sacrifice in it—its mere common sense.

To waste is always wrong. To spend wisely at this time will be to invite the money to come back into the spender's pocket. In helping others he will help himself. The more he hoards, the more he will need to hoard; for the greater the danger will be to him. When he begins to see hard times coming, he will find less and less to hoard; for it will all be stored away in stockings, and what he has saved won't be enough. What he needs is good wages. The wage earner's stocking may become a traitor to his good. Even if he makes munitions, his wages will depend largely on business conditions generally.

Buffalo exhibitors can do a lot to teach common sense in this matter to their patrons. But if they use slides and throw them on the screen they must make them convincing. The best way for the exhibitor to do is not to ask patrons to keep coming to his show for patriotic reasons, but to keep patronizing business generally. If the patron buys new clothes and looks natty, he will want to be out, and, being out, will want to drop into a show. After all, the accented economy idea is the only thing blocking prosperity. Local exhibitors are lined up with other business men in a general campaign against this false economy. Neither should the exhibitor economize. Let him lead off with good shows and an attractive theater.

Looks For a Daylight Screen.

Ontario, Beach, N. Y.—Outdoor moving pictures will be a feature at Ontario Beach, Rochester's summer resort, this season. It is said a representative of the park is in New York investigating the merits of a new daylight screen. It is claimed that by the use of this screen cinema displays may be made in bright sunlight, and as effectively as when shown in darkened interiors. Roy Fisher will be in charge of the moving pictures at the beach, and David Ross will be advertising man.

Star Theater Gives Ambulance Benefit.

Buffalo, N. Y.—E. H. Southern, the eminent actor, who was to have explained the Pathe war pictures at the Star theater, Buffalo, Wednesday evening, was taken suddenly ill, and was unable to appear. Leslie Buswell, a magazine writer, who has returned after two years of ambulance service in the war zone, took Mr. Southern's place at the performance. The show was for the benefit of the Buffalo unit of the American Field Ambulance service.

Jury Convicts Ticket Taker of Admitting Children.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A judge in the children's court imposed a fine of $50 on a ticket taker of a local moving picture theater on Wednesday. The defendant was charged with admitting children under 16 years old unaccompanied by an adult. The ticketman demanded to be tried by a jury, and his request was granted. This was the first time the children's court of this city has had a trial by jury.

Exchanges Are Encouraging Employees to Buy Liberty Bonds.

Buffalo, N. Y.—"Buy a Liberty bond" is a familiar slogan heard in Buffalo film circles these days. Exhibitors and exchange managers are encouraging their employees to subscribe. This plan is urged as a patriotic one, and to encourage thrift.

Campaign Started to Provide Films for Soldiers.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Two hundred moving picture machines and 268,000 feet of films a day are among the articles to be provided as the result of a campaign headed by A. H. Whitford, general secretary of the Buffalo Y. M. C. A.

Buffalo is one of the units in this statewide campaign to raise $1,000,000 for Army Y. M. C. A. work. The purpose is to provide moving pictures and many other requirements for the troops during 1917 in the war with Germany.

Buffalo, N. Y.—"Birth" was the moving picture attraction at the Family theater last week. Only women were permitted to see the show. The only exception was on Thursday evening, when the theater was filled with men, and the women were excluded. Modern methods in child care were explained by Winnifred Hopper Cooley.

Warning Against Certain "Relief" Agents

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, with which many of the moving picture men are affiliated, has issued a warning to its members not to patronize the many alleged charity workers who claim they are collecting money for the benefit of European war sufferers. The charity bureau of the chamber claims that the work of many of these collectors is unworthy of support, because the bulk of the proceeds goes into the hands of professional promoters.

Pennsylvania Legislator Wants New Film Tax

Representative Beyer Prepares Tax of One Cent a Lineal Foot on All Motion Picture Film—To Cover Cost of State Fire Insurance.

By Pittsburgh News Service, 6061 Jenkens Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Local film men are voicing considerable protest against another piece of adverse legislation now pending before the state law-making body, the latest being a bill introduced by Representative Beyer, of Philadelphia, proposing a tax of 1 cent a lineal foot on all moving picture films. The owner or lessee of the film would have to pay the tax at the time of receiving a certificate of approval of any film from the State Board of Censors. The revenue thus raised would be used in paying fire insurance on state property, this tax being proposed as a substitute for the two per cent. tax on premiums of foreign fire insurance companies now used to pay the state insurance.

Weirton's New Rex Thrown Open.

Weirton, W. Va.—The handsome new Rex theater, Weirton, W. Va., was thrown open May 12 in an auspicious manner, and its great popularity with the film patrons of the locality seems assured. The Rex has a seating capacity of 600, and is of pleasing design. The arrangement of the interior is quite effective, both as to comfort and appearance, and the house throughout reflects the progressive ideas of the owners, Messrs. Miller and Vellas. A large Seeburg pipe organ supplies the music. High-grade feature pictures are being shown.

Dora Rodrigues on Patriotic Mission.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The local Universal office, the Independent Film exchange and exhibitors throughout western Pennsylvania are making preparations for the forthcoming visit of Dora Rodrigues, who is touring the country under the auspices of the Universal in behalf of recruiting for the United States Army. The two-reel film, "Uncle Sam at War," will be shown at the leading theaters in connection with a lecture by Miss Rodrigues. In Pittsburgh she will be met by the mayor and a large delegation. The schedule of her visits in this section is as follows: Grafton, W. Va., May 18 to 19; Clarksburg, 20 to 23; Fairmont, May 24 to 26; Uniontown, Pa., May 27 to 28; Connellsville, 29 to 30; Greensburg, June 1 to 2; Pittsburgh, June 3 to 16; Newcastle, June 17 to 20; Youngstown, O., June 21 to 24.

Thriving Woodlawn Theater Sold.

Woodlawn, Pa.—The Orpheum theater, Woodlawn, Pa., has been sold by M. J. Chernoff to Messrs. Hallesy and Connelly, of Alquippa, Pa. The house is an attractive one, seating 500 persons, and does a thriving business. The admission is 10 cents, with higher prices for special attractions. While the new owners are newcomers in the exhibiting business, they are preparing to set a high standard in the policies of the Orpheum. Mr. Chernoff is negotiating for another theater.

The Arcadia Books Paramount.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Arcadia theater, East Ohio street, one of the finest houses on the Northside, Pittsburgh, has contracted for the Paramount pictures, and will fittingly inaugurate the service with a full week's showing, beginning May 28. Manager Goldstein reports a very active business at the Arcadia, which enjoys a large and exclusive patronage. A number of attractive Spring improvements and decorations have just been completed by the owner, Clarence Overend.

Film Office Baseball Begins.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Although the martial spirit is holding sway at present in the Pittsburgh film trade, the base ball fever is breaking out as usual this season, as evidenced by the entrance of two of the leading exchanges into the field with crack base ball nines. The Metro and the Hudson have issued challenges, and it is expected that they will cross bats in a series of games for the championship of the local film industry.

Matthew Teplitz Recovering.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The many friends of Matthew Teplitz, of the Specialty Film Company, Film Exchange building, will be glad to hear that he is rapidly recovering from an operation for appendicitis and expects to return to his desk soon. Morris Berger, the other member of the firm, has been quite busy looking after the affairs of the Specialty during Mr. Teplitz's absence.

John Handos to Improve Theater.

Finleyville, Pa.—The Olympic theater, Finleyville, Pa., will be enlarged in the near future by the owner, John Handos, who is also manager of the house. It is planned by Mr. Handos to run vaudeville attractions in connection with pictures next winter. The improvements will be carried out during July and August.

Advance of Admission Prices.

"Purity" Coming Back to Strand.

Cleveland, O.—"Purity," which was the center of a big legal fight in Cleveland a couple of months ago, is coming back to the Strand theater, where it played two weeks first run, and during which engagement the mayor ordered it banned from town.

The owners of the picture won the fight and now three prints are working in Ohio.

E. J. Schmidt Succeeds Manager Brandt.

Cleveland, O.—E. J. Schmidt, former special representative of the "Idle Wives Photo Play Company," has been appointed manager to succeed A. E. Brandt, who recently resigned.

Mr. Schmidt formerly handled "Neptune's Daughter," "Where Are My Children?" and Bluebird productions. He will have his offices at 707 Columbia Building, Cleveland.

He has acquired the services of G. E. Dickman, of Buffalo, who was associated with him in all former productions. Mr. Schmidt's territory will include, Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

DETROIT NEWS LETTER.

By Jacob Smith.

Gardner Theater Equipment Begins.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Gardiner Theater Equipment Co. succeeds the Detroit Theater Equipment Co. in business. L. J. Gardiner continues as general manager. The firm has moved to 101 West Fort street, where it occupies part of the first floor of the Universal Film building.

W. F. Klatt Lessens Theater Holdings.

Detroit, Mich.—William F. Klatt, operating a chain of theaters in Detroit, has disposed of the Jewell on Gratiot avenue to Jack Matthews, and plans to dispose of some of his other houses. He will be certain to retain the Rosedale and Regent theaters, and even possibly the Vendome. Mr. Klatt, who is inclined to do much press agent work for himself, did admit to the WORLD correspondent that he was contemplating the erection of a big house in Detroit—even exceeding the Regent, which seats over 3,000. Just where this new playhouse would be or just when the deal would be closed Mr. Klatt would not say other than he had a big house under way.

Mr. Klatt announces the reappointment of Charles A. McVicker as general manager of his theaters. Mr. McVicker left in February to go West for his health. He has returned to the city and says he never felt better. In addition to supervising the management of the Klatt theaters, "Mac" also does the booking.

Cincinnati Theater Managers Organize

New Association Formed—Is Headed by C. Hurbert Heuck as President—First Meeting Is Held at League Headquarters—Joint Resolutions.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 1st Nat. Bank, Cincinnati, O.

CINCINNATI, O.—An organization of Cincinnati theatrical managers, under the name of the Theatrical Managers' Association of the Chamber of Commerce, has been formed, and the following officers elected: C. Hubert Heuck, president; Ned Hastings, first vice-president; Geo. F. Fish, second vice-president; H. H. Hedges, third vice-president; P. E. Aylward, secretary, and Ben L. Heidingsfeld, treasurer. The association met at once with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Chamber of Commerce and joint resolutions were adopted protesting against the proposed tax of ten per cent. on amusement tickets, as difficult to handle and collect, and proposing instead a tax on the net profits of the theaters. Telegrams were sent to the Ohio congressional delegation indicating the sense of the resolutions. It is declared by moving-picture and theatrical managers that the proposed tax, levied, as it is, on gross receipts, would in many cases mean bankruptcy.

World Film Present Big French Flag.

Cincinnati, O.—The big French flag which was used so effectively in Cincinnati during the first run of "Mothers of France" at the Alhambra, has been presented by the World Film, through Manager Harris Hurst, of the Cincinnati office, to the Foreign Trade Department of the Chamber of Commerce. None of the official or civic bodies of the city possessed a French ensign, in spite of the fact that the great republic is now one of America's allies; and it occurred to Manager Hurst that this disposition of the flag would be a graceful and acceptable act. Eugene C. Pociey, the French consul at Cincinnati, was present at the presentation.

Hart Gets Warm Welcome in Cincinnati

Appears in Cowboy Costume at Orpheum, Family and Plaza Theaters and Is Given Hearty Reception at the Cuvier Press Club.

CINCINNATI, O.—The visit to Cincinnati and Cincinnati theaters of William S. Hart, the famous Triangle star, was an event which drew hundreds of persons to the theaters where he appeared in order to see in the flesh the actor whose handling of Western roles has been so successful. Mr. Hart appeared in cowboy costume at the Family, the Orpheum, the Plaza and other houses, escorted by Manager C. C. Hite, of the Triangle office. His guns were missing, as the city officials indicated that they could not approve of the wearing of the Hart six-shooters in public, even though unloaded and not concealed. Mr. Hart spoke at the houses which he visited, being enthusiastically received, and later in the evening appeared as the guest of honor at a dinner at the Cuvier Press Club, attended by 150 exhibitors, film men and press representatives. He was the principal speaker of the evening, telling the guests of his career as an actor, and pointing out that with sixteen years on the speaking stage and four years in moving pictures behind him, his original cowboy experience was rather limited, although entirely genuine. Other speakers were A. G. Hettesheimer, I. W. McMahan, C. C. Hite, H. Serkowich, and a number of leading Cincinnati and visiting exhibitors.

More Demands From Musicians' Union.

Cincinnati, O.—More trouble with the musicians seems to be in prospect for Cincinnati theaters, as the union has presented to the theaters employing orchestras a demand for contracts for next season stipulating that a minimum of 30 weeks be guaranteed, instead of the usual "30 weeks, more or less," which saved the theaters in case of a short season. The managers have notified the union that they cannot possibly consent to this demand and the others made, and there the situation stands at present. It is also understood that musicians employed in the larger moving picture houses will ask for certain concessions, in view of the high cost of living and other factors. At Keith's theater the men have asked for more pay and for the employment of more men in the orchestra as well.

Theaters Aid in Red Cross Campaign.

Cincinnati, O.—The moving picture houses and leading members of the fraternity are doing their full share in Cincinnati's campaign for raising an army of 30,000 members of the Red Cross, and excellent results are being achieved. I. Libson, manager of the Strand, the Walnut and the Family, the largest downtown houses, has been doing a lot of personal work, being a valuable member of the corps of speakers employed, with his slogan, "Isn't an American soldier worth a dollar?" Moreover, the entire corps of employes in Mr. Libson's houses has been enrolled as members of the Red Cross, which helps considerably.

Interesting Notes of the Local Trade.

Cincinnati, O.—"Idle Wives" is having a week's successful run at the Lyric theater, coming from Indianapolis. The picture succeeded "The Crisis," which ran two weeks with good houses throughout, and the Lyric moving-picture season is keeping up its record in excellent shape.

Cincinnati, O.—The Dolly Varden theater, at Laurel and Central avenues, made a hit on a recent Saturday by admitting children for a potato or an onion each, donating the vegetable receipts to the Betts Street hospital.

Cincinnati, O.—The latest Artcraft release shown at the Walnut, "A Romance of the Redwoods," featuring Mary Pickford in a first-rate De Mille story, ran a week, meeting with much success, as the role was an unusual one for the popular star.

KENTUCKY NEWS NOTES.

Important News of Kentucky Theaters.

Midway, Ky.—A. B. Arnett has announced that he will erect a moving picture airdome at Midway, and have the plant in operation by the time seasonable weather comes around.

Winchester, Ky.—The Pastime theater has installed a new exhaust fan, which is said to be the second largest in the state The largest one now operating is at the Ben Ali theater, Lexington.

Jackson, Ky.—H. L. Spencer has sold the Lyric theater to J. E. Stivers, who formerly owned the house, and who has other moving picture interests in eastern Kentucky. Mr. Spencer has returned to his law practice.

Frankfort, Ky.—L. O. Lowell, former operator at the Capital theater, has returned to his post, and taken up the duties of Logan Patterson, who has gone with the Grand theater.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Columbia theater, recently closed by H. W. Whitney, may shortly reopen, W. B. Johnson, of Huntington, W. Va., having a deal on with Mr. Whitney under which he may buy the lease.

Scottsville, Ky.—Fifteen of the leading business houses recently made arrangements with the Gem theater, whereby they gave tickets away with each fifty cent purchase, these tickets being good for a special Saturday afternoon matinee.

Walton, Ky.—The Royal theater is again in operation, work on the local power plant having been completed after a close down of some time.

Kentucky Theaters Face Coal Shortage

Small Photoplay Houses in Various Sections of the State Have Been Frequently Forced to Shut Down—Coal Car Shortage One Reason.

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Stark Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The coal situation is becoming so serious that it is now a world wide subject. During the past few months the shortage of coal cars has resulted in prices climbing out of sight, and deliveries are very uncertain. Small theaters, operating in various sections of the state, have been forced to close down frequently, supplies of coal, either for heating or operating municipal power plants, failing to arrive on time. Theaters making their own heat and power, not only in Louisville, but other sections, are facing the greatest coal scarcity and highest prices ever known.

At present the coal operators are absolutely refusing to take on any season contracts at any price, and present quotations are higher than the top price last winter. Large consumers of the North and East are paying spot cash for mine output at the mines in eastern and western Kentucky, and have forced up prices. The mines are only able to supply a small portion of the present demand, and the entire situation revolves around the coal car shortage. A number of investigations have been started by the authorities in Kentucky, Indiana, West Virginia and other states, and the Interstate Commerce Commission has been working on the problem for months.

Local Theaters Have Excellent Month.

Louisville, Ky.—Fred Dolle, of the Broadway Amusement Enterprises, operators of a chain of theaters in Louisville, in a recent interview with the correspondent of the Moving Picture World, said: "April closed as the best month our chain of theaters ever experienced, and May business is coming along in grand shape. The cold, bad weather of the past few months has aided rather than hurt the moving picture business. The weather has been just mean enough that out door sports and entertainments have been out of the question, and the moving picture theaters have been good and busy. Every one of our chain of theaters, with the exception of the Rex, is getting ten cents, and all report an increase in attendance.

Kentucky Association Meeting Called Off.

Louisville, Ky.—The meeting of the Kentucky Association of Exhibitors, to have been held on Saturday, May 12, was passed up, as there was nothing of any interest to bring up, and no real need of a meeting. Several of the exhibitors from out in the state were in the city, however, they making the trip in order that they might be present at the forty-third running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs track. Those present saw quite some little race when Charley Boral piloted the English colt, Omar Khayyam, over the mile and a quarter course in the fast time of 2:04:3-5. Manager Elliott, of the Strand theater, Lexington, Ky., and Nelson Van Houten Guernee, of the Ada Meade, Lexington, were among the visitors.

Film Man Drowns Self.

Louisville, Ky.—Local moving picture men were somewhat startled in hearing of the suicide of Clarence J. Nichols, 55 years old, connected with the Orpheum and Casino theaters. Nichols had been in bad health for several years, suffering from kidney trouble. He became so despondent that he frequently threatened that he would drown himself, but little was thought of these threats until he disappeared. Later his hat and coat were found on the bank of the canal, and his body was recovered from the water. For twenty-five years he had been connected with local amusement concerns, formerly with the old Auditorium, and later with the Masonic and Avenue theaters.

For the past ten years he had been with Judge Allen Kinney, being a general handy man, who could operate a machine, the door, do a little spieling or handle the business end in emergency. "Nick," as he was commonly known among his friends, was one of the oldest active theatrical men about the city, and had a host of friends. He is survived by his wife and one daughter.

Discussion Over "Civilization."

Louisville, Ky.—Moving picture circles were considerably surprised at the action taken by Col. William A. Colston, commanding the First Kentucky Regiment, National Guards, when the latter withdrew the support of the regiment from "Civilization," the big military production which has been shown at Macauley's theater. Col. Colston, in a letter addressed to D. P. Davis, owner of "Civilization," who is in Louisville, asked Mr. Davis to discontinue the regimental recruiting station in the theater lobby. The regiment officers had been in charge of the program for the presentation of this film, and Col. Colston, on the opening night, delivered a patriotic address in connection with the showing.

Since viewing the picture, Col. Colston stated in his letter, he has come to the conclusion that "the picture is unpatriotic, tends to repress recruiting, and should not be shown at all." Mr. Davis, in a letter to Col. Colston answering the communication, declared the proposition of supporting and approving the film was made by the officers of the regiment.

Military Movie Ball in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky.—In an effort to raise funds for the use of the First Kentucky Regiment, and to aid in recruiting, arrangements have been made to hold a Military Movie Ball at the Jefferson County Armory, on May 28. It is announced that Francis X. Bushman and Miss Beverly Bayne will lead the grand mach. Arrangements have been made whereby a large number of young girls have been enlisted in the campaign, and the one selling the largest number of tickets to the ball is to represent Kentucky in a photoplay to be made and known as "A Modern Maid of Orleans." Just how and when the picture is to be made is not clear at this time.

J. L. Steurle Seeks Political Office.

Louisville, Ky.—Joseph L. Steurle, head of the Broadway Amusement interests in Louisville, has announced himself as a Democratic nominee for the position of city auditor in the fall election. Mr. Steurle is a member of the bar, and started in the moving picture industry in a small house on Broadway several years ago. These interests grew until the Broadway Amusement Enterprises controled a large chain of theaters, among which are the Alamo, Walnut, Rex, Ideal, East Broadway, West Broadway, Baxter and Crown.

Manager Erd Has Accident.

Paris, Ky.—Manager Fred Erd, of the Paris Grand opera house, a moving picture theater, is recovering from the effects of a recent accident with a motorcycle which he was riding. A portion of the machinery gave way, and Mr. Erd struck a hard bit of pike, suffering severe bruises and two broken ribs. In a recent statement he said: "The next time I tackle a frisky motorcycle I intend to have it placed under a peace bond to insure its behaving."

Winchester, Ky.—Antonio Polini, an Italian, who was formerly with the special orchestra employed by "The Birth of a Nation" road company, has been secured as a clarinet player at the Pastime theater,

Orpheum Co. Plans New Memphis House

New York Corporation Will Shortly Build Theater to Cost About $350,000—Arthur Lane Will Be Local Director of the New Venture.

By J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Following the opening of the Orpheum theater for a summer run of moving pictures and "pop vaudeville," comes the announcement that the Orpheum Theater and Realty Company, Inc., of New York, will shortly erect another magnificient theater in Memphis to cost in the neighborhood of $350,000. These figures include the property as well as the theater building and equipment, and according to plans under way it is proposed to make the new house one of the most elaborate theaters in the South.

Martin Beck, managing director of the Orpheum circuit, is actively engaged in the work incident to getting the new theater under way, and will turn the management over to Arthur Lane, prominent local moving picture and vaudeville man, who also retains control of the Orpheum theater.

Plans for the building were drawn by G. Albert Lansburg, a San Francisco architect, and include the latest improvements, and a seating capacity of 2,400. It is not definitely known just where the theater will be located, but Manager Lane states that he has under consideration a number of prospective sites, and as soon as one is available active operation will be in order. The success of the summer season arrangement at the Orpheum theater further assures the new house a successful entrance into the local amusement field. For the first time in twenty years one of the houses on the Orpheum circuit has been devoted to high class moving pictures and "pop vaudeville," and crowds at the three daily performances have been enormous during the first few weeks of its operation, many being turned away for lack of standing room. The new theater will not affect the big time arrangement of high class vaudeville and pictures at the Orpheum theater during the regular season, but will be in addition thereto.

Grand Jury Will Not Indict.

Memphis, Tenn.—For the third consecutive time the Shelby County Grand Jury has failed to indict the Memphis theater men on the charge of remaining open on Sunday, and last week bills against the following managers were ignored: Sam Zerilla, M. Frank, A. Barrasso, W. V. Taylor, Mrs. A. Guereni, J. B. Amis, Joe Maceri, Fred Weiss, C. M. McElravy, J. F. Duthie, M. J. Vosse, A. R. Richards, J. W. Ruth, E. P. Moren, G. M. Currier, Sam Wilson, Carmell Henderson, Manuel Davis and J. E. Crutcher. A prominent theater manager of Memphis recently spoke as follows:

"The attitude of the public favoring Sunday theaters can be ascertained when you know that on three consecutive occasions the Grand Jury refused to indict, only one man of the jury favoring this, the others giving the theater men a clean bill. It is also interesting to note that the combined Trades and Labor Council, as well as Chamber of Commerce and the Business Men's Association, also endorsed Sunday theaters, as evidenced in their activities to prevail on the authorities to discontinue this idiotic movement. The exhibitors, as well as the managers of the legitimate and vaudeville houses, are all united and working for the common good, and I am quite sure the matter will be adjusted."

Chattanooga Sunday Hearings.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—A hearing on the petition of Attorney General M. N. Whitaker for an injunction to prevent the playing of Sunday baseball in Chattanooga will be had on Wednesday, April 16th, before Chancellor Garvin. Theater men are taking an interest in the outcome of the baseball procedure, as it comes in a class similar to the "Sunday nuisance clause" recently agitated through the Tennessee high courts. A demurrer was filed by the ball club denying that Sunday ball violated the law. The game Sunday will be staged without interference as a result of the continuance of the case.

Here's Kaufman In His New Boat.

Memphis, Tenn.—The accompanying photograph is a likeness of A. H. Kaufman, prominent Memphis exchangeman, seated in his new car on a Memphis driveway. The enterprising film man is now able to make his rounds over the trade in double quick time, as well as take in all the nearby towns. Mr. Kaufman is a leading spirit in west Tennessee film circles, and always at the forefront in matters of industrial protection and advancement.

Benefit Show At Imperial.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Imperial theater, located on Bellevue boulevard, recently offered the feature comedy, "The Heir to the Hurrah," to the public for the benefit of the Parent-Teachers' Association. Both matinee and evening performances were given, and a goodly sum was realized from the proceeds.

Albany House Again Opens.

Albany, Ala.—For the first time since the city passed a rigid censorship ordinance the Delite theater, the only exclusive photoplay house in Albany, has opened its doors. The theater managers contended that the censorship ordinance, as placed in effect, was practically confiscatory, as it would require the use of film two days instead of one.

Atlanta News Letter.

Criterion to Provide the Very Best.

ATLANTA, GA.—The new policy installed at the Criterion theater, where in future the attractions will run a whole week at 10 and 15 cents, will have as magnets pictures with the leading stars of the screen. All the productions will be on a big scale. Mary Pickford is announced as the opening star and will be seen in "A Poor Little Rich Girl."

The new policy is expected to start off with gratifying patronage, as it is thought Atlanta can easily support feature pictures running a whole week. While the advance in price is slight, it became necessary in order to justify the expensive booking under the new policy.

Grand in Summer Dress.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Grand theater appeared in summer attire Monday. Summer laces and duck and linen and tulle deck her out from the back-stage wall to foyer. The lobby has been dressed entirely in white and bright shades, and the foyer presents as refreshing a sight as a mid-summer shower.

The Grand will remain open all summer for the first time in its history, with programs of moving pictures and vaudeville. Marcus Loew has announced the doors of the Grand will not be closed from one year to another as long as he remains in control.

The Forsyth Closes for the Hot Days.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Forsyth theater will be dark during the summer, having closed its season of B. F. Keith vaudeville and moving pictures Saturday night, and will reopen with the same policy the latter part of August.

The Forsyth has been playing vaudeville and moving pictures continuously for some years and this will be the first summer it has closed down. It was deemed advisable to terminate the season now in order to permit an opportunity for much needed work on the interior of the house, which will be completely renovated and somewhat improved. Work will start immediately and will be completed in time to permit the theater to open in August.

E. A. Schiller Will Manage Grand for a While.

Atlanta, Ga.—E. A. Schiller, general manager of the Loew forces of the South, is acting manager of the Grand, pending the appointment of a manager. Mr. Schiller has located his headquarters in the city, from which all business in connection with the Loew Southern circuit will be transacted.

Walter Price Leaves Consolidated.

Atlanta, Ga.—Walter Price, formerly manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply company, of Atlanta, has severed his connection with that organization.

Important Visitors in Town.

Atlanta, Ga.—W. C. Brandon, manager of the Artcraft Corporation in Atlanta, was in Columbia, S. C., Wednesday, at a meeting of Southern Picture Exchange managers.

H. C. Cassidy, formerly manager of the Odeon, in Atlanta, now on the road with a feature picture, was in Atlanta this week, en route to Mobile.

Ted Hardcastle, one time manager of the Piedmont (now the Rialto) theater, in Atlanta, who has been in New York, is in Atlanta.

Frank Miller, manager of the Majestic theater, Augusta, Ga., was in Atlanta this week making contracts.

Atlanta, Ga.—Harry K. Lucas, of the Lucas Theater Supply company, was host to F. H. Richardson, editor of the Projection Department of the Moving Picture World, recently.

Church Sues Exchange for Breach of Contract.

LANSING, MICH.—Just how valuable is the exhibition of a moving picture to a church when the matter is viewed through the eyes of the law? A dispatch from Charlotte to the Lansing Journal tells of a suit because of the failure of a picture to arrive. "Dr. A. W. Hutchins, pastor of the Congregational church, had a Pathe picture, "Shadow and Sunshine," contracted for last Wednesday evening, and on the day of the show received word from that company that they would be unable to ship the picture. The church has started suit for damages against the Pathe company through Dean & Marshall, attorneys of this city, because of their failure to carry out their contract."

Geo. R. Keppie May Be Transferred.

Escanaba, Mich.—George R. Keppie, who has been manager of the Standard Film exchange, has been expecting to be transferred to Cleveland or New York City. Al. Leibensberger, who has been with him, probably will remain here.

Cassopolis Petitioners Against Sunday Films.

Cassopolis, Mich.—Petitions have been circulated asking for steps to be taken to have the moving picture given Sunday evenings at the Colonial theater discontinued. There has been no objection to the character of pictures shown.

New Theaters, Reopenings, Changes in Michigan.

Saginaw, Mich.—The Palace theater has been re-opened under the management of Mr. Alexander.

Ironwood, Mich.—A. L. Picker is manager of the Rialto theater, which has been opened under the ownership of Fulton & Peck.

Plainwell, Mich.—M. C. Miller, N. L. Ross and F. R. Hinderliter have purchased the Leisure Hour theater from Ray Pratt. Under the new management the house will be opened Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon. The music will be under the direction of Mrs. Miller.

Charlotte, Mich.—William Olds has taken over the old Templer theater, which he will operate as a moving picture theater, charging ten cents admission.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—The new Wuerth theater here opened May 15. The house seats 800. A $6,000 pipe organ is a feature.

What Michigan Showmen Are Doing.

Houghton, Mich.—Films approved by the Approved Film Committee of the Houghton Civic club will be shown in but one theater a week, alternating on Saturday afternoons between the Lyric and the Star.

Three Rivers, Mich.—Owner Fred Castle, of the Rex theater has been remodeling by changing the lobby, installing box seats and putting in new draperies.

Hancock, Mich.—While the training ship Yantic is off Hancock, the uniform of a jackie will be an open sesame to the Savoy theater.

Lansing, Mich.—The Bijou theater will go from vaudeville into moving pictures for the summer season. The house orchestra will be increased to furnish music for some of the big attractions already booked, among which are: "Civilization," "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" and a "Daughter of the Gods."

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Feature photoplays supplement musical comedies on the summer program at the Orpheum theater.

Port Huron, Mich.—Miss Dorothy Duncan has been engaged to tell stories to children at Saturday morning performances at the Bijou theater.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—Clarence Sliger, operator at the Temple theater for eight years, has resigned to accept a position with the Union Carbide Company.

Laurium, Mich.—Contests for original designs for advertising cards for the Boy Scout film heightened interest in the production at the People's theater.

Art Class In Lincoln School Boosted "Little Lady Eileen."

LINCOLN, ILL.—A plan is being carried out here in connection with special matinees for children, which can be adopted elsewhere if school authorities are in sympathy with the movement for select pictures. Preceding the appearance of Marguerite Clark in "Little Lady Eileen," the supervisor of drawing in the schools devoted one period of an art class' work to drawing posters. The details of these posters were completed outside the school room, the pupils working on their own initiative, thus showing that their interest had been aroused.

Crystal Photoplay Elects New Officers.

Peoria, Ill.—The Crystal Photoplay Company has elected as president, Edgar A. Strause, president of the State Trust & Savings Bank. Other officers chosen were: Charles Nathan, of Peoria, treasurer, and Merrick A. Whipple, of Chicago, secretary. Frank R. Spear was named chairman of the board of directors, with Frank O. Ames, of Rutland; W. D. Burford, Charles H. Dixon, Charles Nathan, C. H. Peterson, George T. Page, E. A. Straise, P. W. Swan, E. B. Webb and M. A. Whipple as members of the board.

W. D. Burford, of Aurora, retired as president, but assumed the duties of vice-president and general manager. The first picture is now being produced under the direction of O. A. C. Lund and George Seigman. Miss Irene Goodrich is playing opposite Lund in the leading part. Harry R. Price, formerly with Joseph Santley in "The Modern Eve," has joined the company to play juvenile parts.

Waukegan, Ill.—The Mutual Film Company has moved into its new quarters at the Manufacturers' Terminal building.

Fined for Employing a 11-Year-Old Boy

Moline, Ill.—George Merkopielos, proprietor of the American theater, was fined $5 and costs for having in his employ a boy eleven years of age in violation of the state law. Charges were filed by the state factory inspector.

New Theaters and Improvements.

Rockford, Ill.—The Princess theater has been opened by P. M. and V. A. Leonard.

East St. Louis, Ill.—A building permit has been issued to M. V. Joyce to erect a $10,500 moving picture theater at 11-13 South Main street. It will be opened some time in the fall.

Benton, Ill.—Manager Colovos, of the Mars theater, has made plans to increase the seating capacity of his theater to 700, and to remodel and re-decorate. "God's Country and the Woman," has been selected as the opening feature.

Showmanship and Ideas from Illinois.

Quincy, Ill.—The Empire-Hippodrome theater was used during the convention of the Illinois Dental Society to give moving pictures of modern surgery and of work in the war hospitals in Europe.

Taylorville, Ill.—Manager Vance, of the Grand theater, gave a special matinee for the Red Cross Society.

Farmington, Ill.—When motion picture theater licenses are granted there is a provision that no vaudeville or theatrical attrastions are to be given on Sunday evenings.

Lincoln, Ill.—The Woman's club, the Star theater and City Superintendent Hawks are co-operating for better moving pictures on Saturday afternoons.

McLeansboro, Ill.—John Robinson & Co. are on tour, with a moving picture, playing at Enfield and other towns in the vicinity.

Peoria, Ill.—Pictures from the regular Metro program have been selected for entertainments given by the Peoria High school.

Quincy, Ill.—J. Warren Kerrigan appeared in person at the Princess theater.

Oak Park, Ill.—"The Lamb," with Douglas Fairbanks, was shown on a program at the Oak Park theater. An admission of $1 was charged, and the proceeds donated to the American Red Cross.

Beardstown, Ill.—A program shown at the Princess theater, in the course of the observance of Baby Week, included "War Brides" and "Tommy's Birth Certificate."

Springfield, Ill.—Waigren & Thorsen have filed with Secretary of State Emmerson notice that the incorporation has been changed to the Moral Motion Picture Company, and that the object has been changed.

South Bend Will Raise Prices to Meet Tax

Exhibitors Plan General Increase for Seats If War Tax as Now Proposed Is Placed in Effect—A Necessary Move.

From the Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—Exhibitors of South Bend are contemplating advancing the price of admission of theaters if the proposed war tax on motion picture houses is approved by Congress. According to the provisions of the pending measure a war stamp of one cent must be paid the Government by the theaters for all five and ten cent tickets. If the admission to the house is 15 cents, the stamp must be of two cents value.

George Hines, manager of the Auditorium theater, said that at the present time he had no intention of raising prices, but that such a movement would be necessary if the war tax bill is passed.

"It would mean financial ruin to us," continued Mr. Hines, "if we did not raise our prices, provided the war tax goes into effect. However, the exhibitors will take no action along this line unless the measure is passed."

Ezra Rhodes, who has charge of the LaSalle theater, expressed practically the same opinion as Mr. Hines regarding the proposed war tax. Mr. Rhodes expressed the belief that the exhibitors of the city will work together in whatever action is taken.

W. R. Deaton Retires from Royal Grand

Warsaw, Ind.—W. R. Deaton, one of the pioneers in the motion picture business in this city, has closed his Royal-Grand theater, and announced that he intends to retire from active business. It is probable that the theater will be opened up again in a few weeks under different management. Mr. Deaton's career as an exhibitor has been a long and successful one, and his theater was always noted for the exhibition of high class pictures.

Big Improvement on Evansville New Grand.

Evansville, Ind.—The New Grand theater, one of the city's popular motion picture and vaudeville houses, will be extensively remodeled soon, according to plans of the board of directors of the Merchantile Bank, the owners of the building. No definite arrangements have as yet been made, but it is understood that the work will be started in a few weeks, and that the improvements will cost between $30,000 and $40,000. The seating capacity of the theater also will be increased it is said.

Interesting Indiana Jottings.

Gary, Ind.—The Northern Indiana Investment Company has recalled the lease on the Gary theater, and are now negotiating with several parties in regard to the new management of the concern. The theater will be conducted on a more elaborate basis in the future, and efforts will be made to obtain better pictures.

Indiana Harbor, Ind.—Larens Wegrzyn, a local business man, will erect a handsome new theater building on the east side of Cedar street, between 136th and 137th streets. The dimensions of the new house will be 35x20 feet. It will be strictly modern, of brick construction, and will cost approximately $10,000.

Kansas Board Recalls "The Birth of a Nation"

Film Was Rejected Under Old Law by Former Board—Passed This Year and Now Ordered Recalled—Invites Test of Censor's Recall Power.

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—"Birth of a Nation" and "The Earliest Way" are two of the recent rejections of the Kansas State Board of Review, reorganized and operating under the new censorship law of Kansas. "The Little Girl Next Door" was passed, but has been recalled, and may be rejected.

"Birth of a Nation" had been rejected by the Appeal Board of Kansas, consisting of state officials, under the former law and by the old board. It was presented again May 5, reviewed, and passed. But the same group, which formerly caused its rejection, is said to have got busy, and in fact many letters were received by Mrs. J. M. Miller, chairman of the Board of Review, protesting against the showing of the picture in Kansas. At all events Mrs. Miller and Mrs. B. L. Short signed a recall on the picture. It has not yet been brought back for reshowing before the board; but it probably will not be allowed in Kansas unless court proceedings overturn the board's present attitude. The recall virtually constitutes a rejection.

It is interesting to note that Miss Carrie B. Simpson, the only censor who held over from the former board, had approved "Birth of a Nation" on its showing a year ago. She did not vote, being absent from the room, when the board approved the picture May 5, both Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Short finding no reason for rejecting it then. Miss Simpson did not sign the recall. When the picture was examined there was much discussion as to whether the law required its rejection. Section 6 of the law was carefully read. It is mandatory that the board shall disapprove such films as are "cruel, obscene, indecent or immoral, or such as tend to debase or corrupt morals." There was no prohibition against a picture that might tend to arouse race prejudice, and that was the only objection that could be raised against "Birth of a Nation." Consequently, the picture was passed.

The recall for reshowing is precipitating a test of the censorship recall law, though no steps in that direction have yet been taken.

"I have always contended that Section 17, which provides for recalling a picture that has been approved, is unconstitutional," said Lew Nathanson, a Topeka exhibitor who has represented many film companies before the board, and is performing this service since the board opened quarters in Kansas City, Kansas. "It is not in reason that the property of the film companies should be subjected to two or more examinations."

The deceased was a brother of Lou C. Baxley, now with the Pathe office at Dallas, and Jack Baxley, a vaudeville player.

Distinguished Visitors Honor St. Louis

City Entertains Papa Joffre and French Mission and Then Herrington, Rose Tapley and Finally William S. Hart Come—A Party Every Night.

By A. H. Giebler, 4123 Westminster Pl., St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The week of May 6th was busy week and dizzy week for St. Louis. On that Sunday night as many of us as could crowd into the Coliseum went down there and hollered ourselves hoarse in welcoming Papa Joffre and other members of the French Mission. Then the next day we had a big parade and more speeches on the part of the distinguished visitors, and more hollering on our part.

We scarcely had time to get over the excitement of the parades and speeches, when we were called upon to entertain two more distinguished people in the persons of Miss Rose Tapley and Fred J. Herrington, National Organizer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Miss Tapley arrived with two reels of film showing how pictures were made at the Vitagraph plant, and the finest line of talk on Better Pictures that we have listened to in a long time. She appeared at all the leading theaters, and Mr. Herrington, who is as good an introducer as he is an organizer, went along and presented her to the audience.

While this was going on, and we were just getting into the swing of taking care of these two celebrities, the plot was thickened by the addition of another character in the person of William S. Hart, who stepped off the train at the Union depot wearing his cowboy make-up, a friendlylike smile, and an air of "Well, here I am, boys; entertain me."

And we did. We got up a banquet for Bill at the American Annex, one of our leading taverns, and all of our prominent exhibitors and many exchange managers went down there and ate dinner with Bill, and listened to him tell how he got his start in the pictures; and those of us who couldn't get in the dining room at the Annex, stood around the corner of Olive street, near Mr. Boyd's clothing store, waiting for him to get done eating, after which he rode down the street on a horse wearing his cowboy outfit, escorted by a military band and a company of soldiers.

Bill rode along and waved his hand at the folks, and when he got to the Hotel Jefferson he stopped in front and made a speech, urging young men to join the army.

Mr. Hart was in a hurry and could only stay one day with us, but National Organizer Herrington and Miss Tapley liked the old town so well that they remained until Saturday evening. On Saturday afternoon they each made a speech to exhibitors in the Exhibitors' Association headquarters in the Beers hotel building, after which they said goodbye and went away.

Of course, to towns like New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, where actors and other motion picture celebrities are as thick as wood ticks in the swamp-east section of our own native Missouri, a condition of this kind would have caused no excitement whatever, but as one consecutive screen actor is as much as we have ever had in our midst at one time, the presence of two, and a high official of the Exhibitors' League was almost too much for us.

However, we rose to the occasion and acquitted ourselves creditably—that is, we hope our visitors think so—and now we feel equal to most anything, and we hereby extend an invitation to as many actors and magnates as want to come to see us.

New Theater for St. Louis' South Side.

St. Louis, Mo.—Contracts have been let by the Melba Amusement Company for the erection of a new theater at the southeast corner of Grand avenue and Miami street. The building, which will be made of reinforced concrete, will have a depth of one hundred and fifty feet and a width of seventy-five feet, and will seat 1,450 on the ground floor.

The theater will cost $50,000, and will have modern equipment throughout, including cooling and ventilation devices. The building will have its main entrance through a sixteen foot corridor opening on Grand avenue, and it is planned to have it ready for opening by October 1st.

A program of high class vaudeville and pictures will be used. The officers of the Melba Amusement Company are as follows: Dr. O. T. Upshaw, president; Dr. H. A. Upshaw, vice-president; T. J. Lavin, secretary, and A. C. Bauer, treasurer.

The plans for the new house are being prepared by the architectural firm of Maritz, Henderson and Tuchschmidt, who will also supervise the construction work.

Refuses to Let Milwaukee Regulate Shows.

MADISON, WIS.—The lower house of the Wisconsin state legislature, by a vote of 35 to 20, killed the Schultz senate bill, which authorized Milwaukee to regulate moving picture houses. The bill had been favorably recommended by the committee.

Visual Instruction In War Time Thrift.

Madison, Wis.—The Department of Visual Instruction of the Extension Department of the University of Wisconsin has prepared a campaign of education upon war time thrift by using moving pictures. There are three hundred schools and communities on the circuit supplied by this department, and it is expected that films and slides will do much to bring conservation, increased production, health, patriotism, relief work, and individual co-operation.

Patrons Wanted to See Hazel Daly.

Milwaukee, Wis.—So popular was Bryant Washburn on his personal tour, following his appearance in "Skinner's Dress Suit," that photoplay patrons in Milwaukee wanted to see the other star of the picture. The consequent appearance of Miss Hazel Daly in person, and with a return engagement of the film, "Skinner's Bubble," made big business for the Merrill theater.

Wisconsin Theaters Change Hands—New Houses.

Adams, Wis.—The Adams opera house has been leased for a year to Frank Nowachek.

Boscobel, Wis.—J. F. Williams has sold his interest in the moving picture show at Hurd's opera house to V. M. Smrcina, who formerly managed the Metropolitan theater at Praire du Chien.

Almond, Wis.—Reed Vroman has sold his moving picture theater to August Boelter.

Reedsburg, Wis.—The new moving picture show, which H. E. Mansfield opened in the Conley building, will be known as the new Majestic.

Hayward, Wis.—The Grand theater has been opened under the management of Hanson & Olson.

Winneconne, Wis.—W. H. Hanneman has made arrangements to open a moving picture show in the city hall.

Muscoda, Wis.—The Paulick opera house has been leased to Speedy Huppler, members of the firm being Huppler & Swingle.

Hazel Green, Wis.—W. R. Champion has taken a lease on the town hall, and will operate a moving picture show.

Will Fight Iowa Blue Law

Exhibitors in Des Moines Are Facing Enforcement of Seventy Year Old Sabbath Observance Law Whose Wording Calls to Mind Frontier Days—Five Theaters Keep Open on Sundays and Begin the Fight.

By Dorothy Day, Register-Tribune, Des Moines, Ia.

DES MOINES, IA.—Attorney General Havner has undertaken to enforce the seventy-year-old Blue Law over Iowa. This law reads as follows:

"If any person be found on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, engaged in carrying firearms, dancing, hunting, shooting, horse racing, or in any manner disturbing a worshipping assembly or private family, or in buying or selling property of any kind, or in any labor except that of necessity or charity, he shall be fined not more than $5 nor less than $1, and be imprisoned in the county jail until the fine, with costs of prosecution, shall be paid: but nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to those who conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week as Sunday, or to prevent persons traveling or families emigrating from pursuing their journeys, or keepers of toll bridges, toll gates and ferrymen from attending to same."

Des Moines is to be made the goat of the entire state and the test cases will all be tried in this city. The exhibitors and film men of Des Moines met at the Chamber of Commerce Friday before the enforcement of the law on Sunday, May 13. After a full understanding of the situation was reached they appointed ex-Attorney General of Iowa Cosson as their legal representative, and plans were laid for the full ending of the enforcement of the law as regards the motion picture and theatrical interests of the state.

Five motion picture theaters in Des Moines remained open—the Garden, Majestic, Palace, Casino and Family, while all other houses closed. The managers of these five houses will, of course, be arrested and their trials will be taken by ex-Attorney General Cosson to the Criminal Court to be tried before Judge Myers without a jury. This trial will take place on Tuesday, May 14, and a decision is looked for early in the week. In order to put the motion picture theaters in the most favorable light possible the managers have carefully selected the following programs:— The Palace theater has arranged to give five per cent. of the net receipts to the Jewish Relief Fund, their program reading Ethel Barrymore in "The Call of Her People." The Garden and Majestic theaters, in addition to their Marguerite Clark and Mary Pickford programs, will show educational and scenic reels. The Casino has arranged to show Charles Ray in "The Pinch Hitter," and instead of the comedy will run a patriotic film. The Family will present the "Life of Christ." It will be the endeavor of Attorney Cosson to present the motion pictures as on the same level with Sunday Chautauqua entertainments, as being educational, religious and patriotic.

Just what the outcome of this big Blue Law fight will be is a question—something to be watched.

Hal Kelly Will Enter Exchange Business.

Des Moines, Ia.—Hal Kelly, who sold his Gilbert theater in Beatrice, Nebraska, a few weeks ago to Mr. Peterson, was in this city last week accompanied by Mr. Peterson. They called at the Metro exchange and arranged for service with Manager Skirboll. Mr. Kelly is a most successful exhibitor, having operated the Gilbert in Beatrice, Ia., for several years. He wishes to learn the business from other angles now and is contemplating a trip to the Coast for a close inspection of the studios and their activities. On his return he will take up exchange work.

Joseph Fieldman Had Profitable Journey.

Des Moines, Ia.—Joseph M. Fieldman, special representative for the Standard Film Company of Des Moines, recently returned from Minneapolis where, with R. C. Cropper, president of the Standard, he attended the convention and opened the new Standard Film office in that city. Mr. Fieldman is most enthusiastic over the way in which the Art Dramas are going both in Iowa and in Minnesota, stating that he signed up twenty-seven contracts in the four days of the convention, and on the way home made seven stops and signed seven contracts. Mr. Fieldman is well known to all Iowa exhibitors, having handled the first state right picture in Iowa and having been instrumental in the organization of the first Exhibitors' League in this state. Fieldman will remain in Iowa working out of the local Standard office but two weeks, when he will return to Minneapolis and work out of that office for some time.

Personal and Business Notes.

James Murphy of the Opera House in Baird, McCray of the Lyric in Oskaloosa and W. J. Keefe of the Star in Hampton were callers at the Laemmle Film Service last week.

Marty Williams, manager of the local Standard Film office, was in Boone a couple of days last week, and L. A. Sheridan, manager of the local Pathe, was in St. Louis two days of last week on business.

Colonel Hiatt of the Iowa National Guard dropped into the Pathe office last week. He is expecting a call at any time to the front and is using some scenes of the Iowa troops in the Pathe News for recruiting purposes. Col. Hiatt is owner of the Orpheum theater in Webster City.

Many California Shows Feel Slack Business

Preparations for War Keep Patrons Away from Picture Theaters All Over State —Slump Is Regarded as Merely Temporary.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal. — Exhibitors throughout California are complaining of a falling off in attendance at moving picture houses, in some places this being so marked as to compel the cancellation of service. Preparations for military service are under way in nearly every town and increasing costs of living are tending further to interfere with amusements. An exhibitor in an interior town, who recently visited this city to confer with exchange interests, states that out of a population of about one thousand that he has to draw from more than one hundred of the young men have joined a local military organization, and are drilling four nights a week. From other localities similar reports are being received, and nowhere is business to be considered brisk.

The slump in business is probably being felt as little in this city as anywhere in the state, owing to the fact that very high wages are ruling, and labor is fully employed. However, some of the big feature attractions that have been shown of late at advanced prices have been rather poorly attended, and several that were to have been offered about now are being kept on the shelf. Business did keep up in good shape during the Lenten season, and Easter Sunday was one of the greatest days ever enjoyed by local theaters, but since then it has been quiet, except in the case of one or two unusual productions offered at regular prices. The run of business on Easter Sunday was so heavy that interested persons collected statistics, which indicate that more than 175,000 persons visited local theaters on this day, or one out of each four of the city's population. More than one half of these were accommodated at straight moving picture houses, all of which did a capacity business.

The present slump is loked upon by exhibitors as being but a temporary lull, and the belief is expressed that business will be up to the normal again as quickly as people become accustomed to war time conditions and high expenses in general. When the vast sums to be expended by the Government get into general circulation better business than ever is expected.

Mutual Exchange in New Home.

San Francisco, Cal.—The exchange of the Mutual Film, for several years located on Turk street, near Jones, has been removed to 177 Golden Gate avenue, in the heart of Film Row, where a fireproof building adapted especially for moving picture concerns has been erected. The former quarters were outgrown long ago and business has been conducted there at a disadvantage of late, the location being out of the way and the working facilities entirely inadequate. The new home has been fitted up in splendid fashion and reflects careful planning. It was complete in every detail when the change was made a few days ago, and the office staff has not been subjected to the annoyances usually experienced on occasions of this kind. In the front are spacious waiting rooms, while on either side are the offices and booking departments. Shipping is done from the rear, there being a driveway to the basement. There is a film vault on the ground floor and another on the balcony, where the inspection department is located to take advantage of the unusual lighting facilities afforded. Films received from the theaters are sent at once to the balcony by elevator for inspection and are stored in the vault there until they can be attended to. As soon as they are inspected they are sent to the lower floor, where they are kept until shipped out.

The exchange has a full basement, reached by two stairways, and all surplus advertising matter is carried here. An exhibiting room, equipped with two machines, is located on the main floor. The new manager of this branch, N. E. Levy, arrived from Los Angeles just in time to assist in the removal and has been very busy between this task and making the acquaintance of exhibitors in this territory. He has as his assistant, F. E. McCoy, who has been with the Mutual for some time and who is well known throughout the San Francisco field.

G. A. Metcalfe Explains Mystery.

San Francisco, Cal.—G. A. Metcalfe, of the machine and supply house bearing his name, returned recently from what was supposed to be strictly a business trip to New York, but which was veiled in such an air of mystery that his friends began to suspect that possibly the trip might have another meaning, also. This proved to be true, for upon his return it was learned that he had succumbed to feminine charms and had been married in Detroit to a charming young lady of San Francisco, the rest of the trip being in the nature of a honeymoon. He has since been receiving the congratulations of a host of friends on Film Row, and among local exhibitors, and it is understood that a Newly-wed dance is being arranged for the young couple in Photoplayer Hall.

E. B. Johnson Home from New York.

San Francisco, Cal.—E. B. Johnson, secretary of the Turner & Dahnken circuit, has returned from an extensive tour of the country and a visit to New York well satisfied with the manner in which the idea of doing away with the middleman in the distribution of state right productions was received by the prominent exhibitors. This idea, which he assisted in prompting while on the trip, has resulted in the formation of the First National Exchange Circuit, the objects of which are known to readers of the Moving Picture World. He will at once outline the plan in detail to interested exhibitors in this territory and dispose of sub-franchises, these arrangements to be made on a percentage basis on the same plan as that by which the members of the Exchange Circuit secure the productions.

Oakland House Closed for the Summer.

Oakland, Cal.—The Oakland Orpheum has been closed for the summer months upon instructions from the head office of the circuit and will reopen for the fall season in August. This house, which shows vaudeville, with pictures, has been run continuously since September, 1907, and by closing it for a few months it will be possible to make some changes and improvements that have long been contemplated. New seats will be installed, draperies and carpets renewed and the interior redecorated. The San Francisco house, which does a steady business throughout the year, will not be closed.

Holmes Week at Theaters.

San Francisco, Cal.—The bills at various downtown houses recently gave the impression that a Holmes Week was being celebrated. At the Rialto theater "The Scarlet Letter," featuring Stuart Holmes, headed the bill, while a short way down the street the Imperial theater was showing Burton Holmes Travelogues. The Theater St. Francis was showing "The Railroad Raiders" with Helen Holmes during this week and the daring screen star was here in person, making pictures on San Francisco Bay.

Launches Advertising Scheme.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Automobile Advertising Association has been formed by Charles Rosener and R. J. Connors, and a plan of advertising for moving picture exhibitors is being exploited. Offices have been opened on Golden Gate avenue, in the quarters formerly occupied by Charles Klopot.

H. H. Hicks Now With Selznick.

San Francisco, Cal.—H. H. Hicks, who recently resigned as manager of the local branch of the General Film, has been appointed manager of the Los Angeles office of Lewis J. Selznick.

Recent Trade Visitors.

San Francisco, Cal.—M. L. Lewis, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Progressive Motion Picture company, was here recently for a short stay and met many old friends in the trade.

J. O. Walsh, president of the United States Motion Picture corporation, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., stopped off here recently for a few days. He is making a visit to the Pacific Coast studios.

Al. Lichtman, general manager of the Artcraft Pictures, and B. T. Schulberg, manager of the Paramount, were here last week and went on to Los Angeles after a short stay.

Seattle News Letter.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

Big Run With "In Again, Out Again."

SEATTLE, WASH.—The Coliseum did a smashing business last week with Douglas Fairbanks' first Artcraft release, "In Again—Out Again." Knowing the popularity of the comedian in Seattle, Manager Tate booked this feature for the entire week, and the results fully confirmed his judgment, for the Coliseum's capacity was as sadly insufficient on the last night as it was on the first. The price of tickets for the last six rows downstairs was raised from the regular 15 to 25 cents for that week, also, and they were always filled.

Novel Advertising of "Motherhood."

Seattle, Wash.—In the last two issues of the Seattle Daily Times the following advertisement appears:—

Wanted—500 Photos of the Babies of Seattle at the Strand theater, Second at Seneca. Free admission to mothers who comply with this request, up to Saturday night, May 12, and prizes to 15 of the prettiest.

This advertisement, which will naturally pique the curiosity of every mother, is really designed to attract attention to the new World film, "Motherhood," featuring Alice Brady, which will open at the Strand Sunday, May 13, which date is also very apropriate, being Mother's Day.

New Salesman for Local Triangle.

Seattle, Wash.—Manager C. F. Hill of Triangle anounces that he has engaged as road man out of Seattle E. I. Hudson, formerly in the advertising business.

"Argonauts" Director Looking for Location.

Seattle, Wash.—Henry Kabierske, the director who made "The Argonauts," is in Seattle looking for a location for a new ten-reel picture which he has already planned.

Vradenburg Sells Local Trade Paper.

Seattle, Wash.—George Vradenburg has sold "The Spectator," Seattle's oldest local motion picture trade journal, and will retire to his ranch to raise potatoes for Uncle Sam during the war.

Motiograph Representative Leaves Seattle After Long Sojourn.

Seattle, Wash.—W. L. Loudy, factory representative of the Motiograph Company, left Seattle this week after a sixty days' stay. Mr. Loudy made his headquarters while in the city at Waring and Finch's supply store, the local distributors of Motiograph machines. He will remain for about thirty days in Portland, where he went upon leaving here.

From S. Clark Patchin, E. 1811 11th Ave., Spokane, Wash.

Big Films at the Clemmer.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Dr. H. S. Clemmer announces bookings and new service arrangements that assure Clemmer patrons all the good things of the past and some new ones.

Two big attractions, one already booked, are due for early presentation at that artistic playhouse. One is "Joan the Woman," with Geraldine Farrar, not yet dated, and "Womanhood, the Glory of a Nation," the new Vitagraph preparedness film, which comes for a week, beginning May 13. This is another J. Stuart Blackton spectacle, featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey, and is from the pen of Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady. It is being everywhere declared vastly superior to the original Blackton preparedness feature, "The Battle Cry of Peace," and has created a sensation in the east.

Bookings for the month run as follows: May 2 to 5, Alice Brady in "Bought and Paid For," and Max Linder in his third Essanay comedy, "Max in a Taxi."

May 6-8, House Peters and Louise Huff in "Lonesome Chap"; May 9-12, Pauline Frederick in "Sleeping Fires," and Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle in his first Paramount comedy, "The Butcher Boy," with Al St. John.

May 13-19, "Womanhood, the Glory of a Nation"; May 20-22, Jack Pickford and Vivian Martin in "The Girl at Home"; May 23-26, Marguerite Clark in "The Valentine Girl"; May 27-29, Marie Doro in "Heart's Desire," and the second of Paula Blackton's "Country Life" series, "Spring Idylls"; May 30-June 2, Mae Murray in "The Primrose Ring"; June 3, Margaret Illington in her first Paramount appearance, "Sacrifice." Mrs. Vernon Castle will be shown in "Patria"

The Clemmer will continue to show all the Paramount releases, including the Pictographs and the Bray animated cartoons. In addition Dr. Clemmer has arranged for the pick of the Brady-World productions, with Alice Brady, Kitty Gordon, Clara Kimball Young and other stars; the Max Linder, Fatty Arbuckle and Lonesome Luke comedies, and the pick of the Vitagraph releases.

Among the latter, coming in the near future, are Alice Joyce in "Within the Law," Anita Stewart in "The More Excellent Way," Edith Storey in "Aladdin From Broadway," Lillian Walker in "Sally in a Hurry" and Peggy Hyland and Marce McDermott in "Barbette."

Local Monopoly Hurts Business

In Oregon, Price Slashing by Exchanges Merely to Put Service in a Town Controlled by One Exhibitor Causes High Prices in Other Towns—Exchanges to Blame—Few Pass Up Town to Maintain a Price.

By Abraham Nelson, Majestic Theater Bldg., Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, OREGON.—The Oregon territory has many towns in which one exhibitor controls the entire theatrical situation, either by having the only show house in the town or else by leasing all the theaters there and keeping them closed but one or two. Knowing that they control the situation in a town, these exhibitors have succeeded in getting film prices from exchanges that are below any reasonable value of the service. The result is that in towns where there is competition, the exchanges have played one theater against the other to get back some of the money lost in the one-man towns until the competitive houses are complaining of excessive charges for film service, and at the same time the exchanges are sending in deficit reports to the home office.

This was the disclosure made by a film man who recently covered the territory. One of the reasons suggested for putting service into these one-man towns at such ridiculously low figures was that the exchanges wanted to make as big a showing as possible to their Eastern offices in the matter of the number of their customers.

There are instances, but travelers say they are rare, where a film distributing concern has surprised the exhibitors in these one-man towns by passing up the town rather than to place the product there at a losing price.

Theaters May Go to 15 Cents.

Portland, Oregon.—One of the results of the recent war tax discussion may be a raise of admission price from 10 to 15 cents by suburban exhibitors. About twenty houses will be affected. These men have been looking forward to a raise for a long time and they now believe the tax issue will give them a good talking point before the public on which to base their increase in price.

Eastern Oregon Theater Burns.

Wallowa, Oregon.—The Opera House was totally destroyed by fire May 9, about 2 P. M. As far as known, no films were lost, and it was not a film fire. H. L. Murdock, manager, plans to rebuild this summer.

Bill Mead Back in Territory.

Portland, Oregon.—W. A. Mead, formerly traveling in this territory for Triangle and lately with McClure's in Los Angeles, is back in the Northwest as representative for Fox. Mr. Mead has a host of friends in Oregon who are glad to see him back.

J. J. Still Completes Trip.

Portland, Oregon.—Wearing a healthy coat of tan and feeling fit after his long trip, Jesse J. Sill, local camerman, returned to Portland May 9 after a tour across the continent by automobile, accompanying Robert Bruce on a picture making tour for the Educational Film corporation.

"Mothers of France" Goes Big.

Portland, Oregon.—"Mothers of France," playing eleven days at the Peoples theater, was a decided hit at this big showhouse, not only because of the character of the picture itself, but because of the way it was put over by Manager C. W. Meighan. The Bernhardt masterpiece was made the feature of one of the most stirring shows ever presented at any local theater.

Four distinct climaxes were provided to thrill the spectator. Toward the close of the picture, an excellent soprano singer rendered the "Marsellaise," concluding as the sub-title characterizing the present conflict as "a war against war" was flashed on the screen. At the close of the picture a short film of President Wilson and extracts from his war message were shown, and then, as the big plush curtain was lowered and with the house already on its feet, the climax was strengthened as the flood lights disclosed on one side of the stage figures of Columbia and Joan of Arc with hands clasped, standing against a background of French and American flags.

Operators Prepare Reception.

Portland, Oregon.—Local 159, I. A. T. S. E., took charge of the entertainment accorded F. H. Richardson during his visit here May 13 and 14. The committee consisted of J. S. Haughey, operator at the Peoples and Star theaters; L. R. Smith, of the Columbia, and Homer Haynes, of the Pantages.

The program included a trip over the famous Columbia highway and a reception at the Columbia theater.

Brief Oregon Items.

Rainier, Oregon.—F. H. Reynolds has recently reopened the Cozy theater.

Grant's Pass, Oregon.—J. Wolke has taken over the Joy theater. He owns the property. J. E. Mock formerly conducted the house.

Portland, Oregon.—Sydney Schubach, formerly with Universal here, has joined the army and is "somewhere in California."

Portland, Oregon.—W. W. Kofeldt, manager for Pathe, recently made a business trip through Southern Oregon and reports that everybody down the line is very much interested in the war tax question.

Portland, Oregon.—The censor board reports that eliminations were ordered in 16 reels and that four condemnations were made during April.

"Daughter of Gods" at the Liberty.

Spokane, Wash.—During the week of May 6 to 21, when "The Daughter of the Gods" was being shown at the Liberty theater, members of the Spokane sponsorship committee of the Spokane Federation of Women's Clubs visited the various theaters and approved all except the Liberty, which they did not mention. This is in accordance with the rules established when the committee was organized, the plan being to recommend only the clean shows and to make no mention of those not approved.

Despite the fact that the women ignored this show reports are that the theater was filled to capacity, the night shows, and that there was a large attendance at the afternoon shows, a lower price being charged for admission in the afternoon than at night. Prices were, from 11:30 A. M. until 5:45 P. M., all seats 25 cents, and after that, lower floor 50 cents, balcony 25 cents and box seats 75 cents. Local critics praised the picture in their comments

Spokane, Wash.—Every phase of life in Sweden as it exists today was shown in a series of motion pictures entitled "Sweden Today" at the Auditorium theater. The entertainment was for the benefit of the Swedish Red Cross.

THE WORLD

as well as his

Big Town Brother

Read this Excerpt from a Recently Received Letter:

I get a wonderful lot of pointers out of, or rather in, the Moving Picture World along many lines and especially through your criticisms of advertising.

I would gladly pay the price of subscription to the World for either the "Advertising for Exhibitors" or the "Critics Reviews" to say nothing of the many other good things it contains, for instance, Mr. Richardson's reports on the trip he is now on, lecturing operators.

While I did not send my operator to Fort Smith to hear him as I would like to have done I am sure he is getting some good information from his reports.

17 Madison Ave., N.Y. City

Subscription Rates:

Domestic $3.00 Per Annum
Canada $3.50 " "
Foreign $4.00 " "

This means that the Moving Picture World is worth many times its subscription price to every exhibitor and especially now when the very best efforts are necessary to improve business.

Stories of the Films

ESSANAY.

THE QUARANTINED BRIDEGROOM (Black Cat Feature—Two Parts).—The cast: Dick Ross (Carl Von Schiller); Lillian Clay (Virginia Valli); Arthur Lyons (Mark Ellison).

On the eve of Dick Ross' wedding to Lillian Clay, he is made the victim of a practical joke. Arthur Lyons and other friends kidnap Dick, bear him to the Lyons home and there, by prearrangement, a servant informs him that the house has just been quarantined for small pox. Dick attempts to force his way out but is baited by policemen. Night breaks into dawn and as the hours quickly turn into minutes until the wedding time, Dick becomes frantic. Finally he escapes through a coal chute and reaches the altar a few moments before noon, but still in time for the ceremony. His bride gets revenge, however, by having the same motion picture "cops" arrest Arthur for speeding off with her husband-to-be.

THE NIGHT WORKERS.—(Essanay—5 parts—May 21). The cast: Ethel Carver (Marguerite Clayton); Clyde Manning (Jack Gardner); Mitchell (Julien Barton); Mrs. Mitchell (Mabel Bardine); The Artist (Arthur W. Bates). Directed by J. Charles Hayden.

Although nearly every family has its night workers, the day-world gives little thought to the unnaturalness of their existence.

A boy escapes from an orphanage, and after a few weeks in a country printing office, reaches the city where he obtains work as an office boy on a newspaper. About him everywhere are men who at forty have lived their lives and are ready for the discard. But at fifteen he little heeds the warning.

In ten years he has become an excellent reporter, but possessed of the irresponsibility of his night life. The girl, also a reporter, interests herself in him and repeatedly saves him from disgrace in his work.

Under circumstances distasteful to him he encounters his parents, who learn his identity but conceal their own. The girl, discovers who he is, but keeps it to herself.

In the moment of their greatest "scoop" the girl learns that her grandfather, the editor of an up-state weekly, has died. She persuades the boy to help her edit the paper. Under the spell of living by day his whole attitude changes, and he tells her of his love and his desire to remain in the little country town.

THE MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER (Third Series. No. 8. STARLIGHT SLEEP—Kleine—May 20). Musty suffers from sleeplessness and consults a quack doctor, who administers "Starlight Sleep." In his dream he has many hair raising adventures, and finally gets mixed up with a band of desperate anarchists who show him a merry time. When at last he wakes up and finds himself suspended by the slack of his trousers from the picket of a friendly fence, he decides that "Starlight Sleep" is worse than wakeful nights.

KALEM.

THE DOOR IN THE MOUNTAIN (An Episode of "The American Girl").—The cast: Madge King, the American Girl (Marin Sais); Roger King, her father (Frank Jonasson); Matt Welby, the ranch foreman (Hart Hoxie); Dan Stone (Edward Clisbee); "Crab" Manvil (R. E. Bradberry); "Sourdough" McCluskey (Knute Rahm). Story by F. P. Bechdolt. Directed by J. W. Horne.

When Roger King receives a letter from the foreman of one of his mines that the April clean-up has been made, he rides, with his ranch foreman, Matt Welby, to meet the shipment, as there have been several hold-ups. King refuses to allow Madge to accompany him, so she calls on Mrs. Stone, the wife of a poor rancher and mother of a family of three. She finds the Stones threatened with dispossession by "Crab" Manvil, a money lender, who holds a note against them for five hundred dollars. Madge determines to get her father to settle the trouble of her poverty-stricken friends.

Riding through the mountains, Madge sees Manvil converse with a band of horsemen. Suspicious, she follows him until they come to a massive door. He discovers Madge following him, and pursues her, and shoots her horse from under her. Undaunted, Madge returns to the cave on foot, is captured by the bandits, who have held up the gold shipment and returned with the plunder. She overhears Manvil say: "I'm taking no chances; bring the stuff to my place after dark and I'll pay you for it."

King and his foreman are delayed by taking the wrong road. They ride near the "door in the mountain," and hear Madge's cries. King succeeds in rescuing his daughter when he starts a fire and smokes the bandits out. The leader is captured. Madge informs her father that Manvil is at the bottom of the affair, and that they can catch him at Stone's ranch. They arrive in time to find Manvil and the sheriff about to take Stone's furniture and belongings. They inform the sheriff Manvil is in league with the bandits. The sheriff takes Manvil into custody and Mr. and Mrs. Stone invite Madge and her father to tea.

THE HOBO RAID.—The cast: Ham (Lloyd V. Hamilton); Bud (A. E. Duncan); the hobo leader (Henry Murdoch); Farmer Cornstalk (John Steppling); his daughter (Edythe Stepping). Directed by Al Santell.

Stopping to obtain food Ham and Bud make the acquaintance of Farmer Cornstalk's pretty daughter. Ham notices the diamond ring she is wearing. But Farmer Cornstalk notices Ham, and Ham sees his pitchfork, so he and Bud make a hurried exit.

The secret order of the Battered Hat votes that one of their band must get food for the rest. They play for it, and Hungry Henry is the "goat." When he arrives at Farmer Cornstalk's cottage it fares ill with him. Tattered and torn, he returns to the band, and finds two new members, Ham and Bud. The entire band starts off to raid the home of the farmer who "beat up" Hungry Henry. Ham and Bud remain behind.

After making Farmer Cornstalk and his daughter prisoners, the hoboes divide the spoils. To Ham is given the diamond ring, which he recognizes. To the rescue! Our valiant vagrants succeed in freeing the prisoners when the band of hoboes arrive, and a battle follows. Ham and Bud climb to the roof, demolish the chimney, and use the bricks to bombard the hostile hoboes, who soon fall victims to the attack.

JOKER.

UNEASY MONEY (Rel. Wk. May 28).—The cast: Editor (William Franey); Suza (Zu Su Pitts); Stranger (Lillian Peacock); Her Accomplice (Milburn Morante). Scenario by Jack Cunningham. Produced by W. W. Beaudine.

Bill is the editor of the country paper and Suza his assistant. Lil and Milt arrive in town, and Suza is sent to interview them. Bill sees the stranger and orders Suza back to the office. Milt works an old game on Bill. He takes a diamond ring from his pocket, and when Bill makes a dive for it, Milt picks it up first. Then Bill sees an ad offering five hundred dollars for the return of a diamond ring, and buys it from Milt for $200. Suza wears it and shows it to every one she meets. She thinks it is for her. Bill is frantic. Suza shows it to a jeweler who tells her it is worthless. Bill and Suza rush to the depot to catch Lil and Milt but are too late. Suza consoles Bill by telling her that it is worth $200 to her, and placing it on her engagement finger.

BIG U.

DEFIANCE (Rel. Wk. May 28).—The scenes of this picture were taken at the famous San Gabriel mission, built in 1771. Don Enrique Carillo has a pretty daughter Rosa, who falls in love with George Curdy, when the latter is sent from the recording office to examine his property deed. Carillo does not wish his daughter to marry an American, and opposes the match. Rosa and George decide to elope. They ride to the mission and ask the monk in charge to marry them. Don Enrique angrily follows them, and arrives just as the ceremony is completed. He attacks George and the two men fight. The monk interferes, and Rosa and George ride away.

REX.

THE PURPLE SCAR (Two Parts—Rel. Wk., May 28). The cast: Thornton Van Sant (Page Peters); Miriam (Constance Johnson); Grip (Eugene Pallette); Teresa (Jill Woodward); Jeffrey Deane of the "Dope Trust" (W. H. Bainbridge); Chin Loo (Lingah Wing). Written by Dudley Burrows. Produced by Al. Ernest Garcia.

Teresa and "Grip," her brother, are invited to go for a picnic to the beach. At the same time Thornton Van Sant invites Miriam, his sweetheart, and a party of friends to spend the day cruising in his yacht. The humble party have a splendid time. Teresa, who is in swimming, is in danger of sinking. Van Sant goes to her rescue. They struggle, and she scratches his face so deeply that it leaves a permanent scar. Grip and the others are impressed at Van Sant's bravery in saving Teresa.

Years later, Van Sant has become the head of the Vice Commission, and is relentlessly on the track of the men higher up in the "Dope Trust." Unknown to him, the head is Jeffrey Deane, the father of his sweetheart, Miriam. Grip has become a paid gunman, and lives with his sister in constant fear of the police. Deane carries on his trade in drugs by means of a Chinaman, Chin Loo, who is also the medium through which Deane's orders reach the gunmen. Deane goes to see Chin Loo and tells him that Van Sant must be disposed of as he is on their trail. The Chink sends for Grip and gives him orders and money. Grip returns to Teresa with the address of Van Sant on a piece of paper. He goes to put his money in a safe place, leaving his gun on the table, and Teresa, who hates his mode of life, bites the bullets out of the cartridges and returns the empty shells to the gun. Grip drops the piece of paper and Teresa finds it. She follows him to the address.

Van Sant is working at his desk, and Grip fires once, of course without effect as there is no bullet. Then he sees the scar which was made by Teresa when Van Sant saved her from drowning. Van Sant starts at the sound of the shot, and overpowers Grip. He calls the police. Teresa arrives and begs him to spare Grip as he has never had a chance. She recalls her rescue to Van Sant, who asks why Grip did not fire a second time. He says that he recognized the scar and could not. He shows them the way to Chin Loo's. Deane is there. The police break in, and there is a struggle. Chin Loo pulls a cord. A heavy ball falls from the ceiling and kills Deane. Later we see Miriam, still the happy wife of Van Sant in ignorance of her father's life, and Teresa and Grip as their near neighbors.

NESTOR.

TELL MORGAN'S GIRL (Rel Wk, May 28). The cast: Clarence Keyes (Eddie Lyons); Bill Mussum (Lee Moran); "Two-Step" Sadie (Edith Roberts); "Soft-Drinks" Sam (Fred Gamble). Scenario by Frederick A. Palmer. Produced by L. W. Chaudet.

Clarence seeks a musical career in the city. He is passing a dance-hall just as the piano player is thrown into the street by the bouncer. Clarence applies for the job. He gets it, but his music is awful, and he is about to meet his fate when "Two-Step" Sadie, who likes his looks, stops Bill, the bouncer, and Clarence is given another chance. Bill cannot stand the limping tempo and drags Clarence to the bar. A drink will fire him with pep. The effect wears off, and the ragtime lags again. After a second drink, he plays wonderful ragtime. After a few more, he "cleans out" the place, compelling the toughest of them to drink buttermilk with him.

L-KO.

ROPED INTO SCANDAL (Two Parts.—Rel. Wk. May 28). The cast: Mr. Wildcherry (Harry Lorraine); His Daughter Eva (Eva Novak); Mr. Samson Hercules (Bert Roach). Directed by Craig Hutchinson. Supervised by J. G. Blystone.

Mr. Wildcherry was a menace to society and a trouble to his daughter Eva Right across the hall lived Mr. Samson Hercules and his bride. When Hercules goes out Wildcherry goes across the hall and makes a low bow to Mrs. Hercules, taking off his hat. She sees "I love you" painted on his bald head. But she is adamant. Then Wildcherry ties a string to a purse and pulls it across the hall to get her into his flat. She crawls after it and gets wedged in under the sewing machine. Eva comes to her aid, and she goes home raging.

Eva has two suitors, Mr. Beer and Mr. Buller. Both come to call at once, and while they are there Papa goes over to Mrs. Hercules. Eva has been sewing on the machine and a thread from his trousers is caught in the needle. As he sits talking, his trouser-leg begins to unravel, and runs right up to the knee. He hears Mr. Hercules coming and hides. Hercules finds his hat, and he is thrown out.

Eva's suitors are getting into a fight, when Wildcherry arrives and separates them. Mr. Hercules goes out to take his annual bath to sooth his feelings. Beer sends Eva a message asking her to elope, and Buller reads it. He makes a plan with Wildcherry to circumvent them. They take their places with a gun at the rope which is hanging out of the window, but unfortunately in a second fight between Beer and Buller, the latter is caught in the rope and seesaws up and down the side of the house, finally landing in the water tank on the roof. The end of the rope coils around the auto in which the lovers sit and they can't start the car.

The watertank is upset and Mr. Wildcherry, pulling on the other end of the rope is dragged into the Hercules' bathroom. He makes fast to the bath tub. Mrs. Hercules comes in to take a bath and is dragged out and drawn along the street by the auto of the lovers. En route Mr. Wildcherry falls into the same tub, and the whole outfit crashes through the wall of the bath establishment where Mr. Hercules is bathing. The couples are reunited in the midst of the debris.

POWERS.

PERILS OF THE YANGTZE (Rel. Wk. of May 28).—The Yangtze courses through a great plain of material deposited by floods, therefore its perils consist largely of shifting channels. The approach to the gorges is not difficult, but the current becomes very swift and treacherous. In some parts the river is quite safe, while in others there are dangerous whirlpools and currents which engulf the unwary captain. At the end of the gorges we see the ancient river town of Wanshien.

WHEN NOAH'S ARK EMBARKED (Cartoon Comedy on the Same Reel as Foregoing). Noah has completed the ark, and calls the animals to go on board. The monkey gives him lots of trouble, but the other beasts respond to the call and embark two by two. The skipper chases them all below, but the monkey won't go. They chase each other around the decks. Finally the monkey leaps ashore and Noah goes after him. Then the animal jumps back, undoes the rope which secures the ark, and it runs down the ways and into the sea. Noah realizes that it has set sail without him, and he plunges into the water and swims after it.

BISON.

NO. 10 WESTBOUND (Two Parts—Rel. Wk., May 28). The cast: Edith (Eileen Sedgwick); Jim (Mary Fenton); Pete (Fred Church); Jack (Babe Lawrence); Harry (Kingsley Benedict); Mason (T. D. Crittenden). Scenario by George Hively. Produced by Henry McRae.

Jim McLaren, the oldest and most trusted engineer on the White Rock division, with his fireman, Pete Devins, arrives in White Rock, the end of their run. He is met by his daughter, Edith, and Jack Shannon, her sweetheart. Jim favors Pete and does not like Jack. The superintendent of the road is being harassed by hold-up men. A stranger enters the superintendent's office and presents a letter. The next day, Pete calls to see Edith, after having had several drinks in the saloon. He tries to make love to her but she runs from him to her father. Jack arrives in time to hear of the trouble and tries to fight with Pete, but Edith and her father prevent it. Pete returns to the saloon, where he meets some of his friends, who are the train robbers.

Meantime, "Handsome" Harry, a hobo, arrives in White Rock and makes his way to the saloon. Pete drinks heavily and forgets to report for duty. The result is that the superintendent goes to the saloon, finds Pete and discharges him. While doing so, the superintendent drops a letter, which is found by Harry. After the superintendent leaves Pete forces Harry to give up the letter, which contains information concerning a shipment of gold. Pete and the bandits plan to rob this train, and are forced to let Harry in on the job as he has read the letter.

Before executing the robbery, Pete asks the assistance of the gang to help him in getting away with Edith. They take her to a mountain cabin, where they leave her in charge of one of the gang known as "Red," while they go to rob the train. Harry and Sam leave town on a freight train to catch No. 10 at the next town. They are loaded into the express car in boxes and, at a certain point, release themselves and force the messenger to open the safe.

In the meantime, Pete and the others have placed torpedoes on the track to stop the train. The robbery works out as planned until the gang find themselves covered by Harry's gun and under arrest. Jack has discovered that Edith is missing and follows her trail to the cabin. A struggle takes place in which Jack comes out victor and "Red" is made a prisoner. Jack and Edith arrive at the station just as "No. 10" comes in "on time" and "Red" is turned over to the authorities. "Handsome" Harry is unmasked as the Chief Special Agent of the road, the man who was in conference with the superintendent at the beginning of the story.

VICTOR.

AN EIGHT CYLINDER ROMANCE (Two Parts—Rel. Wk., May 28). The cast: Jack Gleason (J. Morris Foster); Jim Whann (Billy Human); Ethel Whann (Rena Rogers); Mr. Whann (Perry Banks).

Jack Gleason is visited by a chum of college days, Jim Whann, who lives with his father and his young sister, Ethel. Jim invites Jack to his home to meet them but Jack begs to be excused. Ethel thinks that this chum about whom Jim talks so much is really the pretty girl, whose picture is in her brother's room. She decides to find out. When Jim goes out that night she wears the chauffeur's clothes and drives the machine. Mr. Whann tells Jim what Ethel is going to do. When Jack hears Jim's story of Ethel's deception, he joins the plot. They have read of the many auto burglaries and plan to scare Ethel. Jim remains at the apartment and Jack, with a handkerchief tied over his mouth, and an unloaded pistol in his hand, commands Ethel to hold up her hands.

She drives the car according to directions, but pretends to have engine trouble and stops in front of a garage. The garage man tells her that there is nothing wrong with the car. He suggested that they get a drink. Jack goes with them. Ethel cannot get away with her drink, so the fellow calls her "Mama's baby boy," and slaps her on the back. Jack fights him. Ethel phones her father telling him she has been held up by a highwayman, and is now at a saloon where the burglar and another are fighting. Her father rushes for the police.

Jack and Ethel escape and start down the road. Jack, seeing a machine pursuing them, takes the wheel and starts to race. He slips into an alleyway and the other car passes on down the road. But a tire has gone flat and he orders Ethel to fix it. Jack is sorry for his harshness and is just going to help her, when two masked men appear and force them to hold up their hands.

Meanwhile Mr. Whann and the policeman, trying to find the other machine, meet Jim. He tells his father that Jack is the highwayman. Passing the alleyway they see the hold-up in progress. The robbers force Jack to drive away, threatening to kill him if he stops. While they are looking back at the pursuing auto, Jack puts on the brakes suddenly throwing the men forward. Before they can regain their poise, he thrusts his empty revolver in their faces. The policemen arrive and take the two men prisoners, but Jim tells them to let Jack go. Ethel is impressed by Jack's looks and courage. She hands him a bill and asks him to try to go straight. Jim and his father are scarcely able to control their laughter. They leave Jack and return to their home.

That evening Jack comes to the Whann home, and Ethel, unsuspecting enters. He is holding a framed picture of her behind him and is embarrassed. She takes him for a thief. Jim enters, amused, and tells his sister that Jack is his chum. He and Mr. Whann then leave the room. Jack tells her that he stole a picture similar to the one he now has in his hand, and that he has been in love with the girl for two years.

THE GUNMAN'S GOSPEL (Rel. Wk. May 28). The cast: Harry Donovan (Jack Mulhall); Bill Tait (Harry Griffith); Parson Brown (Edwin W. Power); Betty Brown (Ann Kroman); The Mayor (——Hersholt). Scenario by Fred Myton. Produced by Raymond Wells.

Larry Donovan is on trial for murder, but the evidence is only circumstantial. The case is dismissed, but his reputation as a gunman causes him to be made to leave the state. He sets out for Tombstone Flat, a small Western town. Parson Brown and his daughter, Betty, are in the same stage. They become friends. Tombstone Flat does not intend to be reformed. As the Marshal, Bill Tait, owns the only saloon in town, he persuades the boys to send the Parson back on the same stage in which he came. Larry, however thinks otherwise.

He goes to the Mayor who is playing poker, tells him his Marshal is no good, and gets him to give him a note to Bill, saying that he is appointed in Bill's place. They all expect that Larry will be beaten, but he is quicker on the draw, wounds the Deputy in the arm with his gun, and holds up Bill, forcing him to give him his badge. Larry locks the two up in jail, and when the Mayor and his friends go to the saloon to rejoice with Bill, they find a prayer meeting in full progress, with Larry leading the singing with his gun for a baton.

BY SPESHUL DELIVERY (Rel. Wk. May 28). The cast: Zoe (Zoe Rae); Muriel (Gertrude Aster); John Watkins (Val Paul); Tom (Frankie Lee). Scenario by Karl Coolidge. Produced by George Sargent.

Zoe is visiting her aunt, and is disappointed when she hears that the horse, which she wanted to see, has been sold. She finds some letters in an old trunk, and takes them out to Tom, a little boy, and the two children play post office with them.

Zoe sees a man on horseback, and writes a note asking God to send her a horse like the one she has just seen. She tells Tom to send it by "Speshul Delivery." John Watkins was the rider of the horse. Years before he had left town on account of a quarrel with Muriel, and he has just returned. He stops to speak to an old friend, leaving his horse outside.

Tom takes the horse by the bridle and leads it to Zoe, who takes it to her aunt. John comes out and misses it, and Tom tells him that he has taken it to Zoe. He follows her, and on the way picks up the letters which are strewn over the grass. He recognizes them as his own. John enters the house with the letters, and confronts Muriel. Zoe is absorbed in the horse, which she has brought into the sitting room Reading Muriel's face, John tells the child that he thinks they can arrange to keep the horse.

GOLD SEAL.

THE STOLEN ACTRESS (Three Parts—Rel. Wk. May 28). The cast: Robert Carleton (Chester Bennett); Margory Manning (Ruth Stonehouse); Jimmy Walker (George Webb); Leonard (Wadsworth Harris); Mrs. Olden (Lydia Y. Titus); Pap Olden (Alfred Allen); Jinny Olden (Jane Bernoudy); Jed Skaggs (Eugene Walsh). Written by Fred Jackson. Produced by Ruth Stonehouse.

Robert Carleton from Kentucky, just about whipped in the battle with the big city, spends his last money to see Margory Manning, a famous actress. He is inspired by her acting and hastens home, where he begins to write a play for her called "Little Miss Moonshine." Jimmy Walker, also from Kentucky, and a reporter on the "News," comes often to see Robert, and finally warns him against working so hard. At last the play is finished.

Margory Manning has ended her season and her manager, Leonard, is searching for a new play. When Robert takes his play to Leonard, the theatrical man will not read it because it is not a society drama. Robert is desperate, but Jimmy says he will see that the play is read. Robert receives a letter from his mother, urging him to return home and accept a job in the Revenue Service, which the chief has just offered. He packs his clothes and leaves for Kentucky that day.

Jimmy abducts Margory Manning and takes her to a deserted restaurant. He refuses to allow her to leave or to eat until she has read Robert's play. She admires the play and soon she and Jimmy are the best of friends. Leonard takes the drama and Miss Manning goes to Kentucky to absorb the necessary atmosphere. Jimmy gives her a letter to the Olden family, and there she spends some time. She takes Jinny, the daughter, for her model, and dresses in rough clothes.

Robert is sent to work the Tamarack Ridge district, in search of moonshiners. There in the mountains he meets Margory, but doesn't recognize her. They become friends and he gives her lessons in reading, as she pretends she is uneducated.

Jed Skaggs, Jinny's lover, a shiftless fellow, has fallen in love with Margory. One day, when she wanders to the moonshine still where he is working he grabs her and kisses her. She escapes when Pap Olden arrives. Margory persuades the Oldens to give up their still, and Jed, being threatened by Pap Olden, informs the revenue officers of the still. With Robert they start out to scour the country.

Margory meets the revenue men and quickly getting an old gun, points it at Robert. He continues to approach, and she fires at him. Then she breaks down and weeps. She knows that Jed betrayed the Oldens.

Margory returns to the city for rehearsal and Robert remains in Kentucky recuperating from his wound. Jimmy often sees Margory. She doesn't know who the author of her play is, but is anxious to meet him. Jimmy sends for Robert to be present at the first performance. Jimmy ushers him into Miss Manning's dressing-room and begins to introduce them; but before he can speak, they are shaking hands. Robert is about to take Margory into his arms when she is called on the stage. But at the end of the play, as he stands waiting in the wings, she falls into his arms.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

THE VOICE ON THE WIRE (Episode 11, "The Thought Machine"—Two Parts—Week of May 21).—The cast: Shirley (Ben Wilson); Polly (Neva Gerber); Cronin (Howard Crampton); Dr. Renolds (Jos. Girard); "Red" Warren (Francis MacDonald); James Walsh (Wadsworth Harris); "Pale" Ida (Evelyn Selbie). Scenario by J. Grubb Alexander. Produced by Stuart Paton.

Dr. Renolds, still bound, lies on the floor, helpless. Polly, dazed, passes without looking at him. She is put in a limousine with Taylor at the wheel. "Red" gives instructions to the driver.

Shirley with the double-crossing crook speeds toward "Pale" Ida's house and is followed by Cronin. As they draw near the place "Red" is warned. Shirley forces the door. The crooks carry Renolds upstairs and the other men follow. A struggle takes places. One crook and a policeman are dead, while several are wounded and when Shirley regains consciousness he finds that Warren and the crooks have disappeared. Cronin is disgusted and while talking with Shirley hears "The Voice" saying "It" would meet them at the "Poisson d' or" a cafe. They discover Renolds who tells them that Polly has gone to meet Welsh. He and Renolds drive to Welsh's home. Meantime, Welsh and Polly are driven to the cafe. When Shirley inquires for Welsh the butler advises he has just left with Polly, and Shirley is hurt at the conviction of his suspicions. Telling Renolds to warn Cronin, Shirley remains in the apartment. "The Voice" speaks to Shirley, telling him that though he is clever, Welsh will die at twelve o'clock.

At fifteen minutes before the hour Cronin and Renolds stand before the cafe waiting for Shirley, who has already entered the cafe disguised as an old farmer.

The lights go out several times, but finally fail to come on again. In the darkness, Shirley hurries to Welsh's table. The dismembered hand approaches Welsh, who screams. Cronin runs into the cafe, while "Red" and the other crooks run out.

Welsh makes his escape when Shirley grasps the hand. Cronin interrupts, and Shirley lets go the hand.

Polly is seized by "Red." He tells her she must kill Shirley, that he is at the house of a friend, who has invented a thought machine. Polly, still in a trance, takes the revolver and goes out to the car with Ida.

Shirley and Renolds have gone to the home of the inventor. He tells them that his machine told him that they would come. Shirley is incredulous. His friend goes to bed, and Shirley sits down to think. The mirror shows him Polly's face. He looks up. She is standing in the doorway with a gun pointed at him. She walks forward, still covering him. The picture fades as she presses the gun to his body. He tells her that she cannot fire as she draws back the trigger.

THE VOICE ON THE WIRE (Episode 12.—The Fifth Victim—Two Parts—Rel. Wk. May 28).—The cast: Shirley (Ben Wilson); Welsh (Wadsworth Harris); Cronin (Howard Crampton); Polly (Neva Gerber); "Red" Warren (Francis MacDonald); Renolds (Jos. Girard); Prof. Duval (Nagel de Buillier). Scenario by Stuart Paton. Produced by Ben Wilson.

As Polly stands behind Shirley with the revolver aimed at him, he sees her in the crystal of the thought machine, and suddenly switching off the main lights, places himself so that he can look directly into her eyes. He tells her she can't shoot, that his will is her will; her gaze wavers and she drops the revolver as his will overcomes hers. She awakes from the hypnotic spell. Shirley tells her to act as if she were still hypnotized, and in this way they may be able to trace the "Voice."

"Red" Warren and the gang of crooks receive word from the "Voice" that Polly has failed to get Shirley, having come out of her hypnotic spell, but that she must be caught again. "Red" and two men dash away and later talk with "Pale" Ida.

Shirley answers the phone to hear the "Voice" say that he has been clever enough to escape this time, but that they got Welsh. "Red" and his men step into the room, first having switched off the lights. "Red" shoots toward Shirley, who responds with the revolver Polly dropped on the table. The men struggle with Polly, and when Shirley has turned on the lights again, he finds himself alone in the room, Polly having been carried away. Shirley discovers a note on the floor which reads: "The meeting is called for tomorrow night at twelve" and is signed by a thumb print.

Polly is taken to the crooks' quarters and locked in a bedroom. The following night Shirley remembers the mysterious note, and with the help of Prof. Duval, gets into telepathic communication with Polly by means of the crystal, and by controlling her mind, he learns that she is at 499 Chante Street. Shirley phones Cronin to bring enough men to raid 499 Chante Street, and to surround the house at 12 o'clock, a revolver shot being their signal to enter. He leaves word for Renolds to follow when he is ready, and departs.

Shirley, cloaked like all the crooks, enters the house and joins the gang, but, when all are assembled, "Red" is warned over the phone to count heads, as there is a stranger present. All are ordered to unmask, and when it comes to Shirley's turn, he draws his revolver and holds them all at bay, firing at them to notify Cronin. The crooks rush for the door, firing back at Shirley. "Red" dashes through the bedroom door and closes it as Cronin and the detectives rush into the room. Shirley finds the bedroom empty, the window open, and picks up Polly's cape. "Red" has escaped with Polly. Cronin is proud of himself, having captured all the crooks but "Red"; he is indifferent to Polly's being kidnapped.

BUTTERFLY.

MONEY MADNESS (Five parts, May 28).—The cast: George Fuller (Don Bailey); Ethel Fuller (Mary MacLaren); Tom Williams (Alfred Vosburg); Monroe Simmons (M. Everett); "Hartford Red" (Eddie Polo); "Whispering" Smith (Chas. H. Mailes); Dr. Mercer (Rex de Roselli). Scenario by Wm. Parker. Produced by H. McRae.

There is a run on the Grand National Bank, of which George Fuller is president. Tom Williams, the cashier, reports there is $700,000, and $500,000 will stop the run. Fuller urges the directors to pay the depositors, but Simmons, the vice-president, insists on thirty days' notice. The crowd catches sight of the directors; a stone is thrown which strikes Simmons.

Fuller's daughter, Ethel, takes Dr. Mercer to the home of Jerry, the night watchman, whose daughter is ill. The doctor recommends a change of climate, and Jerry decides to withdraw his $300 from the bank. Ethel and the doctor go to the bank, and she hears her father declare all his available cash, $75,000, will be paid to the depositors.

Tom, who is in love with Ethel, prepares to escort her home. Ethel is accosted by Simmons, who says her father's action will mean his ruin, and if she will marry him he will undertake to see that the depositors are paid. Ethel refuses.

Simmons runs a gambling establishment, while Dr. Mercer also carries on a secret traffic in forbidden drugs. One of his patients is "Hartford Red," formerly an expert locomotive engineer. The doctor calls at Fuller's home, and is followed by "Hartford," who looks in the window and sees Fuller placing in a wall safe the currency he has brought from the bank. Fuller is suddenly overcome with faintness, and Ethel and the doctor rush to his assistance. On his way out, the doctor is accosted by Hartford, who knows he has planned to rob the safe, and they agree to handle the job together.

Ethel and Tom go to the theater and then to a cabaret, where they meet Tom's Uncle, "Whispering" Smith, a great railroad detective. The doctor and Hartford call on the bills. Returning to the doctor's office, Hartford sinks into a drugged sleep, while the doctor goes to Simmons gambling den, which is raided by the police, but the doctor and Simmons escape and return to the office. Simmons recognizes the unstamped bills, and after the doctor confesses he is a crook, sends Hartford to "plant" some of the bills in Tom's room.

In the morning Fuller tells the directors he has the bank's funds and will return them if they will pay the depositors. Tom is sent for the money and finds the safe empty. Simmons demands that Fuller be held, and accuses Tom. The bills are found in his room and Tom is arrested. Ethel goes to Smith and tells him of Simmons, who has bribed her. Simmons bribes a bellboy and learns of their conversation; he goes to the doctor's office and tells them they must make a getaway. They start out, and come upon an engine, force the crew to leave, and Hartford takes the throttle. Ethel and Smith pursue and finally overtake them. The doctor jumps, but Simmons and Hartford are captured and taken to the bank.

Simmons confesses that he overheard Fuller's plan to have Jerry go to the basement and fire two shots to attract the clerks, while he removed the money, and knowing this would ruin his plans he shot Jerry, placing Tom's revolver by his side. Jerry revives and corroborates the story. Tom is freed, and Simmons arrested. Fuller and Ethel try to thank Smith, who says he needs no reward for helping that dear girl and his nephew.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith are moving and the truck driver inquires the way of Jay, who directs them to his own house.

The furniture is delivered, father arrives and is just about to present the young couple with the promised $5,000 when the Smiths come in and have all the furniture removed.

Father understands, and, admiring the nerve of Jay, promises the newlyweds to buy them furniture they will be able to keep.

GAUMONT.

TOURS AROUND THE WORLD (No. 30—May 29). When war was declared one of the most solemn moments was when a great crowd assembled in the square in front of Notre Dame in Paris and dedicated France to a war for democracy and righteousness. The Gaumont Company shows pictures of this most impressive structure in this number of "Tours Around the World." It is a marvel of Gothic architecture, its oldest part dating from 1163. Historically as well as architecturally it is one of the most important buildings in the world. In addition to the familiar views of the great structure, there are more intimate glimpses of the arches, the clock gallery, and the grotesque gargoyles.

A second section of this reel takes the traveler via the screen to Teneriffe, one of Spain's Canary Islands. It is a land of extinct volcanoes, presenting a strange contrast to its smiling tropical valleys. There are excellent pictures of Santa Cruz, the capital of this island group. It is an important coaling station. A characteristic town is presented in Idod de los Vinos. One of the most interesting pictures, shows the dragon tree, a species now nearly extinct. The specimen shown is supposed to be 3,000 years old.

The reel is concluded with entertaining views of Koenigsee, one of the prettiest Bavarian lakes. The spot is typical of Bavaria, and gives the spectator a good idea of the home of a people contrasted with the Prussians, much to the advantage of the former.

REEL LIFE (No. 57—May 31).—One of the more important sections of Gaumont's "Reel Life" No. 57, is "Hand-made Barrels," a picture made on the Island of Barbados. A great number of barrels is required to handle the sugar and molasses. As the work is carried on by natives, the industry is both picturesque and enlightening. It is interesting to note that the staves are imported from the United States.

"Adding to the Tin Supply" is a picture in line with the patriotic preachments to conserve all our resources during wartime. It shows how used cans which were formerly thrown away are now being remelted. The tins are flattened for shipping and then crated.

In every person there is something which responds to the camping lure. The Gaumont editor satisfies this in this issue of "Reel Life" with pictures of "Auto Campers-Out." The section shows how all the comforts of home may be enjoyed while spending the night beside the road. This is possible by using a trailer which carries a complete camping outfit. This is attached to the automobile. The tent is erected over a folding frame, and there are comfortable beds for the entire family.

"Dynamiting a Hillside" is a spectacular picture of the explosion of 80,000 pounds of dynamite, which loosened 400,000 tons of rock. Every process, from the boring of the holes to hold the explosive to the clearing away of the smoke and dust after the blast is pictured.

A lion cub which has a canine foster mother is also seen.

MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTION.

THE MIRROR (Powell—Five Parts—May 21).—The cast: Bob Merrill, an artist (Robert Elliott); Blanche, his wife (Marjorie Rambeau); Maizie Goddard, an actress (Irene Warfield); Boyd, a theatrical manager (Paul Everton); His Stage Director (Aubrey Beattie); His Backer (Frank Ford); Rusell Dana (T. Jerome Lawlor).

Blanche Merrill, the beautiful wife of a struggling young portrait artist, whose bungalow home is the rendezvous of an artistic set, is surprised by her husband as she is attired for the night standing before her mirror. Impressed by her beauty, the husband insists on painting her portrait from a sketch made on the spot.

Boyd, a theatrical manager and libertine, seeing the portrait, determines to possess the original, and he tries to induce Blanche with a promise of a sensational theatrical success to leave her husband for a stage career. Boyd's behavior compromises the young beauty, who travels the pace that kills aboard the Broadway carousal, until horror awakes her from her dream, and she finds herself safe in the arms of her husband.

THE CHECKMATE (Horkheimer — Five Parts—May 21).—The cast: Ida and Claire Marley (Jackie Saunders); Roy Vangrift (Frank Mayo); Pa Marley (Daniel Gilfether); Ma Marley (Mollie McConnell); Dick Cooper (Henry Grey); Addie Smith (Margaret Landis); Bill Meyer (Cullen Landis); Country Minister (Edward Jobson).

Claire Marley, pretty daughter of Rancher Marley's, who has a twin sister, Ida, exactly like her, becomes weary of farm life when Addie Smith, a department store beauty from New York, Claire's cousin, visits her. Claire goes to the city and is employed in the same store with Addie, where she meets Roy Vangrift, millionaire bachelor, loves and is betrayed by him, returning home in sorrow. Vangrift, on a fishing tour, meets Claire's twin sister, persuades her to elope, and is amazed later to find that he has married Claire instead of Ida.

LA SALLE.

CHUBBY INHERITS A HAREM (Two Parts—May 21).—Chubby Huggins lives in a quiet village, and is too bashful to take advantage of the few opportunities that the place affords. Percy, his chum, lets nothing pass him by and is a general favorite. Chubby's father was a missionary, and one day a letter arrives for the old man from the Turkish Consul stating that his old friend, Ali Hassan, is about to be executed and is consigning to his care his "little family." Unsophisticated Chubby and his sister prepare for the reception of the "little family" by buying toys, etc., and great is their consternation at the sight of twelve beautiful Harem girls in charge of a big servant. Percy is delighted and begins scheming at once.

While Percy schemes to elope with the whole bunch, Zora, the favorite daughter, makes love to Chubby. The result is that Chubby at last gets up courage to claim Zora and Percy falls into his own trap and is compelled to marry Sister, one of the Harem, to his own humiliation and the amusement of the whole bunch.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS (Chapter 7—"Mistaken Identity"—Two Parts—May 21).—Helen Holmes and Webb try to trap thieves who are stealing baggage from the station. They catch Bud Masters and one of his pals at the trick, and start after them. Helen catches up with them and throwing the bag away they tussle with her, finally knocking her senseless. Then they fasten her head to the coupler of a car which is being switched in the yards and run off. Webb arrives just in time as the two cars are about to come together, snatches Helen, and throws her and himself flat on the ground between the wheels of the train. They escape unhurt.

Helen is sent on the special to the ball which Lord Melbourne is giving. Meanwhile the gang, still trying to find some way to get rid of the girl who is pursuing them, overhears a Chinaman offer $1,000 for a white wife, and decide to get rid of Helen in this way. At the ball, locating Helen seated near a fountain, they turn off the lights and seize the woman, who proves to be Lady Melbourne. They take her to the rendezvous of the Chinamen. When she faints they pack her in a trunk and throw it on a train bound for the city where the $1,000 is offered for a white wife.

Helen gets the number of the automobile as the men escape with Lady Melbourne and makes a quick trip to the police station, from which a call is sent out to watch for the machine bearing that number.

JERRY'S MASTER STROKE (May 31).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Flash Jack (George George); Boston Bill (Harry Archer); Father (Louis FitzRoy); Daughter (Claire Alexander). Written and produced by Milton H. Fahrney.

Jerry loves a girl and the girl loves Jerry, but her father does not. The old man wants her to marry a wealthy East Indian Prince, who also wants to buy the family jewels.

"Boston Bill," a high class crook, who has made the old man's acquaintance, posing as a financier, also wishes to marry the girl, and likewise has designs on the family jewels, but has no intention of buying them.

The Prince is to arrive on a certain day, but is delayed and sends a telegram which is intercepted by "Boston Bill" and later stolen from him by Jerry, and the two are thus made aware of the non-appearance of the East Indian potentate.

"Boston Bill" decides to have his "pal," "Flash Jack," impersonate the Prince and Jerry, overhearing their plans, figures out a scheme to frustrate them and impersonate the East Indian himself. He informs his sweetheart of his plans and then starts to work.

He watches "Flash Jack," sees him receive his costume, and then, by means of a subterfuge, he switches bundles with him and substitutes one that "plants" him as an international spy. He then informs the authorities. Jack is arrested, the incriminating evidence discovered, and Jack landed in jail, where he is recognized as a much wanted crook.

Jerry, disguised as the Prince, calls on papa-in-law, foils the other crook, "Boston Bill," in his attempt to steal the jewels, and winds up by locking him in the vault where the jewels are kept. But, unfortunately, when the police arrive and arrest Bill, they unmask Jerry as the bogus Prince.

MONMOUTH.

JIMMIE DALE, ALIAS THE GREY SEAL (Chapter 10—"Crooks and a Knave"—Two Parts—May 25).—Robbing a safe to get back lost documents from a thief who has robbed his own safe to disarm suspicion in connection with a mining swindle, is the job performed by "Jimmie Dale, alias The Grey Seal." The Tocsin sends Jimmie Dale a warning of danger that Moriarty and Mittel, underworld harpies, may try to prevent him from receiving the papers, but Jimmie robs the safe, puts the grey seal on it and is away before the police can identify him.

JIMMIE DALE, ALIAS THE GREY SEAL (Chapter 11—"A Rogue's Defeat"—Two Parts—June 1).—The Tocsin warns Jimmie Dale that a scoundrel, Markel, is forcing Henry Wilbur to meet a demand note for $50,000 or forfeit his rights to some valuable mining property. Markel has presented a presumably valuable diamond necklace to his wife, for which he has sought a great deal of publicity, but the gems are really paste.

The Grey Seal visits Markel, takes the necklace and also the demand note, which he returns to Wilbur just in time to save him from suicide, and, making Wilbur promise to pay Markel the $50,000 as soon as possible, and when it is paid the Grey Seal will return the necklace to Markel. To save himself the humiliation of having it advertised that the jewels are paste, Markel promises to keep quiet.

Triangle Film Corp.

HAPPINESS (Ince-Kay Bee—Five Parts—May 13).—The cast: Doris Wingate (Enid Bennett); Robert Lee Hollister (Charles Dunn). Dolly Temple (Thelma Salter); Nicodemus (Andrew Arbuckle); Miss Pratt (Gertrude Claire); Priscilla Wingate (Adele Belgrade); Richard Forrester (Jack Gilbert).

Doris Wingate is featured in Sunday supplements as "the richest and most snobbish girl in America." As a matter of fact, she is lovable and eager for friends.

Her uncle, a fat, jocular fellow, visits her and, after seeing the she-dragon who tutors the girl, he determines that Doris shall go to college.

Upon her arrival at the co-educational school she is snubbed by the students, who have read the story in the Sunday papers, and are determined that she shall have no opportunity to patronize them.

Doris meets a boy who is working his way through college by surreptitiously taking in washing. He is the first person who has ever extended the hand of good fellowship to her, and she immediately begs to become a member of his "soapsuds trust," which soon is in control of happiness despite the hurricane arrival of the lynx-eyed tutor and the aristocratic aunt.

THE MAN WHO MADE GOOD (Triangle Production -Five Parts—May 13).—The cast: Tom Burton (Jack Devereaux); Frances Clayton (Winifred Allen); Flash Lewis (Henry P. Dixon); Josiah Whitney (Barney Gilmore).

Tom Burton and Frances Clayton meet at a New York boarding house, and are attracted to each other's company. Tom is only a clerk in the office of Whitney & Company, cracker manufacturers, but he manages to save enough money to buy a suburban residence on the dollar down plan. The two are married and settled down to housekeeping, but they find Tom's salary is not elastic. Frances determines that he shall have the opportunity to get out of the rut and make good. So under the pretext of visiting a cousin in the country, she obtains a position as maid-of-all-work.

Unable to get a raise of salary, Tom quits and starts forth roughing it. Going into a country store one day, he discovers that the Whitney crackers are not selling well. He at once appoints himself demonstrating agent and makes a whirlwind campaign that nets the company many orders. He thus succeeds in displacing Flash Lewis, the former representative, who has been pressing undesirable attentions on Frances. Thus the couple, having fought with determination and won, return to their home with an income of one hundred dollars a week.

SOULS TRIUMPHANT (Fine Arts—Five Parts—May 20).—The cast: Lillian Vale (Lillian Gish); Robert Powers (Wilfred Lucas); Josiah Vale (Spottiswoode Aitken); Hattie Lee, the Scarlet Woman (Louise Hamilton).

Robert Powers is a libertine, devoting himself constantly to a career of dissipation until he meets Lillian Vale, daughter of the curate of St. Anthony's. His ambition then turns to winning her love. They are married and a son is born to them. Powers is delighted with home life for a while, but a notorious vampire woman, Hattie Lee, who has charmed Powers in former days, lures him to a tryst one evening.

Lillian has gone to the bedside of her father, who is critically ill, so Powers puts his son to bed and joins the woman. That night his home burns to the ground, and he is frenzied with the belief that his boy has met death in the flames. He goes to beg forgiveness of his wife, and learns that she has saved the child's life.

Her all-forgiving nature and the love for their little son, whom she has saved, causes him to arise from his past life with soul triumphant.

WILD WINSHIP'S WIDOW (Triangle Production—Five Parts—May 20).—The cast: Catherine Winship (Dorothy Dalton); Archibald Herndon (Rowland Lee); Morley Morgan (Joe King); Aunt Minerva (Lillian Hayward); Marjory Howe (Alice Taaffe).

Catherine Winship has devoutly enshrined the memory of her husband, who was killed three weeks after their wedding, and secludes herself from all society. The late Webb Winship was not worthy of all this adoration. He was a profligate, a worthless specimen of humanity.

Morley Morgan has loved Catherine since her girlhood, but his suit is hopeless, for the widow can think of no man but her departed hero. Her aunt advises Morgan to treat her with indifference. This puzzles Catherine, who about that time has discovered her late husband's real character through some scented billet doux found among his papers.

She at once discards her weeds and starts pursuit of the revolted slave. Morgan, who is engaged upon a flirtation with a young debutante. A game of cross purposes ensues, but the result is favorable to Morgan and the fascinating widow.

THE NEGLECTED WIFE (Episode No. 3, "In the Crucible"—Two Parts—May 27).—The cast: Margaret Warner (Ruth Roland); Horace Kennedy (Roland Bottomley); Mary Kennedy (Corene Grant); Edgar Doyle (Neil Hardin); Frand Norwood (Philo McCullough).

Margaret Warner and Horace Kennedy, the attorney, compare annonymous notes they have received, threatening exposure if their relations are continued.

"You are right—we must not see each other again," Kennedy tells the girl and she agrees.

Worried over her husband's growing indifference, Mrs. Kennedy has gone to their houseboat, out of town, for a rest. There she meets Frank Norwood, a magazine editor. Norwood has received from Margaret a story entitled, "His Wife and the Other Woman." He expresses a desire to meet Miss Warner and is pleased to learn that Mrs. Kennedy has already made her acquaintance. He accepts the story for publication and mails Margaret a check for $100. Margaret unaware of her good fortune and hisheartened by the return of other stories, finds herself unable to pay her board bill. The landlady refuses to listen to her explanation and threatens her arrest.

Jimmy, a boarder seeking to take advantage of the situation, offers to pay Margaret's bill. She snatches the money from his hand and throws it out of the window. The landlady, indignant over the insult to her star boarder, rushes out for a policeman. Margaret escapes by climbing out of the window.

She spends the night in the Salvation Army headquarters and the next day starts a search for work. She encounters a friend who tells her that he is manager in a local department store and offers her a position. It happens that Jimmy is employed in the same store. He and the manager start a fight over Margaret. Jimmy finding himself bested, pulls a revolver and fires several shots which cause a panic. In the rush to escape, the stairway collapses and many people are hurt. Jimmy, seeking to dodge the blame, places the gun at Margaret's side.

A spectator, however, comes to the rescue of the unfortunate girl and Jimmy flees in an automobile, pursued by the police. He dashes wildly along the railroad tracks, leading over a bridge. Just at that moment the trestle is raised and the automobile plunges into the river, carrying Jimmy with it. Margaret is taken to the police station where she is advised to engage an attorney. Will she call on Kennedy to help her?

THE IRON HEART (Astra—5 Parts—May 27.) The cast: Stephen Martin (Edwin Arden); Mrs. Martin (Gertrude Berkeley); Tom Martin (Forrest Winant); Grace Steele (Helene Chadwick); Anne Parnell (Leonore Harris). Directed by George Fitzmaurice.

Stephen Martin's elaborate mansion was the gathering place of society in the big city. Week after week he entertained lavishly. Week after week he made more money. His quiet little wife could not and did not make any attempt to keep up with him. Attracted by the voluptuous adventuress, Anne Parnell, he employed her to take charge of his home and be hostess for his many social gatherings.

But Stephen Martin overestimated the extent to which he could follow the dictates of the desire for power. Years before he had been in charge of the Martin mills in an upstate city, where social conditions were far behind those of the big city where his brother was the controlling head of the family. Martin's iron heart was in evidence though, even at this stage. He ruled the works as a Czar. His son married against his wishes, so he turned him out to take care of himself. And then his brother dying he came to the big city as the real head of the Martin millions.

Events worked rapidly from then on. Martin's son, popular with the workmen, tried to restrain them from striking, but was unsuccessful. Martin's wife, at the end of an especially gorgeous night, came upon Martin attentive to and presenting Anne Parnell with jewels. It was too much for the kindly soul. She left his home to seek refuge with her son. Some of the workmen broke all bounds and set fire to the mills. And thus was swept away for Stephen Martin his all in this world.

THE MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS (Episode No. 11—"Love's Sacrifice"—Two Parts—May 27).—The cast: Philippa Brewster (Molly King); Peter Hale (Leon Bary); Bridgey Bentley (Ralph Stuart); Dick Annessley (Gladden James); The Masked Stranger (????).

After many unsuccessful attempts on the life of Peter, Bentley is finally forced to confess and is landed in jail. He is bailed out and makes an attempt on Peter's life for revenge. His plot is frustrated. Pursued by Peter and Dick Annessley, cub reporter, who is investigating the mystery, Bentley seeks refuge in the Brewster home. He persuades Philippa to shield him and when his pursuers arrive she informs them that Bentley has escaped by way of the window. In hiding, Bentley overhears Hubert Brewster telling his business associate of an unexpected coup in Q and D. He realizes that this information, if made public, would ruin Brewster and decides to make use of it to accomplish his aim.

"Marry me, or I will ruin your father," is his message to Philippa. Philippa hurries to Bentley's home to save her father from the threatened catastrophe. Annessley seeing Bentley entering, had summoned the police. He is greatly surprised when he sees Philippa going into the house and heartbroken, decides to abandon the investigation.

PARAMOUNT-BRAY-PICTOGRAPHS, Release No. 67 (May 14).—

The Submarine Mine Layer.—In the first section of the Pictograph the operation of a German submarine mine layer is shown. Every detail of this craft is faithfully depicted through the animated drawings from the pen of J. R. Levanthal, an expert in scientific draftsmanship. This film is the first of a series to be released in Paramount-Bray-Pictographs, showing the engines of warfare perfected by the warring nations in the past few years, and will demonstrate the necessity of the United States preparing for any emergency that might be in store for it.

Modern Farming.—The Federal Government is trying to impress the need of intensive farming upon every citizen throughout the country and the Bray Studios, at the request of the Department of Agriculture, are including in this release of the Pictographs a graphic lesson in how to make the waste places yield their share of foodstuffs. The subject is covered from many angles. Many of the scenes in the picture were taken on an estate owned by one of America's millionaire farmers, and shows him hard at work tilling the soil with some of his farm hands.

Women Patriots.—Realizing that the automobile will be called upon to transport troops, ammunition and supplies, and that tens of thousands of them will be needed, the Women's Defense League is training those women who will volunteer how to operate an automobile by giving them a complete course in motor construction.

Picto-Puzzles.—In conjunction with the Loyd Picto-Puzzles, the Bray Studios and Sam Loyd announces a contest which should prove popular among audiences of all ages. The rules of this contest, which begins with the sixty-eighth release, make it necessary for the audience to guess the answer to one of the puzzles and their answers are to be sent to the theater within a week from the day on which they see it. The theater manager sends all replies received within the time limit to Sam Loyd, and to each successful contestant, Mr. Loyd will send a very handsome puzzle book.

THE WINDOW DRESSER'S DREAM (Black Diamond—May 14).—Being ten minutes late for dinner, the poor Window Dresser, refused admittance to his home by his aggressive spouse, is compelled to spend the night on the front porch. After a sleepless night he wearily wends his way to work and we next see him attempting to drape an elaborate gown about the waxen image of a beautiful maiden in a store window, upon which he has already placed the most dainty lingerie. He finds the effort too much for him, and has an inspiration. He casts the gown aside and in its stead covers the lady of wax with a more easily adjusted opera cloak. He falls asleep and has a terrible vision of his nagging wife and pleasant dreams of the waxen image, which comes to life. After dreaming of many adventures in which the wax image and his nagging wife play the stellar parts, he awakens to find himself wrestling with the figure which he has upset in his delirium.

THE HIGHWAY OF HOPE (Morosco—5 parts—May 17).—The cast: Lou (Kathlyn Williams); Steve King (House Peters); Missouri Joe (Jim Farley); Philip Garst (Harry De vere).

The bedraggled maid-of-all-work around Missouri Joe's saloon and dance hall is known as Lonely Lou. Joe is in love with her because, in spite of her rags and tatters, she is a very beautiful girl.

Steve King, cowboy on a neighboring ranch, who has been ordered from home in the East by his wealthy and irate father, gets his month's pay, goes to Joe's and is under the influence of liquor when Joe tries to get Lou to marry him. Steve thrusts Joe aside and marries the girl himself. Next morning he realizes what he has done and, being discharged from the ranch, the ill-mated husband and wife take the pack animals and start out into the desert in search of gold.

Out in the lonely desert Steve finds a ledge of mineral, but the silence and Lou's sloppy appearance tell on him and he begins drinking heavily. One day, the whiskey all gone, he contemplates suicide and pours out a cup of poison. Lou's arrival prevents his taking it, and when she see the poison she believes he has placed it there for her. She throws it away and pretends that she is dying. Steve, panic-stricken, rushes from the hut. He breaks his leg in a fall and is found and nursed by a prospector.

While he is ill, a prominent finds possibilities in the mine and Lou suddenly finds herself a wealthy woman. She rises to the occasion, dresses well and studies hard to perfect her English. Steve goes from one job to another and, finally, believing Lou dead, returns to the hut to find it the center of a great mining town. He saves Lou from the attack of Missouri Joe. The mystery of the poison cup is explained and the two are reunited and happy.

HER BETTER SELF (Famous Players—5 parts—May 21).—The cast: Vivian Tyler (Pauline Frederick); Robert Keith (Thomas Meighan); Aggie May (Alice Hollister); Mrs. Van Puster Tyler (Maude Turner Gordon); Mr. Tyler (Charles Wellesley); Count Belloto (Frank De Rheim); "Dopey" (Armand Cortez).

Vivian Tyler is a spoiled daughter of wealthy parents who are trying to persuade her to marry Baron Belloto. Young Dr. Keith, an enthusiastic charity worker, comes to their house for dinner one evening for the purpose of getting a handsome subscription. There he meets Vivian and the two are attracted to each other. The man, however, realizing the difference in their lives, tells her that they can never marry, as she could not endure even a week of his life.

Vivian wishes to make the test and goes to his sanatorium to help and mingle with his co-workers. She finds the work hard and disagreeable but does not give up. But that evening, after attending a session of the night court where Keith has rescued a girl, weak with hunger and illness, she gives up the attempt and goes back to her home, leaving a note for Keith.

It is not the hardship that has driven her to this step but the finding of a picture of Keith in a locket on the girl he rescued, who was a waitress in his boarding house years before and stole the picture from his room.

Keith is heart-broken and does not understand her motive. Vivian's mother gives a brilliant reception to announce her daughter's engagement to the Baron, who urges an early wedding. Just as Vivian is making her decision, Keith telephones and she goes to him to try again.

By some trick of fate, she arrives at the sanatorium just as Aggie, the waitress is pleading with Keith to save her from a pal she fears. Vivian, again believing Keith is in love with the girl, flies from the room, dropping her cloak as she goes. Returning for it, she witnesses the suicide of Aggie but is too late to interfere.

Keith in the meantime, has gone to his study and locked himself in. A nurse, finding Aggie dead in her room, and going in search of Keith, discovers this. The police, believe Keith guilty as all the evidence seems to point that way. Keith himself dazed, thinks only of Vivian and how to shield her as he fears she will be implicated.

Vivian learns of this only by accident for she has been taken to the country to recover her broken health and spirits. Quickly sending for her fastest motor and breaking all speed laws, she goes to the rescue of the man she loves. She arrives barely in time to save his life and as the foreman of the jury announces "Not Guilty," Keith takes her in his arms.

FRECKLES (Lasky—Five Parts—May 28).—The cast: Freckles (Jack Pickford); Angel (Louise Huff); John McLean (Hobart Bosworth); Bird Woman (Lillian Leighton); Black Jack (Billy Elmer); Duncan (Guy Oliver).

Freckles is a little one-armed waif in an orphanage. He has no remembrance of his father or mother and what happened to his arm. He is the butt of all the jokes at the orphanage, and finally his splendid little spirit rebels and he runs away. After many struggles, and faint with hunger, he meets John McLean, a wealthy lumberman, who, liking the manner of the little fellow, appoints him watchman of the Limberlost, a valuable timber swamp.

While there Freckles meets the "Angel," a girl whom wealth can not spoil, who is spending the summer with the "Bird Woman," an enthusiastic naturalist.

Black Jack, foreman for McLane, is attempting to steal some of the valuable timber from the Limberlost and is discovered by Freckles, and, fearing he will tell his employer, they bind Freckles and throw him into the swamp. He is about to sink below the black water when the Bird Woman finds and rescues him. The Angel, who has fallen in love with the little chap, rides to warn McLean, who returns with a party of men and rescues the timber.

Freckles and the Angel are leaving when a huge tree, falling, is about to strike the girl. The brave boy, although exhausted with his hard fight with Black Jack, throws himself in the way of the tree, which falls with the greater part of its weight across his chest. Freckles knows that he is a waif and not worthy of the Angel's love and does not care to live.

In the meantime the grandfather has died, leaving a portion of his estates to his grandson. English solicitors finally trace the lost child and find him in Freckles at the hospital. The news of his good fortune is told to the dying boy. The realization that he is now in the same social scale with the Angel brings back his ebbing life and the two are made happy.

UNCONQUERED (Lasky—Five Parts—May 31).—The cast: Mrs. Jackson (Fannie Ward); Richard Darcier (Jack Dean); Mr. Jackson (Hobart Bosworth); Jake (Tully Marshall); Mrs. Lenning (Mabel Van Buren); Voodoo Queen (Jane Wolfe).

Mrs. Jackson, wife of a millionaire, married this man when she was too young to know his cruel nature. Her whole thought and life are devoted to Billy, her little son. Mrs. Lenning, a designing widow, gives Jackson the idea that his wife is weaning Billy's affection from him, and he tries to buy the boy's love with toys and candy. Jackson commands his wife to call upon Mrs. Lenning and invite her to visit them at their Florida home, threatening to take only Billy with him if she refuses.

Richard Darcier, a writer, is ordered to Florida by his physician and he and Billy become firm friends. Jake, a half-crazed negro, and Richard's caretaker, is frightened into making a sacrifice to the Voodoo and is about to kill Billy when Richard and Mrs. Jackson rescue him, but the negro stabs Richard and is taken to an asylum. During Richard's illness a wonderful friendship grows between Mrs. Jackson, Billy and Richard. In the meantime Mrs. Lenning is gradually winning Jackson, who demands a divorce from his wife and the custody of Billy.

Jackson and Mrs. Lenning purposely allow Mrs. Jackson to overhear a conversation which will induce her to run away with Billy and they surprise her in Richard's home. Jackson secures a divorce and the boy. Mrs. Jackson kidnaps Billy as he is out with his nurse. Jake, who has escaped, secures a knife, and when Mrs. Jackson leaves Billy in a cave to go to Richard's for food, Jake enters the cave. The nurse gives the alarm just as Jackson is married to Mrs. Lenning. Jackson and his men rush to Darcier's home and Mrs. Jackson steals away to the cave. Word comes that Jake has escaped. Richard realizes the danger—he and Jackson reach the cave as the mother is about to sacrifice her life for the boy. Jackson, realizing her mother-love, gives Billy to her and she is made doubly happy by his possession and her new-found love in Richard.

THE MILKY WAY.—(May 14).—The cast: Margaret Mannering (Margaret Gibson); Neal (Neal Burns); Arling (Eddie Barry); Ethel (Ethel Lynne); Her Brother (George French); Maid (Stella Adams).

Margaret, an heiress from another city, is visiting Ethel. Margaret is a hero-worshipper of the author of the moment, Mr. Arling. Ethel's housemaid is to enter service in the Arling household and Margaret, seeing her chance to be near her idol, goes as the maid. Ethel's brother George, who has never seen Margaret, arrives home. Ethel tells him the joke and he resolves to go as a plumber and win the maid.

At Arling's, Margaret has tidied up the novelist's study, which so irritates him that he has her reduced to kitchen-maid and the kitchen-maid, Stella, promoted to her place. The news reaches the club and the unmarried members rush in a body to win the heiress. Neal, as the milkman, is one of the first to arrive. He thinks Margaret a real maid and loses all interest in the rich housemaid. Meanwhile, the men make love to the bewildered Stella. George is leading, when Arling hears the news and he, too, enters the race. Margaret and Neal have really fallen in love as kitchen-maid and milkman. George gets Stella to the church but Ethel arrives just in time to tell him the truth and save him from a misalliance. Margaret and Neal are just behind and are married.

HIS LAST PILL (May 21).—The cast: Wifey (Betty Compson); Hubby (Eddie Barry); Mr. Newlywed (Neal Burns); Mrs. Newlywed (Ethel Lynne); Doctor (George French).

Hubby is a prey to imaginary ailments and it keeps his wife, Betty, busy remembering the pills for twenty different ailments. On the morning that Hubby develops housemaid's knee, Betty and the doctor decide that something must be done, so doctor recommends making him jealous. Fortunately, at the same time arrive Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed. Betty plans with them, and Mrs. Newlywed drops out of sight. That night Betty has a few friends over to dance. She is made violent love to by Newlywed, whom Hubby believes to be a single man. Next morning, Newlywed comes to take Betty —and Hubby, of course—for a ride. They go boating and spill Hubby in the lake, so that they have to take him home and put him to bed.

But Hubby sees Betty slip out in heavy coat and veil. She goes around the corner, meets Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed and the latter puts on Betty's coat and veil, while Betty slips out of sight and goes home. Hubby, just getting started, does not see this, and when he comes in sight Newlywed is kissing the "veiled lady." Hubby forgets that he thinks he is an invalid and gets in a fight with Newlywed. At the police station the veil is lifted and Mrs. Newlywed disclosed, so Hubby can only apologize and go home to Betty. There he throws the pills out of the window and invites her out to a party —the cure is complete.

THE LIVING BOOK OF NATURE. (By Raymond L. Ditmars. The Small Cat Animals).—The lesser known relatives of the lions and tigers appear in these scenes, and much is learned in an entertaining way. The first portrayed is the brilliantly marked tiger cat of South America. In contrast of marking is the wild cat of the United States. The latter animal is well known, but how few have seen a wild cat at close quarters! As the animal walks away the reason for another of its names, the "bob-tailed" cat is readily seen.

Studies of the Canada lynx follow and here is an animal of immediate interest owing to the value of its fur. As it must endure long and severe winters its feet are enormous and heavily furred to support it in walking over deep snow. Equally remarkable are the "tassels" that project from the ears.

A gaunt and savage wolf slinks in and the title explains that this type of animal is the chief enemy of the smaller species of wild cats. No matter in what part of the world the smaller cats are found they are menaced by wild dogs, wolves or jackals. Hence the hatred of the smaller cats for animals of the dog type—and well illustrated by the actions of the domestic cat through hereditary influence. The story goes on to display this conditions in the meeting of a friendly bull terrier and a handsome domestic cat. The waving tail of truce is unheeded. In a frenzy of rage the cat attacks the inquisitive canine in a scene of snarling, spitting and clawing action that causes the "enemy" to warily retreat.

THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE (May—6 Parts—State Rights). The cast: Dr. Broome (Phillips Smalley; His Wife (Lois Weber); Mrs. Graham (Priscilla Dean); Mr. Graham (Edgewood Nowell); Sarah (Evelyn Selbie); Her Husband (Harry de More).

Dr. Frank Broome, an influential physician and surgeon, learns through the Chief of Police that his wife is active in disseminating literature relating to birth control. Dr. Broome secures the release of his wife by pledging his word that she will cease her activities in spreading this propaganda.

Dr. Broome expostulates with his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Graham, wealthy friends, bring their troubles to the Doctor. Mrs. Graham has her hands full with three children. Mrs. Broome relates the story of Sarah, her former nursemaid, married to a poor but hard-working man. Sarah's life too is made miserable because their limited income cannot support the babies.

Sarah visits the doctor's wife for advice, and Mrs. Broome, possessed of the knowledge that will help her in the future, sees her duty clearly. Sarah's imperiled future is saved. The wealthy Mr. Graham refuses to profit by the lesson of Sarah's story, and insists that the matter is too personal for discussion.

Mrs. Broome notifies the Chief of Police that she considers herself freed of the promise made by her husband. The spectacle of a poor consumptive woman is such that Mrs. Broome determines to tell all women the message she has for oppressed womanhood. The police learn of her activity and the promised meeting.

The wealthy Mr. Graham, in the search of pleasure, begins to spend his evenings alone, away from home. Mrs. Graham suspects that he is not spending his evenings at the club. She leaves her husband, but through the efforts of the physician and Mr. Graham's promise of future good behavior, she is finally led to forgive. On Saturday afternoon at Kernan's Hall, hundreds of women gather to hear Mrs. Broome make her promised address to women only. In the midst of Mrs. Broome's remarks the police arrest her and Sarah for spreading a propaganda in violation of State laws.

Mrs. Broome and Sarah serve sentence in prison for their activities. Finally pardoned by the Governor, they find consolation for the future in this extract from the celebrated speech of Judge John Stelk, delivered in Chicago, February 8, 1917, in which he says:

"To my mind there is no controversy about Birth Control, except in so far as how and by whom it should be exercised. When a poor woman appears before me with her sickly, underfed, unwashed brood of nine children, and says she does not want to take back her drunken husband because it will mean another child added to her burden in a few months, my heart and soul cry aloud for a law that will permit a doctor to tell her openly what he has told the rich women in secret."

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

CLOVER'S REBELLION (Five Parts—May 21).—The cast: Clover Dean (Anita Stewart); Dr. Wm. Dunn (Rudolph Cameron); Duke Boris (Brinsley Shaw); Rita (Eulalie Jensen); John Childe (Charles Stevenson); Mrs. Childe (Julia Swayne Gordon); Peter Raine (H. Weaver); "Bucky" Raine (William Dunn). Directed by Wilfrid North.

Clover Dean, her parents dead, is living in the palatial home of her millionaire relatives, Mr. and Mrs. John Childe. Mrs. Childe married not for love, but for the wealth and social distinction that she knew it would bring her, for her husband is a powerful figure in the coal field. Mrs. Childe, who is always looking for new social glory, plans to marry Clover to Duke Boris, a personage of royal blood, but her husband, longing for greater power, sees his craving satisfied in the union of the girl to the profligate son of Peter Raine, the King of Transportation.

They had not figured, however, upon Doctor Billy Dunn, with few patients, but hopeful, happy with a nickel in his pocket so long as he can see Clover now and then. Billy furnishes a lot of comedy that is direct tragedy to him at the time, and he wins out in the end, though it would seem for the time being that Rita, the Duke's confederate, would cause no end of trouble for the young people. She tries to kill the Duke near the finish, and throws suspicion upon Billy, Clover and Bucky Raine, but later confesses. And Billy and Clover, who have been placed under arrest, are freed to go to the nearest minister.

WORLD PICTURES.

MATERNITY (5 Parts—May 28). The cast: Ellen Franklin (Alice Brady); Louis Randall (Marie Chambers); David Gordon (John Bowers); John Locke (David Powell); Henry Franklin (Herbert Barrington); Marion Franklin (Florence Crane); Dan Miller (Stanhope Wheatcroft); Joseph Randall (Charles Duncan); Jed (Louis Grisel); Amelia (Julia Stewart); Constance (Madge Evans); Family Physician (John Dugley).

For three generations the women from whom Ellen Franklin was lineally descended had brought their children into the world at the sacrifice of their own lives. At the birth of her second daughter, the mother dies, leaving Marion, the elder daughter and Ellen, the newborn babe, her own namesake.

Eighteen years later when Marion tells of her engagement to Dan Miller, Ellen and the old family physician are present. Noticing his grave look, Ellen asks the cause of it, and he tells of her mother's death and of the deaths of her female forebears. So into Ellen's mind was instilled a fear of the dangers of motherhood.

David Gordon, a portrait painter and Ellen's sweetheart, gains her consent to pose for a picture "Mother Love." When David asks Ellen to marry him, she, prompted by fear of motherhood, tells him she will never marry. Going abroad to complete his studies, David has fellow passengers in James Randolph, an importer; and Louise, his daughter.

Six months later Louise is married to Neil Rogers. On a visit to David's studio in Rome, they see the unfinished portrait of Ellen in "Mother Love," and David tells them he has never finished the picture because the model, whom he loved, rejected his proposal of marriage.

John Locke, a young physician, was rejected by Louise Randall before her departure abroad, and, disappointed in his hope of paternal joys, had become superintendent of an orphanage. Bringing toys to the children one Christmas, Ellen meets Dr. Locke, and attracted to each other they become friends. In time he asks her to marry him. Though at first she is almost mastered by fear, she finally consents to marry him.

On their second wedding anniversary, their gardner and his wife present Ellen with an old-fashioned wooden cradle, which in by-gone days had held their children. When Ellen communicates her fears to John, he comforts her, and gives her a book to read, written by himself, and treating on the subject of Motherhood.

Louise Rogers, now a widow, returns to America with her six year old daughter, Constance. Constance has a sprained wrist, and Louise takes her to Dr. Locke. This is a renewal of their acquaintance, and John realizes all he is missing when he romps and plays with Constance. The thought of the happiness that Marion is expecting with the arrival of her first born, almost makes Ellen envious, but when both Marion and her baby die, it only serves to increase Ellen's fear, and she decides never to be a mother.

John, growing more lonely each day, drifts away from Ellen, and becomes a frequent visitor at Louise's home. Ellen realizes that her husband has found interests outside of his home, but she cannot combat the fear which she knows is destroying her hope of happiness.

When "Mother Love" is completed, David brings it to Ellen, and cannot refrain from telling her that he still loves her. John enters and hears David's declaration of love. When he confronts David, the latter pleads with John to make it possible for Ellen to gain her happiness with him (David). John agrees to leave Ellen.

Constance steals out of the house, and picking up the card of John Locke, who is calling on her mother, is directed to the Locke home. Here Ellen entertains her, and while rocking the tired child to sleep, she herself dozes off. She has a dream, which comes to her as a revelation, and on awakening, she is filled with the love of little children.

While taking Constance home, both are injured in an auto collision. Taken to a hospital, Ellen is soon revived, but Constance is being operated on. At her home, Constance is missed by her mother. The hospital attendant phones Louise, saying that Constance is in the hospital. John and Louise set out for the institution.

Exhausted from long hours, the hospital engineer falls asleep, and the low water and the high pressure of steam cause an explosion. In a few seconds the building is a mass of falling walls and floors. Ellen, rushing to Constance's side, reaches her only to feel the floor drop out from under them, but she manages to drag the child to safety. John, arriving at the hospital, rushes into the fast crumbling building and brings Ellen and the child out, when they are taken into an ambulance. Later, John and Ellen are seen rocking the cradle in which is their baby.

ATONEMENT (Brady-International—Five Parts—May —). The cast: Manuella (Regina Badet); Count Rezzi (Albert Singer); Marco (Fred Gerard); Lionel (Burt Cummings).

Manuella, a dancer, is on tour in Italy with her musicians, Marco and Lionel. The latter is her pianist as well as her lover, who delights her with his original compositions of music for her dances. Marco is jealous of Lionel.

At a night fete Count Rezzi, a wealthy bachelor, becomes infatuated with Manuella, but she repulses him, reminding him that she told him in Florence that she could never be his. She agrees to dance at a party he is to give the next week. Lionel evinces his jealousy. He expresses a desire to be wealthy, that he might give Manuella jewels and gems which she delights. She assures him her love for him is greater than her love for gems.

Several days later Rezzi displays beautiful pearls. Marco watches Rezzi's manipulation of the hiding place where the gems are deposited. Rezzi again offers Manuella a life of ease and luxury and brings her an antique necklace, which, though it tempts her, does not permit her to forget her love for Lionel.

The night of Rezzi's party Manuella renders a wonderful dance, after which she goes with her host for a stroll. He attempts to kiss her, but she eludes him. Lionel asks where she had been. She does not tell him, fearing to arouse his jealousy. Marco, dimmed by his credit, takes to drink. During the party he steals two of the pearls, but is caught by the Count, who compels him to write his confession while he phones the police.

Knowing of Manuella's love for Lionel, Rezzi orders Marco to put the two pearls in Lionel's pocket. Manuella believes him guilty, as she recalls his desire to give her gems. Lionel believes Manuella guilty, recollecting her absence earlier in the evening. He decides to accept the blame in order to save her. Manuella goes to Rezzi in Lionel's behalf. He agrees to stop court proceedings if she will come to him (Rezzi). She refuses.

Marco gives way to drink. Summoned to the courts, he meets Rezzi. Manuella comes to see Lionel, and while embracing her he whispers: "You see what I am doing for you." Not comprehending, she staggers out of the office. That evening Manuella wonders what he meant. She goes to Marco. Harassed by remorse, he reveals the truth.

He informs her that Rezzi has the confession in his wallet which he always carries on his person. Manuella determines to free Lionel and avenge all the wrongs which Rezzi perpetrated. Attiring herself in her most beautiful gown, she goes to the Count's home. She tells him she had been a fool and that Lionel was in love with a Monte Carlo singer, for whom he had stolen the pearls.

While suffering Rezzi's embraces, Manuella secures the wallet and when he jumps up she covers him with her revolver. She sorts out Marco's confession and puts it into the bodice of her gown. Rezzi attempts to regain possession of the paper and in the struggle the revolver is fired, and mortally wounds him. His servant phones for the police, and when they arrive, Rezzi explains that he had shot himself accidentally, saying that Manuella had come to ask for justice, and asking that nobody be accused of his death. Manuella brings Marco's confession to the magistrate and Lionel is freed. A tender and loving reunion between the lovers ensues.

DOUGH-NUTS (Billy West Comedy). It was not Ethel's fault that she caused hostilities between all the men at Camebert's Bakery and Lunch Room. She simply had to flirt with men and every man she smiled at swore to have her as his own or die. When, however, Pierre, the excitable Italian baker tried to force Ethel to keep away from Babe, the sweet young cashier refused, and told Pierre many things not exactly complimentary. So when Billy happened to enter the bakery in search of a "hand out" he interrupted Pierre in the gentle game of choking Ethel. Billy hands Pierre a few swift jolts that result in the undoing of Pierre, much to the delight of Ethel and Camebert, the proprietor. After a few smiles from Ethel, Billy hires himself as a baker, thereby immediately incurring the hostility of Babe.

Billy attempts feats of bakery unheard of, and succeeeds in making the most wonderful designs in pies and crullers. Everything goes fine until Billy pushes the boob into the bake ovens, causing the boob's trousers to catch fire. Then in the attempt to quench the flames, Billy manages to drench the proprietor with a bucket of water. These little things help to put Billy in wrong with everybody but Ethel, who still smiles at him. The real trouble occurs when Babe discovers that Ethel has not only flirted with Billy but has actually kissed him. Babe allies himself on the side of Camebert and the Boob, and all three declare war on the hapless Billy. Billy succeeds in passing through the blockade and reaches the bakery intent only on "safety first." In the bakery, however, he finds escape cut off by Pierre and a pal who have returned to blow up the establishment. With the two forces closing down on him, Billy is powerless and only by use of judicious sprinting and good headwork did Billy finally manage to escape.

A HOLE IN THE GROUND (Selig—Two Parts—May 28). The cast: The Station Master (William Fables); The Stranger (James Harris); The Tramp (Frank Hamilton); The Lunch Girl (Amy Dennis); The Agent's Assistant (Tommy Flynn). Written by Charles Hoyt. Directed by J. A. Richmond.

The station agent at Twilight Sleep does his best to care for company property. When a stranger awaiting the train which is four hours late, endeavors to make himself feel at home, he incurs the enmity of the agent.

The lunch girl waits on the stranger, who finds himself unable to devour the food offered. A tramp appears and the stranger and the station agent endeavor to defeat the tramp at poker, but find the tramp too wise at the game.

Endeavoring to pass the time away, the stranger uses doughnuts to play a game of horseshoe, and when he encounters a series of misfortunes, he rigs up a "swear" room where he can vent his displeasure without disturbing the others.

The agent's assistant appears at the lunch counter and aids in the disappearance of the doughnuts and other food on sale there. The stranger finds a turkey, which is so tough that he is unable to eat it, and puts up a danger signal so that the others will not be tempted.

Finally when the stranger is in the basement of the depot changing his shirt, the train, detained by a hole in the ground, makes its appearance, and the stranger arrives in time to see the rear car disappearing around the curve.

drudge of her Aunt Sarah. Two of whose boarders, Henry Strang, a lawyer, and Joe Martinelli, a barber, fall in love with her, but she gives them no encouragement. The one friend in whom she confides is Pierre Dubois, an invalid. He teaches her French and fine manners, and gives her the book she cherishes most, called "The Duchess of Doubt." A paragraph in it says a country girl with gowns, jewels and a little adroitness could plunge into society and be mistaken for a Duchess, if she hid her identity long enough to let others invent one for her.

Life becomes unbearable, and Clover runs away and becomes a "Parisian" maid to a society woman. She takes note of the manners of the friends of her mistress. Pierre, dies and leaves her seven thousand dollars. Strang and Martinelli proposes. but she "squelches" them, and disappears.

Equipping herself with a French maid, a toy dog, and some pretty gowns, Clover goes to a fashionable resort. The hotel guests come to the conclusion that she is the Duchess of D'Auroncourt, who is traveling incognito. Mrs. Brentwood who angling for a wealthy husband for her daughter Helen, is attracted by Steve Gordon, a millionaire, and Walter Gray, but drops the latter when he announces that he is a ribbon-clerk. Clover, sympathizes with him and the two fall in love with each other.

Suddenly Helen changes her tactics, and pleads with Clover to give up Walter. Clover realizes her money is nearly gone, and decides not to stand in the way of his making a rich marriage.

While in Clover's apartment, Helen has noticed the book, "The Duchess of Doubt," and makes up her mind to unmask the "Duchess," and make doubly sure of Walter Gray, whom she has discovered to be a rich man. She succeeds in finding Aunt Sarah, Strang and Martinelli, and brings them to the hotel. When Clover, beautifully gowned, is the center of an admiring group at a great ball, Aunt Sarah confronts her and screams, "Clover Ames—now that your money's all spent, you come right back and go to work in my kitchen." In the excitement Clover escapes.

Her money gone, she looks for work and goes to the department store where Walter has confessed to working as a ribbon-clerk, to ask him to recommend her for a position and finds that his father owns the store. Young Gray declares his love and marries her without delay. It is only after her marriage that she discovers that ever if she is no longer a "Duchess," she has won love and wealth.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC.

SOUTHERN JUSTICE (5 Parts—May 28).—The cast: Carolyn Dillon (Myrtle Gonzalez); Judge Morgan (George Hernandez); Roger Appleby (Jack Curtis); Caleb Talbot (Jean Hersholt); Maj. Dillon (Charles H. Mailes); Ray Preston (Fred Church); Daws Anthony (Elwood Bredell); Wallace Turner (Maxfield Stanley); Uncle Zeke (George Marsh). Written and produced by Lynn F. Reynolds.

Talbot, the cobbler, and Judge Morgan are old cronies, in a Kentucky village, who assemble at the cobbler's shop for daily discussions of various topics. When the story begins Daws Anthony, whose father has just died, is being sold out of house and home far up in the Cumberland Mountains. Daws, at sixteen, takes his few books, his gun and his small belongings, and starts on foot to climb down to the valley below, bent upon gaining an education.

Carolyn Dillon, the village belle, is engaged to marry Wallace Turner, cashier of the local bank. They are motoring in the country when Turner's "flivver" loses a tire, just as it whizzes past Daws Anthony. The boy has never set eyes upon an automobile and his wonderment is something approaching awe.

Turner notices the foot-sore lad and invites him to ride into the village in the "carriage that broke away from the hosses." Carolyn takes the hungry lad to her home, feeds him, gives him shoes and stockings and Turner loans him a silver dollar for his start in life.

The next day, Daws encounters Appleby, the printer, to whom he explains his desire to work and secure an education. Appleby takes the boy to the cobbler's shop where the three old cronies declare their mission in life shall be to see that Daws gets an education. Appleby makes him a "printer's devil" in his newspaper office, and Daws attends the village school.

About this time Ray Preston, an adventurer, arrives for the purpose of putting a little life in the old place through the inspiration of a real estate boom. From Judge Morgan he buys a large tract of swamp land, announcing his purpose to drain the property and convert it into town lots. When the surveyors find traces of crude oil, there is great excitement. Samples sent to Frankfort for testings are returned with the statement that oil in high proportions is indicated.

Preston has ingratiated himself with the townsfolk, through making many real estate purchases, and by his smooth manner has attracted Carolyn Dillon's attention. When Wallace Turner objects to Preston's devotion to Carolyn, the girl resents the interference and breaks off the engagement.

Daws Anthony, who is now Preston's office boy, has his own suspicions. Taking Judge Morgan's negro man-servant with him, Daws searches the swamp and discovers charred pieces of barrel staves, iron hoops and other indications that the "oil" in the swamp has been "planted." This discovery is made the day Preston has consented to sell the villagers a half interest in the "oil land." Judge Morgan is made custodian of the funds, and the villagers heap their savings into the pool.

Daws Anthony becomes the hero of the hour when he exposes Preston's scheme. Judge Morgan demands that Preston return the money with which he is about to decamp from town, and when the Judge from the windows shows Preston a "tar and feather" party, that is being formed for the benefit of the real estate operator, Preston consents. The happy ending is quickly attained when Wallace Turner and Carolyn Dillon find themselves once more at an understanding.

FORUM FILMS, INC.

CONQUEST PROGRAM NO. 4 (Edison).—Week of May 21. Story of Plymouth Rock (Historical Drama, 1,071 ft.) Crystals and Their Beauties (Scientific, 412 ft.). Skylarking on Skis (Scenic—Sports, 574 ft.). Former Alfalfa's Wayward Pup (Manikin Comedy, 639 ft.). Making of 100-Ton Guns (Industrial, 513 ft.).

THE BOY WHO CRIED WOLF (2,100 ft.).—The cast: Jimmy, the Boy Scout (Albert Hackett); Sheriff (Billy Bowers); Mr. McCoy (Dejalmo West); Squire Harry Van Vorst (Jack Meredith); Clavering Gould (S. V. Phillips). Adapted from Richard Harding Davis's story by Clement D'Art and produced by E. H. Griffith.

Jimmy, a Boy Scout, is eager to do something for his country. He attends a Scout gathering addressed by Clavering Gould, a war correspondent, who winds up his address by stating that "right here in Westchester there are German spies working in our midst." His warning is deprecated by Squire Harry Van Vorst, who has arranged the lecture for the Boy Scouts, but Jimmy has his imagination fired still more. His yearning for adventure is increased, and he starts to track the spies whom he believes to be working in that vicinity. He follows every suspicious character. He runs across a harmless naturalist on a jaunt in search of rare fossils, and makes him explain his mysterious actions. He quizzes every stranger, and gets into a good deal of trouble.

Finally he locates a stranger making a drawing of the topography of the country on a large military map, and forces him, at the point of a rifle, to march to headquarters, but Van Vorst, who is Jimmy's friend, but, nevertheless, believes the boy's excess patriotism is making him appear ridiculous, affects to "take charge" of the "captive," to mollify Jimmy. The stranger presents a card showing that he is Captain McCoy, of the U. S. Army Engineer Corps. It is a preparedness measure, he explains. He is mapping out gun sites for heavy artillery with which to repulse the attacks of any German troops in case of an attempted invasion. He is working in civilian clothes for obvious reasons. As there had yet been no declaration of war, any publicity concerning the preparations would have to be avoided. He is allowed to depart. Jimmy later captures the stranger again.

Meanwhile, Van Vorst has been notified that the stranger is really a German spy. The boy Scout forces "Captain McCoy" to turn his high-powered motor car about, and return to the scene of his original capture. The spy is taken into custody by Federal authorities and Jimmy is lauded as a hero.

SILVERTIP

"A Cure for Flicker"

There's a Reason for Exhibitors' Choice of This New Carbon

The growth of our Silvertip business is a true measure of the view the exhibitors themselves take concerning this new negative projector carbon.

A very short time after the introduction of this carbon, it was apparent that it was becoming the standard negative carbon in the projection field. When asked the reason for their ready acceptance of Silvertips, the exhibitors were unanimous in declaring that it gave the most happy combination of steady arc and high current capacity they had seen. Such an endorsement from the consumers themselves proves that Silvertip is indeed here to stay as the standard negative projector carbon.

American Master Organ Co.
Lake View, Paterson, N. J.

Gentlemen:

Since the installation of your American Master Organ I have successfully raised my price of admission and am now altering my theatre to double its seating capacity—this in spite of such competition as Proctor's Palace Theatre offering six acts of vaudeville, feature pictures and orchestra, and another house below me with a $10,000 organ.

Recently the manufacturer of a competitive organ met me in the lobby and after listening to the music, remarked: "I hear you've got an orchestra."

Your instrument has won unanimous approval, it gets the business—holds the business and has proven entirely reliable and satisfactory.

Yours In Appreciation,
HUBERT J. COLES,
Manager.

"NEWMAN" BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

DO YOU KNOW?

that 90% of all the brass frames used in the moving picture houses throughout the country are "NEWMAN'S"?

WHY?

Because we steadily have refused to cheapen or lower the quality of our goods, even though others have sought to undermine our prestige by underselling with cheapened products. That is one of the reasons why nine out of every ten frames sold bear the name "NEWMAN." Insist on that name and save money.

BEN WILSON CAUSES RIOT IN NEW YORK

Popular Star of "Voice on the Wire" Serial Appears in Person at Many Theatres and Receives Ovation.

NEW YORK.—A near riot was caused in the vicinity of a number of the Marcus Loew circuit theatres in Greater New York early in the week which must have been gratifying to the innocent cause. The occasion was the personal appearance of the popular Universal star, Ben Wilson, who greeted the fans at the conclusion of an episode of "The Voice on the Wire" in which he plays the lead. Owing to delayed trains Mr. Wilson had no time to rest after the tedious journey from the Universal Studios at Universal City, Cal., but was hurried to New York Theatre at 45th and Broadway to greet an immense throng whose interest in the current episode of the popular mystery serial was heightened only by his presence. Later the American, another downtown Loew house, was visited, and from there the round of the Loew circuit was begun. A continuous ovation greeted the popular player who promptly forgot the fatigues of his long journey in the evident sincerity of the warm greetings extended to him.

Ben Wilson, Star of "Voice on the Wire"

The entire circuit of Loew theatres covered, Mr. Wilson began a round of visits to the hundreds of theatres now showing "The Voice on the Wire" in the territory near New York City. With this Eastern section behind him he will begin an itinerary which includes all the principal cities of the United States, the route being now in preparation. Rarely have cold New York audiences risen to an occasion in the manner which marked Mr. Wilson's appearance. The combination of the most popular serial ever filmed and the presence of its leading character proved an irresistible attraction, and augurs well for the reception of this brilliant player in other cities on his proposed route.

SAVED THE SHOW

Universal Screen Magazine Sends Fans Home Happy in Spite of Poor Feature.

LOS ANGELES, CAL. (Special Correspondence).—The Los Angeles "Tribune" of a recent date said: "No doubt the patrons of the Superba Theatre are delighted that the last spasm of (mentioning a widely advertised serial—not Universal) has been gone through and they don't have to figure on coming late or leaving early to avoid it. That defunct serial engendered a spirit of preparedness, but it was not of the type that the authors intended. In its place the theatre now shows 'The Universal Screen Magazine,' a most interesting film of educational type. It covers a wide range of subjects and is very entertaining."

Intensive Training for Women Universal Screen Magazine.

To your correspondent this criticism and the added commendation is a hopeful sign. Reputable newspapers are more and more declining to serve as a publicity catspaw to pull a weak picture out of the fire of public disapproval. That the praise of The Universal Screen Magazine is deserved is evidenced by the unusual crowds that greet its weekly appearance. This theatre, the Superba, is also showing the Universal Animated Weekly.

BOOST BOND SALE

Popular Universal Animated Weekly Gives Impetus to Sale of "Liberty Loan" Bonds.

NEW YORK.—The Universal Animated Weekly's latest big movement was launched in the current issue and involves a widespread co-operation with the U. S. Treasury Department in the floating of the "Liberty Loan" Bonds. To this end there have already been shown Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo presenting the first check for $200,000,000 to Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British Ambassador, and other intimate views of interesting details connected with the raising and application of the money secured through the Liberty Loan. Information regarding the progress of the bond flotation, together with inspiring cartoons by Hy. Mayer, one of which is shown here, are also included in this big "Animated Drive." Criticism that the details of this movement are too little known throughout the country will be met by this progressive and patriotic co-operation of the Universal Animated Weekly.

FRANEY FANS

Popular Joker Comedian Acquiring Tremendous Following Throughout the Country.

PHILADELPHIA—(By a Staff Correspondent).—Frenzied fans foregather when Franey's funny films appear. That's the very latest screen news from this town which is rapidly losing its reputation for slowness thru its appreciation of these superb Joker Comedies, its record breaking enlistments in the Army and Navy, and its subscriptions to the "Liberty Loan." Local Exhibitors say that never in the history of films has any single player leaped into universal popularity in the short time it has taken for William Franey's name to become a household word. Every Joker since Bill Franey began showing that a fall can be funny, and that there is more humor in his spontaneous freshness than there is in a tremendous reputation, has added to the list of bookings. And the fans and Exhibitors are as much to be congratulated as is the Universal who produce the Joker among other brands of comedies. Franey is the most original comedian that ever concealed a regular set of features beneath a ludicrous make-up. Exhibitors are eagerly awaiting Bill's latest triumph, "The Cross-Eyed Submarine," the much heralded burlesque of the famous "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." The Philadelphia Universal Exchange reports a large advance booking, which is another proof of Franey's pulling power.

Wm. Franey and His Comedy in a Joker Comedy.

SONG HITS IN PHOTOPLAY A HIT ON THE SCREEN

NEW YORK.—The general manager of exchanges in the Universal Offices reports that "Song Hits in Photoplay" is the first split-reel that has ever jumped into the popularity of a long feature. Exhibitors report, too, that the fans "eat it up." They are crazy to see a moving picture of their favorite song. All Universal Exchanges report big bookings.

Playing to Capacity

Big Business Comes Through the Mighty Unrivalled Universal Program—Compete List of Releases Given Below.

NEW YORK.—A good feature is a fine business proposition in its place—but your patrons don't want all features any more than they want fish at every meal. Variety is the spice of life, and it applies to picture-enjoyment too. Isn't that so? THEN WHY DON'T YOU GIVE A VARIETY PROGRAM TO YOUR PATRONS? Variety is the first, last and middle name of the UNIVERSAL Program. It's the kind of program the people like because they can slide into a seat any time convenient to them, and know they won't leap into the middle or the tail-end of a feature. Get the point? Then, ACT!

SPECIALS

On the Universal Program Week of June 18

BUTTERFLY—"THE FIRE OF YOUTH" (Five-Reel Comedy-Drama)—Jack Mulhall and Dona Moon.

GOLD SEAL—"THE BRAND OF HATE" (Three-Reel Melodrama)—Tina Marshall.

LAEMMLE—"BARTERED YOUTH" (One-Reel Drama)—Wm. Mong and Gretchen Lederer.

L-KO—"WHERE IS MY CHE-ILD" (Two-Reel Comedy)—Dan Russell and Gladys Varden.

UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY—No. 77.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE—No. 24.

JOKER—"A BURGLAR'S BRIDE" (One-Reel Comedy)—Gale Henry and Jack Dill.

POWERS—"YOUNG NICK CARTER, DETECTIVE" (Comic Cartoon) and "CHINA'S WONDERLAND" (Dorsey Educational)—Split Reel.

Here are specials that are all cream. They cost a slight advance, just as cream costs more than milk. And they are worth the little extra because they are the money magnets that make the nimble coins change from the crowds' pockets to your cash-box. They can be booked separately if desired.

REGULARS

On the Universal Program Week of June 18

NESTOR—"JILTED IN JAIL" (One-Reel Comedy)—Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.

VICTOR—"A PIRATE BOLD" (One-Reel Comedy)—Pat Rooney.

VICTOR—"PUPPY LOVE" (One-Reel Comedy)—Ruth Stonehouse.

REX—"HELEN GRAYSON'S STRATEGY" (Two-Reel Society Drama)—Irene Hunt, Malcolm Blevins and L. C. Shumway.

VICTOR—"SHE MARRIED HER HUSBAND" (Two-Reel Comedy-Drama)—Matt Moore and Jane Gail.

BISON—"LONE LARRY" (Two-Reel Cowboy Drama)—Eileen Sedgwick and Kingsley Benedict.

BIG U—"THE TWO GUN PARSON" (One-Reel Drama).

When you book the complete Universal Program you get two kinds of punches for your show—the "specials" and the "regulars." These regular one—two and three reel dramatic and comedy subjects are brilliant and powerful, and don't make the mistake of thinking otherwise. They can be booked separately if desired.

A Pictorial Record of the World's Events That Are Making History

On May 14th, "UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS" made its first appearance and TWENTY-EIGHT LEADING NEW YORK THEATRES BOOKED IT FOR OPENING NIGHT. Think of it, almost all of the big houses on Broadway, from 42nd to 110th street, showed it on the first run for two days—while the Rialto Theatre played it a solid week. CURRENT EVENTS is released every week.

Scores of Exhibitors have written, wired and telephoned in for UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS—the Poli Circuit in New England, has taken it for all its houses. Fans hail it as the most novel, unique, and the cleverest release that has been flashed before them.

The UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS brings before the eyes of the people events that will make history. Instead of waiting for weeks and months to read about it, the actual event itself just as it happened, is shown. Book CURRENT EVENTS now—while your territory is open. Remember, it has no connection with Universal Animated Weekly or the Universal Screen Magazine. Book CURRENT EVENTS through any Universal Exchange or UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS, 1600 Broadway, New York.

Goldwyn Pictures

All Big Successes Are Created by Brains

GOLDWYN made sure of its success in advance by uniting the ablest literary and technical brains in America in the creation of Goldwyn Pictures.

No exhibitor doubts what Goldwyn Pictures will be, for you are sure that men and women who have operated without failures in the past are constantly improving their abilities. Such people never stand still.

All associated with Goldwyn are successes. All have made fortunes for themselves and for others.

There would be little room for merely another picture company. But there is always room for exceptional artists and business pioneers determined to do some particular thing better than it has ever been done before.

That exhibitors in every section of the country realize this even before we have said it about ourselves is evidenced by a flood of applications for Goldwyn's quality productions.

Goldwyn Pictures

A Tiffany Product With A Ford Distribution

IN the world of commerce Tiffany means the utmost extreme of quality in gems and precious metals. This great name guarantees the limit of superiority.

The name of Ford attaches to the greatest mercantile distribution in all the world of trade.

Goldwyn, in motion picture production, joins into one organization and behind Goldwyn Pictures the idea that underlies these two great institutions combined.

Goldwyn Pictures will play everywhere —in large houses, in medium houses and small houses—and at a rental that will permit the exhibitor to show them at a profit to himself.

SELZNICK PICTURES

THE DOOR IS OPEN

To get the best results possible from SELZNICK-PICTURES I organized a perfect system of distribution.

I have decided to throw open this system to all independent producers who make high class photoplays.

If you published a magazine, you wouldn't peddle it yourself. You would turn it over to the American News Co., which reaches every important news stand.

In the picture industry I occupy the same position as the American News Co. does in the publishing business. I have the most direct and efficient means of bringing producer and exhibitor together.

If YOU have made a picture good enough to stand up under the severest criticism, bring it to me, and I will give it the same attention that has made SELZNICK-PICTURES stand for SUCCESS

MUTUAL NEWS

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS EXCHANGES

JUNE 9, 1917

MUTUAL WILL OFFER "HEROIC FRANCE" AS A SPECIAL FEATURE

"HEROIC FRANCE," the super-sensational eight reel production showing our allies at war, will be released through the Exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation at an early date. This powerful war subject was taken with the sanction and approval of the French government. It pictures war as it really is.

Taken on the French Front.

Every scene in "Heroic France" was taken on the French front. Some scenes were made in the front line trenches. Close-up views of famous statesmen, generals, heroes of the war, are shown throughout the picture. It shows the relief work in the base hospitals. It illustrates the aviation service—the eyes of the army. It pictures the heavy artillery in action. It depicts any number of actual attacks upon the enemy. It shows the prisoners coming in while the battle still rages. It shows more of actual war than one could see for himself if he were actually in the fighting lines. Exhibitors can obtain some idea of its drawing power when it is said that this is the same picture which ran for six solid weeks at advanced admission prices at the Bandbox Theatre in Chicago, and for another two weeks at the Strand Theatre in the same city. During the Strand showing some of the best known women in Chicago's society world acted as patronesses. Among them may be mentioned such notables as Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. David R. Forgan, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Arthur L. Farwell, Mrs. Harry Pratt Judson, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Jr., Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. James W. Thorne, and a host of others equally well known.

Photographed by Merl La Voy.

The picture was made by Merl La Voy under the auspices of the American Relief Clearing House of Paris. The camera was under the hottest kind of fire during the taking of many of the scenes. Bookings on "Heroic France" can be made now at Mutual Exchanges everywhere. Make your reservation now.

Date of Next Chaplin Film Soon Available

The eleventh Mutual-Chaplin Special is nearing completion and its release date will shortly be announced. Quality has ever been a predominant feature of these productions and will be still more noticeable in the forthcoming releases.

MARJORIE RAMBEAU COMPLETES FIFTH MUTUAL PRODUCTION

Marjorie Rambeau, famous heroine of "Cheating Cheaters" and today acknowledged one of filmland's most beautiful stars, has just completed her fifth Mutual Picture. Frank Powell directed it, and Miss Rambeau enacts a role similar to several of those which have been her's in notable speaking stage productions. Her newest picture will be "The Dazzling Miss Davison," it being an adaptation from Florence Warden's widely read mystery story of that name. As in previous Powell productions, photography and stage settings will be particularly notable. An all-star cast—even down to the minor "bits"—will aid Miss Rambeau in the enactment of "The Dazzling Miss Davison." Prominent among them will be Robert Elliott and Aubrey Beattie, both of whom have appeared as principals in previous Rambeau-Mutual Pictures; Winifred Harris, Agnes Eyre, Frank Ford, Aline Bartlett, Lillian Paige, Fraser Tarbutt and George Paige. The Mutual Pictures, starring Miss Rambeau, already released, include "The Greater Woman," "Motherhood," "The Debt" and "The Mirror."

In addition to the four attractive fifteen-chapter photo-novels now booking at Mutual Exchanges, exhibitors will find the two Gaumont chapterplays, "The Vampires" and "Fantomas," excellent drawing cards. Both are stories of a mystery-detective sort. Both are crammed with thrills and surprises, keeping an audience ever on edge for what is to happen next. Probably no type of story has a wider appeal. Big box-office possibilities lie in such offerings. Book now!

WILLIAM RUSSELL HAS STRONG ROLE IN "SHACKLES OF TRUTH"

Wm. Russell

IT WOULD be hard to name a stronger role than that which has been assigned William Russell in "Shackles of Truth," his newest Mutual Picture. He plays the part of a young attorney whose father, lately dead, is loved and reverenced by all who knew him. This love of his father has become almost a fetish to the young attorney, for since childhood his mother has held up the father as an example to the son, and time and again expressed the wish that he might become as honest and upright. And then one day comes the crash. A story is related to the young attorney which shows that his father had deeply wronged the woman who now relates her tale. For a time the young attorney can scarcely believe his ears. Irrefutable proof is offered, however, and he is eventually compelled to believe that his father was anything but what he had imagined him. Struggle as he will against believing, he is firmly held in the shackles of the real truth which has been so unexpectedly revealed to him. And then he makes the supreme sacrifice. Fate steps in and unravels the tangled web. And so a happy ending is achieved.

Released Week of June 4th.

"Shackles of Truth" will be released as the Mutual—"Big Stars Only"—Picture of June 4th. It was made at the American Film Company's studios in Santa Barbara, California, under the direction of Edward Sloman. Julius Grinnell Furthmann wrote it. Exhibitors can book it now by applying to their nearest Mutual Exchange.

Juliette Day, who has just closed an engagement in "Upstairs and Down" to become an American-Mutual star, has arrived at Santa Barbara, California, and begun work on "Betty and the Buccaneers," the vehicle chosen for her debut as a Mutual Star.

CAPACITY PLAN

ONE of the greatest weaknesses in the moving picture industry is waste of exhibiting possibilities. The average print may lie on the shelf 70 per cent of its life when it should be earning money. NEW SURATT PICTURE REAL FASHION SHOW

"Empress of Fashion" Displays Ultra-Modern Costumes in "The Slave," a Strong Photoplay of To-day.

Again the ever-dashing Valeska Suratt proves her pre-eminent right to the title of "The Empress of Fashion," by her startling and bizarre costumes in "The Slave," her newest William Fox feature.

Miss Suratt displays gowns which surpass for cost and number even the record she established in "The New York Peacock." Miss Suratt impersonates a forelady in a Fifth Avenue shop who accepts the marriage proposal of "Old Moneybags" despite a warning dream vividly portraying her life as an old man's darling.

Dustin Farnum Busy

With petite Winifred Kingston as leading lady, Dustin Farnum, William Fox's West Coast star, is now engaged in the picturization of a famous novel of stirring action.

Miriam Cooper, of "Honor System" fame, will be featured in a new R. A. Walsh drama now in work, to be released on the Fox programme under title of "The Innocent Sinner."

LONDON ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT "A DAUGHTER OF THE GODS"

Newspapers Laud Enchantment of $1,000,000 Film.

"A Daughter of the Gods" is proving the sensation of current London theatrical attractions, and is playing to overflow audiences. Newspaper reviews of the Fox million-dollar spectacle, with Annette Kellermann, were as enthusiastic as the trade magazines about the film's marvelous enchantment.

ELABORATE "SETS" ERECTED FOR FOX KIDDIE FEATURE

Even Vast Fox "Lot" in Hollywood Was Inadequate.

The leading players are the only thing on a small scale in connection with the Fox Kiddie features, William Fox wishes to make clear. One of the great pictures for this brand was completed recently in California, and the settings were so elaborate and so vast that even the enormous Fox "lot" at Hollywood, Cal., was entirely inadequate. Few photoplays ever made can boast of more massive and artistic "sets."

Pretty Miss Petit

If the person who invented the phrase "as pretty as a picture" had ever seen Wanda Petit, playing opposite Stuart Holmes in "The Broadway Sport," he would have found room for Miss Petit somewhere in the simile.

PERFUME AIDS BARA'S ROLE

She Uses Special Psychic Concoction for Cleopatra.

The perfume Theda Bara uses in aiding her portrayal of Cleopatra, in William Fox's coming release, was made for her by Anne Haviland, famous psychic perfumist, from a 2,000-year-old formula. The fragrance is so strong that it would not be strange if it were detected on the screen.

COOL, VILLAINOUS HOLMES IN NOVEL CHARACTER PART

Hardly Recognizable in Early Reels of "Broadway Sport."

Even veteran exhibitors of William Fox productions will find extreme difficulty in identifying the cool, debonair Stuart Holmes, villain supreme, as the "small town gawk" in "The Broadway Sport," soon to be released.

As the stoop-shouldered, be-spectacled bookkeeping "grind" in the early part of this novel picture, Holmes presents an unusual study in make-up and expression.

THE AGILE GEORGE WALSH

If "porch-climbers" were as agile as George Walsh in "Some Boy!", people would have to protect their homes with machine guns. George defies the laws of dignity, gravity, and everything else in some hair-trigger exploits.

"THE HONOR SYSTEM" PLAYS TO UNPRECEDENTED CROWDS

"The Honor System," William Fox's cinemelodrama of a thousand thrills, continues to play to audiences of unprecedented size wherever shown. Theatre owners proclaim it not only the greatest human story ever told, but the greatest box office attraction ever made, particularly for one and two week runs.

FOX LAVISH ON LAUGHS

Spending Thousands of Dollars On New Foxfilm Comedy.

William Fox is spending thousands of dollars in the erection of "sets" to be destroyed ruthlessly so that the audiences who see Hank Mann's next Foxfilm comedy may laugh. Each laugh will cost Mr. Fox several hundred dollars.

Statisticians estimate, therefore, that the price of a single smile will be approximately $48.98.

Mr. Mann's forthcoming hilarity film will be released as "Suds of Love." It's one long roar!

JEWEL CARMEN'S CANDY

Here's a puzzle: Jewel Carmen, the "opposite" in "When A Man Sees Red," William Farnum's super picture, says she likes "soulful candy." Can anyone accommodate Miss Carmen?

CAPRICE'S RADIANCE WINS PICTUREGOERS

She's "First in Hearts" of a Million "Fans."

No player upon the silent stage has won moving picture fans with such unanimity and in such a short time, as winsome June Caprice, the sparkling little William Fox star.

Miss Caprice's thoroughly natural screen art, her daintiness, and the sunshine she always seems to radiate, have put her "first in the hearts" of a million "fans." Her last film was "A Small Town Girl." She is now completing another fine production.

PEARSON DRAMA COMING

Virginia Pearson's forthcoming William Fox feature, "Wrath of Love," should prove an unusually strong box office attraction because the plot relates closely to the international conflict. The story is one which is "different," and is of tremendous interest.

William Farnum Begins.

William Farnum, the distinguished Fox player, begins work at the Fort Lee, N. J., studios this week on his first production in the East since 1915.

"Aside from the drawing power of the star, the play itself is of exceptional interest and will do much toward upholding the high standard set by Thanhouser productions during the past six months."

—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"VICAR OF WAKEFIELD" (Pathé Super-Film)—(Special Release)—
"This subject, in which Frederick Warde was featured at the Rialto, preserves all the qualities which characterize Oliver Goldsmith's classic novel." —Moving Picture World.

"WHEN LOVE WAS BLIND"—"The characters portrayed will arouse sympathetic interest, while the fine continuity will please. What little of the 'Sex problem' there is in the story has been handled with great delicacy." —Sunday Telegraph.

"POTS-AND-PANS PEGGY"—"Another very entertaining Thanhouser picture. It is a grateful relief to view a picture that avoids the sordid side of modern life." —Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"HER BELOVED ENEMY"—"A mystery story from a little different angle, that may be added to Thanhouser's ever-growing list of unconventional screen stories." —Sunday Telegraph.

"Welcome, Wholesome Films"

From Exhibitors Herald, May 12, 1917

Volume IV MAY 12, 1917 Number 20

Welcome, "Wholesome Films"

THERE has been born into the motion picture world a company committed to the policy of publishing pictures that are scrupulously clean in theme and in presentation.

It is the Wholesome Film Corporation and its plans contemplate interest only in such productions as will be thoroughly consistent with the name of the company—wholesome productions.

The birth of this company can justly be acclaimed a great step forward in promoting the best interest of this business as the purveyor of wholesome, inspiring and educational entertainment for the masses.

The logical future of the motion picture is not to be the purveyor of erudite plays for the sophisticated few, nor morbid dramas for the lovers of sensationalism, but to be the purveyor or the clean, wholesome picture to that vast army of amusement-seekers whose own lives are tempered to the dictates of decency and who will not tolerate moral filth in whatever form it may be presented.

The "Exhibitors Herald" has frequently pronounced its conviction that the risque picture is commercial suicide and that the best interests of the business are entirely away from that type of picture and toward the goal of the wholesome film, depending for success not upon cheap sensationalism or the delinquency of society's unfortunate few but upon the ability of its author, the art of its players and the judgment and capability of its director.

Hence, we welcome the Wholesome Film Corporation as a great, potential force for the advancement of the high ideals of this art-industry.

This clean cut, unqualified endorsement, coming from Exhibitors Herald, proves Wholesome Films have met the crying need in the business of motion pictures.

Wholesome Films mean greatly increased box office receipts. Prepare now for the Wholesome landslide.

Bringing Broadway to You

Our plan of SERVICE, the connecting link of co-operation between manufacturer, exchangemen and exhibitors, is actively begun.

Our Mr. Jesse J. Goldburg is en tour of the country, bringing this service to you.

He brings to you the value of years of careful study of conditions and methods of exploitation, such as have been successfully adopted in the exhibition of previous FROHMAN productions; the results of months of combined study by our entire staff compiled from methods proved successful.

He is BRINGING BROADWAY TO YOU—Broadway, with all its world-famed night life—the cabaret—the elite underworld—a reproduction of its millions of electric light bulbs—Broadway, the greatest show place of the world.

Broadway, embodied accurately in the master photoplay production "GOD'S MAN," in which the eminent screen artist, H. B. WARNER, is the star.

Mr. Goldburg will stop at all exchange centres, to discuss plans with those live exchangemen already listed as purchasers of "GOD'S MAN," and to complete negotiations with the great number who have applied for territorial rights privileges for this production.

His itinerary is as follows:

Philadelphia	May 26th	Wichita	June 21st
Pittsburgh	" 28th	Denver	" 24th
Cleveland	" 30th	Seattle	" 28th
Detroit	June 2nd	Portland	" 30th

NEW YORK THEATRES ABLAZE WITH LIGHTS ON "THE TRUFFLERS"

"'The Trufflers,' Samuel Merwin's beautiful story of Bohemian life in the city's Latin quarter, published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, attracted great crowds at theatres throughout the city," says the New York American. "It was a wonderful success at its premier in the great chain of B. S. Moss playhouses. Nell Craig imparts a reality to the photoplay that will live long."

The Motion Picture Reporting Service says: "'The Saint's Adventure' is a drama of human interest, featuring Henry B. Walthall and Mary Charleson. Typical Walthall production, very well acted and story very well told. It will hold interest all through and go over good. Photography and settings good. Rated 90."

"'Skinner's Bubble,' a comedy-drama featuring Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly. Equally as good as 'Skinner's Dress Suit.' CLEAN, WHOLESOME, ABSORBING and very PLEASING all through. Good plot. Will go over good with any audience. Acting, photography and settings very good. Rated 95."

Mr. EXHIBITOR!

HERE is a release that will get the money for you! It is a two reel feature entitled "Uncle Sam, Afloat and Ashore."

Within a short time, thousands of our young men will be called to the colors. A great majority of them have no conception as to what service in the United States Army or Navy means. Much less do their parents know.

"Uncle Sam, Afloat and Ashore" presents all the activities of the Army and Navy. Sailors and Marines are shown at work and at play. The fleet, a portion of which is now on the firing line in European waters, is shown in battle formation. How the big naval guns are operated is also shown.

General Pershing is going to France. "Uncle Sam, Afloat and Ashore" pictures Pershing and his Staff. It shows the National Guardsmen and the Regulars on hikes, at drill, in the pursuit of Villa.

This film production is not only timely but aids the cause of Preparedness, gives parents an idea of what their sons will be called upon to do, in fact, is a picture teeming with Patriotism and Vital Interest.

In response to repeated demand, those eminent gloom eradicators, those favorite joy makers, JOHNNY and EMMA RAY, will have their debut for a career of greater merriment in the films, June 11, in

"Coughing Higgins"

Yes, Ladies and Gentlemen and People, you have long roared with mirth at this noted team in its successes on the speaking stage. (Cries of "That's right!") You have seen the Rays from ocean to ocean, and again and again, and liked them. All of you remember the charming Emma standing six feet in her 200 pounds of queenly magnificence. (Applause). You remember Johnny, the good-humored little king of farce-comedy, with the funny face. (Applause and laughter.) And now they are going to radiate upon you the glad sunshine of their art from the screen! (Prolonged cheering.)

Facts and Comments

WE were under the impression that State Branches and Locals of exhibitors had decided to eliminate local expositions with their useless expense to manufacturers for floor space, program advertising, etc. This was an agreement reached last year for the benefit of the good name of the industry, but some State Branches evidently already have forgotten. Exhibitors' conventions do not need these expositions with their suggestion of graft and should be able to finance their expenditures without this excuse for raising funds. In fact, we believe the majority of exhibitors would much prefer to pay their own expenses in getting together to transact their own business. "Nuf Sed."

THE question of increasing costs is becoming more and more acute throughout the whole country and is likely to be worse before peace is restored to the world. Just how the exhibitor is to meet this and still remain in business is a question requiring the most careful consideration. Possibly one suggestion may be in order, namely, the reducing of long programs. No matter what the price of admission, a show of more than two hours duration is out of place and tends to surfeit the audience, while a shorter program of two hours or less generally leaves them unsatisfied as to quantity and keen to come back soon for more. Reduce the number of reels and cost of program and increase the number of times your patrons will visit your theater would seem to be steps in the right direction.

"IF you do a little missionary work among the producers and have them eliminate all questionable and undesirable films, censorship would soon be ancient history," writes the "Exhibition Censor," of a nearby town. Just so, but if the gentleman has given some consideration to the question, he surely has realized the impossibility of pleasing everybody, and therein lies the whole trouble. The censor boards in one place condemn what the censors elsewhere pass without question and vice versa. It is just as impossible to get unanimity of opinion on this question as it is on any other. One of our greatest objections to censorship is that it is the desire or attempt of one or two people to determine by their individual standard what is right and best for all of us.

WE do not believe that the hearing at Washington on the proposed war tax legislation was at all representative of the industry, especially of the smaller exhibitors. There was no adequate discussion or consideration of the question even by the people in the industry and the briefs submitted were the results of hurried and snap judgment. In this connection we call attention to the letter in this issue of General Manager Berst of the Pathe Company, and believe the men at the heads of our producers and exhibitors' organizations should not waste a moment in getting together on this question of life or death to the industry.

THE steady and quite substantial decrease in the number of picture theaters throughout the country gives cause for the very keenest consideration. What is the connection between this and the increased prices of admission? Are we fooling ourselves about higher quality of programs justifying an increase of 100% in former prices or thinking that the popularity of some star will make the public willing to pay five times the price of admission charged a year ago? The proprietors of the five and ten-cent stores are not trying to kill their business by saying that they would do just as much business if their prices were fifteen and twenty cents. Are we killing the goose that laid the golden eggs and the foundation of all the prosperity enjoyed by the industry the past ten years? Then again the large theater may do big transient business on the principal street, but will it get the patrons that formerly frequented their own comfortable little neighborhood theater? We think not.

Soul Portraiture

By Louis Reeves Harrison

WE ARE supposed to be living our lives
In accord with the mood of our age.
And some of us are actually doing it,
Those of us who enjoy the privilege
Of following our own inclinations,
But most of us go tramping along
In a state of perpetual anxiety
About the soaring price of necessities
With an eye of doubt of the landlord—
How long will that gentleman stand for it?
There is nothing particularly soulful
About that kind of existence.
Still, we have our spiritual moments,
When we long to know how the others
Take their full measure of trouble
And get away with it so nicely.
We feel there are plays all around us
In the house next door, at the office,
Among those who smile while passing,
Among those whose tears are hidden.
Everywhere are those dramas
On which the curtain never rises.
So we search for some expression
Of soul beauty and soul problems
Throwing light on our own pathways.
Stirring our sense of justice,
Or giving us vent to feeling,
Or quickening our best aspirations
Are stories of true soul portraiture.
The screen has had plenty of action
Of trains and horses and humans—
The villain still chases the maiden—
Hence came the name "motion pictures."
None doubts the value of movement.
It is the one thing painfully lacking
In the perfection of painting and sculpture.
But movement alone is mechanical.
It ceases to have great significance
When robbed of incentive and motive.
Action is but one of the expedients
Of an art through which is projected
The dramas of human experience,
As revealed through soul portraiture.
Every day when we come in contact
With others in society and business
We acquire outside recognition
Of so-called friends and acquaintances.
We judge one by an act of kindness,
Another an injustice done us,
But our estimate is never impersonal.
Each character is weighed by self-interest.
We are thus cut off from humankind.
The only real soul we appreciate
Is the one which resplendent egotism
Makes us think is the best of all
Even that self is unknown to us.
Have you ever by purest accident
Come upon a large mirror suddenly
And started back in amazement
At the reflection of a total stranger,
Yourself as you may have suspected
You could be in dire emergency?
That is your real self unmasked,
Stripped of grimace and posing,
The foolish thing that you really are,
Not the God-like creature of fancy,
You conjure to make an impression.
There are few ways in actual existence
Of our ever becoming acquainted
With ourselves and those around us.
We are so many slaves chained together
In an eternal struggle for money,
Our ears deaf to songs of eternity,
Our eyes dull to fine aspiration,
Our senses deprived of vitality,
Our minds unaware of true freedom.
Yet we feel within a deep longing
To get at our own capabilities
As individuals and as communities.
Above the slave is the blue sky;
Around him the flowers are blooming:
He feels that there lies within him
An infinity of resource unsounded,
A love of all that is beautiful.
How can he explore his own character?
Make success accord with capacity?
There are aids to his self analysis,
Helps to his self-comprehension,
In all mediums of soul portraiture.
There are mistaken ideas about stories,
Especially about those of high quality.
It is true they are largely imaginative,
For they contain the essence of discovery
In advance of that founded on science.
Their conceptions are often materialized.
But aside from their realms of fancy
They depict the spirit of society.
They unravel that complex fabric
And reform it to comprehensible statement.
They reflect all the varied changes
Going on in our constant upbuilding,
Our longings, our faiths and our follies.
The author is essentially a student
Who learns to apply keen perception,
Beauty sense and clear judgment,
To a structure for our entertainment.
What is left of ancient literature,
Even that of the past few centuries,
Except poetry, the drama and fiction?
Truth seems to play hide and seek,
Or come half-revealed in masquerade.
We revolt against it in preachment,
While we accept it in soul revelation.
Which proves we are less intellectual
Than emotional in receiving impressions.
The sermon may fail as an argument,
While the story can arouse deepest feeling,
Reach judgment through sympathy and sentiment.
We love music played on our heart-strings.
What shall the New Art have for motives?
Most natural are those of times we live in.
Life is quite as vital and interesting
As it has been at any period of world history.
We are just facing a new responsibility
Of passionate interest to untold millions.
We are launching adventures beyond dark seas.
What is now stirring our national spirit?
What are our standards, what our ideals?
Let us picture the soul of our people,
Our fears, our hopes, our ultimate faith
In what we are and are to become.

Snap Shot Jots

By Sam Spedon

A Few "Bones," Please.

HOW can we expect the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to accomplish anything without funds? Its treasury is like Mother Hubbard's cupboard—bare. This is a well known fact to all members of it. It has been a habit of the past to take all and give nothing. How many of the old producing concerns and theaters might be in the running today had they set aside a business reserve fund for time of need instead of putting all their surplus to their personal accounts? Isn't there some way to obtain or persuade every member of the Association to contribute to a fund as befits so important an industry? Think it over and propose it at the National Convention.

Keep Your Eyes Open.

The Wheeler Bill is dead but not forgotten. A similar bill will undoubtedly be proposed to the next New York legislature. Don't fall into the arms of Morpheus and forget all about it. Keep alive to the issue, it is not dead. Be ready and prepared to meet it next winter. Here is another thing to remember, the Sunday opening case to be heard next fall in Albany. It is necessary to do some good hard thinking in the meantime and get busy when the time comes. The Censorship question is likely to confront us again and we must not give it a chance to materialize by any reason of a violation of the moral codes. If we have unclean or suggestive films we must "pay the fiddler."

A Big Job on Small Capital.

This year we sent a man to Albany to represent the industry in the lobby of the legislature with a donation of seven hundred dollars to defray his expenses for four months. He says he spent in addition over seventeen hundred dollars out of his own pocket and this was only a fly speck on Jumbo as compared with the provisions made for the representatives of other interests. He did wonders and helped materially, if not entirely, in bringing home the bacon. This contradicts the statement of the Civic League that the moving picture people were going to Albany with barrels of money to influence legislation.

There Are Others.

The National Exhibitors' League is another shining example of consumptive finance. It started this year with a treasury of $6,000 instead of fourteen or fifteen thousands which it had every right to expect after the Chicago exposition and now it has nothing or less. Its president says he was obliged to pay his own expenses to make an organization trip around the circuit, and it is rumored that the National Organizer's expenses on a similar trip were defrayed from outside sources. The truth is like medicine, bitter, but it very often dispels the disease. Let us see to it that next year is better and not worse. Let us all get together at Chicago and make it better.

Brooklyn Takes the Prize.

You read about the Brooklyn, New York, Exhibitors' League investing $500 of its treasury in Liberty Loan Bonds. It is the first time in the history of the industry that we have heard of any organization in the industry having a surplus large enough to invest part of it. Brooklyn has one of the largest, if not the largest, exhibitors' leagues in the country and it is one of the most active. We hope they will let us know how they do it, so all other leagues will do likewise.

Avoid Cause for Legislation.

If there are any more bills introduced in the legislatures of next year the exhibitors want to see that they do not give cause for them. They must see to it that there is no violation of any of the laws and ordinances which they are expected to comply with. These are just a few; proper exits, licensed operators of lawful age, decent pictures, standee and fire. Your carelessness and disregard of the laws may bring a hardship on those who comply with them and try to prevent the imposition of burdensome taxation and cause for oppressive legislation. It is within your power to avoid and prevent it. The eye of the law is ever upon us.

The Million Dollar Kid.

Why can't you take that million, Charley, and say nothing? The press agents and the press are bringing the wrath of all the government officials down upon us by arousing their envy and establishing in their minds that the motion picture industry is an annex of the United States mint and you have a direct pipe line connected therewith. If we don't watch out the government will confiscate the whole industry and employ you to work for it.

Mark One.

The recently formed United Theater Equipment Company is a merger on a sane basis and registers one of the first moves of the industry in the right direction. Now let the exchange and producing interests get together and do something in the same way and it won't be long before we will have an established and united industry that will have a semblance of business.

A War Tax After Full Understanding.

The Wheeler bill failed because it was drawn by those who did not know and understand the conditions of the moving picture industry and the business methods employed in it. The U. S. Government is, we understand, making careful inquiry in an effort to learn how best to impose a war tax upon motion picture interests. They will probably, or already have summoned several experts to Washington to impart to the finance and ways and means committees some facts concerning the industry and the making of moving pictures. This is the only logical way of arriving at an equitable taxation of the industry or different branches of it.

"O Hum!"

The customary innocuous desuetude of the film interests received a severe jolt when the president of the National Exhibitors' League and the representative of Pathe made their strenuous cry and appeal to the National Association to wake up the industry to get busy at the Capital. While all commercial interests were actively and strongly represented there the motion picture people were woefully conspicuous by their absence. Hence the special convention.

Our Patriotic Duty

By Sam Spedon.

EVERYONE who does his bit by buying a Liberty Bond is sustaining the United States in helping it promote the welfare of the whole world in the warfare of democracy against oligarchy and bringing about the establishment of universal peace. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is doing its bit and contributes its space in making an appeal to the motion picture industry to add its bit to the cause of humanity by purchasing Liberty Bonds. Such action will make each and every member of the industry a patriot, not only in name but a true American in deed as well.

There is no better nor surer way of contributing towards the support of those who are on the firing line on the field of battle than keeping in circulating through the purchase of Liberty Bonds money that might otherwise be kept hoarded in out of the way places, idle and unprofitable. These bonds draw three and a half per cent. interest, are negotiable at par value and will probably in a few years be of still greater value.

It is our patriotic duty to buy a Liberty Bond if it is within our means to do so. President Wilson in referring to our country's call to defend its rights and principles says:

"To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured."

At this time when our country calls to us for assistance the question of investment or sordid gain should not enter into or rise above our patriotism, notwithstanding the Government has taken into consideration this question by securing us against any possible loss and insuring our investments, making our country's gain our gain in more ways than one.

No industry has been more prosperous than the motion picture industry and no country has been more generous in support of it than America. No class of people has been more liberally paid for services rendered than those engaged and employed in this industry and it should be the patriotic obligation of every one who has profited by it to contribute to the Liberty Loan, thereby sustaining the Nation that has added so largely to their success and prosperity.

Many of us may not be asked to lay down our lives for Our Country but we can buy a Liberty Bond and if we do we venture to say that it will be our boast and pride in days to come that we did our bit and our only regret will be that we did not do more for Our Country.

Washington Convention Off

Reported Action of Senate Committee Causes Change of Program—Manufacturers to Meet in Capital City.

THE report published in the daily press on last Monday, May 28, that the Finance Committee had eliminated the half cent tax on raw stock and one cent on printed film, also is likely to exempt five and ten-cent tickets from the ten per cent. admission tax, caused a big star and much rejoicing in the industry. William A. Brady, president of the National Association, immediately called a meeting of the executive board, who got in direct touch with Washington.

It was learned that the question of taxing motion pictures would be taken up by the Senate Committee on Tuesday or Wednesday, May 29 or 30, but the representatives of the industry would not be given a hearing. Mr. Brady, together with every other manufacturer, available, decided to take the first train to Washington to get in touch with the situation.

By unanimous consent of the members of the National Association at the meeting it was decided to indefinitely postpone the convention of film men which had been called to meet at Washington, Friday, June 1.

First National's First Picture

New Exhibitors' Circuit Buys Essanay Production "On Trial"—Suggestions by Rothapfel.

THE first film to be purchased by The First National Exhibitors' Circuit for distribution among its members is the Essanay production of "On Trial." As produced on the stage this play ran for two years in New York. The screen version is described as even more effective than the original drama, and it received the unqualified endorsement of all seven directors of the Circuit before the purchase was made.

Prior to the formation of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, it was suggested by many people in the trade that the proposed method of purchasing pictures exhibitors all over the country through selection by a small number of men would not be feasible. The warm commendation of every member of the organization on the initial purchase has proved to the satisfaction of the directors of the Circuit that this method of buying pictures is practical, workable, and generally desirable in every way. The seven men who make the selections are scattered from coast to coast and represent the tastes and preferences of photoplay patrons in all parts of the country. The picture was submitted to each of them for endorsement and appraisal before negotiations were completed. The members of the Circuit believe that a similar system might well be adopted by producing companies, even before the pictures were made and that such a scheme woul assist materially in giving the exhibitor the kind of films he desires.

S. L. Rothapfel, of The Rialto, New York, President of the Circuit, has devised several striking innovations for the presentation of "On Trial" and the other members of the Circuit will get the benefit of his original ideas in that respect, as well as his distinctive musical setting, lighting and offstage effects. It is intended that members of the Circuit shall have the benefit of his genius in the line of picture presentation for all subsequent photoplays purchased by the organization, and at the same time each member will receive ideas from all other members whenever any of them hits upon a novel effect which will enhance the value of a production.

Several other important purchases are now being negotiated and announcement of the pictures selected will be made in the near future.

Lynch Head of Triangle Distributors

Southern Theater Man Purchases Interests of Hodkinson and Pawley, Who Retire from Concern.

STEPHEN A. LYNCH last week took over the controlling interest in the Triangle Distributing Corporation. From the same concern retire William W. Hodkinson, president, and Raymond Pawley, treasurer, whose interests have been purchased by the newcomer. Mr. Lynch is head of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, which controls a chain of theaters in the South.

The officers elected at a meeting of the Triangle directors on May 25 are: President, Mr. Lynch; vice-president, C. E. Holcomb; treasurer, Fred W. Kent; secretary, Frederick L. Collins, executive head of McClure Pictures. R. W. France continues as a director, but will no longer be general manager.

Coincident with the change in management came a material increase in the capitalization of the company. With the exception of the exchanges in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa all of the company's distributing facilities will pass under the control of Mr. Lynch. The new president of the Triangle Distributing Corporation is a native of North Carolina, a graduate of Davidson College, of Asheville, and is credited with having made a fortune in the theater business.

A. S. Barnard, who represented Mr. Lynch and his associates in the recent negotiations, will be general counsel of the company.

A MILLION FOR CHAPLIN.

A well authenticated report is to the effect that the Mutual Film Corporation will Pay Charlie Chaplin one million dollars for his services for the coming year. For this munificent sum Mr. Chaplin agrees to make eight pictures. All things considered this would seem pretty soft for Charlie. But then the Mutual knows how to get its money back.

Metro Increases Capitalization to $2,600,000

Absorbs the Rolfe, Columbia and Popular Companies—Yorke Soon to Be Taken Over—New Distribution Plan.

PREPARING for larger enterprises and greater activity in the motion picture field, the Metro Pictures Corporation announced on May 25 that it had reincorporated at Albany, increasing its capitalization from $400,000 to $2,600,000. The new issue was subscribed entirely by the Metro group, and none of the stock will be offered to the public. The officers under the new regime remain as before, namely: President, Richard A. Rowland of New York; first vice-president, Louis B. Mayer of Boston; second vice-president, James B. Clark of Pittsburgh; treasurer, Joseph W. Engel of New York; secretary and general counsel, J. Robert Rubin of New York.

In the reincorporation, the business of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., Columbia Pictures Corporation and Popular Plays and Players, Inc., three of Metro's manufacturing companies, were taken over by the parent company. The Yorke-Metro Company, which, under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer, produces the Harold Lockwood pictures, will shortly be absorbed. The three New York manufacturers now a part of the Metro organization will operate at the new Metro studios at 3 West Sixty-first street, with B. A. Rolfe, formerly president of Rolf Photoplays, Inc., as general manager. Maxwell Karger, who was identified with both the Rolfe and Columbia companies, will make special productions at another studio. The Yorke companies will, as before, be made in California at the Hollywood studios.

It was announced at the Metro offices that this reorganization is the first step toward Metro's entrance into the field as a contender for first honors, and that this step is merely the means of putting the Metro house in order to meet the new conditions and enlarge its field of activities. The new system under which Metro will operate has occupied the attention of the board of directors and the Metro executive committee for more than six months, and the plan that has been perfected permits of the placing of specialists at the head of each unit of the organization.

Mr. Rolfe has completed the organization of a new scenario department which will provide scripts on plays and books already in hand, and will work on a schedule that will give more time to the working out of the details of screen dramas. In this connection also a double director system will be inaugurated so that directors will work one month actively in the taking of the picture and then spend one month in the cutting of the product finished and in preparation for a new script.

Metro's production plans in full will be announced within the next thirty days, as soon as each of the details is perfected. Under the new system the exhibitor will be permitted to book the program or contract for the stars, placing Metro in the position of being neither for nor against the open booking policy and neither for nor against the program policy, but striking a new plan which is likely to solve the problems which both systems present.

It is announced that Maxwell Karger's first three productions will be seven-reel specials with Emmy Wehlen in "Empty Pockets," the celebrated novel by Rubert Hughes; Viola Dana in "Blue Jeans"; Emily Stevens in a picture which has not as yet been christened. William Christy Cabanne will direct a number of the Bushman and Bayne productions. On the West Coast Mr. Balshofer will personally direct Harold Lockwood in the same class of pictures which have made this star popular throughout the country.

Richard A. Rowland, Metro's president, in speaking of Metro's enlargement said: "We proceeded from the idea that no man or no group of men, sitting in their offices in New York City, can hope to dominate motion picture rental prices. The public, first speaking to the exhibitor and then the exhibitor speaking to the manufacturer and distributor, determines the picture market, and we have prepared ourselves to meet the demands of the market.

"We assume that the exhibitor, knowing his own field and his own public, is capable of solving his own problems and he is to be the determining factor in our plans. In brief our policy will be 'The exhibitor decides.'

"In the Metro productions the sex picture will be conspicuous by its absence. Metro productions will be offered at a price that is fair to both sides, and by this I mean that the exhibitor must make money or his contract is worthless to this company.

"The states right market is reaching the stage that it previously occupied. The idea was all right and could have been developed if it had not been abused. The difficulty seems to have been, to speak plain English, that the states right picture man wanted to get his money quick and had to catch a sucker to do it. A large number of these states right plays are based on the sex problem and they have been a distinct enemy to the picture business with the public. I do not mean to include all states right pictures in this category because there have been and now are several responsible men in this end of the business, but the wildcat opportunists apparently have killed the goose that laid the golden egg."

Ruth Roland Is a Bride

Marries on May 16, in Long Island, Lionel T. Kent, Automobile Salesman of Los Angeles.

RUTH ROLAND, after playing "The Other Woman" in Pathe's latest serial, now defies any other woman to make her a "neglected wife." Having played such a part she feels she knows all that a wife should not do. The charming heroine of Pathe's "Neglected Wife" serial is married. She and Lionel T. Kent, of Los Angeles, made a quiet trip to Patchogue, Long Island, N. Y., where they obtained a license from Robert B. Ackerly, town clerk. They were married on May 16 in the rectory of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. And now the secret has just leaked out.

"If I had a husband, I wouldn't be a neglected wife," remarked Miss Roland, when she arrived in New York after finishing "The Neglected Wife" serial. "When a husband falls out of love with his wife, it is generally the man's fault." Miss Roland's friends are anxiously waiting to see if her theories on the marital relation work out in practice. She has never touched a drop of liquor and she insists that husbands should not be permitted to drink.

Mr. Kent is an automobile salesman of Los Angeles. He is certain to be the recipient of many congratulations from the host of friends and admirers of the bride. The former Miss Roland is as popular among those who know her personally as she has been with photoplaygoers. The Moving Picture World joins these in wishing happiness to Mr. and Mrs. Kent.

Ewan Justice Seriously Ill

Fox Publicity Director Compelled to Stop Work Indefinitely —Walter Sanford in Charge.

OWING to serious illness Ewan Justice, for some time director of publicity and advertising for the Fox Film Corporation, was obliged to cease active participation in the affairs of his office last week and has been granted a leave of absence. Because of the nature of his illness Mr. Justice's return is indefinite, so it may become necessary to secure someone to take his place until such time as he is able to resume activities. Walter Sanford, a widely known newspaper man and theatrical manager, has been selected and is now on the job at the Fox offices in the Leavitt Building, New York.

Mr. Sanford began his newspaper career on the Kansas City Star some years ago. In the theatrical field he has the distinction of being the first manager of the old Willis-Wood theater of Kansas City. Since then Mr. Sanford has filled a number of managerial positions for the Shubert theatrical interests and comes to the Fox Company from the managership of the Manhattan Opera House. He is well equipped for the demand of his position.

TURNER AND DAHNKEN BOOK WAR FILM.

Pathe announces that the Official British Government War Pictures in seven two-reel episodes have been booked by the Turner & Dahnken circuit of California at a record price. The pictures will be shown seven days in San Francisco, four days in Oakland, three days in San Jose, three days in Berkeley, three days in Stockton, three days in Reno, four days in Sacramento, two days in Watsonville, two days in Hanford, and two days in Richmond.

The British War Pictures are controlled in this country by Official Government Pictures, Inc., of which William K. Vanderbilt is president and H. G. Davison treasurer. These war pictures have been widely advertised by a number of the most important newspapers in the country which have cooperated with Official Government Pictures. All of the profits go to war relief.

MARGUERITE MARSH UNDERGOES OPERATION.

Marguerite Marsh, who appears in two of the earlier Goldwyn pictures, and sister of Mae Marsh, Goldwyn's star, was stricken with appendicitis a few days ago and was operated on.

Her recovery from the effects of the operation has been rapid.

Clara Kimball Young Sues Selznick

Star Charges Fraud—Selznick Issues Statement Denying Allegations in Toto.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG has started suit in the New York Supreme Court against Lewis J. Selznick for an accounting of the profits of the Clara Kimball Young Corporation and the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc. In the papers on file in the County Clerk's office Miss Young charges Mr. Selznick with defrauding her, through a series of manipulations of corporations, out of her profits of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation. Mr. Selznick has issued a statement in which he denies in toto Miss Young's allegations.

In her complaint Miss Young states that she has no means of knowing how much of the profits of her corporation should rightfully be hers. She states that out of four pictures thus far produced by the company bearing her name three have earned $200,608 in two and one-half months. In six months the three pictures took in not less than $600,000, she avers. Besides, Miss Young alleges, Mr. Selznick and the company bearing his name have taken in $2,350,000 from exhibitors as payment for the right and privilege of exhibiting pictures in which she is the star.

Selznick, she says, began by obtaining her signature to two contracts, one dated July 30, 1915, and the other January 24, 1916, which he proceeded to turn over to the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, Inc., organized by him through dummies. Later he dispensed with the dummies, had himself elected president and director and Miss Young vice-president and treasurer of the company.

But Selznick dominated and controlled the film corporation, she declares, and she had no voice whatever in its affairs and was permitted to perform none of the duties of the positions held by her.

Finally, the complaint says Selznick organized the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc., and made a contract between it and the Young film corporation, by which, Miss Young asserts, she was defrauded out of her entire share in the profits of her labors.

All the money the actress has ever received, she declares, is $1,000 a week salary.

Mr. Selznick's statement, in which he denies each and every allegation made by Miss Young, follows in full:

"The charges which Clara Kimball Young is spreading in the newspapers, as well as the extensively advertised suit which she has just commenced, are the natural results of her disappointment in failing to coerce me into wrapping up my business and delivering it to her, charges prepaid.

"For a woman who has had as much exerience with employment contracts as has Clara Kimball Young, it strikes me that the charge of fraud sounds very much like the last resort of a lawyer who cannot claim a breach of contract. The contract of Clara Kimball Young Corporation with Clara Kimball Young is a simple, straight contract of exclusive employment until September 1, 1921, and not only have we lived up to it in every way and shut our eyes to repeated and extensive exhibitions of 'temperament,' but we have paid Clara Kimball Young's salary in advance through the week ending September 1, 1917.

"We are going to see this issue through to the finish, and will spare neither trouble nor expense in protecting our rights and the interests of our distributors and exhibitors throughout the country against this unprincipled attack. We know that we have the support of everybody in the industry in our efforts to make an example of this case, which illustrates one of the most demoralizing forces threatening the industry."

STROMBAUGH JOINS STANDARD.

Charles W. Strombaugh, for years connected with the General Film organization, will return to his former territory as manager of the Standard Film Corporation, distributors of the Art Dramas Program for the states of North Dakota, Minnesota, Upper Wisconsin and South Dakota.

Mr. Strombaugh is equipped to handle an office such as will be established in Minneapolis. His film experience dates back over a period of seven years and he has served in nearly every department familiar to the exchange system. This fact is surety that the detail of his office will be carried out properly, which means, of course, nothing less than real service for the customer.

The new offices will be located at 406 Film Exchange Bldg. R. C. Crooper, president of the company, is in Minneapolis, this week, supervising the arrangement of matters in general.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of May 27 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

Ethel Barrymore at the Rialto.

THE leading feature of the Rialto program for the week of May 27 was Ethel Barrymore in a Metro picture, "The Call of Her People," adapted by June Mathis from Edward Sheldon's play, "Egypt." Under the direction of John W. Noble the essence of that romantic, vagabond life which the very word "gypsy" calls to mind has been caught by the camera in a series of picturesque and exciting scenes. The story permits Miss Barrymore to be seen in both the ornate costume of the gypsy and the smart attire of the modern society maid. Prominent in her support are Robert Whittier, William B. Davidson, Frank Montgomery, and Mrs. Allan Walker. An added atraction was the first installment of "The Land of the Rising Sun," a series of exquisite animate photographs of Japan and the Japanese. Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew contributed "Her Anniversary," another of their wholesome domestic comedies. The soloist was A. Lamont.

"Lincoln Cycle" at the Strand.

"The Lincoln Cycle," at the Strand, Benjamin Chapin's remarkable screen documents founded on the life of Abraham Lincoln, were shown at the Strand Theater the week of May 27. The cycle is composed of four distinct features, "My Mother," "My Father," "Myself" and "The Call to Arms," combined in one master production. Chapin has made apparent to the twentieth century, the brain, brawn and big-souled nature of Lincoln. No red-blooded American could fail to find in these pictures a wealth of inspiration, as well as thrilling situations and heart-touching pathos.

The Topical Review was also shown and contained the latest American and European news pictures. The soloists were Grace Hoffman, Irene Stolfosky, Arthur Depew and Ralph H. Brigham.

Bill at the Eighty-first Street Theater.

Wm. S. Hart in "Wolf Lowry" was the picture feature for the entire week at the Eighty-first Street Theater.

"The Bar Sinister" at the Broadway.

The Edgar Lewis production of Anthony Kelly's spirited screen drama of the South, "The Bar Sinister," is now being shown at the Broadway Theater.

PEARL WHITE'S NEXT SERIAL IN SEPTEMBER.

Announcement is made by Pathe that a new serial starring Pearl White is now being produced by Astra for release some time in September. "The Fatal Ring" will be the title of this serial.

George B. Seitz, author of some of the Pathe's greatest serial successes, is directing "The Fatal Ring." It is stated that this serial will have one of the greatest all-star cast that has ever appeared in a continued production. Two of the other prominent members of the cast are Warner Oland, the villain of "Patria," and Ruby Hoffman, who has appeared in vampire roles in a great many important productions.

DUNBAR TO SELL ART DRAMAS IN CANADA.

The Independent Film and Theater Supply Company, distributor of Art Dramas for Canada, has announced that W. H. Dunbar will be general sales manager for that district. Mr. Dunbar is a man of wide experience in the exchange business. Until recently he was with Boston Photoplay Company, another Art Dramas exchange. Previous to this he was general manager of the Universal Company's Winnipeg office.

The Independent company, which has offices in various parts of Canada, is planning a wide extension of activity in the near future. New offices are to be opened, and a campaign of intensive advertising is now being inaugurated.

PATHE CLUB HOLDS DINNER DANCE.

Members and guests of the Pathe Club, including in their number the executive heads of the Pathe company, members of the home office, Twenty-third street exchange and Newark exchange organizations, stars, directors, and authors associated with the concern, met at one of the largest and most successful affairs in the history of the club, at Delmonico's Saturday night, May 19.

A dinner dance was the occasion, and the object announced in the constitution of the club—"to promote friendly intercourse, and to develop and strengthen social relations between the employees of Pathe Exchange, Inc.," was achieved.

Richardson Looks on the Golden Gate

Pulls Flivver in Sacramento, but Has Regular Time in Placerville, San Francisco, San Jose and Portland

Sacramento.

IT IS perfectly wonderful what a mess an official can make of things. I had written Sacramento Local Union, No. 252, twice, without receiving even the ordinary courtesy of a reply, which should always be accorded a business communication, and when a third letter elicited no response I sent a fourth, a special delivery letter, withdrawing the date and giving it to another city which wanted it. In going to Placerville, however, it was necessary to stop over in Sacramento for three hours, and during that period I once-overed some of its theaters; also I met the officers of the local, and was informed that the secretary had been instructed to reply to my letters and, on behalf of the local, invite me to stop in Sacramento. Well, it is a lead-pipe cinch that the secretary did not do his duty, because, allowing that one letter might get lost in the mail, three most certainly would not.

The officials of the union were very anxious to have me arrange a date for Sacramento, and here is where I, on my part, pulled a flivver, so that I guess we are even up. Honestly believing it to be the fact, I informed them it could not be done, only to find on my arrival in San Francisco that, through some blunder which I do not yet understand, I was a day ahead of time, which day might have been given to Sacramento.

While waiting in Sacramento for the Placerville train, camera in hand, ye scribe started valiantly forth to view the sights. But alas, the beautiful front of Goddard's J Street theater met the eye, and you know that could not be resisted, sights or no sights. Having, therefore, first interviewed the Goddess of the Box Office ten cents worth, I marched in. Beautiful? Yes. Peach? Uh huh. Seats 1,600. Operating room (light colored walls and incandescents burning) on the main floor, level with the screen. Observation ports of goodly size. Auditorium decorations in soft, pleasing tones. Tea room on mezzanine floor where tea and some form of light refreshments are served by a Japanese woman in costume. Pipe organ, music artistically rendered. Picture light brilliant, and of good tone. Picture size approximately correct, and screen bordered with a deep band of black.

Thus far all is well, but alas, the second chapter readeth not so beautifully, for at the left of the screen was a clock, with a blare of light up on and around it; also right and left of the screen were glaring, brilliant exit signs. Under the balcony were indirect lighting fixtures, plastering the low ceiling with a glare of light. During my stay, three times there was a very heavy discoloration of light on the screen, but the speed of projection was, at the time, approximately correct, though I have since been informed that the Goddard is an exponent of the art of chase-em-through. I also have it, upon what seems to be good authority, that the matter of speed is carried to such extreme lengths that the operators are placed on a nervous strain, and are not over-anxious to hold a position in the Goddard.

I met Manager-Owner C. W. Goddard, had a most pleasant chat with him as he showed me over the house, and am filled with amazement that a man of his intelligence and ability would perpetrate such a sin as this. The Goddard is really a very fine photoplay theater and, aside from the lighting proposition and excessive speed, seems to be very well managed indeed. Just why a theater of this class should seek to run a program of too great length and, in consequence, overspeed and literally ruin the whole performance, passeth understanding. Had I lectured in Sacramento I very much fear that Friend Goddard would have got his feelings all ruffled up, because I land on that speed proposition all spraddled out, with a butcher knife between my teeth, a revolver in one hand, and a baseball bat in the other. Excessive speed is one of the most serious propositions the moving picture industry has to contend with. In one item alone it causes a physical damage to the films mounting into millions of dollars annually.

Leaving the Goddard, I strolled down the street in the general direction of California's State Capitol, intent upon packing an image of that historic building into my little camera, and lugging it back to Gotham, but at the sign of the Sequoia I was self-hypnotized into digging up another dime and passing within. Here again the operating room was almost level with the screen, and in this case its walls were painted black and the incandescent lights were out, which was distinctly to the credit of the operator. Here, too, the clock, exit and ceiling lights needed attention, and I would suggest to Manager Morris that the application of the same intelligence and brain power he gives to the selection of his program would vastly improve the lighting conditions of his auditorium, hence place his picture on the screen in much better fashion. The picture light was fair, and was well handled during my brief stay; also the size of the picture is O. K. and the speed of projection approximately correct—a condition which, I am told, obtains at all times at the Sequoia.

I cannot comment intelligently upon Sacramento projection. I did not see enough of it to do so. I am, however, informed that the Sacramento operators receive $32.20 a week for a six-hour day, with two days a month off. This, while nothing in the way of excess, ought to be enough to secure high-class work on Sacramento screens. Sacramento managers are entitled to something in return for $32 a week.

I met Manager I. F. Morris of the Sequoia, who expressed deep regret of the failure of the local union to arrange for the lecture. Mr. Morris promptly secured his gasoline buggy—some cart, my boy, some cart—and showed us around over the city during the remainder of the available time. Sacramento is a beautiful city, and I deeply regret the mix-up which prevented the lecture being delivered.

Placerville, California.

From Sacramento I rode about fifty miles in every direction, or I think it must have been in every direction, for that railroad was so crooked that it made the wire in a rheostat coil look, by comparison, like a straight line. Arriving finally at Placerville, Cal., at the station my old friend Joe Trevelle waited with the smile-that-won't-come-off and an outstretched hand of welcome; also his gasoline buggy in the background. I mention this circumstance because Joe is inordinately proud of the fact that he has arrived at the burn-up-gasoline plane of life. I spent one whole day in Placerville, and enjoyed it thoroughly.

Trevelle and his better half own and operate the Elite theater, which is a wonderfully pretty little house for a town of less than 2,000. They are putting on a program which would do credit to Sacramento, and what is more, although using alternating current, the projection, in charge of Mr. Trevelle's son, is strictly first-class. Joe was an old-time operator himself, and evidently has steered Trevelle, Jr.'s steps in the right direction. During my stay we motored thirty-six miles to Xybuz, over a section of the Lincoln highway, and had a dinner of mountain trout. It was some considerable ride, lemme tell you. There were some curves so sharp that in going around them I distinctly saw the back of my own head. And timber! I saw numbers of trees two and three feet in diameter lying beside the road decaying. A question as to why this shameful waste was permitted brought the reply, "Oh, they are too small to fool with."

I envy those who will traverse this section of the Lincoln highway in days to come, when it is asphalt paved. The asphalt is now completed as far as Placerville, and it is expected that the next year or two will see it pushed on at least to the eastern California state line, if not clear to Reno, Nevada. I would, however, advise tourists to have their steering gear working well. They will certainly need it in their business, and there are places where, if they don't negotiate the turn, they are liable to stop turning over for quite a spell.

Next morning Mr. and Mrs. Trevelle motored me down to Sacramento over a beautiful asphalt road, and I took the train for the City of the Golden Gate.

At the ferry house, San Francisco, there was no welcome-to-our-city committee in evidence, mainly, as I afterward discovered, for the reason that I was not expected until the same hour next day, at which time the reception committee of San Francisco Moving Picture Operators' Union, No. 162, had arranged to be very muchly on the job. Lacking knowledge of Frisco's happy homes for travelers,

I called up Walter Preddy, who promptly grabbed his flivver under his arm, hiked down to meet us, and presently we were duly installed in a room, ready for a three days' stay in the city which Chinatown made famous. Failing to raise anybody at the union office, I called up my old friend, W. G. Woods, and we had a most pleasant chat. Then Freddy got hold of Dolliver, business agent of the local union, No. 162, and we started on a tour of inspection of

San Francisco operating parlors. I use the word "parlors," because either they are hiding something from me, or all of San Francisco's projection rooms are entitled to be thus designated. I, however, have grave suspicions on that point. Maybe they are only showing me the worst, and the others will prove to be palaces—maybe.

Scarcely had my presence in the city become known when my room phone bell showed strong symptoms of ringitis, and I was loaded up with appointments until I needed a date book to keep things straight. The forenoon of the first day, or most of it, I spent in one-sided conversation with a perfectly beautiful lady—the hotel stenographer—and do you know the wretch actually charged me for talking to her. Plainly she did not estimate the privilege she enjoyed.

At noon, by appointment, I went to 68 Haight street, headquarters local union 162, where I met brothers P. Doyle, president; L. G. Doliver, business agent Frank Sevier, vice-president; A. F. Howell, past president; Brothers Reinhardt and R. M. (Tex) Combs. After half an hour spent in conversation, this aggregation loaded us into a seven-passenger car, placed at the disposal of the union by Messrs. Turner & Dahnken, owners of the T. & D. theatrical circuit, for the purpose of showing San Francisco to yours truly. There are something like twenty-five members of the Operators' Union who own cars, but this was a machine calculated to do credit to the City of a Hundred Hills. It pranced up the Twin Peaks on the high, six of us in, and never even stuttered. When Mr. Chauffeur opened up that engine it howled like a dog with a sore tail, and we immediately went away from there—real quick.

Incidentally, let me say, not because of the car, but because it is a simple statement of fact, Messrs. Turner & Dahnken represent the best there is in motion picture affairs on the Pacific Coast. They are the owners of eleven houses in San Francisco and other cities, and every one of these houses is a high-class theater. I am told they are the absolute pioneers in high-class moving picture theaters on the Pacific Coast. Their houses are known as the "T. & D." theaters, and the one in Oakland would make the Strand of New York City sit up and take a second look.

The new Mission theater, on Mission street, owned by Kahn & Greenfield, is one of San Francisco's newest. It is strictly up-to-date in its appointments. The building is of "class A" construction—concrete on steel. Its main floor seats 1,500 and its balcony 500 more, many of the latter seats being in loges. The auditorium is very wide, and with its soft-toned scheme of decoration and exceedingly well planned lighting system presents a more than ordinarily pleasing picture to the eye. Its projection installation is a remarkable one and will be described in detail in the projection department presently.

While in Frisco I renewed acquaintance with my old friend W. G. Woods, who has for seven years past been operator in the Market Street theater. Friend Woods is the man who in days gone by put the U in unionism on the Pacific Coast; also he is an operator par excellence. I also met Leo Smeltzer and his charming wife, and had the pleasure of visiting their home. Walter Preddy is another whose personal acquaintance I was glad to renew, to say nothing of President Doyle and Business Agent Dolliver, whose friendship I have always valued highly.

But to get back to the 600 H. P. (more or less) car. They took me through Golden Gate Park, out to the Cliff House and up the Twin Peaks. There was a strong inshore gale blowing, and at the Cliff House the surf was some considerable sight; also I for the first time actually saw a lot of seals on Seal Rocks. Had always thought the seals were a bluff. On Twin Peaks I had the most magnificent panoramic view of San Francisco imaginable. The whole city lies spread out before one like a map. It is a truly wonderful view. Afterward we went out to "Fourteen Mile House," which friends Howard Coles, Frank Cannock, L. W. Atwater and many others of the push who were here during the Exposition will remember. I have passed through considerable "dry" territory. San Francisco, however, pleads not guilty to this particular charge. If I accepted half the invitations to liquidate that are tendered, I would have no need for a car. I could buy me a little boat and float around. No, San Francisco is NOT "dry."

A History Making Theater.

Plans for the erection of a moving picture theater, at the corner of Eighth and Market streets, San Francisco, are now being brought to completion by Messrs. Cunningham & Politeo, architects. [A description of this house was printed in The Moving Picture World last week. Ed.] The construction will begin on or about the first of June, this year. The house will be owned by Messrs. Turner & Dahnken. This theater will mark a new departure in moving picture theater construction, in that it will seat 6,000 all on one floor, there being no balcony. The distance from the rear row of seats to stage apron will be 190 feet, with the screen set back thirty feet from the apron. The distance from screen to the rear row of seats will be 220 feet. Between the level of the front of the auditorium and its rear there will be a rise of fifty feet, yet there will be no stairways in the building, all the various levels being reached by means of inclines, called gradients.

The operating room will be approximately in the center of the auditorium, directly under a portion of the seats. It will to all intents and purposes be one big solid block of cement, its walls, ceiling and floor being constructed of that material. There will be an exhaust vent with a four-foot fan for the operating room. There will be inlet air ducts, leading directly to the operating room at or near the floor line from the outer air. The architects assure me that the exhaust duct will be of ample size to enable the four-foot fan to pull out all gases and smoke in case there should ever be a film fire. The ports will be covered with optical glass. My compliments to Messrs. Cunningham & Polieto. I would suggest that other architects exercise an equal amount of ordinary common sense with regards to the ventilation of the operating room.

The projection installation will be in charge of Brother R. M. Combs, chief operator for the Turner & Dahnken circuit. Brother Combs has general supervision of all projection in all Turner & Dahnken theaters. There will be two complete motor generator sets for the operating room, and an installation of thirteen rheostats, all located in an adjoining room; two separate and distinct sources of power, one A. C. and one D. C.; a triple dissolver; a spotlight and a flood lamp. In an adjoining connecting room will be wash basin and toilet facilities. There are other exceedingly interesting things connected with this installation, which Brother Combs has solemnly promised, with one hand on the Koran and the other on his upper left vest pocket, that he will describe for the projection department, just as soon as the installation is complete. The size of the operating room will be 10 feet by 18 feet, with an 8-foot ceiling. This does not include the motor generator and toilet rooms.

Taken all together, the theater will be a remarkable one, and we shall watch for its opening with more than ordinary interest. Another remarkable house is the T. & D. theater over in Oakland, which is the finest thing in the way of theaters the Golden Gate has to show at this writing. G. E. Thornton is its manager, and, barring one or two items connected with the auditorium lighting, Friend Thornton has every reason to be proud of both the beauty and magnificence of the theater. It seats 3,250 and was opened in November, 1916. Prices of admission are 10, 15 and 25 cents. The only poor thing about it is its operating room, which, while well located, is small and entirely inadequate for such a house as this. Imagine a room, I think, not more than 7 by 9 feet, containing the projection installation of a 3,250 seat house. Shameful waste of space, friend architect—shameful waste of space! You might have made the room 6 feet deep just as well as not. The operator could crawl under one machine to get at the other, instead of squeezing around back of it.

The ventilation plant is complete indeed. The heat of the auditorium is under thermostat control. Music is supplied by a Wurlitzer, Hope-Jones unit, built especially for the theater. Projection current is supplied by a 90-ampere motor generator set. The building is concrete on steel—California Class A construction. The view of the auditorium from one of the boxes is remarkable. The thing looks like a veritable sea of seats, the balcony, seeming to stretch half way up to the starry dome. The lighting of the auditorium while the pictures are running is excellent, until one passes back under the balcony. From the rear of the main floor under the balcony, the lighting is, from the projection point of view, entirely wrong; also the brilliant clock to the left of the screen, and very close to it, is something even worse than bad. Manager Thornton assured me that he "intended to fix the clock." During intermission the color effects in the auditorium are nothing short of beautiful, all wiring being in triplicate, with red, blue and green circuits, this inculding the indirect lighting fixtures.

On the mezzanine floor is a Pompeiian room and a tea room, both of which are really remarkable for the beauty of their furnishing and decorations, the color scheme of the tea room being in blue. Scattered around the theater are fourteen drinking bubbles, and something like fifteen canary birds, all of theme singers of high class. Tea is served in the tea room by Chinese women in costume, there being no charge whatever. And so I could go on at great length, describing the beauty of this splendid example of the photoplay theater, did space permit.

In all the San Francisco theaters I have inspected the balcony is reached by means of "gradients," or inclines, instead of stairways, which impresses me as being an ideal proposition from any and every point of view.

In the afternoon of the second day I attended the meeting of San Francisco Local Union No. 162, and was given a most cordial reception. During the meeting a letter was read from the Board of Awards of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition notifying the union that medals and diplomas had been awarded Brothers L. B. Thomas, W. W. Lewis and W. L. Loudy as having made the best record as moving picture operators, in a test in which sixty-seven operators took part.

At the Tivoli theater, R. N. Combs, operator, I found the the dissolver equipped with a slide changer, the invention of Brother Combs, which produced the most pleasing effect of anything I have yet seen. Friend Combs will describe the device in the projection department later on.

On Thursday evening I lectured in the Moose Hall, to what I am told was a practically 100 per cent. audience of San Francisco operators, a considerable number of San Francisco exhibitors and a number of out-of-town men, including Brother Lynn Abraham and one other Sacramento operator, whose name unfortunately I did not secure. Both before and after the lecture light refreshments and cigars were served by the organization. It was a real pleasure to meet the San Francisco men, because they stand very near the head of the list of high-class operators, though even here there is need of study of the technical end of the art of projection.

San Jose, Calif.

It had been my intention to proceed to San Jose (pronounced San Hozay) by train, but Messrs. Turner & Dahnken placed at my disposal the 600 H. P. (more or less) Winton Six before mentioned, and suggested that I motor down and back, they also supplying the pilot. Accepting their courtesy, L. G. Dolliver, business agent Local Union, No. 160, R. N. Combs, A. F. Howell and F. L. Seavier, and yours truly motored down through the beautiful Santa Clara Valley fifty miles, to the charming city of San Jose, which lies on the floor of the aforesaid valley, flanked on either side by farm-covered mountains.

We were met by reception committee of San Jose Local Union, No. 431, which, although the shades of evening were approaching, insisted upon showing us the beauties of the city, including the most thoroughly delightful little public amusement park it has yet been my good fortune to view. This park lies in a canyon of the mountains, and the drive to it is thoroughly charming. The park itself is a literal bower of flowers. In the park is a fountain, at which one can obtain plain water, sulphur water or soda water, according to which side of the critter you approach. I drank so much sulphur water (they call it two-handed water, because you have to hold the cup with one hand and your nose with the other) that I nearly had a good old-fashioned tummyache.

In the evening, after the shows closed, there was a very excellently arranged banquet, the cover of the menu of which read as follows: "Banquet in honor of F. H. Richardson, given by the Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local 431, I. A. T. S. E., Zaro's Grill, May 11th, 1917." Among the dishes served were "Censored" Crab Salad, Film Cement Dressing; California Reisling a la Clara Kimball Young; Filet of Sole a la Flicker and Saute Melee, en Case, Carbon Dust.

Although Local 431 only has a membership of fourteen, there were at least thirty at the banquet, including a 100 per cent. attendance of San Jose operators and managers. William J. Beatty, manager Liberty theater, acted as toastmaster, first introducing Brother Dolliver, who spoke briefly of Local 431, and the excellence of its arrangements, and commended to their close attention those things which they were about to hear, which he had himself listened to the night before. Your humble servant was then introduced by Mr. Beatty, and spoke for three hours and ten minutes, winding up at 3:05 in the morning. Again we piled into our gasoline Ship of the Fruit Lands and motored back to the City of a Hundred Hills—San Francisco, arriving at the hotel at 5:30 A. M., just a little bit tired, but well satisfied with knowledge of another good day's work well done.

Banquet of San Jose Managers and Operators.

Group of Portland Operators and Managers.

San Jose Local 431 is composed of energetic men who, I am sure, will profit by the things laid before them at the meeting. While in that city I inspected two of its theaters, i. e., the T. & D. and the Liberty, both of which houses have brilliantly illuminated screens, with excellent light tone; also the auditorium lighting conditions are not all bad, although susceptible of improvement, particularly with regard to the clock and the exit signs, which latter might well be toned down by the addition of about two sheets of ruby glass (which may be had at any photographic supply store) placed behind the present glass.

The operating rooms of these houses are well ventilated, and the equipment excellent. They are in charge of men whom I believe to be progressive, though very evidently they had not studied the problems of the operating rooms nearly as closely as they should study them. The motor generator sets were Westinghouse; in fact, I have seen no other in use either in San Francisco or San Jose. The machines in both houses are Power's 6-A. The rooms are painted black, the ports are of goodly size, and, in short, conditions were good, though in one of the rooms there were iscandescent lights burning directly over the projectors. I did not visit the other San Jose houses, but understand that operating room conditions in them are not up to the grade of the two I have named.

I shall remember my visit to the City of the Prune Orchards with much pleasure, and shall highly prize the acquaintances there formed. I shall in future hope to have their friendship and active co-operation in the Projection Department, to the mutual advantage of all concerned.

Portland, Oregon.

From San Francisco to Portland, Ore., is pretty close to 800 perfectly good miles, and the "Shasta Limited" is one of those limiteds which isn't limited to running all the time. It puts in a good portion of the passing hours standing bravely still, sometimes, apparently on a side track. At Medford, Ore., I was joined by H. L. Percy and A. J. Moran of the Moran-Percy Company, owners of the Rialto theater, Medford, who proposed to accompany me to Portland and listen to words of wisdom concerning the projection of pictures.

At the station in Portland we found a whole flock of exhibitors and operators, the reception committee being composed of L. R. Smith, Sam Sage and Mr. Langennan, Exhibitors, and J. S. Haugher and Homer Haynes, of Local Union No. 159. The first thing on the docket was a trip out the new Columbia Highway a distance of thirty-five miles to Multnomah Falls. This trip is one I would advise every visitor to Portland to make. The scenery is something more than surpassing beauty. A waterfall (there are at least five or six good sized ones) less than three or four hundred feet high isn't accounted as worth looking at. The one at the end of the trip, Multnomah Falls, is approximately 700 feet high. The view along the road is wonderful. Returning, we visited a few of the theaters—the People's, the Strand, the Star and the Majestic.

I find the operating room conditions of Portland, as exemplified by these four houses, to be none the best, though also they are by no manner of means the worst. Just fair would perhaps be the most correctly descriptive term. I found some of them flooded with daylight. While all of them I visited had good ventilation (exhaust) flues, none had fresh air ducts leading in at or near the floor line, and most of them took the major portion of the operating room air in through the ports from the auditorium. None of the optical systems was correct, and in most cases the condensing lenses were spaced a considerable distance, which makes for loss of light and prevents the intelligent application of either lens charts or tables. The rooms themselves were in some instances too small; in other cases they were fairly ample in size. Auditorium lighting conditions were, for the most part, quite satisfactory, from the projection point of view, save and except for our old friend, Mr. Clock, which, in one or two instances, glared balefully forth at the audience from close up beside the screen. At 11:30 we spoke from the stage of the Columbia theater to a 100 per cent. audience of Portland operators, plus about five or six of the managers. Portland managers were very kind in that they co-operated with the Portland operators' union in the matter of my entertainment—and did it royally, too—but with all due and proper respect to them it was not entertainment I wanted, it was their presence. In fact, their presence was particularly to be desired, because Portland is inflicted, so I am told, with that greatest of all sins against the moving picture industry—Mr. Chase-'em-Thru—and I had words to spake wid that omadahon.

I want to tender my sincere thanks to Portland operators and exhibitors for their cordiality and kindness to me while in the city. I certainly will not forget that charming auto ride up the Columbia Highway for many moons to come.

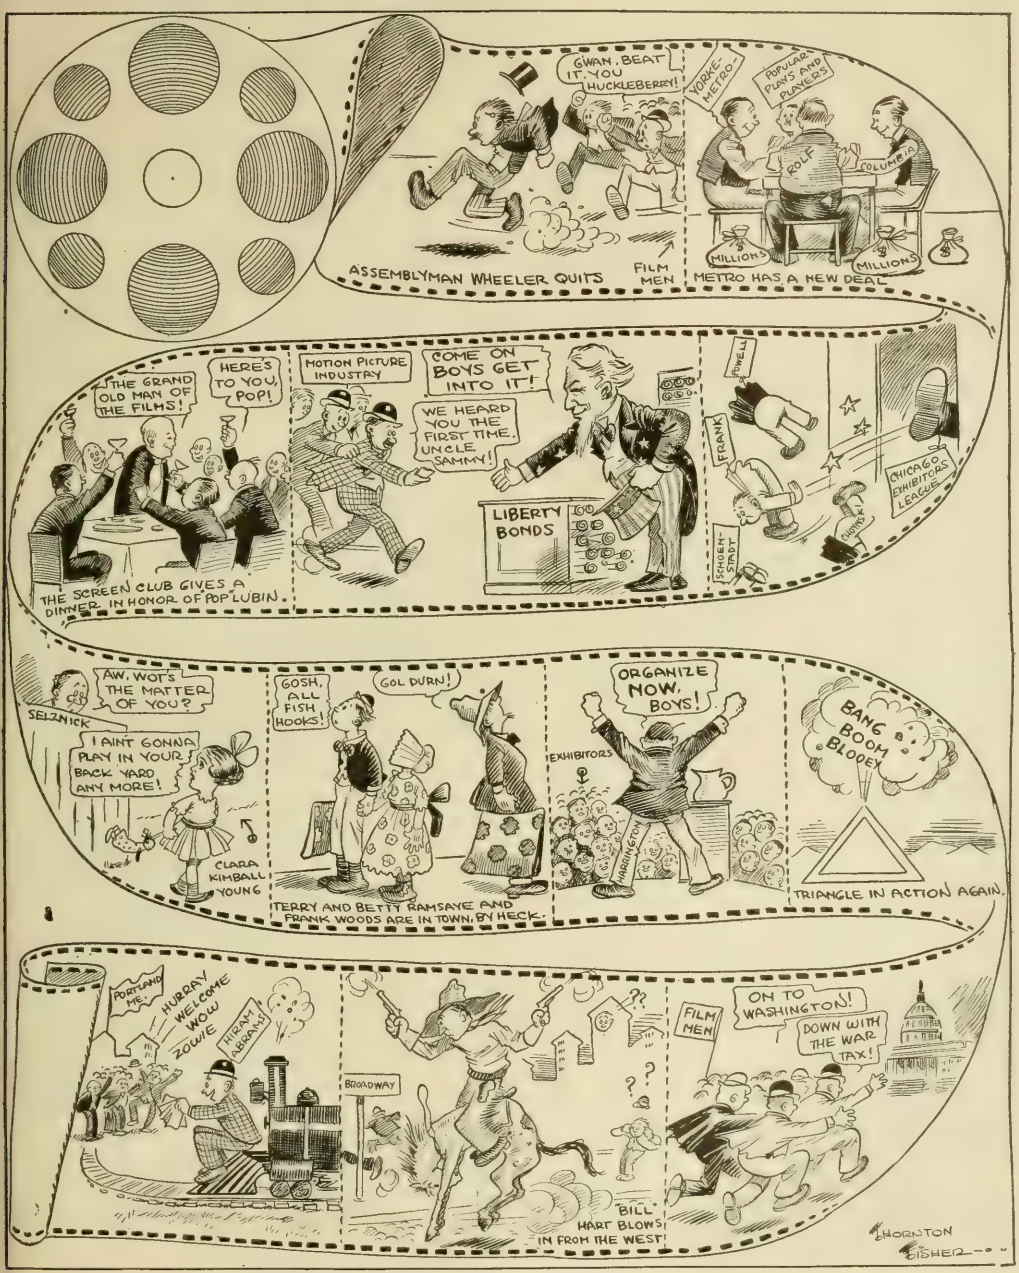
RICHARDSON.

E. R. PEARSON SALES MANAGER OF K-E-S-E.

Because of his record as an exchange manager and as sales manager of the Linder campaign, E. R. Pearson has been appointed manager of sales for K-E-S-E, Inc. In discussing the change Mr. Pearson said: "It has always been a desire of mine to be connected with an organization whose sales force was permanent, because of its ability and paid accordingly, and whose rental prices were standardized on an equitable basis. Because K-E-S-E is such an institution means that in the future even more than in the past exhibitors may look forward to just treatment, equitable rentals, service beyond the mere contract specifications and a personal relation which will make business dealings more harmonious than ever before."

Territories are rapidly being assigned, and by the first of June each district of not more than 250 theaters will be in charge of an experienced salesman working under the direction of a branch manager, both of whom will be thoroughly fitted to cope with the conditions existing in the individual territories.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD NEWS REEL for MAY



Projection Regulations in Pennsylvania

Calls for Many Changes in Present Equipment—Outline of New Measure.

EXTENSIVE amendments to the state law regulating moving picture machines and booths in Pennsylvania have received the signature of Governor Brumbaugh and are to be put into effect at once, according to information received from Harrisburg. The new provisions will make necessary a great many changes in the present equipment of theaters, and exhibitors say this legislation will mean a considerable hardship. The principal points in the measure are as follows:

As under the present plan, legislation of booths and machines is placed under the control of the Department of Labor and Industry.

Permanent booths must be fire-proof and at least 7 feet high. The floor space for one machine must be 6 by 8 feet; for two machines 9 by 8, and for three machines 12 by 8. The booths must be constructed of structural steel with four horizontal structural members at top and bottom; four corner uprights, and the members supporting the roof must be of angle iron, 1½ by 1½ by1¼ inches. The uprights must be spaced every two feet and may be made either of angle irons or 2 by 2-inch tee-irons. Joints shall be made of steel plates and all bolts and rivets shall have flat heads. The frame shall have a doorway 6 feet high and 2 feet wide, and the top and sides of the booth shall be of asbestos at least one-quarter of an inch in thickness.

All openings where combustibles are exposed must be plugged with asbestos cement. The floor shall consist of boards at least seven-eighths of an inch in thickness, with an upper floor of asbestos at least three-eights of an inch thick.

It is provided, however, that the booths may be made of concrete, brick or hollow tile. The windows in the booths shall not exceed two for a machine, and the window for the machine shall not be more than 6 inches high and 12 long. The operator's window shall not be more than 4 inches wide and more than 12 long. Gravity doors must be furnished for each window.

The door shall be provided with spring hinges and is to be kept closed at all times. Two shelves, 2 feet long by 1 foot wide, are permitted in the booth, and they shall be of slate or wood, painted with asbestos paint.

Each individual film must be kept in a separate metal case, made without solder. Film must be kept in its case when not in the magazine of the machine.

Ventilation is to be provided by fifteen-inch inlets. They shall be three inches from the floor on all sides of the booth. These inlets are to be covered with wire netting. A circular opening not exceeding 12 inches in diameter must be provided at the top of the booth, connecting with a vent flue leading to the outside of the building.

Electric wires must be carried into the booths in conduits, and where the house lighting is controlled from the booth an emergency control shall be provided near the main exit. The rules and regulation of the National Board of Fire Underwriters shall govern all electric wiring and equipment.

Rheostats shall be mounted and fastened to slate insulators; all machines must be securely fastened to the floor and shall be equipped with automatic shutters. At least one one-quart fire extinguisher shall be provided for each booth.

The new bill provides for portable booths as follows: Portable booths shall be at least 6½ feet high and 5 feet square and shall be permitted for use of one machine only. The structural part is very similar to that of permanent booths, except that the covering shall be of approved asbestos cloth. The flooring is to be an asbestos mat.

The fines for the violation of any of the provisions of the new measure range from $25 to $200, or imprisonment of from ten to sixty days.

SCREEN AND STAGE A NEWCOMER.

Screen and Stage, a twenty-four-page journal for the general public, made its bow on May 26. It is finely printed by the rotogravure process and in blue tints. It will be issued biweekly by the Screen Publishing Company, of which B. B. Borg is general manager. A. K. Greenland is editor. Its introduction announcement sets forth its aim to inform on any and all points of the spoken and silent drama. Its excellent typography and variety of contents should insure it a clientele among the millions of photoplay-goers.

Anderson a Motion Picture Pioneer

Paralta President Became Identified With Industry in 1897—Has Had Much Experience Abroad.

CARL ANDERSON, president of Paralta Plays, Inc., is a pioneer in the moving picture industry. He became identified with the business of producing and exhibiting moving pictures in the year 1897. As the representative of the American Bioscope he personally made a moving picture of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee procession in London. This picture consisted of six reels of 100 feet in length and was the first multiple-reel picture on record. It was presented in London and created a sensation.

After his London engagement Mr. Anderson booked the American Bioscope at the Circus Pflaging, Rotterdam, Holland. During that month Mr. Anderson booked his attraction for the next two years throughout the continental cities of Europe.

In addition to exhibiting short subjects Mr. Anderson carried with him a complete moving picture making outfit and by royal warrant made a moving picture of the opening of the Kiel Canal, at which the Czar of Russia and Emperor William were present. Later he gave a private exhibition of the picture to the Czar at St. Petersburg, and to Edward, of England, then Prince of Wales.

Mr. Anderson made motion pictures of all the crowned heads of Europe with the exception of the Sultan of Turkey and the King of Spain, and gave private exhibitions to all.

After his return to America, Mr. Anderson engaged in the theatrical business and was identified with several noteworthy dramatic productions. He remained in this field of the amusement business until the formation of the Lasky Company, which he joined shortly after its inception. He remained with the Lasky organization until the formation of the Paramount, with which he became identified. After leaving the Paramount Company he made no further moving picture connections, giving his attention to the development of problems in electrical science, until the formation of the Paralta Plays, Inc.

Emma Jean Parker

EMMA JEAN PARKER, who has a part in Viola Dana's forthcoming production, "Aladdin's Other Lamp," is a screen beauty who a few months ago was a teacher of dramatic art, public speaking and physical culture in a high school.

Miss Parker was born in Little Rock, Ark., and was educated at Maddox Seminary there. Then she attended the Morse School of Dramatic Art in St. Louis. After being graduated she came to New York and was seen in several Broadway productions. Then illness in the family compelled her to return to her home State. There the superintendent of the high school, a graduate of an eastern college, visited her.

"I want to establish a chair of dramatic art, public speaking and physical culture," he said. "Will you accept it? You may have your own studio in the school and no one will interfere with your work." Miss Parker accepted the place, and within a few months the Arkansas High School pupils were producing Shakespearean and modern plays.

Emma Jean Parker.

The remainder of her career might have been devoted to educational work had not Director William Christy Cabanne sent for her to take a prominent part in a new Bushman-Bayne production. That work finished, Miss Parker received an offer from John H. Collins, who is directing Miss Dana.

Miss Parker is petite of figure, with large blue eyes and a wealth of dark hair. During the present year she will be seen in a number of big Metro productions.

Among the Picture Theaters

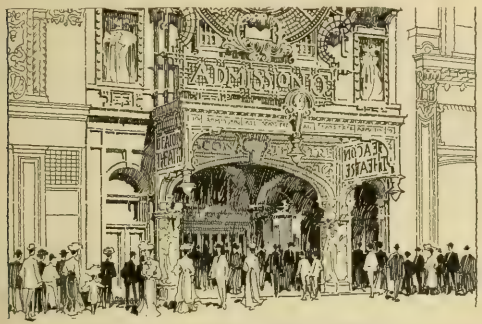
DIRECTLY opposite one of Boston's most prominent historical landmarks (King's Chapel), and on the edge of what is known as Beacon Hill, on Tremont street, stands the Beacon theater, one of Boston's finest distinctly motion picture theaters. The Beacon was recently remodeled and renovated from cellar to garret at the cost of $75,000 and stands today a monument to the advance of the moving picture in Boston. It was originally built at a cost of $100,000 and was opened for the first time February 17, 1910. It has a seating capacity of 800 and the price of admission then was ten and fifteen cents, and twenty cents was charged on Sundays and holidays.

After six years of prosperity and with the demand for improved conditions the company that controls this and other houses in Boston and New Hampshire closed the Beacon theater at the height of the season and with the assistance of double shifts of workmen and artisans they had a newer and better Beacon theater opened for the public inside of fifteen days.



Beacon Theater, Boston, Mass.

With the remodeling of the Beacon came the change and improvement of its policy and today first run pictures form the program. The present prices are 15 cents up to 6 o'clock and 20 cents during the evening; Sundays and holidays the price is 25 cents for any seat in the house.

The personnel of the Beacon theater includes General Manager Jacob Lourie, House Manager Frank Quinlan, Assistant Manager Marjorie Murray, eight girl ushers, one matron, two janitors, two day men, five women and two men who do the cleaning and dusting at nights, double shifts in the orchestra and projection booth, double shifts of ticket sellers and takers, two sign painters, two bookkeepers and extra help to handle the crowds on Sundays and holidays.

Jacob Lourie, the general manager of the company, was one of the first men in Boston to raise the price of the Sunday show from 15 cents to 20 cents and likewise to run shows on schedule time, so that if one of his patrons wanted to know what time a certain feature was being shown he could tell them the exact time to the minute. His slogan is, "I am willing to meet conditions at all times, but am not willing to make them." Evidence of this is that if his patrons want a certain picture he will get it for them and he will book any feature or serial that is in demand by his patrons at added cost and despite his program arrangement. He believes in pleasing the public at all times. He is a thorough student of the motion picture and is always on the alert for new features in the market and makes a close study of everything pertaining to his theaters, as he does the buying and has general supervision of the Beacon, the Modern, the Shawmut theaters in Boston, and the Colonial in Nashua, N. H. At the Beacon he has installed a modern ventilating system at great cost and by the pressing of a button an entire change of fresh air is admitted to the auditorium. The greatest efficiency is maintained at all the theaters, and everything is done to make them comfortable for the patrons.

Nokes Family Operating High Class House

FORT WAYNE, Ind., is the home of the new Strand Theater which was opened to the public during the latter part of last year. This house, which is devoted exclusively to the presentation of high class photoplays, is not only one of the finest and best equipped to be found in any city of the same size in the United States, but compares favorably with the best houses to be found in much larger cities.

The Rialto Amusement Company, Inc., of which Margaret C. Nokes is president, Frank L. Nokes, vice-president, and Arthur H. Nokes secretary-treasurer, is operating this theater, which represents an outlay of $15,000 in thoroughly remodeling and practically rebuilding the old Empress Theater. One of the principal attractions is a concert orchestra of twelve musicians, directed by Samuel M. Malanes, a noted concert soloist. These artists, in attractive uniforms, are seated upon the stage, immediately in front of the screen.

Overhanging roses and leaves entirely cover the orchestra pit, in the centre of which is an attractive fountain on which various colored electric lights play, producing beautiful and striking effects. The stage setting is a reproduction of the Bay of Naples, with Mt. Vesuvius, the beautiful volcano, in eruption, together with glimmering lights and rippling water in the background.

Each one of the 1,200 seats is covered with a sanitary linen seat cover, which has the additional effect of presenting a more seasonable appearance during the warm weather. Thomas Olsen is manager, and many unique and attractive features for the comfort and convenience of the patrons have been installed. One of the novelties which has attracted considerable attention is the feathered songsters—eight beautiful canaries—the finest that can be procured. The quiet beauty of the auditorium, together with the striking electrical effects, the indirect lighting system being used, produces an atmosphere of comfort and luxury, which has proved particularly pleasing to the patrons. Mention should also be made of the beautiful lobby, which is tastefully decorated, and considered to be one of the prettiest in Indiana. An admission price of 15 cents is charged, and Triangle, K-E-S-E, and Mary Pickford (Artcraft) pictures are shown.

Mr. Nokes commends the Moving Picture World highly, and says that he finds it of the greatest value, particularly the "Advertising for Exhibitors" department.

PERCY AND MORAN BUILDING BIG THEATER.

Medford, Ore., is rejoicing over the fact that a first-class motion picture theater will soon be opened and dedicated to the lovers of the Thespian art in the center of the business district of this city. H. L. Percy and A. J. Moran, two enterprising and ambitious young men, are building the theater.

Percy and Moran will install a $10,000 fotoplayer, two of the latest type Simplex machines, a Hertner transverter and arc controllers. A beautiful system of upholstered seating is furnished by the Heywood Bros. and Wakefield Company. The interior finish and technical design possess a modern charm in every detail. Both Mr. Moran and Mr. Percy are members of the I. A. T. S. E., Locals 213 and 297, respectively.

A popular feature of the new playhouse will be the Typhoon system of ventilation. The theater is patterned on the "L" system, the lobby and foyer being 25x100 feet. The auditorium will be 55x100 feet, with a seating capacity of 875 on one floor and with loges seating 125, the house having in all a seating capacity of 1,000. The theater will be opened July 1.

Hippodrome Theater, Little Falls, N. Y.

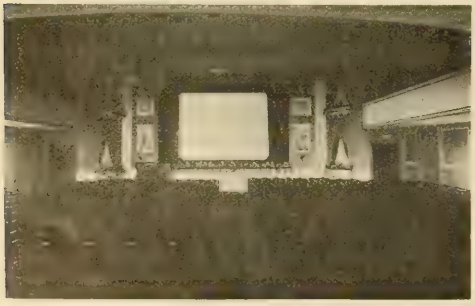
Interior of This House Remodeled and Redecorated—Now Seats 900—W. H. Linton, the Owner, Also Making Improvements to His Hippodrome at Utica—Operates Three Creditable Theaters in New York State.

OF THE three motion picture houses owned and operated in the upper part of New York State by W. H. Linton, probably the best is the one which is the subject of this sketch. The names and locations of the two other theaters are the Richmond at Herkimer and the Hippodrome at Utica. These structures have artistic interiors and exteriors, and are admirably managed. All of Mr. Linton's theaters show the best pictures that can be obtained, and are playing to excellent business.

The interior of the Hippodrome at Little Falls was entirely remodeled and redecorated last winter, and the auditorium now has a very charming appearance. This remark is not to be construed as belittling the way the interior looked before the aterations were made. It had an appealing atmosphere, but the changes have made the place much more striking. The accompanying view of the interior, although some of the finer details have been all but lost in reproduction, nevertheless attests to this fact, and gives the reader an idea of how the auditorium looks in its new dress.

Hippodrome Theater, Little Falls, N. Y.

A blending of the tints and tones of white and gold is used as the motif of the general color scheme of the interior. Paper of the most expensive kind has been employed as a covering for the walls and ceiling. A feature of the new decorations which adds considerably to the general effect is the illuminated flowers which have been stretched across the front of the stage and draped from the two boxes on each side of it. The lights in these flowers are kept burning during the entire time the house is open, and as the incandescents are of a small candle power they do not detract from the sharpness of the picture. As a matter of fact these illuminated flowers intensify the delightfully homely atmosphere that is and has always been prevalent in the Hippodrome. Then another element in the new scheme of beautifying the interior and one which fits in well with the rest of the artistic efforts is the heavy draping of dark green velvet which has been placed around the screen. This acts as a shadow box for the projection surface, and helps to make the pictures sharper. The raised oil painting on each side of the proscenium arch is a part of the decoration, and has been the cause of much favorable comment. All of the boxes have been fitted with silk and lace curtains, artistically arranged.



Interior of Hippodrome, Little Falls, N. Y.

In the auditorium are 900 comfortable opera chairs, and the rows of seats have been so placed that a newcomer can get to a vacant seat in the middle of a row without necessitating a lot of moving and squirming on the part of those already seated. The house manager of the Hippodrome is M. D. Nicholas.

Mr. Linton is so well pleased with the amount of increased business the Hippodrome is doing since it has been remodeled that he is making extensive improvements to his Hippodrome theater at Utica. The exterior of this house will be improved by the addition of a pretty marquee which will extend to the edge of the sidewalk. It will contain hundreds of incandescent lights, an increase to the present lighting arrangement. The Typhoon fan system of ventilation is one of the prominent features in the list of improvements being made in this photoplay house. Mr. Linton acts as the manager of this theater and he is ably assisted by Burnham Belyea.

Stricker Opens $25,000 Picture House

THE Liberty Theater, which was opened to the public of Sand Springs, Okla., on May 15, is one of the finest in the Southwest, and is a credit to the enterprise of its owner and manager, William H. Stricker, who is a pioneer of the motion picture business, in which he started in 1910 in Davenport, Iowa. The building is a two-story structure, 40 by 125 feet and was erected at a cost of $25,000. The facade is of dark brown carved pressed brick, trimmed in terra cotta, relieved by numerous panels, plaster casts, etc.

Particularly attractive is the lobby, which has a marble wainscoting extending to the height of six feet. Above this, the walls are decorated with deep terra cotta paneling, each panel containing an artistic landscape. The floor is of ornamental tile.

On each side of the ticket booth are large doors with mirror panels, and immediately behind it is a spacious rest room for women. Among the conveniences are windows that face toward the picture. The floor of the auditorium is of cement, and has a drop of seven feet from the entrance to the screen. Upholstered plush opera chairs of the latest design are used, to which access is afforded by a wide aisle on each side of the house.

Unusually spacious is the orchestra pit, which is entirely concealed from the audience and is provided with room enough to accommodate twenty musicians. As this theater is devoted exclusively to motion pictures, the use of a large stage has been dispensed with, and only sufficient space around the screen has been retained to allow of various decorative effects. The additional space thus gained enables the management to increase the seating capacity of the auditorium.

The ceiling is paneled and decorated with designs in mosaic. Sixteen oscillating electric fans judiciously placed insure comfort during the warm weather, and in addition, the house is ventilated by means of a large exhaust fan. The auditorium is illuminated by an indirect lighting system.

Just off the stairway at the first landing is the office and operating room. The latter is one of the largest in the State of Oklahoma, is lined with fireproof material and equipped with all the latest devices, including three Simplex machines with motor attachments.

NEW HOUSE AT SOMERTON.

E. A. Gilmer and C. A. Garvin will soon open a picture theater at Somerton, Arizona. The work on this concrete building is now in progress, and the contract calls for the completion of the structure within sixty days. Somerton is a rapidly growing town of about 700 population, and is situated in the heart of the Colorado River valley—"the Valley of the Nile of America." The present intentions of the managers is to give three changes of program a week.

Strand Theater, Fayetteville, N. C.

ONE of the most attractive motion picture theaters in the South is the Strand, located in Fayetteville, N. C. With a seating capacity of 500, this theater occupies a building 30 by 110 feet, and representing an expenditure of $18,000 for remodeling the house for its present use.

James D. McNeill, Mayor of Fayetteville, was the guest of honor, and delivered an address at the dedication which took place on February 5. After speaking of the wonderful advance in civilization during the present generation, and the development of art, literature, science, religion, civic betterment and other things which exert an uplifting influence upon humanity, Mr. McNeill declared that he did not belong to that class of men who look upon the world as a bleak, barren wilderness, filled with wretched sinners who feel it their duty to go about with long faces, fearing to enjoy the pleasure of life; but believed that the beautiful flowers, luscious fruits, and other benefits were intended for our enjoyment, and that we might be better fitted to enjoy the pleasures and happiness of the world to come. "Everything that gives pleasure and happiness to men, women and children, is a good thing," declared Mr. McNeill. "What is there in life more winsome and attractive than the happy laughter of a child, or more beautiful than the smile of a woman; or more infectious than the jolly laugh of a good-natured man, all of which," he reminded his hearers, "are produced by the 'movies.'"

The equipment includes a Minusa Screen, latest type of Simplex machines, and motor generator. The operating room is 12 by 14 feet, painted dark slate. The musical accompaniment for the pictures is furnished by a professional pianist and a trap-drummer. There is a twenty-foot stage, and a unique feature of the house is the decorations which are all hand-work.

Mr. Drake advises that in equipping the Strand, his ideas were obtained mainly from the Moving Picture World, and that this publication is also used by him as a guide in running the house.

Chicago Concern Building Big Theater

$70,000 Photoplay House to Be Erected in Terre Haute—Company Will Establish Chain of First Class Shows.

THE Bankers and Merchants Theaters Company, a corporation with headquarters in Chicago, which makes a specialty of buying or building high-class photoplay theaters with a view toward establishing a chain of money-making houses, with their first purchase, the Orpheum Theater of Fort Wayne, Ind., as a nucleus, is building a $70,000 theater in Terre Haute, Indiana. The new house will be located at the corner of Main and 8th streets, on the site of the old Varieties theater.

The Varieties theater has been razed, and the foundation for the new house has already been laid. When finished it will be one of the most beautiful motion picture playhouses in Indiana, as the Bankers and Merchants executives have expressed a determination to make it so, no matter what the cost. The manager of the new house will be C. W. Mason, who is at present actively associated with A. L. Brentlinger in the management of the Orpheum at Fort Wayne. Mr. Brentlinger is general manager of the Bankers and Merchants Theaters Company. He was former owner of the Orpheum theater and prior to that owned the Orpheum theater in Terre Haute. Incidentally he is one of the best known exhibitors in Indiana.

The property upon which the new Terre Haute house will be built was owned by Mr. McFall, who also owns the building occupied by the Terre Haute Tribune.

Princess Theater, Melville, Sask.,, Canada

Beautiful Little Picture House Has Been Enjoying Heavy Patronage Since Opening in 1913.

IN MELVILLE, Saskatchewan, which is a railroad town on the Grand Trunk Pacific, 279 miles west of Winnipeg, Manitoba, there is a photoplay house known as the Princess, which is a veritable little structure. The accompanying picture is a good view of the entrance, and judging from its inviting exterior appearance one can say without hesitation that the fastidious folk of Melville who intend becoming patrons of the Princess do not have to think twice before purchasing their initial admission tickets. They can see immediately upon approaching the house that it is cleanly kept and well managed, and worthy of their support.

The architecture is plain, but nevertheless pretty. The Princess Theater, Melville, Sask., Canada.

Princess is as fireproof as it is possible to build a theater, iron, steel, and concrete being used. White glazed brick has been employed as a facing for the front, and the ticket booth, which is between the two double door entrances leading into the auditorium, has been done in polished white enamel. In striking contrast to the white are the doors which have been finished in dark mahogany. Immediately above the arched entranceway is the name of the theater, and this has been printed in big electric letters on a background of black. Other lighting facilities add to the attractiveness of the entire structure. Besler Brothers opened the Princess in 1913, and they say that it has been enjoying heavy patronage since. There are 500 comfortable chairs in the auditorium, and a show usually consists of five or six reels.

As to admission prices, 10 and 15 cents are charged for evening shows, while 5 and 10 cents is the price of the Saturday matinee. The larger figure in both cases is for adults; the smaller for children. Matinees are given on Saturdays only, and the shows on this day are always well patronized by children and their parents. Although the Princess management is most particular in selecting its shows at all times, for the house has a reputation of always giving clean entertainment, pictures suitable for children for the Saturday matinee are picked with a very searching eye. In the operating room there are two up-to-date projection machines, a Simplex and a Power's 6A. While the Princess is primarily devoted to motion pictures, a good road show is booked once a month.

RIALTO AT AMSTERDAM OPENED.

Edward C. Klapp opened his Rialto theater at Amsterdam, N. Y., on April 19. The Rialto is a first class motion picture house, and the opening was attended with considerable success. James R. Cline, mayor of Amsterdam, made the dedicatory speech, and many prominent men from all branches of the industry were present at the initial entertainment. Mr. Klapp was the recipient of not only much praise, but also of many beautiful floral bouquets.

Singapore Has Fine Picture Houses

Alhambra Seats 1,500 and Built on European Models—Mrs. Gwan a Big Investor in Theaters.

By David P. Howells.

SINGAPORE boasts one of the finest picture houses in the East. Tan Cheng Kee and his associates have sufficient faith in the future of moving pictures to invest in the building of the Alhambra on a splendid site overlooking the harbor. The house, which seats fifteen hundred, is built on European models, with a parquet and upper circle, more than half of which is composed of loges. The furnishings of the house are elaborate, with chairs of teakwood and beautiful draperies. A special box was built for the proprietors.

Other interesting features are a telephone service free to the public, writing room, resting room and smoking room. The tea garden which adjoins the theater is a sight in itself. Quaint dwarfed Chinese trees and shrubs, orchids and rare plants found only in the tropics adorn the garden. In the center and in little secluded nooks tables are placed, and here is served tea, coffee, ice cream, ices and whiskey and soda. In serving the whiskey and soda, the drink of the East, the management sells the soda for a good price and gives away the whiskey free of cost in order to avoid taking out a liquor license.

Mrs. Lee Chun Gwan.

A pleasing stringed orchestra specially imported from Bombay furnishes the music for the theater and in the tea garden during the interval between the first and second performance of the evening. As in other theaters in this territory only evening sessions are given, the first at 7:30 and the second at 9:15, which is arranged to meet the convenience of the higher classes, who usually dine between 8 and 9. The prices of admission range from 10 cents to $1.25 in the main theater. A cotton screen is used and is arranged so that the poorer natives may sit in the division at the back of the screen and view the pictures from there at the same time that they are being shown in the main section of the house. Admittance to this cheaper section costs 5 cents.

Moving pictures are one of the chief social functions in Singapore. Society leaders often entertain their guests with a dinner followed by a moving picture party. Usually those occupying the better seats appear in evening dress, which gives the place the air of an opera performance. Wealthy Chinese women who are among Singapore's elite are extremely enthusiastic about pictures. They appear at least once a week in their finest brocades wearing their diamonds, or if the bill is changed oftener they attend each change of program. One of the richest Chinese women of Singapore, Mrs. Lee Chun Gwan, has become so enthralled with moving pictures that she has invested a large amount of money in the industry in that territory. Mrs. Lee Chun Gwan entertains at a Chinese dinner, where are served all the Chinese delicacies imported at great cost, from China, birds' nest soup, preserved eggs, sea lily buds and sharks' fins. After the dinner she takes her guests in her motor cars to see the pictures. She sometimes wears $100,000 worth of diamonds at a picture performance.

JIMMY YOUNG TO DIRECT MISS BARRISCALE.

Robert T. Kane, vice-president of Paralta Plays, Inc., acting for the Bessie Barriscale Feature Company has engaged James Young as one of the three directors who will supervise the dramatic side of Miss Barriscale's future productions.

Miss Barriscale's contract with the Triangle Company expires in June, when she will begin work on her own plays. In the next twelve months she will produce either eight or ten seven to nine reel subjects.

Mr. Young is now in Los Angeles conferring with Miss Barriscale in relation to the details of the first story to be filmed.

ELPHINSTONE OF CALCUTTA A NOTED THEATER.

The Elphinstone Theater, owned by J. F. Madan, of Calcutta, ranks as one of the best moving picture houses in the Orient. The house is built of white stone with a spacious lobby capable of displaying advertising for the pictures shown. The wide stairs which leads to the circle of boxes have a pleasing effect and the boxes themselves fitted with graceful chairs have an elegant appearance. The house has been built for comfort in tropic heat and is well supplied with numbers of large electric fans and large doors, which may be opened to admit more air.

The house seats comfortably 1,700 people. It caters for all classes with prices that range from 10 cents to $1.50. Performances are given only in the evening, except on Saturday afternoons and on holidays, when a matinee is run. Mr. Madan and his sons, who assist him with his business, have progressive ideas concerning moving pictures and picture programs. It is their policy to run only suitable features, and if they find a picture is not up to their standard on its arrival they shelve the picture and take the loss rather than show something beneath their usual quality.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard.

WITH a good patriotic twist the Film Club closed its season's meetings by celebrating in honor of the Allies, with guests who hailed from foreign lands and songs of the nations at war. A delegation from the First Corps of Cadets in uniform led in singing "Tipperary." Songs of Italy, France, England and America were sung by club members, and the colors were displayed. Miss Marion H. Brazier, the president, who arranged the program, told of the immense amount of good being done by the current event short reels, picturing the army and navy in action, the volunteer spirit everywhere, parades of young soldiers and recruits and all that tends to inspire patriotism. Greetings were read from Derwent Hall Caine. The "Marseillaise" and "Star Spangled Banner were sung with vigor. It has enrolled many new members and next season will take up a serious study of motion pictures. It is not in any sense a commercial or "high-brow" club and will not stand for censorship.

My mail brought me the other day two pictures of screen stars, Alice Brady and Mabel Taliaferro, both from the studios of sculptors. The first is a bas relief of Alice Brady in "Maternity," which we are anticipating here at the Park theater and elsewhere. It is done by clever Renee Prahar, the young Hungarian artist of New York. The other picture is of a bust of "Little Mabel," done by C. S. Paola, of international fame, a resident of New York. This is a fine bit of sculpture and quite ornamental in its detail. Miss Taliaferro was here in the spoken play and tendered many courtesies. In the company playing Hall Caine's play, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," were Edmund Breese and the author's son, Derwent Hall Caine, whom we also saw in "The Deemster," his first picture. This was too long by three reels, according to popular verdict, as it had no light scenes, no comedy as relief. The literary set, however, thoroughly enjoyed it as an excellent dramatization of the famous book. A friend of mine lost a bet when he declared that it was done on the Isle of Man, claiming he had been there, etc. There was certainly all the atmosphere of that Island even to the least detail, but Block Island in U. S. A. served the purpose. The Hub was glad to know that our own Howell Hansel directed this for the Arrow Film. I was pleased to see the title changed to "The Bishop's Son," for the Deemster was some villain and we like to see the hero given honorable mention. Much of the footage might be cut. Strikes us that young Caine does not need father's prestige, as he more than makes good, and we want to see him in something lighter.

Well, at last we have "The Crisis," a gem of a play at this time and not a thing in it to antagonize a soul. So much has been said by the reviewers that it only remains to add a tribute to producer, players and to Director Colin Campbell for his flawless work. The Majestic theater, which was fortunate in securing the picture, was crowded on the first night and I predict a run. The late Sam Drane gives us a sympathetic picture of Lincoln which those of us of an older generation feel is very accurate, some having seen him in life. It seems to me we owe a debt to Winston Churchill, who lives in the Hub, for writing such a book with those finely drawn characters like Judge Wright, played with artistic finish by George Fawcett. It was only the night before that a party of us went to the Exeter Street theater to see "The Prince Chap," a favorite picture of mine, and here we had Fawcett, Marshall Neilan and Bessie Eyton, the trio in "The Crisis" who compel attention and praise. Poor old Matt Snyder, never more to be seen on the screen and eighty-two when he enacted Colonel Carvel! Some dear young things in the next box thought Tom Santschi too serious to win any girl's love. Struck me he was too old to play the son of a mother with the wonderful face and girlish lines of Eugenie Besserer, who showed no trace of age even in her white wig. However "the play's the thing," and here we have something historic and truly patriotic. Tom Mix did a stunt quite lost on those around me. They did not "tumble," but Tom did. A man behind us criticised the manner of fighting and displayed his inability to appreciate that the play portrayed the War of '61 and not 1917.

I have just witnessed a trade showing of "Within the Law," and, barring its length, it ought to go well, for it is a careful screen version of the play in which Jane Cowl scored. Some of the characters are better done than in the speaking version, like that of Aggie, who depended on lines, but here the titles help out and her pantomimic work is excellent. I want to see more of Adele De Garde and shall watch her career with interest. Florence Nash played well, but she cannot face a camera as did this little girl. Harry Morey somehow always gets our sympathy, even in villain roles. Alice Joyce is too deadly serious and does not get enough out of it. Strange that the three great actresses to play Mary Turner are now in the picture game—Margaret Illington, Helen Ware and Miss Cowl.

"Sleeping Fires" was most satisfying and gave Pauline Frederick something different from recent efforts. "What a dandy leading man that dear Tommy Meighan makes!" was the Irish whisper across the aisle The perpetrator did not like it because the picture ended without the hero and heroine going to the altar. John Sainpolis does the naughty husband all right and the secretary was some beauty. The former is well known round here, as he was once connected with the Castle Square and other theaters. Little Maury Steuart, whom we learned to love in "Gloria's Romance," made an excellent kid. "His Father's Son" went strong owing to the personality of Lionel Barrymore, and the comedy in itself. Irene Howley made good, but without the inimitable "Barry," it might not be appreciated, as there was little new in the offering. "The Bond Between" was great, according to the verdict of the fans, who applauded at two theaters where I happened to see it. George Beban is certainly some actor apart from the Italian roles he favors. There were a lot of human touches and that get the house every time.

"Mothers of France" sent thousands to the Park theater to see it, and never have I been in an audience where such quiet prevailed, not a person moving about and no whispering, for the hold on us all was intense and what a picture of heroism the imperishable Bernhardt makes! Will you ever forget her standing in front of the Joan of Arc statue at Rheims, the only object around that desecrated cathedral to escape shot and shell. How significant it all looked to us, Joan's hand held high bearing the French flag in motion, and the eminent French actress praying for divine strength, her face transfigured. I saw many about me weeping at the sight of it, for here we had it all brought home to us straight from the front. Surely William Brady is to be congratulated on securing this remarkable French picture—the real stuff.

Mabel Taliaferro was not somehow seen at her best in "A Magdalene of the Hills," though Metro gave us some good scenes and fine titles, the best seen from that company for some time. The story was not new and the melodrama a bit far-fetched, yet there were so many redeeming features and the popularity of the star goes far with any audience.

Manager Roth of the Mutual took me over his new exchange the other day and pointed with pride to the projection room fitted up in auditorium fashion. The building is not yet finished. It is nicely located near that of the Metro, American Feature Film and Vitagraph Exchanges. A welcome also awaited the World representative at the Boston Photoplay office, which puts out the Selznick and other pretentious pictures in New England.

We are anticipating a treat in "The Submarine Eye," which they say is full of undersea thrills and will rank with "The Bottle Imp," by the late Robert Louis Stevenson. Thanks to the pictures, we are enabled to see life in motion everywhere and this tends to educate the young as the printed book can never hope to do.

"The Cost of Hatred," with that prince of villains, Theodore Roberts, was a grim picture, and Mrs. Ayer eliminated part of it for her patrons as too brutal to witness. It was realistic enough to warrant sympathy for the hero. Kathlyn Williams was very satisfactory in a dual role and we thought the scenario details worth while with new bits of business. Beulah Marie Dix, author of "Over the Border" and playwright of note, is a Hub woman of rare literary ability.

Burton Holmes is taking us through old India—some trip. When he pictures the dirty water with its thousands of bathers he shows this title which always causes a laugh, "Why no infection? Because the water is so filthy that germs give up the ghost." We are getting some clever cartoons.

Observations

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

WHAT do you think of the motion picture business?" I asked of an old-timer a few days ago. "Which end of it?" was his "come-back." I explained that I spoke of the business in a general sense and he said it would be impossible to answer the initial question on a general basis. "There is no real, intelligent connection between the various branches of the business," said he. "Go to the producers and they will tell you they are not clearing enough to pay the property men their salaries. Go to the exchanges and they will say that when they get the producers' end paid and settle up the expense bills arising from the delivery of films from producer to exchange, exchange to exhibitor, and exhibitor back to the exchange, the girl at the telephone switch board is fortunate in getting her pay Saturday night. Then take the exhibitor. He always loses. He has been losing money since the first day he started in business. So, you see, there is no real, intelligent connection between the three branchs of the industry upon which to base an answer to a question bearing upon conditions in the motion picture field."

"Answering the question in my own way," said the old-timer, "I would say the motion picture business is not crippled, but badly bent, and it will continue so until next September, October, or any other month in which the world's war is declared at end. That is to say the moving picture business as a whole. The only real coin getters today are the exhibitors. Producers are not making money. Most of them are glad to break even and get a small dividend on the capital invested. They are really at the mercy of the exhibitors who have, by a diligence the makers of films have failed to display in recent years, secured a hold that practically makes them dictators. The manufacturers once held the upper hand, but their greed and general lack of diplomacy gradually advanced the serf of the business to the practical rulership."

"I don't care how powerful you may be, or how much capital you may control," continued the old-timer, "public opinion will prevail and exercise an influence upon the dividends, if not the capital invested. For instance, a powerful brewing or liquor interest may buy up the leases of every saloon or hotel in a given territory for the purpose of creating a monopoly output for its products, but the interest cannot compel the people to consume the products. These monopolistic methods have been as much instrumental in promoting the cause of prohibition as the champions of the cause have been. It is a modernized version of the old saying, 'You may lead a horse to the trough, but you cannot compel him to drink from it.'"

"I am not preaching prohibition," said the old-timer, "but simply leading you to a realization of existing conditions in the motion picture business. There was a time when announcement that a company with a capitalization of a million or more dollars had been formed to produce motion pictures caused the public to sit up and take notice. The first conclusion drawn by the public was that with such a financial backing the company would place upon the market pictures of merit above that of the preceding offerings. For a time the conclusion was a correct one, but only for a time. The additional capital invested made it necessary to increase the rental prices. For a time, that is to say the time during which they were receiving real value for the increased rentals, the exhibitors willingly walked up to the cashier's desk. But it soon became apparent that the big investors were really not giving the exhibitors and the public what the increased rentals called for. When the outside investors who had no technical knowledge of the business found the dividends were not as large or as frequent as the investments called for they formed efficiency squads to put the respective plants on a paying basis, which meant that too many players were getting too much of the money invested; that too many scenic artists, stage hands and 'prop' men were employed, or getting too much money. It was at about this time that the exhibitors got wise and started to dictate as to what pictures they would use and what prices they would pay for them and ever since that time they have become more and more aggressive in their demands and exactions. The fact that the big investors were cheapening their productions by reducing the cost in or to provide a margin for dividends placed a formidable instrument in the hands of the exhibitors. I well remember a statement made recently by an exhibitor to a well-known producer, which was to this effect: 'You give me the goods and I will pay for them, but if you intend to water your milk you must not expect me to pay for cream.'"

"I do not contend," the old-timer resumed, "that the producers complained of intentionally offering a milk and water product at the price of cream. The real evil is that people who do not understand the business are trying to give at a cut-rate cost what competent people produce, and they cannot do it. The very people who are today seeking dividends from the motion picture business on large investments are responsible for conditions that make it impossible to produce really good and attractive pictures at reduced cost. They are the people who are responsible for the high cost of living and the great increase in the cost of products. Wood, canvas, muslin, paints, nails, tools and everything else that go to the construction of scenery have steadily grown in price. The cost of living has affected the men who make the scenery. The people who patronize the picture houses have felt the gradual rise in necessities, but not in wages. Where, then, is there any foundation in common sense for the claim that increased rentals are compulsory because the producing companies find the cost of production has increased?"

"Look here," exclaimed the old-timer, "I want you to get my point right. If an individual producer, or a company of them relying upon their individual capital, makes complaint that the increase in cost of materials makes it imperative that he increase his rentals I can listen to him; but I cannot give audience to people who, through corporate connections, have been responsible for an increase for which they expect others to pay. I predicted several years ago that the chief enemy of the motion picture business would be the induction of speculative methods—the dumping into the business of vast amounts of capital to provide a dividend source. I do not think there is in existence today a concern resting upon such a foundation that can show an honest to God profit sheet."

Louise Beaudet in "Babbling Tongues"

LOUISE BEAUDET has a very important role in "Babbling Tongues," the latest Ivan Film Corporation's production. Those who know of her remarkable career and the extent of her varied experiences on the stage will readily understand how she could put force and subtle power into her part so vividly shown in her interpretation of the role of Louisa Moreau, the woman who, without evil intentions, yet by her babbling tongue, mercilessly kills one and wrecks two innocent people, who rather than being ruthlessly destroyed by her, had all rights to receive kindest consideration at her hands.

Louise Beaudet.

The artistry demanded in her part is fully lived up to by Madame Beaudet, and her experience as Lady Macbeth, Juliette, Portia and, in fact, every conceivable role from the dramatic to the operatic, serves her right well in this production. She has had many triumphs on the screen in pictures like "The Price of Folly," "The Goddess," and as the American mother who saves her daughters from a fate worse than death at the hands of a raiding soldiery in the "Battle Cry of Peace."

William Humphrey, who in conjunction with George E. Hall, has prepared the scenario of "Babbling Tongues," and who is the sole director of the picture, has naught but praise for Madame Beaudet's interpretation of her part.

Sympathetic Comedy to Rule Laughter's Realm

By Hampton Del Ruth.

NO progressive producer will dispute the passing of the purely mechanical comedy. The motion picture patron now demands subtlety and characterization. He desires to see real characterizations instead of stock types. He no longer laughs when the comedian is kicked from a kitchen set into a garden exterior, where a character holding a hose gives him a shower bath. A series of bumps and bangs no longer tickle him. The man who pays to see the show now demands comedy that truly reflects human virture and error.

I know of no better symbol for future comedy than the rainbow. Human feeling, with pathos and laughter, even as the shifting tints of the rainbow; sympathy and laughter; not the sudden yelp of mirth, but b u b b l i n g springs of laughter all over the theater. Such a comedy is bound to send the patron from the theater with something to talk about, and with a reminiscent smile.

Hampton Del Ruth.

It is simply keeping pace with the demands of the people. They are dead weary of the old mechanical stuff. In the old mechanical comedy the spectator knew what was going to happen when he had seen the first five hundred feet of film. Educated in all the trick situations, the sophisticated motion picture patron now demands a picture that will make him laugh by appealing to his emotions instead of merely astonishing him. True comedy often verges closely to tears, for laughter and tears are twin sisters. Thus, the inauguration of the sympathetic comedy means, to a large extent, the passing of trick stuff and mechanical situations.

Instead of mechanical situations the theme will occupy first place. The tricked twist of surprise will hold its old place in the farce as long as it does not occasion a departure from the main theme. Instead of a series of "gags" followed by a chase, there will be, for example, the theme of a dead-game sport made to see the error of his ways through his love for a sweet, innocent girl. The comedy will be secured by his swaying back and forth between temptation and good resolutions. Themes that have a universal appeal will be chosen. With the old mechanical comedy, the mere twists of surprise carried it. Now it is the appealing theme that raises the film comedy to the dignity of drama, with a far greater appeal than the drama. Greater lessons can be driven home with comedy than with drama.

What is life but a comedy—a combination of laughs and tears? Life is not a set, mechanical affair; it is a rainbow pattern or a mosaic.

As to the writer of rainbow comedies? Perhaps the new comedy will work a hardship on the writer used to working out his situations as a chessplayer makes his moves, and, doubtless it will help him to realize that life is not a mechanical device. The public is wonderfully well-posted these days. No writer or producer of any kind can put over stuff that was good ten years ago or five years ago or one year ago. Because a man was a popular writer or playwright five years ago does not mean that he is worth his salt today. The public's taste in literature, drama and pictures is changing with lightning-like rapidity. The writer or producer who does not anticipate these lightning-like changes has only himself to blame if he goes into the discard.

ASTRA STUDIO ENTERTAINS EXHIBITORS.

The accompanying photograph is printed through the courtesy of the Pathe Exchange, Inc. It was taken at the Astra Studio in Jersey City, on the occasion of the recent visit there of many of the founders of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, composed of leading exhibitors of the United States and Canada. The party was piloted by C. R. Seeley and Tom North, and at the studio was entertained by L. J. Gasnier, George B. Seitz and George Fitzmaurice. Among the players in the foreground, all of whom assisted in making the visitors feel at home, were Mrs. Vernon Castle, Creighton Hale and Mollie King.

Among the exhibitors in the photograph are: T. L. Tally, Los Angeles; Harry O. Schwalbe, Philadelphia; A. H. Blank, Des Moines, Ia.; Frank G. Hall, Newark, N. J.; N. P. Nolan, Salt Lake City; W. P. Dewees, Vancouver, B. C.; W. H. Brouse, Toronto; Nathaniel H. Gordon, Boston; S. L. Rothapfel, New York; James D. Williams, New York; Tom Moore, Washington; John Poole, Washington; Earl H. Music for the Picture

MUSIC AND THE PICTURES.

THE general public is very apt to think that little skill or gray matter is required of a moving picture organist or director. How often are we conscious-as we sit before the screen that little of either is exercised as we see a most remarkable piece of acting utterly ruined by inappropriate music. If a little time and thought were but given to the picture about to be presented, music which suggests atmosphere and action may lift a big picture to greater heights and intensify a commonplace picture to a point were it may be most acceptable. 'Tis true people usually do not go to moving picture theaters to listen to the music. They go to see pictures properly presented.

On one occasion the writer remembers seeing two well-known terpsichorean artists on the screen, dancing the steps of a dainty minuet when from the orchestra pit came the strains of "Just a Wearyin' for You." In itself a very pleasing melody, but used in connection with such a picture made the work of both artists appear most ordinary. At yet another time the scene centered about a death bed, and all through it the overture continued fortissimo, the drummer in particular doing his share at what seemed to us an attempt to wake the dead. These episodes occurred in prominent theaters of our country and are but two examples of the utter indifference some directors maintain toward the screen.

In order to properly present pictures the atmosphere of the picture should never be sacrificd to the music. The audience should be but subsequently aware of its presence, preferring the music to be subdued and in perfect harmony with the theme, rather than allowing it to dominate. An appropriate musical setting is to the photoplay what a beautiful frame is to an artistic painting. The music is the "frame" to the picture, and if inappropriate music is used it detracts violently.

Undoubtedly the moving picture has opened up new worlds to the modern musician, yet, so far as I am aware, but two of our composers, namely Victor Herbert and Leoncavallo, have turned their attention to the writing of music for the films. The composer of today displays anything but an attitude of respect toward this new field, yet I believe the time is approaching when we shall learn that not one or two, but many of our foremost composers have contributed to this art.

The possibility of elevating the taste of thousands who do not now appreciate the classics, may play a very important part in the life of an organist or musical director. The audience will listen with attention to music it would not tolerate if played in solo form, owing to the fact it is following the development of a drama on the screen. As Mr. Marum says, "Ethically a good picture cannot fail to leave its impress on an intelligent audience, and in the same degree good music increases artistic appreciation."

Certainly the music usually is on a level with the type of entertainment offered. Arrangers are constantly using old melodies for entirely different purposes than those for which they were meant. Has it ever occurred to us that the moving picture demands an absolutely new kind of music?

That is why I say there is a field and a big field for the young composer to tackle. It will not be long before an enterprising director engages an enterprising musician to compose music for the cinema drama. Only a short time ago the Strand theater of this city offered a cash prize for the best descriptive composition to be used in connection with the films, with the additional inducement of permitting the winner to direct the score at a public performance. This, I understand, brought forth but few compositions of any real merit, which goes to show that the young musician feels that he is prostituting his art should he lower himself enough to compose for the films. Indeed, I should not be surprised to learn that Richard Strauss was under contract to compose an accompaniment to a screened drama. Undoubtedly it would be hard to imagine the pianist of a small town theater playing such a score with but two hands, for such scores would no doubt require more combinations of sounds than the modern Wurlitzer could produce.

The single man orchestra, if the man be of an inventive turn of mind or is the possessor of a good memory, may improvise his score as the picture unreels before his astonished vision, varying it each show according to his whims until it reaches a satisfactory point which is his idea of perfection. Such directors are comparatively rare who, improvising as it were, would be able to rise to the occasion of each individual scene.

A general knowledge of the best piano and vocal compositions, together with a repertoire of organ classics and the better orchestra scores combined with a careful preparation of a picture striving not only to "fit" the picture with good music but also to use appropriate combinations of organ stops, will soon develop an exceedingly good player.

In succeeding articles we shall endeavor to show how certain emotions may be expressed in music, which will be followed by a list of the best compositions for the purpose of portraying such emotions.

IMPROVISING.

Improvising and synchronizing in motion picture music cannot be thought of apart, for improvising is "temperamental synchronization." Synchronization is the welding of picture movement and music movement, the matching of picture mood with music mood, the merging of picture and music in a unit of effect. This phrase is quite a mouthful, yet its meaning is clear. In two words it expresses the instant response on the part of the musician and music, to the "temperamental" (that is to say the emotional) situation the picture portrays. It creates that bond of sympathy and interest between audience and "show" which is the prime factor in the former's enjoyment of the latter.

Mere "timing" is not the true secret of successful improvising. It has its decided advantages, but its evident limitations as well. Adaptability, quickness in handling unforseen contingencies developed in the projection of the pictures themselves, contingencies which call for instant decision on the part of the musical leader, a sense of fitness for "local color" are far more important. Imagination, constant attention to the principle of "flexible tempos," and absolute cooperation with the film operator at all times must underly any motion picture improvising that deserves the name.

Every leader of a moving picture orchestra has his own detail methods of working out his musical synchronization. But "improvising," the ability to duplicate, at a moment's notice if necessary, the dramatic action, mood and atmosphere of the film picture in music, is its foundation. Thus color, contrast and continuity of idea are secured, and the orchestra sounding smoothly and naturally through all changes of scene and action.

RIALTO OFFERS VARIED PROGRAM.

During the week of May 1st, the writer was greatly interested in listening to a musical program at the Rialto, which consisted of folk melodies and fragments of selections from over nine different nations. The following is a partial list: "Overture 1812," Tschaikowsky, France and Russia; "East Indian Love Lyrics," Woodford Finden, India; "Goodbye," Tosti, Italy; "Snow-Breasted Pearl," Ireland; "Prince of Pilsen," Germany; "English Folk Tunes;" "Hands Across the Sea," Sousa, and "Star Spangled Banner," America. Special mention might be made of the Finden Indian Love Lyrics, which are delightfully orchestrated, and lend themselves well for the purpose of creating an Oriental atmosphere.

Play for Comedy.

WITHIN the next few weeks most picture audiences are going to be thoroughly disgusted with "patriotic" subjects; not that they lack patriotism, but because they can distinguish between patriotism and that which is merely a cheap and clap-trap appeal to patriotic sentiment. It is not patriotism which causes an audience or the patrons of a restaurant to stand up when a band of mixed Italians and Germans play the national air. They know that the band is playing the Star Spangled Banner, not through any motives of patriotism but to gain applause. They are not enthused, but they rise even while they curse the leader. In the same way they may stand for so-called patriotic film for a time, but there will be few truly patriotic films produced. For the greater part audiences will realize that the appeal is superficial and insincere. Patriotism—real patriotism—is something too sacred and too deep to be appealed to through clap-trap devices, and managers will make a grave mistake if they load their programs down with this sort of stuff. Early in the war the patriotic film had a run in England, but today the comedy is stronger in its appeal, and the pseudo patriotic story has given place to the picturing of real war and not its mimicing. Start right now to offer comedies. When people go to the theater they seek relaxation. They get all the fictitious patriotism they can stomach away from the theater. Give them comedies and light plays and get your military stuff from the news weeklies and the English and French war pictures. We are going to have a lot of awful rot inflicted upon us. Keep your own programs as free as possible from the so-called "timely" stuff. It will pay you.

For a Record.

The Grand, Donaldsonville, La., uses for its program material a slip 4x8 inches, with portraits of the stars. The reproduction shows the rest, which seems to have been adapted from this department.

Only a part of the program is shown, but enough to give the idea. A boxed underline at the bottom balances the house head at the top and makes a neater make-up than would the straight program. It would be a good scheme to provide an inexpensive envelope or similar holder to contain the programs as they are issued. The holders could be given out as a souvenir or merely on request. The latter would bring the always desirable personal contact with the patron.

Good and Bad.

The Third Street Theater, Easton, Pa., sends in one of the best printed front covers we've seen in a long time, a picture of Norma Talmadge done in photo brown and on the other three pages are three other cuts, each one a coarse screen unsuited to the paper and looking t-o-t-t-e-n. They run this announcement:

> The American Flag is now being very generally displayed as is right and proper in this critical period of our country's history. There are, however, a set of Army and Navy regulations on the proper use and care of the Flag which should be generally made known. They have been printed by the Sons of the Revolution and are being distributed free at this theater, whose manager is a member of the above-named organization. ASK FOR ONE.

As a matter of fact there is no official ruling on flag usage. The army and navy regulations apply only to flags on the staff. But the New York Sun has threshed the matter pretty thoroughly of late and this seems to be the best usage.

In flying from the staff the flag should always be raised to full height. If the flag is to be half masted, it is first run to the top of the staff and then brought down to half staff. It is again run to the top of the staff before being hauled down.

There is no objection to flying the flag all night, but it is customary, for the better protection of the flag, to put it out at sunrise and take it down at sunset.

If hung suspended, the flag should be placed right side out. If the flag is horizontal as when it flies from the staff, then the blue field should be in the upper left hand corner as the spectator faces the flag. If it faces vertically, then the field should show in the upper right hand corner. If two flags are draped together, the fields should come in the upper center.

The flag should be kept in good condition and the edges should not be permitted to become ragged or torn.

There is a Federal law prohibiting the use of the flag for advertising purposes or its reproduction on advertising matter of any nature.

Getting back to the Third Street, Mr. Buss sends in a set of his advertising. We reproduce two example. The first is a four eights run on Monday to cover the three-day period. The cut is not a silhouette, but a poorly printed half-tone of too fine a screen. It looks like a silhouette block cut, but it is not. Here the printer seems to have taken the copy and thrown it into type. It is just about as ugly a looking job as we have seen in a month of years. The whole thing is unlovely in its straight and formal layout. There is not the slightest effort made to get good looking type faces and far too much all capital stuff. The name of the house should have been given a fancy letter and the name of the star should have been a four-line letter fancy. This stuff looks as though the compositor had been robbing the letter boards of the auction sale bills. The man has no shame whatever, though there are job compositors who take a pride in their work. The second example is four tens, a Sunday advertisement giving the week's bill. Here is another case of an advertisement laid out with a straight-edge and no imagination. The lower half should have been split into three parts for the three days. Then the Friday and Saturday panels should have been broken at the bottom to let in the comedy across the double space. The display would have been better. But the job is better set than the other because there are fewer all-cap lines and some effort is made to get attractive type facs. Evidently the two jobs were not set in the same office. Two two-column ads are better done, but they are all type. It is useless to give cuts to a paper that smears the cuts and uses lard and shoe blacking in place of ink. Mr. Buss has the idea when he writes, in sending the samples in: "Several of these ads could be improved upon, but the typesetters of this town dislike to set us ads in any other than the style used since Barnum came to town." It is even worse than that. When Noah advertised his excursion to Mount Ararat (tickets good one way only),

Tin Hats.

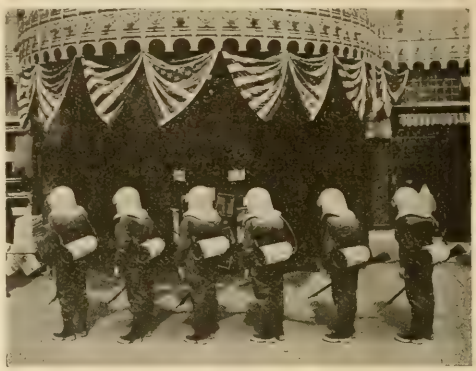
Ralph Ruffner, of the Liberty, Spokane, sends in some pictures of his ballyhoo for "Twenty Thousand Leagues." His own breezy letter tells the story.

Some time ago we had Wilfred Lucas—more power to him—in the Mississippi River classic, "Jim Bludso." I won't go into details now about a line of slide chatter we used as advance, but am enclosing a photo of one of the three sheets we cooked up. About the only thing it represents is a distinctly different style of lobby endeavor, and that "Jim Bludso" could be seen for two blocks. That was the prime reason for using a three-sheet of our own make.

In addition to this you will find photos of the two three-sheets we used on Wm. S. Hart in "The Square Deal Man."

The lettering is white, airbrushed in red, the background is black with a six-inch brilliant red border next to the brass frame, all the way around. The face of Bill was cut from a one-sheet. The title is typically Western and will draw, so we played that up strong. The magic words, "Bill Hart" were also good for capacity, so we played them up, too. It is the sort of advertising that gets in the eye and plays to both sides of the street.

Then the big blow-off: "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." Really think we pulled a strong one in the six "Hell Divers" you will see in the enclosed photos. Had the helmets made in a local sheet metal works; bought a couple bolts of good strong brown colored material and manufactured the suits; air tanks and hose were then procured; the government was requisitioned for six Krag rifles; we bought six pairs of heaviest overshoes, painted the soles to resemble lead, and put them out on the job. The six divers made all the schools in the city at recess time, paraded the streets, stood out in front of the box office for ten days, seven days during the run of the picture and three days in advance, and if the six outfits didn't return their "enormous" cost to the house the first hour the box was open, perhaps I'm not competent to judge. In the lobby are two eight-foot sharks and a submarine. We lettered on the sub: "Nothing like it on earth, except the H3," and on the sharks the title of the picture. On the backs of the sharks, facing



"one" as "one" would exit from the theater we lettered our next "Big" attraction. A funny thing: In the photo where the divers are facing the camera, note the fellow on the right end and then note how the sun just tipped his nose, the only spot visible in the helmet.

A theater of The Liberty's calibre is not much on the bally stuff, but I don't think we can be accused of passing up any good bets. It isn't so much what you do as how you do it. An old boss of mine used to spring that expression, and I couldn't help adopting it. It sure hits the hammer where the nail should strike.

"20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," was presented at the following prices, 25c and 50c, with the little folks at a dime even. Six shows a day.

Does it pay to advertise? I can't tell you for "Laffing." But Ruff dodges a little on the advertising challenge. He points tortured cat. Look at this modest little gem. It is three nines and Ruff writes that it made more talk than anything he has done lately.

It is different and drives home a fact in a new way. It's easy to write "come early and avoid the rush," but it won't sink in as that warning does. Let it soak in a moment and you'll find that there is a certain psychology that makes it pull.

laid out, though the printer is careless about the use of all capitals in body type, and he uses too heavy a rule between days. It would be all right to use two-point rule if the entire panel was formed of two-point, but a hairline and a two-point do not work well together. It would be better to cut off with hairline and put a bit of that two-point rule under the date, instead.

Philadelphia Programs.

Since we spoke of the stoppage of our source of Philadelphia program supplies, several readers have been good enough to send in. Jay Emanuel sends in a couple of his own joint programs for the Park and Jefferson. These are the ball program covers of which we spoke lately. One program shows up well, but the other is the limit. The stock is a brown card much deeper than a chocolate. It is printed in black ink, but few will realize that, for the card has to be held at a certain angle before the text can be read at all, and then it can only be deciphered with the utmost difficulty. Stock so deep in tone should never be printed in black if there is any other ink on hand. If black must be used, nothing smaller than a twelve-point bold letter should be used and preferably a glossy black. Gold or silver bronze would work, and so would the lighter shades of red and blue, or even green, but too dark a stock should be used as a cover for a white insert and not as the program proper. Jay has some stuff on the back page that is just what the neighborhood house needs. It speaks of the coming to the theater of the same shows seen downtown at from two to ten times the admission prices. This is something that should be hammered home. Tell them to wait and see it when you have it.

The Owl uses a card program for the week with dated days and scale of prices, but gives only the starting time of the last run of the feature instead of giving a detailed time table.

The Imperial uses a white stock throwaway that does nicely. It is a clean job and the sheet looks well, but some of the text is a little crude. The story of "The Darling of Paris," for example, is condensed into

> The story of a young Gypsy Girl, kidnapped from her mother. Taught to be a criminal, receiving special instruction how to pick pockets. Rebels at this unlawful practice.

There is nothing to show that this is an adaptation of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and no hint of the many striking points of the film. A little more care should be taken to bring out the best points of a story.

Engraved.

Ray Bagley used engraved invitations to launch "War Brides" at the Liberty, Long Beach, Cal., and the job was as carefully done as though he were announcing his own wedding. The stock was just right, the envelopes what fashion decrees, and they went out under a 2-cent stamp. To have mailed out under a 1-cent stamp would have served to defeat the object aimed at, for real invitations are not supposed to go out as third class. A small saving on postage would have thrown away the entire investment, but Bagley knows that too, and so he bought pink stamps for the lot.

Nifty.

One of the best color combinations it has found is shown in a program of the Lehigh-Orpheum, South Bethlehem, Pa. It is a bright lemon printed in photo brown ink. The paper should be a bright color or the effect is not good, but with the proper shade it makes a very inviting issue.

A NEW HELP FOR MANAGERS

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT (Conductor of Advertising for Exhibitors in the Moving Picture World)

A TEXT BOOK AND A HAND BOOK, a compendium and a guide. It tells all about advertising, about type and type-setting, printing and paper, how to run a house program, how to frame your newspaper advertisements, how to write form letters, posters or throwaways, how to make your house an advertisement, how to get matinee business, special schemes for hot weather and rainy days. All practical because it has helped others. It will help you. By mail, postpaid, $2.00. Order from nearest office.

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. uestions should be stated clearly and should be typewrittne or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Suitable Plays.

COMMENTING upon some recent adaptations of stage plays, an author remarked that the good plays were all gone, or soon would be. That is nothing for the photoplay writer to worry about, for it is seldom that the stage successes duplicate their hits on the screen. If you will look over the list and then find out which of the screen successes have been stage plays, you will be apt to discover that the screen hits are generally, if not always, the fairly successful plays rather than the long runs. The really successful stage play is one intimately suited to the stage. It seldom lends itself to photoplay presentation because it depends upon the lines and situations more than upon the story. But the play containing so much story that the action is apt to drag because of long explanations, is the play that in the greater freedom of the screen can be shown in action instead of told about. This is a point most persons overlook. There are plays that have scored successes upon the screen. Therefore the stage play must be suitable screen material. This is not true unless the story of the play suits it for screenings. Such a play will draw on the strength of its stage record and make good because of its adaptability to the screen, but its success is not due to the fact that it is done from a stage play but to the more important fact that it is of a nature that will screen well. It would be better for the business were more plays drawn from original writers and fewer old dramatic successes used, just as we should have better plays with casts of photoplayers than we get with some minor photoplayers and a high-priced dramatic star. There will always exist a certain relation between the photoplay, the drama and the novel, and it would not be at all surprising to find the photoplay being dramatized for stage use instead of the reverse.

Another Sign.

Essanay, it is reported, has opened the Niles studio again, to make Westerns. The length of the new releases is not given, but eventually the one and two-reel Western story will come back. Not long ago practically no studio other than Kay-Bee was making Westerns. The European market would not take the stories up, and there was small demand for them on this side of the water. Now Westerns are coming in and will stay in for a time and will pass out again and come back and again give place to something else. The moving picture is like all other forms of amusements. It swings in and out of favor. Possibly a lot of authors have let good Western ideas be forgotten because there were no demand for Westerns. The thing to do is to put the ideas down and let them wait until the Western comes into its own again. Don't ignore a plot merely because it is not among the best sellers of the moment. Write it out and put it where you can find it in a hurry, for you'll probably be in a hurry when you start looking for it.

The Last of the Inquests.

Edward W. Matlack, of Pittsburgh, writes that the Inquest Club of which he was for so long the Coroner, has passed away. He adds: "The 'Stop thief!' stuff gripped them hard and interest waned. A few of the faithful held on for a time but the steadily narrowing market took the pep out of them and today I do not believe there is a single regular scenario writer sending a thing out from this old village." The Pittsburgh Inquest was the last of the lot and long survived the parent society, which we discontinued when it became a social club and talkfest. Many of the old time writers have quit and the few studios taking free lance ideas are largely dependent upon the novices who hit good ideas only now and then. When the foolishness of the synopsis system is at last discovered, editors will be hard put to get decent material and there will be a scramble for stuff that will boom the market, but the change is a long time coming.

Get a New Style.

There is a large opening for a writer who can invent a new style of comedy that will catch on. Comedy is going to be the coming demand, but what is most necessary is a comedy of a new type. It is not an easy thing to dig out and probably it will be still more difficult to get a producer to see it, but if you can put through a distinctive style of comedy, it will be more profitable to you than to find an open coal hole in the mint. And you never can tell when you may hit upon the right idea. Photoplays are pretty much like dramas and popular songs. In the song publishing end especially a new idea will be followed by scores of imitations, and a dozen different styles may be tried before one catches on. The moment something new does make a hit all the others dash in and spoil the idea with more or less colorable imitations, but the first one makes money. On the stage there is a derth of new comedy ideas, but these would be run on the Hoyt style of plays could an author be found who could write in the Hoyt vein. Strive for novelty, and novelty does not mean something wholly unlike what is being done so much as a new way of doing it.

Keep Off.

Another new scheme to catch the unwary is sent in by a corresopndent. He sent to a New England concern for an advertised treatise on short story writing and received it "pre-publication," which is probably intended to make the comeon feel very important. The letter announces that "we are preparing to issue, in the near future, the first of a volume of short stories by ambitious new writers, free of any expense to them, and would welcome a contribution from you. The object of these volumes is two fold: (1) to prove to the great reading public that we weekly and monthly periodicals of America are not publishing a tithe of the meritorious fiction not being written and (2) to create a demand for the work of deserving new writers who have thus far struggled unsuccessfully for recognition."

Police! POLICE!!!

Here's the rest of the scheme. Each volume contains a blank upon which the purchaser is asked to record his choice of the best story in the book. These are returned to the publisher and the author of the story in each volume receiving the largest number of votes gets a prize of $100.

Here's how it works: "To expedite publication" you send a story with a fee of one dollar "for reading and criticism." You will be told just how to revise the story "in accordance with the treatise already sent." The dollar will be returned "as soon as your story is accepted for publication," but there is no guarantee (naturally) that your story will be accepted. There are literally thousands of writers of short fiction who are positive that only the stupidity of editors keeps them from putting Kipling out of business.

Many of these publish volumes of their own at the instigation of a certain class of "publishers" who fatten on the common failing. Many cannot afford to spend several hundred dollars to publish their own work, but they will spare not one but several dollars to revise their story. During the correspondence, the conductors of the scheme appraise the various writers and accept the work of those who seem most likely to make good salesmen. The book is published in a cheap edition. No doubt each author whose work is accepted has been told that the more books he sells the more coupons will be sent in and probably enough copies have been ordered in advance to pay a profit on the entire edition. All of the unsuccessful authors will be circularized with a smooth letter suggesting that they buy the volume and see what beat them that they may enter the next contest. If any books are left they will be sold to jobbers or the ten cent stores, for whatever the publisher is paid is all velvet.

Probably as many stories as possible will be printed in each volume that as many salesmen as possible may be created, and it is probable that one story will be run that is destined to win the prize and is clearly deserving of the prize because it has been put in for that particular purpose. The scheme is a clever variation of the publication swindle and on its face seems so attractive that probably many will respond, but the chances are that no editor of standing will ever be induced to pay the slightest attention to the book and most assuredly will not look up these authors. It is not intended to help the author nor do the publishers expect that the author can be helped in the slightest degree. They merely want the money.

We hope that no reader of this department will fall for such a palpable swindle.

Machine or Pen.

J. M. Shellman, who used to be the Baltimore Coroner when there was an Inquest Club there, in a recent letter estimates the number of words he has written in the past year and adds that the product must be divided by two because he writes all his stuff in longhand first and then types it. It is better to learn to work directly on the machine, and it is not very difficult, once you master the keyboard, but until you can compose directly upon the machine work in longhand first and then take it over to the machine for copying. But at least learn to do your own copying and in time you'll be able to dispense with the pen.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Trip Itinerary Concluded.

THE END.

Machine Trouble.

Harry Bowman, Greensboro, N. C., writes:

> Can you give me a little help? We sold our Edison and have a Powers Five, which has quite a grind, except when the framing lever is up; then it runs quietly. Of course, I know that the Powers Five is an ancient equipment, but we have one and it is delivering the goods, but for the grind. I have the projection department for the past five years or more on file, but cannot seem to find anything on this particular thing. We have added a "John Henry Ford" to our outfit and are playing school houses during the winter months. Am looking forward to your visit to Raleigh, when I expect to enjoy a personal meeting with you. How can I find the exact date of your visit there? Would have been in Charlotte had I known of your attendance at the convention. Don't let Nancy Hanks, the go-devil, break your neck, for what it supports is of too much value to the profession which you have helped to become a profession.

It is a long time since I have answered a question on the Powers Five, Brother Bowman, but I think you will find the grind is due to worn gears, or, more specifically, worn toggle gears, on left hand side. I am afraid you will have to send the head to the Nicholas Power Company and have new gears installed. I believe the company will loan you a mechanism to use while it is being repaired.

I will arrive in Raleigh 5:20 P. M., Saturday, March 3d, and will leave at 8:52 A. M., Sunday, March 4th, lecturing Saturday night. I shall be very glad indeed to meet you.

So far as the neck busting be concerned, why, I have an abiding respect for that neck of mine, and any time Nancy Hanks determines to get gay with it I will cease feeding her gasoline until she comes to her senses.

Am I Right or Wrong?

C. E. Lin truth, Carthage, New York, says:

Just a word with regard to the point you raised concerning my answer to question 166, at the same time thanking you kindly for the liberal consideration you have given my answers, particularly those you have seen fit to publish.

You say that, while you are not positive, you think the test lamp would burn nearly to candle power when placed across the carbons with the arc not burning, getting 110 volts, or nearly so. Well, there ain't no such animal. The resistance does cut down the voltage whether amperage is flowing or not.

I have not the time to go somewhere and test this matter, but, with all due respect to you, Brother Linstruth, I would have to be shown that particular thing. But, perhaps I am wrong, after all. Will a few thousand of you operators grab your test lamp and see what happens when you touch the wires to the upper and lower carbon arm (taking current through rheostat, of course) with the arc not burning, and report your finding to me? I cannot see where a projection rheostat would reduce voltage appreciably with one-half ampere flowing, though at 110 volts it would require (E÷C=R) 220 ohms to reduce the current to ½ ampere. A 25 ampere, 110 volt projection rheostat offers about (100—½)÷25=2.5 ohms, and how is 2½ ohms going to cut the voltage to 48 with ½ ampere flowing?

If I am in error set me right. This involves a point which has always puzzled me.

Schools.

William Jarva, Chicago, Ill., says:

I notice in the department that you do not recommend any school except that of experience, plus hard work and study. Now I want advice. I have worked as apprentice for a time, but find I cannot live on what the employer is willing to pay. The wage I have been getting as an apprentice was so small that I was compelled to quit and obtain other employment. It might be all right for one who lives at his parents' home and does not have to pay board or buy clothes, but for one who does it is not enough. I am nineteen years of age and am willing to put in a year, or even two years as apprentice. I cannot, however, agree either to starve to death or go naked in order to do it. And now what I want to know is, how am I going to become proficient in the art of projection? I read the department and have several books. I want to become an operator, but do not know how I can.

Now here is a case which goes right down to the foundation of things. This man realizes and reognizes the necessity for apprenticeship. He is willing to serve an apprenticeship, and to study and make of himself a real operator—THE KIND OF OPERATOR THE MOVING PICTURE INDUSTRY NEEDS. But, as he very aptly says, he cannot starve to death, nor can he go naked, and must have sufficient pay to clothe and feed himself while learning. I repeat after him, WHAT IS A MAN TO DO IN SUCH CIRCUMSTANCES? He can "go to school," and will by that process learn some things. He might even be "crammed" to such an extent that he could pass an examination, but having done so he will NOT be an operator in the true sense of the word, because he will be lacking in that highly essential thing, practical experience. Yet having secured a license he will, of course, inflict himself (I use the term "inflict" advisedly) upon the moving picture industry, and we will have another half-baked "operator." I would like to hear from correspondents as to their views on this situation. It seems to me this is an extremely serious matter, and one which is worthy of something more than the once over it has always received. So far as I know very few operators' organizations have taken any adequate steps to provide a really competent apprenticeship under conditions which will allow the apprentice to live decently during the time of his apprenticeship. Personally, I don't feel able to offer Friend Jarva advice which would be of value, but certainly here is a worthy cause, and if any Chicago manager is willing to give him a chance at a wage that will enable him to live, I will be very glad indeed to supply his address. Meanwhile, let us hear from our department correspondents as to their views on this particular matter, because it is of very large importance to those who wish to see projection recognized as something more than mere mechanical work which anyone with a little smattering of experience can perform.

Supply voltage 110, rheostats 1, 2 and 3 are 110 volts, of 25 ampere capacity. What would we get at the arc?

This question was submitted by a correspondent who asked me to let the fans try their wits on it.

Wrong Printing.

H. W. Hall, Cambridge, Mass., says:

I am an operator's assistant in this city, and have noticed that Vitagraph films, and sometimes Selig as well, are so photographed that the frame line comes right square in the middle of a sprocket hole. What do you think of this? I should think they would frame it as nearly as all other films are framed.

Also there are many reels which ought to be junked before they are put on the market. The holes in the reels of one concern have burrs on them so sharp that it is dangerous to handle them, and the General Film has been using such reels. Enclosed find $4 for a Handbook, which I am in a hurry to get.

It is not good practice to print a picture so that the dividing line comes opposite a sprocket hole. The Vitagraph and Selig's attention is called to this matter. Under these conditions it is difficult to make a splice which will remain perfect; also it is hard to scrape such a splice without tearing away a corner.

So far as the reels are concerned, what I presume Friend Hall means is that in punching the reels the die leaves a rough edge. I have seen this same thing myself. It is very, very bad and is due to a poorly made or worn die. It would seem the height of folly to place film on reels of this kind, simply because they may be had a few cents cheaper. The first rewinding might, and probably would, do more damage to the reel of film than the whole confounded reel costs in the first place. Why, why, why will film manufacturers and exchanges carefully watch the spigot, but kick the bung hole wide open in matters of this kind. A roll of film worth more than $100 is placed on a reel that only cost a few cents. It is a cheap, rickety, wobbly imitation of a reel, not fit to wind dish rags on, much less rolls of film. It would seem that a ten-year-old boy ought to understand as simple a proposition as that, yet we find films on these junk reels every day, and know full well that every day the film remains on them will mean a damage to the films of more than the cost of the reel.

In Cold Steel.

Ralph W. Martin, Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

"Where are we at?" Well, I think we are now at that poetical point where the darkest hour brings the dawn. At any rate, let it be so hoped. But you are getting pretty close to things when you are convinced that the lens system needs rebuilding throughout. I will go a step further and say that the whole projector needs rebuilding throughout. And among other things, it is up to illuminating engineers to produce a better illuminant, which, while having lower temperature, will still be brilliant, and have a smaller extension of source, and which will be economic in operation. The condenser will have to be improved. The aperture lens is still a fertile idea which should be held to and utilized if possible, together with any other ideas which may apply to the improvement of objective construction. Then there is the revolving shutter which diligently eats up 50 per cent of all the arc eneregy, and that is a howling shame. But just wait, when you get out here I will show you a mechanism in cold steel—not on paper. An "interesting curiosity" y'know, that really can pass more than 50 per cent of the light through the shutter without flicker. Nope, this is not the same old gag, and I will wager that neither Schneider, Cannock, or even N. P. himself ever heard of this particular stunt.

All right, brother, when I finally arrive in the classic city of Los Angeles, via the Santa Fe, from Santa Ana, I will be very glad indeed to look over your "cold steel" and see what you have to offer. Meanwhile, I have an idea of my own—and no time to work it out.

Motor Trouble.

Ely, Nevada, make the following inquiry:

We have a variable speed 110 volt, 60 cycle A.C. motor which is giving trouble. It will run along with a pulsating noise, the pulsations being at the rate of probably three or four a second, or perhaps more, then suddenly this noise will stop, and the motor will run in a normal manner, but with an increase of probably 30 per cent in speed, which necessitates shifting the brushes in order to reduce the speed. Then again, within a few seconds, or at least not many minutes, it will drop to its former noisy slow speed, which again necessitates shifting the brushes in order to bring it up to speed. Inspection of the motor, to the eye of one little versed in such matters, discloses nothing other than that two or three sections of the commutator seem somewhat burned. When the noise occurs there is considerable sparking. Can you give me any reason for this trouble, and if so, what is the remedy?

We want to put in steam heat this summer, but distribution of the radiation is somewhat of a problem on account of limited room. Would it be practicable to put very small radiator sections around over the house under the seats, or possibly run pipes under part of the seat sections? We have never seen anything in the Moving Picture World on this subject, nor do we find anything in the last edition of the Handbook, which we have.

With reference to the heating matter, I am not a heating engineer, and do not feel competent to give you authoritative advice on that subject. I would suggest that you communicate with the B. F. Sturtevant Company, Hyde Park, Boston, who are a thoroughly responsible corporation, competent to give you advice which will be really worth while. Personally, I don't believe the plan of small radiators would work out with good results. It seems to me it would be very difficult to secure proper drainage. You might much better install an air chamber with steam coils, blow the air over the coils and up through mushroom ventilators placed under the seats.

The information you have given with regard to your motor is so very meager that it is quite difficult to correctly diagnose the trouble.

However, I think the following will come pretty close to the mark; at any rate, it is the best I can do with the information at hand.

The flash at the commutator is due to high or low commutator bars or an open coil in one or more of the armature windings. The pulsating noise which is heard periodically is in all probability caused by loose armature laminations. If good contact is secured on the commutator by the brushes for a certain period of time during the running of the motor and a flash or an open appears on one or more bars, the motor will have an appreciable drop in speed, the armature being carried over by its own momentum, and when good contact is again secured, the motor will pick up its speed. This making and breaking of contact in all probability causes the pulsating noise in the laminations, for when the motor starts to lose speed during the time that the flash occurs, and then suddenly picks up speed when good contact is resumed, their is a violent jar imposed upon the laminations. On the other hand, the pulsating noise could be caused when all connections were in perfect order, and the laminations are simply loose and are caused to vibrate by the effect of the alternating current. Practically the only way to eliminate the trouble with this motor would be to have the armature removed and have its commutator turned down, at which time it could be tested for open circuit and loose commutator bars. It would be a very difficult task for you to tighten up loose laminations. It is a job which could probably only be done properly by the manufacturer of the motor at their factory.

Boylan Even Tension Reel.

On page 233, issue of October 14, 1916, I gave a description of the invention of Gove S. Boylan, Salisbury, N. C., which was being worked out into its perfected form by G. R. Collins of that city. I refer to the reel which has a double hub. This reel has now been perfected, has been thoroughly tested by this department and by operators to whom this department has caused reels to be sent for test. The new reel has our unqualified endorsement.

It is intended to, and in fact does, entirely do away with the necessity for a take-up friction in the projector itself. In its perfected form it consists of an ordinary well-made reel, with a wooden hub. At a casual glance it appears but little different from any other reel, but, as a matter of fact, it is vastly different, and the difference is going to not only save operators a tremendous amount of unnecessary worry through variation in take-up tension, losing the lower loop, etc., but is going to save many, many thousands of dollars to the moving picture industry every year through the elimination of the various kinds of damage done to the film through excessive tension of the take-up.

As I have said, the reel looks very much like the ordinary reel, but here lies the difference. The wooden hub (when I originally described the reel the hub was of iron, but it has been discovered that a wooden hub serves the purpose equally well, and is much lighter, which removes the objection from the shipping point of view) is in two pieces, consisting of an outer ring of wood, inside of which is the inner hub which locks to the magazine spindle in the usual way. The take-up friction of the projector is set up tight, so that it won't slip at all, and the take-up tension is taken care of merely by the friction between the two hubs of the reel, the friction becoming automatically greater as the weight of the reel increases by the film being wound upon it.

It is one of those things which seem so ridiculously simple that you are inclined to smile when you first look at it. I really did not believe the thing would work at all, but, following the usual course, I caused reels to be sent to six operators in various sections of the country for test. To my surprise every one of the reports fully backed up Mr. Collins' claims. I then caused tests to be made here in New York city, and it was demonstrated to me that the thing not only actually worked, but it worked perfectly. The tension provided is ample, yet at no time is there any excessive pull. In fact, in the very nature of things, there cannot be.

The completed reel is the result of many months of patient study and experiment, and in its perfected form has been in continuous operation for about eight months. C. E. Linstruth, Carthage, N. Y., John Griffiths, Ansonia, Conn., F. F. Bell, Palestine, Texas, and W. G. Preddy, San Francisco, Cal., are four of the gentlemen who made tests of the reel. The names of the other two I cannot at the moment recall.

This reel will be known as the Boylan Even Tension Reel, and will be manufactured and distributed by the Automatic Reel Company, New York City.

I would strongly recommend to operators and theater managers that they secure a supply of these reels to be used in their theater. The cost will be small, and the saving to film will be enormous. At least get two of them and try the thing out. I hope and believe the reel will be adopted by the film exchanges in the very near future.

New Film Container.

The Hull-Salmon Manufacturing Company, Baltimore, Md., has presented to this department for examination and approval the Safe-T-First Film Cabinet, which I am very glad to say meets with our unqualified approval. The inventor of this cabinet has been working on it for something like two years. Eighteen months ago a model was presented to the department, but we were not at all enthusiastic about it, since while it had some good points it contained some very glaring faults.

The present cabinet has compartments for six reels, which, of course, takes care of an eight reel show, since there are at all times two reels in the projector magazines. They also make a larger cabinet which holds ten reels. They make it for 10 to 14 inch reels, but we would advise the purchase of the 14 inch cabinet because this size will hold the 10 inch reels, whereas the 10 inch cabinet would not accommodate the 14 inch reels. Each film is contained in a thoroughly fireproof individual compartment, separated from the other compartments by a solid block of fireproof insulating material 1¼ inch in thickness. The cabinet itself is round in form so that nothing can be laid on top of it. More than this, the individual compartment doors, which are also insulated with a thick block of the aforesaid material, raise up, and in so doing automatically lift the reel half way out of the compartment, the doors falling shut by gravity. They will not remain open unless propped up. In front of each compartment is a small metal frame containing a removable card upon which the operator can write either the reel number or the name of the subject, or both.

Underneath the cabinet proper, between the legs, and acting as a brace therefor, is a long narrow iron box, in the center of which is a compartment for hot carbon stubs, covered by a thick cast iron lid, hinged to the frame of the box. On either side of this carbon stub box is a compartment in which the new carbons are held in upright position, one for solid and one for cored.

It is solid, substantially made, and is beyond any question of doubt effective, in that it is convenient for the operator; takes up a minimum of space in the operating room, and thoroughly guards each reel from any fire danger due to an adjoining reel catching fire. I believe it is quite possible that this cabinet could remain in an operating room through a pretty serious fire without the reels in the compartments being damaged in any way.

The device, considering its excellence, is very reasonable in price. It is recommended by this department to the consideration of managers and operators contemplating the purchase of a film cabinet.

Speer Hold-Ark Approved.

The writer is in receipt of several letters from operators of known ability who have tested the new Speer Hold-Ark carbon. These reports are all favorable, therefore on the strength of that, plus what I have myself seen, I am prepared to give the Speer Hold-Ark carbon the approval and commendation of this department.

Wants a Handbook.

C. H. Richardson, St. Johns, N. B., says:

> If convenient kindly advise me as to whether or not your Handbook can be secured in this country, and if so, where I can get it. If I cannot procure it here, I will send direct to New York for one, as I mean to have a copy, no matter how much trouble it may take to get it. The last time I wrote the department I was in France doing my little bit against the Hun. I remained there for eleven months, and was just beginning to think I was immune from shell fire and all the other things they use over there for the purpose of killing people. But I got a rude awakening one day when a nice, little bullet came up and without stopping to knock went right into my left lung, passed on through and went gaily on its way, incidentally putting me out of business. I had a long spell in the hospital, but was finally patched up and it is now only a matter of time until my bellows reach their normal condition.

I don't exactly understand about this. The Brother apparently writes from St. John, N. B., but his address is given as 26th Canadian Reserve Battalion, Army Post Office, London, England. I do not know of any dealers handling the Handbook in the Maritime Provinces, although I believe they are kept in stock in Montreal and Toronto. I would suggest, however, that the better way would be to send the money direct to the Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

I hope, Brother Richardson, your wind-pipe will get well and be as good as ever.

Obtaining a Sharp Focus With Motion Picture Lenses.

THE degree of definition required in motion picture negatives is far beyond that usually necessary in an ordinary photograph, and the coarseness of the ground glass ordinarily supplied for focussing screens is too great for accurate work, especially where the source of light is not of great strength.

A strip of glass or film the same width as the cine film, and two or three inches long is an almost indispensable part of the cameraman's outfit. It is slipped into the film race over the aperture opening and used in conjunction with a focusing loup or magnifier for obtaining an accurate focus.

Especially fine specimens may be made by the camera man himself by following these directions, which are adopted from methods described in The British Journal of Photography.

Carborundum powder may be relied upon, if the finest and purest quality is used, to produce a first-class focusing screen in a very short time. With the exception of the powder, the only thing wanted is a "rubber," which consists of a piece of glass fixed with cement to a block of wood, which serves as a handle. In use the glass or film to be ground is wetted, a little powder is thrown upon it, and then the rubber is brought into play. Of course, the surface of the rubber becomes ground as well as that of the plate, and when it is in this condition it works at its best. The time required depends on the size of the rubber. Using one about 2 inches by 1, a 4x5 screen can be completely and perfectly ground in five minutes or less. It is best to grind a large piece and cut out the best sections for use. A most useful application of the "rubber" is for grinding the backs of lantern or stereo slides. The former are sometimes, and the latter nearly always, all the better for being on ground glass, yet transparency plates on ground glass are not always available. A second cover glass is the usual expedient, but this adds unnecessarily to the weight and thickness of the slide. In view of the possibility of wet and dirt getting on the film side of the plate during the grinding process, it is very advisable to formalin, dry and varnish the side before grinding. Put the slide in a printing frame, glass side out, and grind with a small rubber. Take care that the slide is well backed up, and that the springs are strong enough to hold it up against the rubber. It can easily be packed up with a few spare or spoiled plates, or with cardboard, and then there will be no fear of the plate giving from the rubber, and so letting wet in under the frame rebate. When ground, the glass is cleaned while still in the frame, and on removal the film side should be found to be perfectly clean.

A series of three screens for general and special work is obtained as follows: Take three pieces of negative film and immerse them without any exposure at all in any non-staining developer free from bromide. At the end of five minutes remove two pieces and fix and wash them in the usual way. At the end of twenty minutes remove the third piece from the developer, and fix and wash that also. Next, iodize this third piece together with one of the others in a solution of iodine in potassium iodide. When the action is complete, rinse the pieces and bleach them in dilute ammonia. Then wash and dry. Finally, take the remaining film and immerse it in a solution containing ten grains of potassium bichromate, and five grains of hydrochloric acid to every ounce. When the chlorizing action is complete, rinse the film and put it into a fresh plain hypo fixing bath for ten minutes; then wash well and dry. You now have three screens of different degrees of density. No. 1 is a dense iodide screen, No. 2 a thin iodide screen, and No. 3 a thin "chromium" screen. No. 1 screen will be an excellent substitute for the ground glass in all ordinary work. It can be used without a magnifier or with one, and in either case it will show detail that would not be visible on a screen of ground glass. No. 2, the thin iodide screen, cannot well be used without a magnifier, but while it is too nearly transparent to permit focusing with the eye alone, it shows enough grain to render the use of the magnifier easy. There is no accommodation difficulty, and the detail visible on the screen is a revelation to those who have never used anything but ground glass. This screen is of special value for indoor work, such as architectural interiors and copying. No. 3, the chromium screen, is quite useless without a magnifier, being almost transparent to the eye. But with the magnifier a very fine grain becomes visible, and as it is perfectly easy to keep this grain and the image in focus at the same time, there is no accommodation difficulty. This screen is a substitute for clear glass, and is especially adapted for copying and for low-power photomicrography. For high-power work it does not seem possible to find any good substitute for clear glass, but with moderate powers the No. 3 screen seems to show almost as much detail as the clear glass, while it has not its disadvantages. The screens can be ruled in pencil or with fine cuts to give datum marks. We prefer a cross ruling of fine cuts made with a lancet, but this is only a matter of personal choice. The surface is somewhat readily abraded in the case of No. 2 and No. 3 screens, hence they should be carefully used. It must be remembered that no fine grain screen shows such a bright image as ground glass. In comparison the image looks dull, but this is a very minor matter, and the extra detail visible far more than compensates for the loss of brightness.

Douglas Carnegie, writing in reference to the fine focusing screens made according to the formulae given above, says that though the latter give much more detail than ground-glass screens, yet they labor under the disadvantage that, with the exception of a small portion of the image which happens to lie in the neighborhood of the line joining the eye with the optical center of the lens, the image as a whole is much dimmer than in the case of the coarser ground-glass screens, and, therefore, the eyes must be very carefully shielded from extraneous light, in order to permit of the composition and proper centering of the picture on the screen.

A novel screen is made as follows: A plate which has been exposed in the camera to a uniformly lighted sheet of paper is developed, fixed, and then placed in a bath of hydrogen peroxide acidulated with sulphuric acid. The bath is warmed to a temperature of about 20 degrees centigrade. In a short time the hydrogen peroxide removes the developed silver and concomitantly some of the gelatine in which the silver was embedded, leaving the remaining gelatine in a very faintly opalescent condition. The plate is now washed, treated with Farmer's reducer if it still looks brown, and dried. A screen so made has just enough optical irregularity to prevent the image being viewed through it, but not enough to militate against the presentation of a very fine detail in the focussed image. There is sometimes failure to get a good screen by this process even when observing the same conditions that in previous trials had led to satisfactory results.

A method of focusing, which avoids the trouble of "accommodation," which takes place when a magnifier is used with a focusing screen, containing a transparent patch, is as follows: The screen used is a plate of glass fairly heavily ground all over, with a view to a bright general image, with the exception of a small circular central spot, which is left transparent. Such a screen is made in a few minutes by sticking a small washer on the center of the plate and grinding round this with carborundum powder, using as a muller a small piece of flat glass to which a slab of wood has been stuck to act as a handle. A small strip of tinfoil cut with a razor is stuck across the transparent portion of the screen. On the unground surface of the glass, just over the region of the transparent disc, a small adjustable magnifier of about ½-inch focal length is permanently fixed. (The magnifier actually used was constructed from a cheap linen tester.) The magnifier is focused on the edge of the tin-foil slip and set. It is not necessary to bestow any especial care on this adjustment. The lens is now racked until there is no apparent relative movement, parallax, between the edge of the slip and any selected portion of the image seen through the magnifier when the eye is moved laterally across the field of view of the magnifier. This being the case, the lens image must of necessity lie precisely in the plane of the front surface of the screen. The function of the magnifier here, it will be noticed, is not to aid the attainment of that very uncertain condition, the exact position of clearest visualization of fine detail in the image, but simply to magnify a displacement. Hence there can be no complications arising from unavoidable accommodative changes in the eye.

The delicacy of this method of focusing is quite surprising; the most insignificant rotation of the focusing pinion from the position of zero parallax produces an easily perceptible relative displacement of the tin-foil edge and any selected image detail.

An Attractive Catalogue.

The 1917 catalogue of the David Stern Co. has recently come to our desk. It is well printed and illustrated, containing over sixty pages of matter descriptive of photographic equipment and accessories. There are many genuine bargains offered which may be safely accepted by our readers, this firm's reputation for fair dealing being a guarantee of satisfaction.

Interesting Educationals

Four Travel, One Zoological, Five Industrial and Two Topical Subjects Are Recorded.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"Glacier National Park" (Pathe).

THE series of pictures being released by the Pathe Exchange, Inc., entitled "Our National Parks," is excellent of its kind. The scenes in Glacier National Park referred to here have been photographed with exceptional care, presenting a beautiful photographic ensemble. Among the various points of interest shown are Two Medicine Lake, Mount Rockwell, Mount Henry, and Dawson's Pass. This will be found to be a delightful release, presenting an abundance of scenic beauty. "Odd Small Birds" is an interesting short bit on the same reel with "Glacier National Park."

"Ascent of the Matterhorn."

"The Ascent of the Matterhorn" (Educational Films Corporation of America) consists of a series of beautiful views taken in the neighborhood of the famous Swiss mountain which raises its lofty peak among the clouds in defiance to the mountain climber. The Matterhorn shoots up into the sky something in the shape of a man's thumb, and the views close up and from afar contained in this film give an excellent idea of its difficulties and its beauties. Among the scenes shown are the village of Zermatt, the torrent of Zermatt, the Cabine at an altitude of 10,000 feet, the Monte Rosa, 15,217 feet in height; the Breithorn, with some fascinating scenes showing mountain climbers performing dangerous feats in trying to ascend this almost insurmountable peak, and other scenes of equal interest and beauty. A close-up is given of the soles of the mountain climber's shoes, drawing attention to the fact that for lack of shoes of this kind many mountain climbers have met their death. A battle with the elements on a dangerous peak is a thrilling addition.

"Barbados, West Indies" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 28" will be found some interesting views photographed on the Island of Barbados. Scenes in and around Bridgetown include Trafalgar Square, Swan street in the shopping district, Roebuck street and a typical street in the negro section. We also get some glimpses of the waterfront and of the homes of wealthy residents. The tomb of Ferdinando Paleologus, the last of the Christian emperors of Greece, who died in Barbados, is also of interest.

"Famous French Castles" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Reel Life No. 28" will be found views of a number of famous French castles on the river Loire. Among them are Langeais castle, Chenonceaux castle, Chimon castle, the residence of Charles VII in whose reign Joan of Arc met her doom; Blois castle, erected in the thirteenth century; Chambord castle, a residence of French monarchs and where once lived Stanislaus, king of Poland, and Ambroise castle, where Charles VIII lived. This subject presents many views of great beauty.

"Odd Hoofed Animals" (Educational).

Among the odd hoofed animals shown in this subject of the Educational Films Corporation of America are the dromedary with broad feet for traversing the desert and the Bactrian camel of Central Asia. There is also the musk ox of the arctic regions, showing the only one in captivity, with its thick coat and flattened horns growing close to its head. We learn that the musk ox is not only sullen, but dangerous, and is usually glad to do what damage he can. Then we are shown the llama of the South American Andes, and the guanaco, which is also a species of the llama. Splendid pictures of alpacas are included in the film, which is one of the Ditmars series.

"Caviar, a Russian Delicacy" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In Reel Life No. 56 we see how caviar, a Russian delicacy, is prepared for the table. We learn that it is made from the roe of the sturgeon, that it is dried and cured before being packed in barrels for shipment. The poorer grades are sold to Russian peasants, who consider caviar one of the most important articles of their diet.

"Sugar Industry of Barbados" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In Reel Life No. 56 will be found an interesting and well-illustrated description of what constitutes the sugar industry of Barbados. Here we see the natives cutting and hauling the sugar cane for which labor they are paid a few pennies per day and are given all the cane they can eat. We see the cane taken to the old-fashioned mills, which are driven by wind power, and picturesque sights these odd-looking windmills present. Here the cane is pressed through rollers which crush the juice from the cane into receptacles in which it is later carried to the heating vats. The subject is quaint in detail, showing as it does how primitive are the people and customs of Barbados.

"The Toothsome Crab" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In Reel Life No. 55 we learn how the coast waters are dredged for crabs, and how they are cooked alive at a steam pressure of 80 pounds. The crabs are cooked in vats for seventeen minutes, when they are removed and given into the hands of women and girls, who quickly remove all edible portions for canning purposes. We are also shown close-ups of individual crabs, male and female, and also the crab eggs which adhere to the swimmerets until ready for hatching.

"Beating the High Cost of Furs" (Mutual-Gaumont).

A California rabbit farm is looked over for our benefit in Reel Life No. 55. Here we see some of the 500 rabbits where are kept there for breeding purposes, and we learn how the skins of the rabbits are dried and cured and prepared in ways which would defy all but an expert to tell the difference between the imitation ermin, sable or stole turned out from this Californian rabbit farm.

"The Desert Harvest" (Paramount-Bray).

In the Pictograph No. 70 will be found an interesting group of illustrations which show the result of the wonderful work which has been accomplished in the plant world by Luther Burbank. Specimens in the desert wastes of our continent where the prickly cactus abounds are compared with the cactus under cultivation, which have been made smooth skinned and spineless, and whose fruit is now fit for food. The subject is an interesting one.

"School for White Wings" (Paramount-Bray).

From the Paramount-Bray Pictograph No. 70 we learn that a school has been established in New York City for the training of our street cleaners. Here the man whose ambition turns toward the cleansing of our city streets learns how to wield a broom and scraper, how to harness and handle a horse, and how to handle an ashcan without spilling its contents. This subject is a revelation to many of us who believe the street cleaner has only to don his uniform and take his place in the street.

"Speeding the Spoken Word" (Mutual-Gaumont).

Something of how the work of making it possible for us to communicate by word of mouth with our friends and acquaintances at a distance is conducted is explained in Reel Life No. 55. Here attention is drawn to the long stretches of desert or mountain lands which have to be traversed and the obstacles overcome by the employes of the telephone companies in placing lines of communication across the continent, for instance. We see the men erecting the poles and placing the wires, and doing in fact all of the necessary work for the perfection of the system. We are also taken into a central office where we see the telephone girls at work. An interesting and well-illustrated subject.

GAUMONT PICTURES JOFFRE.

The Gaumont Company have been especially fortunate in snapping some of the best poses of General Joffre that have been presented to the public in film. These pictures, taken during New York's reception to the French Commission, show close-ups of him as he is engaged in friendly conversation with some one at his side. They were snapped when he was apparently unconscious of the presence of the camera and help us to understand why to the soldier who wrought a change for the whole world at the battle of the Marne has been fastened the appellation of "Father" Joffre. In the Gaumont pictures we get a glimpse of the man as he really is away from the grim duties of battle, responding to the appreciation shown him by the American public. We have to speak of these pictures because they appeal to the heart as well as to the bump of curiosity. They will be found in the Mutual Weekly No. 124.

Terry Human Interest Reel

A. Kay Company Distributing Series on Physiognomy Based on Studies of Jessie Allen Fowler.

A SERIES of films in which the cartoon work has been executed by Paul H. Terry is being distributed by the A. Kay Company, of 729 Fifth avenue, New York City. The cartoons contained in these films are based on the studies of Jessie Allen Fowler, and claim to teach us how to read the capabilities of individuals by the shape and size of facial features. No. 1 of the series, which is entitled "Noses," displays various specimens of this organ and tells the dominant characteristics of the owners of these particular noses. To back up statements made with regard to the qualities found behind the noses, pictures of men whose achievements are well-known and who possess these certain types of noses are shown, among them Napoleon, Joffre, President Wilson, Roosevelt and Rubens, the painter.

On the last half of this reel, which consists of 900 feet of film, will be found another interesting subject, entitled "Foreign Spots in New York," most of the scenes of which were photographed on New York's East Side. The types of humanity which are shown in close-ups in the film and scenes of human interest in the foreign settlements of New York are unusually well chosen.

New Series for Coronet

"Interesting Incidents Here and There" Follows the Screen Magazine Idea and Has an Individuality All Its Own.

IT TAKES a long time for some of us to awaken to the true significance of the signs of the times; and while some people have been harping on the unpopularity of the educational or informational type of film the live producer has discovered that the public really does want to be educated, but in an up-to-date manner. In other words, it wants all its "show" stuff to be presented in theatrical style. The success of various screen magazines which have sprung into existence in the past year or so are proof positive of this.

Nos. 1 and 2 of a new series of the screen magazine type which is being released by the Coronet Film Corporation, entitled "Interesting Incidents Here and There," consists of tidbits from various parts of the universe. In No. 1 are presented scenes in London, England, opening with a military parade across St. James Square. The town crier also figures by way of a novelty in the English portion of the picture. Scenes in Russia include some interesting types, among them the old clothes man. In Egypt we see steamships about to enter the Suez Canal; and the scenes in Lapland will be found particularly interesting. In the West Indies are seen women carrying bundles on their heads, and also the selling of rope tobacco by the yard. In Japan we see women diving for lobsters and seaweed; and in Ceylon we learn that the women pick tea while the men sail their boats. This reel is completed by a botanical subject, entitled "Do Plants Think?"

No. 2 of the series includes close-ups of a steam shovel at work, broncho breaking, a life saving crew at practice, and some splendid scenes showing the English fire fighters at work on a real fire.

Rialto Animated Magazine

Interesting Subjects Including a Detailed Illustration of the Manufacture of Shoes Comprise Rialto Animated Magazine.

AS IN many other instances, S. L. Rothapfel has again taken the initiative and is putting together his own screen magazine. In doing so he chooses subjects which he believes will interest his patrons from the Mutual, Universal, Hearst-Pathe and International Film Service Weeklies. In addition to topical subjects in the Rialto Animated Magazine for the week of May 13 there was included a well-detailed illustration of the manufacture of shoes. The picture takes us to a shoe factory where we see the uppers of the shoes being cut from pieces of prepared leather, and the soles being cut a number at a time from the more substantial leather required for the sole of a shoe.

The inserting of the eyelets in the uppers is done before they are stretched on lasts and machine sewed to the soles. Finally the welt is attached to the sole, and is trimmed and sewed. This subject was attributed to the Mutual Film Corporation.

Another subject of special interest in this magazine is the opening of the trout season in California. This includes some pretty scenes along river banks where anglers of both sexes are seen hauling in their catches.

The second installment of "Sailors of France" is also included in the magazine, showing the French torpedo boats and submarines in action.

Picture Business Healthy, Says Hoffman

Distributor on Return from Western Trip Declares He Finds No Trace of Pessimism.

"New faces, new interests everywhere," declared M. H. Hoffman. "That was one thing that impressed me very strongly throughout my entire trip to the West Coast and return. My trip, which was taken primarily for the purpose of closing a deal with Izzie Bernstein to handle his productions served to convince me of many deductions I had made on a previous trip only about eight weeks before.

"I hear many people saying that the industry is in a chaotic state. Personally, my opinion is that it is in a healthy condition and denotes the evolution of the business into an industry.

"Old policies, old methods and the disciples thereof are rapidly disappearing from motion picture ranks. Generally speaking, I would say that the exhibitors are in a prosperous condition throughout the entire Western States which I covered. I noticed many new and most pretentious moving picture theaters being built in all sections. Nowhere was there a note of pessimism on account of war conditions or possible future troubles. Film men, like other loyal business men, are keeping their heads and anticipate no great difficulty in weathering whatever storms may arise.

"The open market has arrived and is here to stay. I believe that, within the very near future, the bigger moving picture houses will book far in advance, in a similar manner to that employed by legitimate houses.

NEWMAN EQUIPS NEW OAKLAND THEATER.

The Newman Manufacturing Company, 717-721 Sycamore street, with branch located at 68 West Washington street, Chicago, recently installed all the brass railing work around the orchestra pit, auditorium boxes, loge boxes, balcony and lobby of the new Oakland theater.

Patriotic and Red Cross Films

Abundance of Scattered Material of Excellent Quality to Be Found with Various Producing Companies.

AN exhibitor to be able to place before his patrons patriotic inspiration has only to look about him among the various news weeklies which are at the present teeming with pictures of this form. What they present, however, are necessarily short bits bearing on what is happening in the way of patriotic demonstrations or current military events. These short bits are presented in a stirring manner and doubtless aid materially in inspiring the youth of the country to action. The Universal Film Manufacturing Company, for instance, are issuing an additional weekly release known as "Current Events," which is composed entirely of patriotic matter; and the Hearst-Pathe News, the Mutual Weekly and the Animated Weekly are all in the market with subjects of this kind. Films demonstrating Red Cross work are harder to find, although some of the weeklies have snapped a few things of more or less neutral interest. For instance, No. 37 of the Hearst-Pathe News shows the Red Cross adopting German shepherd dogs; while the Selig-Tribune No. 34 shows fifty Red Cross nurses arriving at El Paso, Texas, to report for duty at the base hospital at Fort Bliss. Considerable of the film material on either of these subjects will be found to be scattered and dealt out in short bits as already referred to. The following list of pictures, some of which are lengthy presentations, may be useful to those looking for films of this sort:

American Soldier in the Philippines—Educational Films Corporation of America.
Battle Hymn of the Republic—Vitagraph.
Declaration of Independence, The—Educational Films Corporation of America.
Eagle's Wings, The—Bluebird—(Five part military drama).
How Uncle Sam Prepares—Pioneer Film Corporation—(five parts)—126 West Forty-sixth street, New York.
Making of a U. S. Jackie—(Reel Life No. 15)—Mutual-Gaumont.
Manning Our Navy—Mutual-Rothacker.
Mobilizing the Red Cross—Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 61.
Mothers of France—World Film—(multiple reel war drama).
Our American Boys in the European War—Triangle—(showing the Red Cross Ambulance Corps at work in France).
Uncle Sam Awake—Rogson Film Company, 218 West Forty-second street, New York City.
United States Guard in Action—(Reel Life No. 28)—Mutual-Gaumont.
United States Soldier, Making a—Universal-Powers.
Zeppelin Attack on New York, A—Mutual-Rothacker.

Here is a picture that tells its own story—or rather one round which almost any exhibitor could write one. It is not a still from any forthcoming "production"; if it were there might be a reason to fear the success of the flotation of the Liberty Bond. It would mean the withdrawal from the ordinary channels of trade of too large a sum of money.

The "still" was snapped at the Artcraft studio. As the story comes to us, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks telegraphed Charles Chaplin over at the Mutual studio that they contemplated suing him on account of sore ribs as a result of viewing one of his pictures. That the comedian has succeeded in compromising the "difficulty" is apparent from the smiles on the faces of the three players whose salaries have been the subject of much discussion in the committee rooms of Congress. While undoubtedly the three have read these outbursts, there is herein no evidence that any of them are thereby disturbed.

Taking it by and large, it sure is a most interesting picture, one possessing almost limitless possibilities in the way of speculation—taking that last word in any old sense you like.

Essanay Cuts Out Depressing Stories

Will Confine Its Production to Subjects of Lighter Vein—Now Purchasing Rights.

PRACTICALLY all future Essanay features will be of the straight comedy or comedy-drama type. To make people laugh and forget their troubles will be the chief aim of these pictures. Acting along this line, President Spoor announces he has purchased the rights to many fiction stories by celebrated authors which have been written in the lighter vein. These will be picturized and put on the market as soon as possible.

"Moving pictures will play an essential part in this great war in which our country is now engaged," said Mr. Spoor. "The sooner exhibitors come to a realization of this fact the better they will be enabled to meet the demands of their patrons. I have just received elaborate reports from our offices in London and Paris. These reports cover the changes which the war has wrought in pictures in those countries. Whereas photodramas which tore at the heart and unfolded the depressing, vicious conditions of life were in vogue prior to the opening of the war, the fact is just the reverse now. The people have enough to depress them with the suffering which their kinsmen are undergoing on the battlefields. They demand pictures which will ease their minds momentarily. Comedy-dramas and straight comedies are what they want, and about the only pictures they will patronize.

"So it will be in this country, I firmly believe. Motion pictures will perform the same functions at home that the Red Cross will perform overseas, in the trenches. It will be up to motion pictures to do a major part of stemming the swelling tide of sorrow. Therefore exhibitors should be forewarned to provide their future programs with pictures of the lighter vein—pictures which will make their patrons laugh away their sorrows and fears of what may be happening to their loved ones across the seas.

"It is for that reason that Essanay will give preference in its productions henceforth to comedy-drama and straight comedies—pictures which will cheer rather than add to the depression. There will be an increased demand for short productions."

"Universal Current Events"

A Patriotic Reel Made to Meet the Demands of the Present Day Holds Special Interest for the Public.

THE Universal Company, having felt the pulse of America's masses, has taken it upon itself to issue a new weekly which is known as "Universal Current Events" and is composed principally of patriotic subjects. In it will be found reflections of what has happened in various parts of the United States in connection with things military and pertaining to the preparations under way for the present war.

In No. 1 such subjects as the following will be found: Wilson and Marshall at America's Helm Will Pilot to Victory; Thomas Alvah Edison, Wizard of Wizards, Out After U-boats; Appeals to Russian Workingmen to Stand Firm for Humanity; Back to Old Friends—Wooden Ships Once Again to Their Own; Middle West Greets French Mission with True American Spirit; French Envoys Greeted by Millions on Reaching New York.

No. 2 shows some official French war pictures, some excellent views of our American hornets, which will aid in destroying U-boats; planting all available space at Fordham Hospital, and a number of other subjects equally interesting.

NEW DEAL FOR K-E-S-E EMPLOYES.

A policy, which first results already prove, is to create a new bond between exhibitors and a distributing concern, has recently been adopted by K-E-S-E, Inc. Every branch manager and salesman is now in a position to profit in proportion to his actual worth to the company in the same relative manner as if he were a stockholder. With a definite quota to obtain, a specified territory to work in, and a monetary interest in the welfare of his own individual territory, each representative will be able to supply assistance and service to his exhibitors in a manner never before attained.

Kentucky League to Reorganize

Meeting Held in Louisville—Herrington Talks on Trade Conditions.

F. J. HERRINGTON, national organizer for the M. P. E. L. of A., arrived in Louisville on Saturday, May 19, following a trip of almost a month, which carried him into the far South. At Memphis, Tenn., he discussed organization of a Tennessee branch with E. L. McElravy, of the Majestic Amusement Company, who will be acting chairman at a state organization meeting to be held June 19 to 20. A charter has already been applied for.

Upon reaching Louisville Mr. Herrington sent out cards to the leading exhibitors of the state, asking them to come to Louisville for a meeting at 11 o'clock on Tuesday, May 22, at the Hotel Henry Watterson. The Kentucky League has not been affiliated with the National for two years, and Mr. Herrington is endeavoring to get the state back in line.

L. J. Dittmar, president of the state association, happened to be in Jacksonville, Fla., and the meeting was called on such short notice that only a handful of local exhibitors were present. However, some interesting discussions were heard concerning exhibiting, big things gained through state and local organization, and such matters as the proposed ten per cent. war tax, censorship, etc., were taken up.

So far everyone is in the dark on the war tax matter, but if such a tax has to go into effect, it is thought locally that the ticket tax on tickets issued through the Government will probably be the best proposition. Mr. Herrington discussed this matter at some length. He also talked on the subject of white and pink show permits, such as have been used in Chicago.

Other topics discussed included the matter of featuring stars rather than pictures, and what this meant in the way of additional cost to the exhibitor. It was also said that the present method of handling films through the exchanges was expensive, and the exhibitor was forced to pay the freight. The matter of general film exchanges to handle films for various companies in given localities was discussed. One of the exhibitors claimed that the star proposition was similar to the star's situation in baseball, and that the situation would remain bad until the producers worked around to a system similar to that employed by the big basefall leagues, where reserve clauses prevent the star from forcing contracts or jumping to other clubs.

It was alleged that at the present time the exhibitors are bidding against each other for the service, while the producers are also bidding against one another for the services of the star, with the result that no one is getting much of an advantage, and the cost of production and exhibiting has mounted too rapidly for the good of the business.

This has been shown in the past few years in the fact that hardly a city can boast as many picture houses as was the case three years ago. There have been too many houses, and they couldn't all make money when forced to pay such high prices for film material, and the producer has been forced to work his prices up due to the steady bidding up of the services of the star.

Exhibitors present at the meeting admitted that the picture business had worked around to a point where the picture was a side issue, and that the public was paying to see the star perform in much the same way as they go to see Wagner play with the Pirates, Cobb for Detroit, or Walter Johnson for the Senators.

One exhibitor alleged that many producers have paid so much money for the star's services, that the rest of the cast was mediocre, in fact the lowest class talent. This condition has resulted in the star getting a better position and a stronger play all the time.

In this connection reference was made to the system employed by the exhibitors of England, who it is alleged are in control of the situation there. It was stated that in England the exhibitors have not overbid one another for service, and work together in harmony, and that conditions for the exhibitor are considerably better than in this country.

The talk on baseball, brought up by the local men, was taken up by Mr. Herrington, who called attention to the fact that the press has never been as liberal with the moving picture exhibitor as with the baseball magnate. "There are ten moving picture or star fans in this country, to one baseball enthusiast," said Mr. Herrington. It was further stated that 1,000 words of free space were annually devoted to baseball to one word devoted to pictures, while on the other hand the moving picture people pay $5 in advertising to $1 spent by the baseball people.

In discussing local organizations Mr. Herrington referred to the work done by the Pittsburgh League, which employs a secretary and has an office or loafing place for members and visitors, where they can get together and discuss conditions. This local also handles supplies, and furnishes them to members at far less than they can be purchased elsewhere as a rule. Automatic tickets which on the open market cost about $100 per million, have been furnished to association members at $47.50 per million, printed on both sides.

Mr. Herrington proved himself an able talker on the exhibitors' troubles, and answered many questions and straightened out the members on a number of matters. Due to the small attendance present nothing was done toward organizing, but an effort will be made probably to get the Kentucky exhibitors together just before or just after the Tennessee convention. At this time a good crowd should be present, as there will be plenty of time to get things in shape for such a meeting.

Mr. Herrington stated that he would be glad to come back to Louisville and aid in getting the association back on its feet, and asked the local men to look into the situation, and advise him of what might be expected.

Louisiana Exhibitors Aroused

War Tax Situation Stirs Them Up to Action—State League Growing.

THE members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Louisiana, the recently organized body with New Orleans exhibitors as charter members, held a meeting on May 22 to consider among other matters the question of the special war tax which is proposed to be levied upon motion picture theaters. Extensive discussion was given the subject, but nothing of a positive nature was accomplished. The effort of the exhibitors is being employed to devise some methods by which the ten per cent. tax on gross receipts may be eliminated, or modified. There is very little doubt that the imposition of this tax will put a good many of the lesser picture shows out of business.

The exhibitors are confronted with a delicate and at the same time a desperate situation. They do not want to be placed in the attitude of being unpatriotic, but at the same time they do not contemplate the loss of their livelihood with a cheerfulness that is unalloyed. As a matter of fact the New Orleans exhibitors have been hit pretty hard in the matter of taxation recently. They have not yet recovered from the payment of a state and city tax that was admittedly excessive. They had no organization and what was everybody's business proved to be nobody's business, with the result that the theatrical tax was slipped over on them and nobody awakened to the danger until it was too late. Several theaters were compelled to close on account of the demand for the payment of this tax and others have been having a sort of a struggle ever since it was imposed. Profiting by the lesson, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Louisiana was formed. It has not been the howling success that it should have been. Jealousies and bickerings have impaired its usefulness and threatened its life until it became imperative that some action be taken. Hence the meeting on May 22. Many new members were enrolled and the progressive element in the organization succeeded in some measure in impressing the suspicious members with the importance of concerted and vigorous action.

It was arranged to send President A. G. Guegle, of the League, on a tour of the state for the purpose of increasing the membership. It is expected that this trip will result in marked improvement in the strength of the organization. There is little doubt that the exhibitors outside of New Orleans are more kindly disposed toward an effective organization than are those of the city where the personal interests crowd and sometimes overlap each other. The leaven of organization has long been working and it is believed that a little effective work at this time will result in great good. When confronted with a common disaster the exhibitors are likely to forget their personal prejudices and work together. Meantime the members are still casting about to suggest some means of wa. taxation which shall enable them to bear their just proportion of the national burden and at the same time protect their business from the danger of annihilation.

Preparing for Pennsylvania Meeting

Much Talent Secured and Many Features Planned for Entertainment.

MEMBERS of the Exhibitors League of Philadelphia are hustling to make the coming state convention to be held at the Parkway Auditorium, Broad and Race streets, on June 25, 26 and 27, the best ever held. From the way they have been going at things it looks as though they would make good.

The entertainment committee announces that they have obtained talent for the occasion, which far exceeds anything they ever dreamed of.

Spaces for the program and for booths at the exposition to be held in the auditorium of the Parkway Building are being gobbled up fast. In fact, so great is the demand for floor space and program that the committee in charge of this work expects to have the entire allotment distributed before the first of June.

The American Fotoplayer Co. have offered the finest fotoplayer they have on hand for the use of the exhibitors during the three convention days, while the services of at least a half dozen of the best organists in Philadelphia have been offered for the occasion. In addition to this a twenty-piece orchestra will help supply a big time in store for all who attend, and from the number of applications for membership thus far received, the success of the affair is already assured.

A ladies' reception committee has been appointed consisting of Mrs. J. O'Donnell, Mrs. C. H. Goodwin, Mrs. B. Amsterdam, Mrs. E. M. Greenberg, Miss M. Reeves and Miss M. Strain. These ladies will take full charge of entertaining the wives of the delegates. Many interesting affairs have already been arranged.

A bevy of the prettiest girls Quaker City can boast of has already been chosen to attend the booths at the exposition.

HERRINGTON ADDS ANOTHER TO THE LIST.

F. J. Herrington, the National League Organizer, called a meeting of the Exhibitors of Memphis, Tenn., on Friday, May 20. His appeal for organization of the State Exhibitors into a State League was met with immediate response and the following call was issued to all the exhibitors of Tennessee:

"National Organizer F. J. Herrington at our request has called a State convention for Monday and Tuesday, June 19 and 20, 1917. We have named date, now you name the city. Wire answer.

"CHAS A. McELRAVY, Acting Chairman,
"Majestic Amusement Co., Memphis, Tenn."

Already the Memphis exhibitors have made application for a charter from the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. This work which Organizer Herrington has accomplished in the short time he has been swinging round the circuit is nothing short of marvelous and stamps him as possessing the qualifications for the position which he so ably fills and so commendably performed when he was the National League's president in 1916.

Milwaukee Exhibitors Protest War Tax

Declare Move Will Drive the Theaters Out of Business—Production Cost Heavy.

ASSERTING that the proposed war tax of 10 per cent. on the gross receipts of motion picture theaters would drive the majority of the houses out of business, Milwaukee members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, at a meeting in the Wisconsin Hotel on Monday, May 21, decided to call a state convention to consider the question on May 31 and June 1.

The imposition of the tax would be oppressive, it was declared, because of the heavy overhead cost of producing and exhibiting pictures, a considerable percentage of moving picture houses in this city and state are not now making both ends meet. The exhibitors declared they are willing to stand a tax of 10 or 15 per cent. on the net receipts, but they take the stand they should not be compelled to pay a special tax on a losing business.

Protest against the proposed assessment will be sent to the Wisconsin members of Congress, to whom it will be represented that the exhibitors are willing to pay any just tax that may be devised.

The meeting was addressed by Fred J. Herrington, national organizer of the League.

The Milwaukee exhibitors are sending letters to all state exhibitors to attend the state convention, and are expecting a large attendance.

The election of delegates will take place for the national convention at Chicago, in July.

Wide Interest in National Convention and Exposition

Delegates from Twelve More States Than Were Represented in 1916 Will Attend the Big Show in July—Far Away Alaska Will Send a Delegate.

ABOUT twelve new states have been admitted into the National League since the National Exposition and Convention of 1916, so that a much larger gathering of representative exhibitors from all over the United States will be present at the convention this year. Wisconsin has just signified her intention of coming in, and has promised to send delegates that are noted for their ability and agressiveness in the interests of the trade.

Miss Rose Tapley, the Vitagraph star, who is making a tour of the United States, called at League headquarters last week and renewed her acquaintance with numerous friends to whom she was introduced at last year's exposition.

Miss Tapley stated that many exhibitors with whom she talked said that they feel it is their duty to attend the coming convention and exposition. They realize that in order to meet unjust taxation, censorship, high licenses, etc., there must be unity of action by producers and exhibitors.

Ludwig Schindler has just invited four progressive exhibitors from Juneau, Alaska, to the Seventh National Convention and Exposition, and it is expected that at least one will represent Alaska at the big affair in July.

Replies are still coming to Exposition headquarters regarding the contest for the best advertising feature or novelty, for the purpose of making the Exposition more popular and successful. Manager Schindler invites "the boys" everywhere to keep on sending in these suggestions, in the hope that some of them can be utilized beneficially. It should be borne in mind that the $50, $35 and $25 prizes offered are still standing, awaiting a winner.

Several artists are now working on the decorative and color schemes for the Coliseum. Sketches are being submitted and the best one will be selected by a board of judges.

A program is being mapped out, of which the keynote will be "something doing all the time." Special and novel features will be introduced during the run of the Exposition that cannot fail to appeal to all classes of people in Chicago.

EASTERN PENN. EXHIBITORS MEET.

The Eastern Pennsylvania Exhibitors held their second monthly meeting in the B. P. O. Elks' Club at Reading, Pa., on Thursday afternoon, May 24. There were twenty-five exhibitors in attendance, with Sam Spedon, of the Moving Picture World and "Wid" Gunning as invited guests. The objects of these meetings is not for organization as an association or league of exhibitors; they are held to get together in a spirit of good fellowship and discuss the questions pertaining to their business interests and act conjointly in bettering business conditions. It was found necessary that the body in meeting each month should have some distinctive title, and therefore it was voted as the sense of those present that they call themselves "The Eastern Pennsylvania Ex-

GOOD MEETING AT GRAND RAPIDS ASSURED.

As the dates of the annual convention draw closer, Secretary Moeller reports that interest and enthusiasm seems to be increasing, and there is really going to be a good attendance. Those from Detroit are planning to leave together in a body and every effort is being made to bring out a large representation from every part of Michigan. Many of the exhibitors will drive to Grand Rapids in their motor cars—those who are lucky. This is just a reminder of the convention dates—June 12 and 13—Hotel Pantlind—Grand Rapids.

APPRECIATIVE WORDS FROM CALGARY.

From the Canadian West was received this telegram on the morning of May 25, signed by the Exhibitors' Exchange Managers' Association and Operators of Calgary:

Calgary, Alberta, May 24.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Our newly initiated Big Chief Manhattan of the Scarcee Indians, formerly Richardson of New York, was tonight allowed to board train for Great Falls after having spent thirty strenuous hours with us.

If we succeeded in agreeably surprising our new chief we still remain indebted to him for the most interesting and instructive address ever heard in this city.

It was enjoyed by every exchange manager, exhibitor and operator in the city, with one of our guests traveling five hundred and fifty miles and still feeling more than repaid for the trip.

A thousand thanks to your publication for giving us this educational feast.

SCHINDLER IN TOWN.

Ludwig Schindler, of the Chicago Exhibitors' League and manager of the National Exposition, arrived in New York City, Monday, May 28, and will remain the entire week.

Screen Club Entertains "Pop" Lubin.

Inaugurates Series of Monthly Dinners with Veteran Picture Man as Guest—Pleasing Entertainment Given.

ON SATURDAY evening, May 26, the Screen Club gave a dinner and entertainment at its club house, 117 West 45th street, New York, at which the guest of honor was Siegmund Lubin, affectionately known to the craft as "Pop." One hundred members of the club and some guests were present to pay their respects to the veteran motion picture producer, who was in fine fettle and who enjoyed the occasion to the utmost.

Edwin Carewe was master of ceremonies and introduced the guest of the evening in a few eulogistic remarks, to which "Pop" responded in his well-known humorous vein. Others spoke on the same topic.

The dinner was excellent and the entertainment which followed was novel in its character and greatly appreciated. Several pictures—old and new, by way of contrast—were shown.

It was announced that the occasion was the first of a series of monthly dinners and entertainments to be held by the Screen Club.

HOROWITZ TO ASSIST YOUNG.

James Young, who will direct the production of Bessie Barriscale's first independent production to be released by Paralta Plays, Inc., a screen version of Grace Miller White's novel, "Rose O'Paradise," will have William Horowitz for his principal assistant.

Robert T. Kane, vice-president of Paralta Plays, Inc., who is organizing Miss Barriscale's staff, picked Mr. Horowitz. Mr. Horowitz is well known for his important work as assistant to Cecil B. De Mille, with whom he was associated during the past three years.

Mr. De Mille was so attracted by Mr. Horowitz's dynamic energy that he offered him a position as assistant in the Lasky studio.

"THE MOTH" NEW TALMADGE PICTURE.

Lovers of motion pictures are beginning to look forward with interest to the next production in which Miss Norma Talmadge is to appear. This photoplay, an intensely fascinating drama of society life which abounds in the emotional possibilities which long ago gave Miss Talmadge an opportunity to prove herself in the front rank of screen actresses, will follow the release of "Poppy," and will be distributed through Selznick Pictures. It has been entitled "The Moth," and Miss Talmadge is now busily at work in her studio at 318 East 48th street, directing every detail of the drama, which gives promise of being one of the most artistic of her screen productions.

Fire Rules Unchangea in Coming Year

Decision Reached By Fire Protection Authorities As Result of Protest By N. A. M. P. I.

NO new rules are to be adopted this year governing the handling of motion picture film by the National Fire Protection Association, which had the subject under consideration at its recent convention held in Washington, D. C., although a report was presented by the association's committee on explosives and combustibles recommending important changes in the film regulations.

Owing to the protest filed by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry it was decided to withhold definite action at this time and to co-operate with the motion picture interests as represented by the National Association.

This should be welcome news to every branch of the trade which would have been seriously affected by the new regulations had they been adopted, as it has been the practice of the National Board of Fire Underwriters to act favorably upon the recommendations of the N. F. P. A.

Albert De Roode, of the committee on fire prevention regulations and insurance, addressed the convention as a delegate from the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which is a member of the N. F. P. A., and filed a brief setting forth the arguments of the film interests against the proposed rules.

Gaumont Men Off to the War

Five Employes Enlist in Flushing Company and Actor Goes To Madison Barracks for Training.

WITH the London and Paris plants depleted of manpower by the war, the Gaumont Company now faces the same condition of affairs at its Flushing, N. Y., studios and laboratory. The first call to the colors takes five men from the factory. They are members of Company I of the Tenth New York Regiment, National Guard. The men who go with the militia unit are M. Blundell, B. Holmes, S. Field, H. Schaefer and F. Peters. It is expected that the draft for the National Army will make further Gaumont inroads.

From the actors who have appeared prominently in Gaumont productions the government has chosen Henry W. Pemberton for intensive training at the officers school at Madison Barracks, N. Y. Mr. Pemberton has been a member of the Gaumont stock company, appearing in many heavy roles.

Among those disappointed in not receiving a "first call" to Plattsburg after having passed the local examinations and having been sworn in was Harry King Tootle, publicity manager of the Gaumont Company. He hopes to go to the next camp.

Capt. Hay Collaborates With De Mille

Author of "First Hundred Thousand" a Visitor at Artcraft Studio in Los Angeles.

IN ORDER that every detail in connection with the intimate war scenes of Mary Pickford's forthcoming Artcraft production, "The Little American," should be correct, Cecil B. De Mille, the director induced Captain Ian Hay Beith of the British Army and author of the famous book, "The First Hundred Thousand," personally to supervise these scenes.

The scenes depicted the French army being driven back by the invading Germans, through a French village. The form of retreat and the working of the famous "75" guns were gone through under the supervision of Mr. De Mille and the military technical director, John Brown, recently of the American Ambulance Corps in France, and with the exception of a few minor details was pronounced perfect by the Captain.

After the scenes were finished, Captain Beith was induced to give a short talk to the entire force at the Lasky studio on his experiences in the trenches. Standing on a table in one of the big sets, surrounded by the French and German soldiers appearing in the Pickford picture, carpenters and the members of the stock company, the captain talked for nearly an hour and was most enthusiastically applauded.

EDWARD LANGFORD ENLISTS.

Langford, one of the most popular of the "featured" players under the management of William A. Brady, has enlisted in the United States army, and will not return to the screen drama until the war is over. His final play before joining the colors was "Partnership" with Gerda Holmes and Arthur Ashley, directed by George Archainbaud.

Irwin Rosen Organizes Company

Forms Progress Feature Picture Company to Produce and Exhibit—Roy McCardell Is Interested.

ONE of the most interesting announcements of recent weeks so far as the motion picture world is concerned comes from the office of Irwin Rosen in the Fulton Theater Building, 206 West 46th street. Quietly and without a single word of his plans reaching the moving picture trade, Mr. Rosen, who has been connected with several theatrical productions during the past three years, has organized a new company to be known as the Progress Feature Picture Company. Associated with him are several men of wealth in the city who have never before been connected with either motion pictures or the theater.

The Progress Feature Picture Company will not only be its own manufacturer, but its own exhibitor. Roy L. McCardell, who is one of the best known picture writers in the country and a pioneer in the business, is one of the active heads of the new company and will have entire charge of the preparation of all scenarios.

The first picture to be produced and exhibited by the new company will be an adaptation made by Mr. McCardell of George Eliot's masterpiece, "Daniel Deronda." Dramatically and scenically the picture it is expected will rank with the greatest motion pictures that have thus far been seen, its production alone costing over $100,000. The picture will be shown simultaneously in several of the larger cities of the country, a Broadway theater having been secured for its showing in New York on the fifteenth of August.

ENTER THE CAMERAWOMAN.

MISS DOROTHY DUNN, actress, author and traveler, has entered a new field of endeavor. She holds the distinction of being the only woman staff photographer in the motion picture field. Miss Dunn is a regular member of the Universal Animated Weekly corps and covers her assignments on the same basis as her male confreres. She operates a motion picture camera with skill and takes pictures wherever she is sent, regardless of the danger involved.

Before taking up the work of camerawoman Miss Dunn was a motion picture actress. Possessing a mechanical turn of mind, she spent her leisure hours in the studio studying the mechanism of the camera. Deciding that there was more excitement covering fires, riots, parades, celebrations, wrecks and the numerous events that the news pictorial men are called upon to photograph she gave up the screen to gather material for it.

Dorothy Dunn, of the Universal Animated Weekly.

Miss Dunn has already established herself as a competent and able handler of the camera since joining the Universal forces.

DINNER TO WELCOME MISS DAY.

To welcome Juliette Day, the latest American-Mutual star, into their fold, Mary Miles Minter, being the oldest star in years of service at the American studio, gave a dinner in Miss Day's honor. The dinner was served at the Minter home and covers were laid for fourteen. Among the guests were Juliette Day, Gail Kane, Francelia Billington, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, Kathleen Kirkham, Lucille Ward, Mary Miles Minter and William Russell, Rollin S. Sturgeon, Edward Sloan, James Kirkwood, Henry King, George Fisher and Edward Peil.

Russian Films Arrive

Nathan Kaplan Brings Many Fine Productions to New York After an Eventful Trip.

THE Russian art films have arrived in this country under the guidance of Nathan S. Kaplan, an American citizen long resident in France and Russia, and the standard works of Tolstoy, Turgenieff, Dostoevsky, Pushkin, Gogol, Ostrovsky, Andreef and other prominent Slav authors will be seen here in their picturized form for the first time outside of Russia, where the filmed versions of their novels and dramas have shared the popularity of the books and stage plays. At the same time the screen acting of the leading Russian artists of the National theaters in Moscow and Petrograd will be exhibited in these productions, including the efforts of Mme. Gzovskaia, Cholodnaia, Caralli, Germanova, Lisenka, Belasheva, Ourevina, Tatiana Pavlowa and Karabanova among the women stars, and Messrs. I. I. Mazjhukhin, Vitold Polonski, N. V. Panoff, Rimski, B. A. Backsheef and A. A. Cheruvinoff among the men. These comprise many of the names that have placed the Russian theater in the forefront of the art progress of the last quarter century. The services of the players for screen work were obtained by special permission of the Czar, and the pictures were shown at Tsarskoye Selo before being exhibited to the public.

At the very beginning the 17,000-mile journey from Petrograd to New York, via Siberia, Japan and the Pacific, the twenty trunks of pictures escaped as by a miracle destruction at the hands of the troublous elements and the fighting in the streets. Mr. Kaplan, accompanied by his wife and with the precious negatives in his personal charge, got out of Petrograd on the second Tuesday of the revolution. Machine guns manned by the police were still firing from the tops of buildings, and soldiers, workingmen and students occupied the streets in wild disorder. He succeeded in obtaining an escort of twenty revolutionary soldiers who were personally friendly to him. Three times was the Kaplan party fired upon by the police on their way from the residential district to the railroad station, part of which was discovered to be in flames.

Some of the soldiers who were natives of Siberia offered to escort the travelers part of their way on the Trans-Siberian railroad train deluxe. The Kaplans were the only passengers, as the terror of the revolution had absolutely stopped passenger business. Even the baggage car had to be specially procured, guarded by soldiers, and inspected by Mr. Kaplan at every stopping place to see that its contents were not taken. At Vladivostock the newly constituted authorities at first refused to let the pictures out of the country.

They broke open all the seals that the Czar's officials had placed upon the goods, saw to it that nothing hostile to New Russia was contained therein, and finally permitted the export because it must needs disseminate the intellectual ideas of the greatest Russian thinkers, whose writings have been indirectly responsible for the birth of the revolution.

The six weeks of the 17,000-mile journey came to an end early in May. The negatives of the films were passed by the Custom House a few days ago, and as soon as prints of some are developed New York will see them in a Broadway presentation. The plan by which the Russian offerings have at last reached America is the fruition of an idea Mr. Kaplan has long cherished, to popularize the Russian authors over here by introducing their greatest works to the motion picture masses. He personally supervised all the productions in the Moscow studios of Chanjonkoff and Ermolieff, and the work was completed between the date of his arrival in Russia just before the war broke out in August, 1914, and his departure from Petrograd in March, 1917.

AS TO THE ACTIVITIES OF STEWART DEVLIN.

Desberger Brothers, managers of the Star Theater, Paducah, Ky., complain of the recent activities of one Stewart Devlin, who is charged with soliciting business for the Desberger Film Company or the Derberger Amusement Company (Inc.), of Paducah, Ky., and with accepting a deposit for work to be done. Desberger Brothers advise all fellow-exhibitors that they have no knowledge of any such concerns as Devlin describes, and suggest that theater men should be on their guard. They inclose several letters they have received from merchants which would indicate that their firm was the one implied by Devlin in his negotiations.

It is a good plan to pay no money to men with whom one is unacquainted or who cannot show even more substantial evidence of honesty than printed blanks.

Showing Pictures in 50 Degrees Below Zero

Exhibitor Dimmick Describes Handicaps of Alaska Theater Men—Manager Proctor Writes from Farthest South.

FROM the farthest north and the farthest south come two letters to the Moving Picture World, practically by the same mail. They are dated far apart, one from Candle, Alaska, being of March 2. The other, from Homestead, Fla., is of recent writing. The messages are illustrative of the wide reach of the motion picture, of the fact that wherever men gather in sufficient number to constitute even a small-sized community there will the motion picture be found.

R. S. Dimmick, manager of the Candle Amusement Company, operating the Aurora Theater, tells of the difficulties of exhibiting pictures in that distant country. The opening of the Aurora in October last was in the nature of an experiment, Mr. Dimmick says. He had had no experience in exhibiting motion pictures. We'll let him tell his own story, however. It should have real interest for every exhibitor, especially those who work under all the advantages that obtain in a large center.

"In the first place," sayes Mr. Dimmick, "I could not myself see where the theater could possibly pay in a community where the population is not over 100 or at the outside 125 in the winter season. I took a long shot, and without the slightest knowledge of the picture business bought a lot of junk in Nome and started up. I had a man from Nome come up here and set up the outfit and start us off. The little knowledge he imparted to us in the short time he was here did not sink in. I got experience pretty fast after he left, however; am running now regularly, and have averaged about two shows a week.

"I have to get my shows from Nome. I have made two trips there with dog teams and recently returned with enough pictures to last until the boats run, which is in July. I venture to say this picture house is running and has run under circumstances that might look impossible to the average man out there. Our theater building is 20 by 40 feet. There is a forty-foot throw to the screen, 9½ by 11½. The thermometer for over a month was down to between 40 and 50 below zero. Of course, we could not afford to keep a fire in the building only during try-outs and show nights.

"I am charging $1 admission for adults and 25 cents for children. I get a good grade of pictures and have a fairly good light, but there is a lot of room for improvement, I am sure. I have sent for a late Power's projector and a new generator which will be here in the spring. I run the projector myself."

G. C. Proctor, manager of the Garden Theater of Homestead, in the course of a letter of inquiry, writes: "Here is one from the farthest south theater on the mainland of the United States—in a live little town too, if one should judge from the looks now. Seven miles of cement sidewalks are being put in, a new town hall is being built, a new theater is just about completed, and an electric light plant is in process of installation. I regretted very much to have to forego the pleasure of meeting and hearing Mr. Richardson on his visit to Miami in March, but was called to Boston by the death of a relative."

NOVELTY SLIDE ISSUES CATALOGUE.

After many months of painstaking effort and careful search of the markets of the world, the Novelty Slide Company of New York, a subsidiary of the United Theater Equipment Corporation, announces the publication of an eighty-page catalogue devoted exclusively to novelties, souvenirs and premiums suitable for the motion picture exhibitor. The catalogue contains over 1,000 illustrations and classifies and lists several thousand interesting articles and appreciable gifts.

This line will be particularly welcome to exhibitors who have been compelled to purchase their requirements from various sources without any guarantee of supply or with any great diversity of selection. The catalogue covers every conceivable novelty and toy, as well as useful and serviceable merchandise for young and old, for gratis offering or prize contests.

CHICAGO EXCHANGE MAN HERE.

R. O. Proctor, manager of Art Dramas Service, the Chicago Distributors of Art Dramas Program, is in New York. He will remain a week or more.

Four Members Expelled from the Chicago Local.

A SPECIAL closed meeting of the members of Chicago Local, Illinois branch, M. P. E. L. of America, was held in Room 512, Masonic Temple, the regular meeting place, Wednesday afternoon, May 23. Notice had been sent out by the secretary to every member on the books, and the meeting was largely attended.

The object of the meeting was to hear complaints against M. A. Choynski, Louis H. Frank, Adolph Powell and Henry Schoenstadt, members of the organization. On May 8 the following notification was sent out by registered mail to each of the members mentioned, signed by Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago Local:

Please take notice that a complaint has been filed against you as a member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, Illinois Branch, copy of which said complaint is hereto attached.

In accordance with Article six, Section one, and Section two of Article four of the by-laws of this association, I have called a meeting of the association, to be held at Room 512, Masonic Temple, on Wednesday, May 23, 1917, at one o'clock P. M.

A copy of the following complaint, signed in each case by two different members of the Chicago Local, was sent out to each of the notified members by registered mail, on May 8:

To the President and Members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, Illinois Branch, Chicago, Illinois.

We, the undersigned, members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, Illinois Branch, Chicago, Illinois, hereby complain against the continuance of membership in said league of (the name of the member complained against was inserted here) and hereby request that a special meeting of the members of said league be called for the consideration of this complaint as provided for under Articles four and six of the by-laws.

The special meeting was called to order at one o'clock p. m., and the proceedings lasted until 3.30 o'clock p. m.

The complaint against each of the men was taken up in the order in which their names have already been mentioned, each case being considered separately, and in each case the vote cast was for expulsion from the organization.

The strongest adverse vote was cast in the cases of M. A. Choynski and Louis H. Frank. The vote cast in the case of Adolph Powell was not so pronounced, and in the case of Henry Schoenstadt the vote showed only a bare majority, quite a number of the members having refrained from voting. The vote in each case resulted in the expulsion of the members mentioned from the League.

Messrs. Powell and Schoenstadt were not present at the meeting.

Grand Jury Votes True Bills Against Nine of the Men Charged With Bomb Explosions or Other Law Violations in Connection With Picture Theaters.

Nine of the men charged with bomb explosions and other violations of the law in connection with moving picture theaters, in Chicago, were named in true bills voted by the grand jury on Tuesday, May 22. Those named and for whom indictments will be asked are:

William Rooney, recently acquitted on a charge of murdering William Cooney and arrested in connection with the pay roll robbery of Stein & Co.; James Gorman, former business agent of Locals No. 110 and No. 157 of the Motion Picture Operators' Union; Jack Miller, also a former business agent of Local No. 110, and now owner of a moving picture theater on the West Side; Henry Gusenberger, said to be a "slugger" for Local No. 157; Frank Gusenberger, his brother; Edwin A. Woodward, business agent for Local No. 134 of the Electrical Workers; Peter Cuniff, former business agent of Local No. 157; William Finstad, also a former business agent of Local No. 157, and Patrick King, alias Kane, said to be a "slugger" for Local No. 157.

Assistant State's Attorney Nicholas Michels stated that owing to the expiration of the statute of limitations, it was impossible to include the following men in the list of true bills voted by the grand jury: Michael J. ("Umbrella Mike") Boyle, member of the electrical workers, and recently convicted on a conspiracy charge; Raymond Cleary, organizer of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and Fred Mader, business agent for Local 381 of the Fixture Hangers' Union.

The testimony concerned twenty-seven theaters, whose owners have either paid, or refused to pay, blackmail. In the latter case the theaters were dynamited, or stench bombs were exploded in them, or the safes in them were blown open and the money taken.

"The Barrier" Opens Successfully.

"The Barrier," by Rex Beach, has aroused keen interest during the first week of its run at the Colonial, and the press has been liberal in praising the production.

Kitty Kelly writes in the Examiner:

"The Barrier" is announced as "vigorous and virile," and the announcement does not overstep. It is both of these things in intensified form. Finesse and charm and grace it doesn't have—but a wool sweater isn't a silk jersey, and you don't expect it to be.

Along with the vigor and the virility, the film has much interest. It tells a straight story straightly and holds the observer to the action, of which there is a great deal. Frontier simplicity keys the composition, which deals with the primary emotions, love, hate, loyalty, sacrifice, unglossed by the refining conventions.

The interest is sustained by the effective playing and characterizations of the company of people to whose care is entrusted the story's picturing. * * * The Poleon Doret of Mitchell Lewis is memorable in his gigantic strength and his touching courage of renunciation.

Splendid outdoor settings add to the picture's appeal and it is happily directed for dramatic effect. The complete impression is very much the same kind that one takes away from the Beach novels.

Mae Tinee in the Tribune:

The novel by Rex Beach was one of the most popular books ever published. As a play—Theodore Roberts starred in it—it was a success, and now as a picture offering we have it red-blooded, teeming with interest, peopled with fascinating characters, redolent of the great out of doors. * * *

It is averred that Rex Beach himself chose the characters. If this is true, one humbly suggests to producers that in the future the author be allowed to do it. To my way of thinking, the cast is remarkable. * * *

The picture will, I predict, draw to the theater men with whom pictures are not a hobby, for it's a "fillum" after their own hearts. And the average woman will enjoy it for the love story that runs through it, if for nothing else.

I shall see it again, because I want to.

Louella O. Parsons in the Herald:

"The Barrier" is amazingly well acted, considering its lack of histrionic celebrities. It is unusual to see a truly admirable display of talent where no name is starred. Movie-goers will turn into the Colonial because they are familiar with Rex Beach, not because of any call of a great player's name.* * *

There is some splendid fighting during the climax of the picture, fighting that is realistic and gruesome.

Scenic effects are spectacularly beautiful along the river in the Klondike district.

The dominating character of the production is Poleon. Heart interest will draw toward him—this simple-minded French-Canadian, fearing no man, despising no woman, whose optimism and wholesomeness is the inspiration of the picture.

W. K. Hollander in the News:

"The Barrier," by Rex Beach, is a worthy successor to "The Spoilers," the author's earlier screen success. Both stories take their origin from the gold rush days in Alaska and each gives a vivid impression of the conditions there when the prospectors, representing variegated types, poured in from every corner of the earth. Edgar Lewis, who executed the transition of "The Barrier," recites it briefly, compactly and well through a number of perfect types who adorn their roles splendidly.

Chicago Film Brevities.

A recent letter from W. W. Watts, of Springfield, treasurer of the Illinois State League, to President Joseph Hopp, of the Chicago Local, gave the information that up to Friday, May 18, inclusive, the Guernsey state censorship bill for moving pictures had not been called up for final reading in the House of Representatives.

On Friday, June 1, the committee on licenses in the city council will take up the matter of the gradual increase of city licenses, including those for moving picture theaters. As that is the date of the regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Local, the officers, in sending out notice to members, urged them to be in the city council committee rooms at 10.00 a. m., and immediately after the proceedings to meet in their hall, in the Masonic Temple.

The Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago held a regular meeting at the clubrooms, 207 S. Wabash avenue, Friday evening, May 25. The event was given over to the Sunshine Film Corporation and a big cabaret entertainment and a buffet lunch was furnished. K. M. Scoville, general manager of the Sunshine Film Corporation; S. S. Strauss, secretary and treasurer; William Buckley and Richard C. Travers, directors, and other members of the staff were present.

Wm. S. Hart, the popular and widely known photoplayer in western stories, will arrive in Chicago Monday morning, May 28, where he will remain until Wednesday night, when he will leave for Minneapolis. Some of the theaters in Chicago, in which Triangle pictures are shown, will be visited by Mr. Hart, and he will deliver in each a characteristic address.

The fifth annual benefit performance in aid of the American Theatrical Hospital Association was given at the Auditorium Sunday afternoon, May 20, to a great audience. Over $5,000 was taken in for the hospital, located at 850 Irving Park boulevard, this city, and the only institution of its kind in the world. In it actors, vaudeville players and others connected with theatrical amusements will be treated free of charge, when unable to pay. Judge Charles N. Goodnow, president of the Association, is highly pleased with the financial result of the performance, which was attended by many of the most prominent people in the city.

Universal's big feature, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," began an indefinite run at the La Salle theater beginning Sunday, May 27 . This is one of the theaters controlled by Jones, Linick & Schaefer, and the big feature is being handled by the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., which owns the state rights for Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky. This feature had a popular run at the Studebaker some time ago.

At the convention of Advertising Clubs scheduled to meet in the Jefferson Hotel, St. Louis, June 2-7, inclusive, the Screenews Magazine of the American Bioscope Co. will be given its initial showing in that city. In addition, J. E. Willis, president and general manager of the company, has made arrangements with William Sievers, of the New Grand Central theater, to give a nightly showing of the same issue during convention week in that house. Mr. Willis also states that the first issue of "Types," a moving picture directory of photoplayers now in preparation for release by his company, will carry approximately a thousand actual moving pictures of as many leads, juveniles, ingenues, heavies, character people and comedians available in the Middle West.

Leonora Van Ronkel, wife of I. Van Ronkel, manager of the Chicago office of the Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., recently leased three large south side moving picture theaters from the Boulevard Amusement Co., of which Herman Schoenstadt is president. These include the Boulevard Theater Building, northwest corner of Garfield boulevard and Ashland avenue; the Archer Theater Building, 2006-10 W. Thirty-fifth street, and the Halfield theater, Halsted street and Garfield boulevard. The monetary consideration in these transactions amounts to a handsome sum in cash, in addition to the rents provided by the leases.

The Chateau theater, Broadway and Grace street, owned by Albert Fuchs, who paid $30,000 to bomb-throwers to save it from destruction while being built, has been leased to the Ascher Brothers. It was opened Saturday evening, May 19, with "The Millionaire Vagrant" as the leading attraction. The theater is a magnificent structure and cost $250,000. It has a capacity of 2,000. The music is furnished by a ten-piece orchestra and a large pipe organ. Ten and fifteen cents admission is charged.

Frank E. Woods, formerly general manager for D. W. Griffith in the Los Angeles studio, passed through the city one day last week. He was on his way to New York, where he is well known in the industry, both as photoplay writer and newspaper man.

Robert Goldstein is still trying to find a way through the courts to show his feature, "The Spirit of '76." Last week Judge Kavanagh in the Superior Court refused a writ of mandamus on Tuesday, May 22, and the week previous Judge Baldwin refused to grant an injunction against the city censor board. Mr. Goldstein, it is understood, is now seeking help in a higher court.

The order has been issued by Wm. N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Co., that henceforth every film subject bearing the Selig brand shall bear a closing section which will appeal directly to the patriotism of the spectator. This section is a pictorial in plastic art showing soldiers in the trenches with Old Glory floating near them. Fading in, one reads the motto, "Do your bit; buy a liberty bond." This appeal will be made to millions of citizens in moving picture theaters. An outline of the idea and a photograph of the pictorial work has already been forwarded to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, at Washington, D. C.

Director Colin Campbell will start work next week on a number of spectacular scenes for "The City of Purple Dreams," a forthcoming Selig feature. Several of these scenes will be taken in Chicago. Thomas Santschi and Bessie Eyton are some of the prominent people expected in the city by Sunday, May 27. Work will begin during the week beginning Monday, May 28.

The Selig-Hoyt comedies, the first of which will be released Monday, May 28, are sure to create such a tide of popular favor that great interest will be taken in the photoplayers who appear in the leading parts. Miss Amy Dennis must be placed among the youngest of present moving picture stars. She is only 16 years old, and the camera reveals that she is quite good looking. She hails from Pennsylvania. William Fables has starred in E. E. Rice's "The Silver Slipper" and in "1492." He was also the star in John Cort's "The Alaskan," and has appeared in high-class vaudeville for several seasons. He also starred in burlesque. James Harris was born in San Francisco, and starred in "Eight Bells," and was also featured in vaudeville for eight years. He will be remembered as a leading character in the Winter Garden show, "From Broadway to Paris," with Gertrude Hoffman. J. A. Richmond, director of the comedies, has appeared in "Ben Hur," in an important role. He has also played with Amelia Bingham, James K. Hackett, Henrietta Crosman and other prominent dramatic stars. Mr. Richmond directed moving picture comedies for several well known producers before he joined the Selig forces.

"The Mystery of No. 47," a Selig feature that will be released through the K-E-S-E service Monday, June 4, is now nearing completion under the direction of Otis B. Thayer, at the Chicago studios. Several of the interior scenes of this photoplay are said to be elaborate and beautiful. Ralph Herz, the well-known stage star, appears in the leading role, and is supported by a well selected cast.

Norman Manning, general manager of David Horsley's Studios, Los Angeles, arrived in the city Friday, May 18, on his way to New York, and was still in the city a week later engaged in business connected with Mr. Horsley's interests. This is Mr. Manning's first trip east. He is a born Los Angeles boy. His first experience in the picture business was gained with the Balboa Company. He started as an all-around utility man, and worked his way up to the position of business manager of that company. About seven weeks ago he resigned from the Balboa Co., got married, and signed a new contract with David Horsley as general manager—all in the same day. Mr. Manning is a live hustler, and is known on the Coast as the "boy manager." He is only 26 years of age.

D. W. Russell, formerly Chicago representative of David Horsley, and afterwards London, England, representative for nearly two years, has been in the city since May 18. Mr. Russell is on his way to Los Angeles on personal business.

SAENGER AMUSEMENT CO. IN EXHIBITORS' CIRCUIT.

Announcement is made that Josiah Pearce & Sons of New Orleans, has withdrawn from the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and that the Saenger Amusement Company, Inc., has been elected to fill the vacancy for the New Orleans territory.

Universal Activities

Francis Ford Is Back—Jacques Jaccard Working on New Serial—Marshall Stedman to Direct.

A REPRESENTATIVE of the Moving Picture World went out to Universal City the other day and found things progressing most favorably under the new regime. Henry McRae, who now holds the production reins of that plant, has everything working in clock-like order and has been swamped by applications from the former Universalities who desire to return to the fold.

The familiar face of Francis Ford is again seen on the lot. Mr. Ford is now directing Mae Gaston. Marshall Stedman, formerly employment director, at his own request has been transferred to the producing forces and is now directing a feature in which little Lena Baskett is starred. Pierre Hungate, formerly Mr. Stedman's assistant, is now employment director at Universal City. Franklyn Farnum, the Bluebird star, will be directed by Elmor Clifton, formerly of the Fine Art forces. Jacques Jaccard has started production on a new patriotic serial. The cast includes Marie Walcamp, Larry Peyton, L. W. Wells, Alfred Allen, Willard Wayne and others.

Mr. McRae's right hand man in the scenario department will be Col. Jasper Ewing Brady. Col. Brady is a well known playwright, a soldier, an author and a student. His last connection was with Vitagraph. John Nickolaus, superintendent of laboratories, has also taken over the department formerly handled by Wyndham Gittens, that of film editing, Mr. Gittens having resigned at the same time as H. O. Davis.

Director-General McRae is planning many noteworthy improvements tending toward the betterment of the manufacturing end of his mammoth plant. It is rumored that additional companies will be put on from time to time to handle the increasing demand for Universal features.

Carl Laemmle expects to stay two or three weeks longer in Los Angeles before departing for New York.

Brilliant Affair at Miller's Theater

ONE of the most novel society events of the season was a formal midnight luncheon and private film exhibition given by Miss Wilhelmina May Rector, assisted by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Rector of Manhattan Place, Los Angeles, on a recent Friday night.

The affair was held at Fred Miller's Main Street theater, which was rented for the occasion. The interior of the auditorium was hung with lanterns and decorated with flowers. Rugs and draperies set off the brilliantly lighted section where the tables were laid. Special arrangements by wire were made so that the latest William Fox super de luxe Theda Bara production "Heart and Soul," a picturization of Rider Haggard's novel "Jess," could be shown to Miss Rector's guests.

Over five hundred guests were entertained.

Twelve of the young hostess' sorority associates presided at the tables and twelve assisting women received. Promptly at 1 A. M. the Rider Haggard film was thrown on the screen.

Los Angeles Theater Managers Protest.

Los Angeles theater managers are vigorously protesting the proposed war tax and have joined with the managers of other cities in a general protest to Washington.

W. T. Wyatt recently called a meeting of the local men, who were addressed by Marc Klaw, who is here from New York.

The following letter was drafted and wired to the California senators, Hiram W. Johnson and James D. Phelan:

The Los Angeles Theatrical Managers' Association respectfully urge upon you the seriousness of the proposed theatrical tax. While we realize that all must be willing to bear a share of the burden taken up by our government—the proposed tax seems excessive. But we particularly beg to submit that if the additional tax on railroad transportation is enforced against traveling companies it will increase expenses to such an extent as to eliminate many of the larger ones which are our surest bread-winners. (Signed.)

W. T. Wyatt, Mason; Joseph Montrose, Morosco and Majestic; Clarence Drown, Orpheum; Carl Walker, Pantages; L. E. Behymer, Trinity; Lester Fountain, Hippodrome.

Doner to be Ince Technical Director.

M. Doner, who, for the past two years, has been head of the sculptoring department at the Ince-Triangle studios in Culver City, was this week appointed Technical Director by Thomas H. Ince. Doner is a sculptor and artist with an international reputation, and his works have been awarded many grand prizes in European exhibitions.

Passing of the First Lasky Stage.

The original stage at the Lasky studio will soon be no more. The original floor on which some of the most famous stars both of the stage and the screen have trod will shortly be torn up and a new, modern stage be put in its place. The original stage at the Lasky studio was the washing platform in the rear of a garage and it was upon this that the first production with Dustin Farnum in "The Squaw Man" was made.

At the Fox Studios.

Two productions now under way at the William Fox west coast studios will be finished within the next week. Richard Stanton will complete the story of French Revolutionary times in which Dustin Farnum is featured, with Winifred Kingston in the leading feminine role.

R. A. Walsh will put the last touches to his new Miriam Cooper story. George Walsh last week completed his last production under the direction of Otis Turner.

Because of the illness of Mildred Lee, who was cast for a part in a forthcoming Sunshine comedy on the William Fox programme, Gertrude Selby has succeeded Miss Lee in the role.

McGowan Building Box Cars.

With Chapter 12 of their serial, "The Railroad Raiders," completed, the Helen Holmes company the following day began the production of the thirteenth episode which is to be released under the installment title of "The Road Wreckers." Only two installments are to be finished to conclude the entire film novel.

Because of the continued shortage of rolling stock throughout the West, Producer J. P. McGowan is having three practical box cars built by his technical force for use in the production of this episode.

The cars are being built by Technical Director Clyde Roe. They are being constructed according to standard specifications. When completed they are to be taken to a point out of the city limits where the most sensational wreck of the serial is to be staged with them.

Miss Pickford Gets New Dressing Room.

Mary Pickford is to have her own separate bungalow dressing room at the Lasky studios. The bungalow will contain a dressing room, bath, and also a dining room and kitchenette and will be of the typical Japanese style both exterior and interior. In front of it will be laid a small Japanese garden, a special contribution from the Japanese employees of the Lasky plant nursery. Miss Pickford is at present using Miss Farrar's dressing room, but will occupy the new building on its completion.

Bernstein Talks to Women.

Isadore Bernstein, president of the Bernstein Film Productions, gave a talk at the May meeting of the Women's Clubs in Southern California on "Clean Pictures for the Clean-Minded." Mr. Bernstein told the women that the future of the film industry was in their hands.

"If you see a film which is sweet and wholesome tell your friends about it," said Mr. Bernstein, "congratulate your exhibitor. If a picture is run which you consider unclean, warn your exhibitor that he will lose your patronage if he repeats the offense. If you and your neighbors all do this, it will be only a short time before the unclean film will be a thing of the past."

Russell—Burton.

William Russell and Charlotte Burton have sprung somewhat of a surprise on their many friends by flitting away to Santa Ana, where they were married. This is an out-and-out film romance which started in Santa Barbara more than two years ago, when Mr. Russell was specially engaged for an important role in "The Diamond from the Sky." The two were the arch villain and villainess of that famous film serial.

Miss Burton joined the American forces shortly after the company came to Santa Barbara, nearly five years ago. Last winter she resigned to accept an engagement with the Essanay in Chicago. This connection did not prove satisfactory.

Turning 'Em Out at L-Ko.

At the L-Ko studios Director Jack G. Blystone has finished a two-reel comedy, the working title of which is "Alice of the Sawdust." This is the fourth of the series of Alice Howell Comedies shortly to be released on the state right plan.

Noel Smith, having completed his last picture, "Where Are My Children," featuring Don Russell, has started on another comedy entitled "Physical Torture and Mental Culture."

A slapstick two-reel comedy is being made by Vin Moore, in which Merta Sterling is doing the principal comedy part. This is a western story, and a railroad thrill is promised.

Dick Smith has finished a two-reeler entitled "Vamping Reuben's Millions." It will be scheduled for release shortly.

Four Christies Completed.

Four Christie comedies have been completed for June release. Appropriately enough the month of brides opens with "Those Wedding Bells," which will be released on June 4. Betty Compson, Neal Burns and Ethel Lynne are the featured players, and the action is set in motion by two Boston bull terriers, Pal and Runt. The week of June 11 marks Margaret Gibson's third appearance in Christie Comedies, supported by Eddie Barry in "A Lucky Slip." "A Bold Bad Knight," week of June 18, offers Betty Compson, Neal Burns and Eddie Barry in highly diverting roles, with a bal masque for good measure. "He Fell on the Beach," for the final week of June, gives Margaret Gibson an "acting role." Harry Ham is opposite, and Eugene Corey plays a jealous husband with true Latin fervor.

Continental to Build.

The Continental Film Producing Company has leased ground for a term of ten years in Culver City and will build an up-to-date studio. The site covers about five acres of ground, with a front on Washington Boulevard. A two-story building containing thirty-five rooms will be erected and serve as offices, scenario and executive headquarters. Two modern stages with rows of dressing rooms will also be built, as well as various structures to house carpenter and mechanical departments. Around the grounds will be erected a six-foot white wall of ornamental design, on which will be trained climbing vines. All the buildings will be in white. The contract as announced calls for work on the studio to begin this month and to be finished and ready for occupancy within ninety days.

Adams Asks for $20,000.

Eugene R. Adams, who was employed by a film company in Monrovia, wants $20,000 damages from the company for obeying orders to stand still and not look back, with the result that he was struck and injured by a Roman chariot while taking part in a picture.

The suit promises to raise the question how far an employee of a film company should go in obeying the orders of a director in life-risking stunts.

Mr. Adams alleges in his complaint that horses were hitched to chariots and were to run at high speed, and that he was ordered to stand with his back to the horses and enjoined not to look behind him. The result was that he was struck by the chariot.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

The City Council has adopted the ordinance covering the attendance of minors at motion picture exhibitions. In the future children may go to the shows unaccompanied by their parents or guardians. However, anyone under 16 years old may not go to a theatre after 9 o'clock at night unless properly attended. This makes the ordinance conform to the curfew regulations.

First signs of active work on the production of Bessie Barriscale and J. Warren Kerrigan features were furnished this week by the arrival in Los Angeles of Robert Brunton, who henceforth will be studio manager for Paralta Plays, Inc. Brunton returned from a hurried visit to New York, where he went to accumulate studio appurtenances.

F. B. Bennett, well known newspaper and magazine contributor, has been engaged by the Signal Film Corporation for some special scenario work.

Mr. Bennett is a traveler, a chemist, biologist, surgeon and general soldier of fortune.

Tom Walsh has been engaged by Al Christie as assistant director. Tom has been assistant to Henry McRae and also to former manager Lee Doughtery, of the old Biograph.

Kathleen Kirkham, who played the heavy lead in the Clune feature, "The Eyes of the World," has just signed a life-time contract with a well known broker of this city. The wedding took place in Los Angeles last week. Miss Kirkham has recently been playing with the Pollard and Balboa companies.

Colonel Jasper Ewing Brady has again arrived on the west coast to take charge of the Universal scenario department in place of Jack Cunningham, who has been the temporary chief during Colonel Brady's absence in the East.

Manager James Anderson, of Clune's Broadway Theatre, is also to assume the management of Clune's Comedy Theater, which is running Paramount reissues.

T. L. Tally, of Tally's theater, Los Angeles, left this week for New York City in the interest of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, of which he is vice-president.

J. A. Quinn is using the card ads. to good advantage, as one of his many schemes to attract the crowds to his new house, the Rialto, which opened with "The Garden of Allah" on Monday, May 21. Myrtle Stedman was soloist and Joseph Carl Breil conducted the music on the opening night.

Roy Miller, of Miller's theater, was a visitor to the World office this week. Mr. Miller says that the plans for their new theater of three thousand capacity are nearly completed and that the construction work will be started immediately.

J. M. Frazier, of Van Nuys, Cal., is fitting up a store interior for a new motion picture theater. Mr. Frazier expects to start operating this week and his show will be the only one in the town.

Lois Weber, the Universal director, is back in the city again after a well earned vacation. Miss Weber will soon start production in her own studio.

Jack Gardner, musical comedy star, has arrived in the city to appear in features for Essanay.

Theda Bara did not arrive this week as anticipated. We called up the Fox studios and were told by Director of Publicity A. B. Bernd that the famous vampire star would probably be there within another week.

Colin Campbell, the head of the Selig directorial forces, has left Los Angeles this week for Chicago, to confer with Colonel Selig relative to his next feature production.

Nicholas Dunaew, who has been working at Universal City, is taking a short vacation in San Francisco.

Filming the Land of the Rising Sun

Experiences of Harry W. Lyon in Photographing Scenes and Incidents in the Japanese Empire.

THAT the making of a travelogue is the finest sort of tonic to the jaded soul of the cinematographer is the opinion of Cameraman Harry W. Lyon, who recently returned from a six months' trip through Japan and Korea. That it is arduous and fatiguing work he admits—with emphasis—but derives his stimulation from the extreme novelty of it and the inspiration of quaintly beautiful settings, as well as the self-confessed conviction that never again will studio work seem laborious.

An average of twenty hours a day would appear to be a pretty full complement of effort, but it was a necessary one. After exposure film must be developed at once in Japan. The air is excessively humid, and allowing film to stand for twenty-four hours means taking the chance of finding it covered with a healthy crop of fuzzy, green mildew, and of no use except, perhaps, to a botanist.

Harry W. Lyon.

What was said to be the first drying drum in Japan was constructed in the improvised laboratory, and after developing and winding the day's exposures on the drum it was turned by hand from two to three hours. The dry film was then canned and sealed. The effectiveness of this proceedure was demonstrated by the fact that not a foot of negative came back with the slightest trace of mold. It must have been equally plain that the cameraman came back on the job in the morning without the slightest trace of having overslept.

Light conditions were found to be good for two widely different reasons; one being the slight yellowness of full sunlight, yielding a softness of negative which, peculiarly, required no greater exposure than the whiter light of our United States. The second reason is involved in the fact that a large proportion of the work was done in the rainy season. While it does not rain in pereptual torrents, as is generally supposed, the sun is seldom seen during this period, but excellent use was made of the dull light by Mr. Lyon, who is by reputation a past master of photography, in rendering the details of magnificent temple carvings and bits of genre where full light and strong shadows would have worked detriment.

To properly picturize Japan it is necessary, in most instances, to go far from the beaten track of the tourist. Such trips may or may not be considered as hardships according to individual opinion, but when one has been a guest of a typical Japanese inn or a Korean hut long enough to be willing to part with his pet focusing eye in exchange for a chair to sit on or a table to eat from, conclusions may be drawn unhesitatingly. Supplies of the customary American food must be taken on such trips, for nothing edible to the foreigner can be found except rice—cooked to extreme dryness and without even salt to flavor it. If he cares, he may try the raw fish, and, although it may seem incredible to the western epicure, it is not as unpalatable as it sounds.

A wealth of amusing experiences, some of which have been incorporated in the production, might well repay anyone undertaking such a work. That Mr. Lyon found his labors agreeable is evident in the beauty of the production which has been pronounced by critics and travelers in Japan as breathing the spirit of that country itself. Many of his locations bear striking resemblance to the best known prints of Japanese artists, indicating a close study and intelligent rendition of the things most loved by the Japanese themselves.

As a distinct departure from the ordinary travelogue production, dramatic stories and children's fairy tales were filmed, acted by Japanese theatrical companies. None of the actors had ever faced the camera, but they worked like seasoned veterans. Camera shyness seems not to enter their minds and they keep scrupulously "within lines." Their methods of acting differ vastly from ours, and difficulties constantly arise in condensing the action into normal footage. It frequently became necessary to demonstrate durig rehearsals, and it may well be believed that nothing is better calculated to make a cameraman feel "mis-cast" than thus to perform before an audience of two or three hundred highly entertained Japanese onlookers. Their enthusiastic approval may be attributed solely to the extreme courtesy for which the people of Nippon are noted.

When through much interpretation and demonstration the idea is finally conveyed to them, they play the scene with amazing fidelity to instructions. Once the camera has begun to grind, further direction is next to impossible, since by the time the interpreter has transposed English thought to Japanese idiom and in turn reduced the result into Japanese language the action would have passed to another phrase. One scene in particular, which had involved an extensive amount of "trick stuff" that had gone beautifully, threatened the cameraman with an untimely death by heart-failure, but was saved by the actor completing a fall just as the end of the film reached the gate.

There were always crowds about the camera when the street scenes were made, filled with the natural curiosity of their first sight of a motion picture camera at work, but to their credit be it said their interest was respectful and orderly. A mild request to move back met with instant and courteous response. It was, indeed, a pleasure to allow them afterward to inspect the camera to their heart's content, asking innumerable questions through the interpreter, and peering into the lens in an attempt to see something of the picture that had just been made.

Scenes were not "grabbed." Jumping from a rikisha and hastily setting up to get get some passing thing of interest may sound zippy, but it does not bring the best results. Everything was worked out with care in regard to background and light, and the knowledge of what was wanted proved to be the most effective safeguard against camera consciousness. Even the children were a surprise in that respect. Tell them once not to look at the camera and they obey implicitly.

An amusing incident occurred while Mr. Lyon was making scenes of the fishing industry with upward of sixty stalwart bronze Apollos. It became necessary to remove shoes and stockings and roll his trousers to the knees and get out some distance into the water. Between scenes one of the young fishermen was noticed standing very close to him and gravely comparing the color of their skins. When detected he laughed boyishly. It soon became a happy game and during the work many others seemed to derive great pleasure in playing it.

The amazing endurance of the rikisha men is a thing calculated to linger long in the memory. In one instance a trip of over eighteen miles up one side of a mountain and down the other was made in three and one-half hours. After a two-hour rest while scenes were being made the return trip was accomplished in about the same time, finishing with a two-mile sprint to the inn for supper. As they wheeled the empty rikishas away the men seemed no more fatigued than when they appeared in the morning.

To feel that one is actually on the spot where history was made centuries ago, to view the scenes familiar to the famous Samurai and Shoguns, dead a thousand years, cannot fail to arouse the imagination which must reflect itself in the results obtained and bring the traveler home with a new outlook and a fresh stimulation for the work of the studio.

The ten reels of sample print which elicited great admiration at its recent showing in Aeolian Hall for Ambassador Sato, under the auspices of the Japan Society, was also the work of Mr. Lyon and his assistant cameraman, Richard Selman. Rounds of applause greeted scene after scene as the beauty and fidelity of things Japanese were unfolded to a critical and appreciative audience.

FORUM FILMS SUSPENDS TEMPORARILY.

It has been announced that Forum Films, Inc., the concern that was organized to release Edison Conquest Pictures, will suspend operations during the summer months and cancel all contracts that have been entered into with exhibitors pending the resumption of activities upon a much larger scale in the early fall. The temporary suspension of business is simply a part of a contemplated plan by which Forum Films will be elaborated and strengthened and made even more attractive to exhibitors and to the public.

Must Exhibitors Pay for Music Rights?

List of the Firms Demanding Royalties for the Use of Their Music and of Those Which Do Not—Letters Outline Each Side of the Issue.

By Frank E. Kneeland.

Firms in Copyright Agreement.

THROUGH the courtesy of Mr. Burkan, counsel to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, we are reprinting a letter sent to various managers advising them of the penalty attached to the playing of copyrighted selections in the theater. For the benefit of those not familiar with this association and its policies, the executive staff is as follows: George Maxwell, president; Victor Herbert, vice president; Glen MacDonough, secretary, and Raymond Hubbell, treasurer. Other prominent members are Ernest Ball, Irving Berlin, Harry Carroll, Rudolf Friml, Ray Goetz, John Golden, Charles K. Harris, Victor Jacobi, Jerome Kerne, Reginald De Koven, Arthur Pryor, Ted Snyder, John Philip Sousa and Harry Von Tilzer.

We are also reprinting a list of the American publishers in this society in order that there may be no mistake in the minds of any as to who are members and who are not.

The publishers are Maurice Abrahams, Broadway Music Corporation, Joseph Daly, Enoch & Sons, Leo Feist, T. J. Forster, T. B. Harms, C. K. Harris, William Jerome, Kalmar & Puck, Remick & Co., Maurice Richmond, Ricordi, Shapiro, Von Tilzer, Waterson, Berlin & Snyder, and Witmark. Besides the American Association nearly every country has its individual society, of which many American composers are members, in order that their compositions may be protected against public performance abroad. Lack of space will not permit us to print the names of the members of the many foreign societies, but these we shall be glad to supply on request.

In brief the policy of this association is as follows: "We propose to prosecute the proprietors of restaurants, cabarets, dance halls and other places of entertainment using any of our works, unless such persons secure from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, of 56 West Forty-fifth street, New York City, a license to publicly perform the same."

The following form letter is sent to managers prior to the taking of any action against the party accused of using copyrighted works without a license:

Dear Sir:—

The public performance of copyrighted songs and other musical numbers in a restaurant, hotel, cabaret, motion picture theater, dance hall, ballroom, etc., without permission of the copyright owner, subjects the proprietor of such establishment to very serious penalties.

The Supreme Court of the United States on January 22, 1917, rendered a decision in the case of Victor Herbert et al. vs. the Shanley Company, holding that the unlicensed performance of a copyrighted musical composition in a restaurant, hotel, cabaret, motion picture theater, dance hall, ballroom, etc., where no charge is made for admission, infringes the exclusive right of the owner of the copyright to perform the work publicly. We inclose herewith a copy of the opinion of Mr. Justice Holmes.

This society was organized to protect composers, authors and publishers against such rendition of their compositions, and for the purpose of licensing the public performance of the works of its members, who comprise most of the well-known authors, composers and publishers of America, England, Italy and Austria.

Licenses are issued from this office, and we recommend your early application, stating whether for an individual, co-partnership or corporation. Inclosed herewith you will find application blank for license, upon the basis of which declaration a contract license will be issued for your establishment.

If no license is secured, then you are hereby notified to prohibit the rendition upon your premises of any works of the members of this society, a list of which is herewith inclosed.

The penalties under the Copyright act for the public rendition of copyrighted musical works without the owner's consent are as indicated by the inclosed extract of the copyright law.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF COMPOSERS, AUTHORS AND PUBLISHERS.

Within the City of New York over fifty moving picture theaters pay monthly for the privilege of performing rights a rate which amounts to approximately $5 a month. These are headed by such houses as the Strand and Rialto. The receipts of this association aggregate over $50,000 royalties per annum, and it is said the work is but started.

At the beginning of the dissension between the composer and performer a conference was called of all hotel and cabaret representatives at which time a satisfactory arrangement was made. This was also attempted between the composer, publisher and moving picture manager which resulted in a refusal of the manager to co-operate with the composer and publisher. Hence the matter was at once placed in the hands of the counsel for the Society of American Publishers.

Firms Opposed to Copyright Royalties.

Among the publishers not connected with the above association are G. Schirmer, Inc., Joseph W. Stern, Oliver Ditson Co., Carl Fischer, George Rosey Publishing Company, Boosey & Co., Edward Schuberth, Hamilton Gordon, J. Fischer & Brother, A. J. Stasney and J. H. Schroeder.

The following letter from the G. Schirmer Company is a brief and concise statement of the attitude of the publisher not connected with such an association:

Dear Sir:—

We take pleasure in giving you herewith information concerning the new copyright law.

The decision of Justice Hand of the Supreme Court upholds the right of exacting a fee for public performance, for profit, of any copyright music. It affects, however, only the compositions issued by the publishers who are members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. While this decision establishes an indisputable claim on the part of the said society, this need not necessarily be interpreted as a coercion to pay their demands, for it is easy enough to evade them, merely by not playing the music which is subject to the ban. Several prominent publishers of New York have not joined the society, among them ourselves, Carl Fischer, Joseph W. Stern and others, and they do not intend to do so. The publications of any of these houses, with but few exceptions, are free to be performed without the payment of any fee, and any one of their catalogues is large enough to supply even the most progressive orchestra leaders with sufficient material for all purposes. Thus it is easily possible to dispense with the playing of music which is prohibited. In addition to the publications of the said houses there is a vast mass of foreign publications and others which do not enjoy copyright protection and which are, therefore, automatically free.

Our own immense catalogue of publications, which eminently abounds in music specifically suitable for motion pictures, is known to all progressive orchestra leaders. The liberal use of our music, supplemented by the publications of the other houses mentioned, will safely see you through all difficulties. The few exceptions in our catalogue will be gladly pointed out to you. Furthermore, we are at your service at all times to assist you with counsel and advice. We ask you, therefore, not to hesitate to come to us or to send to us for any information you may desire.

In addition to the demands of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers you may be troubled with similar ones by the so-called French society of a similar name. While the status of the American society cannot be denied, there is still considerable doubt as to the validity of the French society. We admit, of course, the existence of the French society, but we have as yet not seen indisputable evidence of the fact that the society is represented in this country or that it is represented by those who make claims therefor. With reference to the demands of the French society, assuming that they have a legal claim in this country, we inform you that the performing restrictions, first of all, pertain only to the works which are actually copyrighted in this country. The mere fact that a piece is composed or published by a member of the French society does not put it under any restrictions. Its regular and correct copyright entry in Washington must be established in order to make any claim valid.

G. SCHIRMER (INC.)

Among other statements reiterating the sentiments as put forth in the preceding letter of the G. Schirmer Co., Mr. Fischer of the Carl Fischer Company makes the following statement for the house, of which he is the chief representative: "No restriction is placed on public performances of compositions on which we hold the copyright, by pianists or directors employed in moving picture houses."

Apropos of the Carl Fischer Company, we might mention that this house makes a special point of catering to the needs of moving picture theaters. With a catalogue of many thousands of effective compositions especially adapted for the accompaniment of the films, it offers to supply exhibitors gratis, with complete musical cue sheets for all photo play productions in advance of the release dates.

TO TRANSFORM BREWERY INTO STUDIO.

Isaac Untermeyer, Allen W. Evarts and Alvin Untermeyer, as joint tenants, have sold to John W. Mahan the premises 303-323 East Forty-seventh street, New York. The property has a frontage of 275 feet on the north side of East Forty-seventh street between First and Second avenues and extends north to the center line of the block. The brewery buildings on the plot will be altered and reconstructed for motion picture studios by Manhattan Studios, Inc., a corporation recently organized for that purpose.

This purchase indicates that the block between First and Second avenues and Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth streets will become a motion picture studio center. On the Forty-eighth street side are already located the Lee Lash Studio building and a large studio building leased by Metropolitan Studios, Inc., John W. Mahan, president, to the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation and Roscoe Arbuckle.

BILLY QUIRK MAKING BLACK DIAMONDS.

Billy Quirk, whose long record of achievement in the motion picture field needs no re-telling, is producing comedies for the United States Motion Picture Company, of Kingston, Pa., whose Black Diamond Comedies are released through Paramount. Billy, who is president of the Screen Club, writes that Kingston is just across the river from Wilkes-Barre and that the region abounds in good location.

Industry to Back Liberty Loan

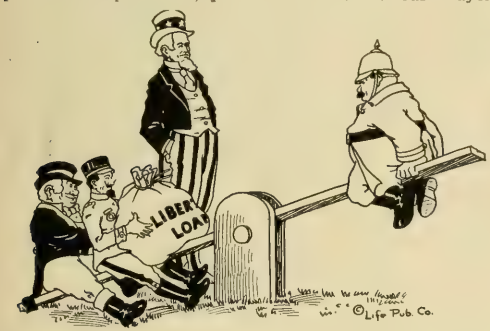
National Association Aims to Raise $1,000,000—Famous Players-Lasky Contributes $100,000.

THE motion picture industry is preparing to do its share in aiding the United States Government in floating the Liberty Loan. Already several of the producers have signified their intention of co-operation through preparation of matter for the screen and also by helping their employes in subscribing to the loan. The Famous Players-Lasky company has subscribed to $100,000. Pathe has arranged for subscriptions among employees so that they may pay for bonds at the rate of $1 a week for each fifty-dollar bond taken. Mabel Taliaferro, Metro player, canceled a pending real estate deal and applied for $25,000 worth of the bonds.

President John R. Freuler of the Mutual has offered to the Government the services of his company in promoting the loan. Mr. Freuler has asked the Gaumont Company, through its cartoon department, to take up the work of popularizing the flotation. The Kalem Company has designed a trailer to be attached to every subject issued from its laboratory which bears the inscription: "Stand by the flag and subscribe for the Liberty Loan." The Universal Company has had made a set of slides urging patrons of theaters to do their bit.

Trailer on Kalem Prints.

Of even larger significance is the action of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which has appointed Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, chairman of a committee to promote subscriptions to the loan within the industry. The committee aims to raise $1,000,000. Arthur S. Friend, treasurer of the Famous Players-Lasky Company and also chairman of the finance committee of the National Association, will have charge of the work of collecting and distributing the subscriptions to the loan.



LIBERTY BONDS FOR DEPOSITS?

At a regular meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Exhibitors of Brooklyn, Local No. 3, Saturday, May 19, it was unanimously resolved that a request be made to all exchanges and manufacturers demanding cash deposits, that in lieu of such cash deposits each respective exchange accept a Liberty Bond or Bonds in the amount of the required deposit as security for the contract; and that all cash now on deposit with the exchanges be immediately converted into Liberty Bonds and such Bonds be held as security.

This being a patriotic step, which in our mind would greatly benefit both the exchange as well as the exhibitor, we think there should be no hesitation in your taking this action. It is also our intention to give the result of this request considerable publicity in order that the exchanges might derive the benefit in consenting to do so.

Kindly advise immediately as the time for subscription for these bonds expire June 15.

Very Respectfully,

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS OF BROOKLYN, N. Y.

MacAlarney to be Scenario Chief

Succeeds Hector Turnbull in Famous Players-Lasky—Will Co-operate with Writers.

ROBERT E. MacALARNEY, former city editor of the New York Tribune and well known story writer and playwright, will succeed Hector Turnbull as head of the Famous Players-Lasky scenario department on June 1. On that date Mr. Turnbull will resign his position as head of the producing organization's scenario department in order to devote himself exclusively to the writing of original photoplays and to the completion of several plays for which he has contracted.

Mr. Turnbull will be chiefly remembered as the author of "The Cheat," a motion picture which created a furore when it was presented by Jesse L. Lasky with Fannie Ward and Sessue Hayakawa in the leading roles. So great was the success of this production that Mr. Turnbull disposed of the dramatic rights of the story and has now completed arrangements for its presentation in operatic form by Camille Erlanger.

Robert E. MacAlarney.

Robert MacAlarney, who succeeds Mr. Turnbull, has been associated with him as a member of the scenario department. He is a Harvard graduate and has established an enviable reputation as a newspaper man and as the originator of the courses in practical journalism now being taught in the Columbia University School of Journalism, with which he has been associated since its foundation in 1912. Mr. MacAlarney is at present a member of the Columbia faculty. He has written scores of short stories for various magazines of international reputation and is the author of a number of plays which have met with distinct success upon the stage.

It is Mr. MacAlarney's plan to work in personal co-operation with photoplay writers in the selection and development of their material for production by Famous Players-Lasky. By the centralization of the purchasing of photoplay material in the New York office and the assignment of individual continuity writers to the various directors, it is felt by Mr. Lasky that the most effective arrangement has been completed for the unification of the producing activities of the corporation while at the same time the individuality of the stars and the directors will be developed to the highest possible point.

CROPPER VISITS NEW YORK TRADE.

R. C. Cropper, president of the largest independent film exchange in America, the Standard Film Corporation, was accompanied by the treasurer of the concern, J. F. Warren, on a visit to New York City last week. The object of their visit, as tersely stated by Mr. Cropper, is to look over the present situation in the East. Mr. Cropper will no doubt return to his main offices with some important information. He is a financier of remarkable breadth and scope of vision, and since becoming the head of the Standard Corporation has virtually revolutionized methods of distribution.

The Standard Film Corporation is the distributor for the Art Dramas Program through Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, and has just taken over, in addition to this already large field of operations, Upper Wisconsin, North Dakota, Minnesota and South Dakota. Mr. Cropper is gaining the confidence and co-operation of the best exhibitors everywhere in this gigantic territory.

Berst Criticises N. A. M. P. I.

Tells President Brady There is Lack of Co-operation and that Motion Picture Trade has Not Been Represented —Suggests Convention at Washington.

BY WAY of bringing matters in the motion picture trade to a head and getting definite, concerted and immediate action on the matter of war tax schedules as related to the picture industry, J. A. Berst, vice-president of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., has written a letter to President W. A. Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, pointing out the inadequate manner in which the trade has represented before the United States Congress and the danger that faces the trade if something definite is not done at once. Mr. Berst advocates the holding of a trade convention in Washington and offers to contribute to the expense thereof. His letter in full is printed here:

New York, May 25, 1917.

My Dear Mr. Brady:—On Friday, May 11th, you telephoned, requesting me to go to Washington, or send my representative, by the next train. Being unable to go, I sent our business manager, C. R. Seelye, who attended the meeting of producers held Friday night and the joint meeting of producers and exhibitors Saturday morning preceding the hearings granted the industry by the Senate Finance Committee.

I find, to my surprise, that only short conferences were held in Washington on May 12th and that little was accomplished then and since with the various congressmen and senators.

Furthermore, it appears that there was an absolute lack of co-operation between the people present, which is absolutely proven by the filing of several briefs contradicting each other and which show that in our industry there is no harmony, and by the fact that congressmen from whom we have heard have not been sufficiently interested to even read the briefs submitted or to learn our aims and purposes from other sources.

The result is that when the House of Representatives as a body were passing the Federal Revenue Bill this week, our industry was entirely ignored and not one single representative raised his voice in our defense, while practically all the concessions demanded by the automobile and newspaper people had many ardent champions, and as a result of this publicity, much sentiment favorable to these industries has already been created and will have great weight when the Senate considers the bill—especially as the Senate is most likely to demand more reasonable and intelligent taxation.

I do not want to criticise what has been done, but I do wish to urge that far more be done.

The Revenue Bill is going to be passed by the Senate very soon, and unless immediate steps are taken, this industry is going to face the consequences of its inability to work hard and in harmony.

There is no time to lose. We must act at once, and I respectfully suggest that you call a convention of all the presidents of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Leagues of the country, and of all the heads of the motion picture distributing and producing companies, and that such convention be held in Washington and convene at least three days; also that all these representatives be called by wire at the expense of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

One brief should be worked out for the entire industry by a small committee designated by the convention, and, like the brief submitted by the automobile industry, should present most comprehensive facts and figures and bear the signatures of all delegates—all demanding with one voice whatever the Washington convention decides is best for the industry. Then each delegate to the convention should personally visit his senators and congressmen and the convention should not dissolve until the large majority of senators and congressmen have been made to thoroughly understand our brief and promise careful consideration of its requests.

Before starting for Washington each representative should wire his senators and congressmen that he is coming on a matter of life and death importance to the industry and that an interview will be urgently required a few days later to consider a brief which will be prepared in Washington and which will represent the request of the entire industry which looks to him for favorable consideration. Certain congressmen who owe their election to a great degree to members of the industry were not even present when our tax bill came up. This will prevent a repetition of similar occurrences in the Senate and in the House when the bill is again referred to it.

Today very few men in the industry know the situation in Washington or what the proposed taxation will do to the industry as a whole. Careful study is necessary. When all factors are properly understood by everybody, I am sure harmony is possible.

To bring the representatives of all the Motion Picture Leagues to Washington would cost practically $5,000, and Pathe will pledge itself hereby to the sum of $1,000 toward such expense.

I will be pleased to hear from you regarding this suggestion and hope that you will see the benefit that could be derived from it, and that you will take immediate action. Yours very cordially,

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

J. A. BERST, Vice-President and General Manager

Brief Submitted by Pathe.

While in Washington, C. R. Seelye, representing Pathe, submitted a brief with the Finance Committee of the Senate urging the adoption of the Canadian system of taxing theaters, which imposes one tax on the entire industry, to be paid in the form of a sur-tax on admission tickets. It was pointed out that this method was simpler and placed the tax at once where it would eventually fall—on the patron.

It was claimed that the footage tax proposed would tend to put many firms out of business, also that it was discriminatory because big features like "Birth of a Nation," which take large profits, require but few positive prints and would, consequently, pay less tax than the regular program subject, which requires may prints and brings comparatively small profits. To throw the burden upon the program class of pictures would defeat the purpose of the act, Mr. Seelye argued, in that it would make the cost of the program picture prohibitive.

Regarding the proposition to place a five per cent. tax on films rented to exhibitors, Mr. Seelye made it plan that such a tax would be passed on to the exhibitor. Producers object to it on the ground that some exhibitors who are in position to do so will refuse to pay the added price; others because they deal with exhibitors who cannot afford to pay.

The rest of Mr. Seelye's brief is a carefully written argument for the adoption of the Canadian plan of taxing admissions, of which he says: "This method is one tax at the box office. Remove all other taxes from the industry. Remove the import taxes, export taxes, footage taxes, taxes on producers, and far more revenue will be derived than by any other method and the industry will be developed instead of killed."

Nat H. Spitzer on Long Tour

AFTER a conference with Louis Burstein, president and general manager of the King-Bee Films Corporation, Nat. H. Spitzer, vice-president and sales manager of the company, has left New York for an extended trip to Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Los Angeles and San Francisco, taking with him the first three releases of the Billy West comedies, "Back Stage," "The Hero" and "Doughnuts," which are offered to state right buyers. The foreign rights of these pictures have already been disposed of to J. Frank Brockliss, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, who has turned over the Australian agency to the Clement Mason Superfeatures, Sydney, New South Wales. Of the United States territory several parts have already been sold, a tribute to the rapid method of handling film propositions which is one of Nat. H. Spitzer's many assets in the business, with every angle of which he is familiar.

Nat H. Spitzer.

More than ten years ago Mr. Spitzer ran a nickelodeon in Los Angeles. A decade is a long time in the annals of motion pictures. Forsaking the exhibiting aspect of the industry Mr. Spitzer proceeded to apply the invaluable experience so gained to the marketing of pictures, a department in which he is perhaps the most skillful exponent in the field today. Thus he has been successfully associated with the sales departments of William Fox, Bluebird, L. J. Selznick and other companies. Known and esteemed from coast to coast Mr. Spitzer brings to his salesmanship campaigns the polished address and savoir faire of the traveled and experienced man of the world. Still under forty years of age, he has sailed the seven seas; has lived and labored in Honolulu, Alaska, Australia; has been a cow-puncher in Texas and a near-millionaire in New York, and withal preserves the optimism and freshness of what appears to be perennial youth.

KERRIGAN TO APPEAR IN KYNE STORY.

J. Warren Kerrigan's production as the head of his own organization will be in a version of Peter B. Kyne's first book-length novel, "A Man's Man." Mr. Kyne is best known as a writer of short stories. Several of them have been translated to the screen. His rugged types of red-blooded men and women in novel and picturesque locales of scene make his stories especially well adapted to pictorial presentation. In this respect "A Man's Man" is remarkable for the opportunities it gives dramatic and technical directors.

The scenes in this story are laid in the West and in a Central American republic which holds a fabulously rich gold mine and an incipient revolution. Mr. Kerrigan will play the role of John Stuart Webster, a mining engineer, who goes to this republic to finance and help exploit a mine discovered by a young protege of his who had been his assistant in a western mine.

Oscar Apfel will direct the production of this story. The adaption for the screen has been intrusted to Thomas Gerahty. Robert Brunton will be technical director.

Reopening Triangle-Fine Arts Studio

Many Improvements Being Installed at the Famous Establishment at 4500 Sunset Boulevard.

KEEN interest among Southern California motion picture folk has been aroused by the announcement that the Triangle-Fine Arts studio in Hollywood is soon to be reopened on a large scale. The studio formerly employed hundreds of performers, to say nothing of a large force of mechanics, clerks and laborers, and the news that it will become active again is welcomed in many quarters.

Recent additions to the Fine Arts studio at Hollywood have put that plant in excellent shape to take on a new lease of life under a new regime. A new central scene dock, 180 feet in length and 70 feet in width, has been built to house the elaborate interior settings that are to be utilized for forthcoming releases. On either side of the scene dock is a runway leading to each of the new stages, while a fleet of large baggage trucks with low wheels is employed to carry sets and properties to their destinations.

The new light studio just completed at the northern end of the property is up to the minute in every particular. It is said to have the highest roof and the best facilities for overhead lighting of any building of its kind on the Pacific Coast. Some idea of its unusual construction may be gathered from the statement that there is a distance of 48 feet from the floor to the first roof girder. A new electric generator has also been installed, and under the guidance of efficiency engineers, the entire plant has been overhauled.

Motion Pictures Expanding in Australia

Burton Holmes Finds Big Improvement in Conditions Since His Last Visit.

BURTON HOLMES, the great traveler, who has now become one of the greatest admirers of the motion picture industry, and who is spending six months of each year gathering new material for the motion picture lovers, has found film conditions in Australia greatly improved since his last visit there. Mr. Holmes, at the close of his lecture tour in this country some weeks ago, immediately set sail for foreign shores, for the sole purpose of obtaining new material for his motion picture travels, which are released exclusively by Paramount Pictures Corporation as the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures.

"Conditions in the film industry in every country that I have already passed through have improved wonderfully since last I was here," wrote Mr. Holmes to one of the officials of Paramount, from Sydney, Australia. "There is a great demand for American pictures and there are over four times as many theaters in each community now than were here some years ago. The American manufacturer of motion pictures is so far in advance of any of his foreign brothers that the salesman has no opposition when he talks of quality and service. There is a corresponding increase of advancement in the type of theaters and their modes of management also. They have got the American idea in its every detail, and when you walk into any of the theaters here to see a Paramount picture, you receive the same amount of courteous attention you would receive from the first class houses on Broadway."

Mr. Holmes stated also that he had secured some very remarkable pictures of his travels, and that the results of this six months' trip would far exceed his expectations. In all of his trips he has been going away from the "beaten path" and taking pictures of the interesting sights that the average traveler does not have the opportunity of seeing.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

Douglas Fairbanks has just passed his thirty-fourth birthday. It seems that Mrs. Fairbanks had laid elaborate plans for a great surprise for the athletic Douglas. In league with members of the company she had arranged for a party. The wily Douglas through some mysterious channel kept in touch with the plans of the conspirators. Hence when he walked into the "trap" he reversed the surprise by distributing handsome gifts to every person present.

A beautiful pair of heavy silver spurs engraved with the smiling face of the Artcraft star was presented to Douglas by the members of his organization.

TO DISPLAY METRO STARS' COSTUMES.

Displays from the wardrobes of Metro stars have been sent to Chicago for exhibition at the National Photoplay Exposition which will open in that city on June 4. The exposition, which is national in scope, includes displays representing every popular star and manufacturer in the United States.

Mutual's Patriotic Offerings

"Manning Our Navy" and "A Zeppelin Attack on New York" Well Calculated to Inspire Patriotism.

IN LAST week's issue "A Zeppelin Attack on New York" was reviewed in detail, and it is therefore only necessary to refer to this release as being one of special interest in a patriotic way and of fine entertainment value. This film is in one reel, was made by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, and is being released through the Mutual exchanges. Another patriotic film traceable to the same sources is entitled "Manning our Navy," and was photographed at the Great Lakes Training Camp.

The opening scene of "Manning Our Navy" shows the parade of jackies through the streets of Chicago for the purpose of inspiring recruits. This is followed by scenes at the recruiting headquarters where physical tests are made. The scene then changes to the training camp, where the necessary physical training is given. We see the recruits having their first lesson in drill; and later we see them at bayonet drill, indoor drill, at sham battle, learning to signal by the wigwag system, and strengthening the various muscles of the body by means of Swedish exercises.

Louise Lovely

LOUISE LOVELY, the talended Universal actress, appears to excellent advantage in "The Field of Honor," five-part Butterfly picture scheduled for release early in June. Miss Lovely has the leading role, one which affords her excellent opportunities to display her ability for emotional expression. She is called upon to portray the most difficult work of her career in this stirring photoplay of the Civil War period and rises to great heights in the scenes where tense dramatic acting is required.

Louise Lovely.

A long career on the stage fitted Miss Lovely for her work in the silent drama. She was born in Sydney, Australia, in 1896, and was educated for the stage in Switzerland. She made her debut in Australia in musical comedy and vaudeville when a mere child and attained instant success. She played leading ingenue roles in an Australian stock company and entered the motion picture field in Australia with the Biograph Company. Since joining the Universal she has been starred in a score of feature dramas.

"The Field of Honor" presents her in a part entirely different from any she has heretofore portrayed and to which she adds much in the interpretation of it. As the wife of a coward, who shows his true character on the battlefield and who she believes to have died a hero, she plays with charm and dignity. When she discovers the truth about her husband, her acting then becomes inspiring in its vigor and forcefulness.

This feature, which is a film version of the original story by Brand Whitlock, was produced by Allen Holubar, who also plays the leading role opposite Miss Lovely.

"DAUGHTER OF THE GODS" OPENS IN ENGLAND.

The premiere performance in England of William Fox's beautiful million-dollar fantasy, "A Daughter of the Gods," in which Annette Kellermann is starred, took place at the famous London Opera House in the metropolis on Monday night, May 21.

A symphony orchestra of fifty pieces played the unusually elaborate musical score composed by Robert Hood Bowers. Special electrical effects were introduced for the first time in Europe.

"A Daughter of the Gods" will, during the coming summer, be exhibited in Paris, Barcelona, Moscow and Petrograd, as well as in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

Actors Fund Fair Nets $80,000

Moving Picture Stars Do Their Bit Toward the Million Dollar Fund for Actors' Home.

AT the recent Actors Fund Fair held at the Grand Central Palace, New York, in aid of the million dollar fund for the erection of a home for aged and indisposed actors and actresses, the moving picture end of the profession took its place beside its brothers and sisters of the spoken stage in doing what it could to push matters along to a successful finish. Saturday night, May 19, was set aside as moving picture night, when a parade of moving picture players, headed by William S. Hart as king and Marjorie Rambeau as queen, passed through crowds eager to behold them. They were joined by the children of the Actors Fund and Friars Frolic; and in the course of the evening Dan Casey, here from California, was introduced as one of the guests of honor.

One of the booths at the Fair was presided over by Anita Stewart, and be it said to this young woman's popularity it was next to impossible to elbow one's way to the front row to confront her with any amount of cash from a dime up for a chance on a photograph of the pretty young actress. Miss Stewart stuck faithfully to her post during the entire ten days of the fair, and we will wager that her contribution in hard cash was not to be sneezed at.

On Friday night Florence Lawrence, absent at present from the screen, but not forgotten, was on the floor, prettily gowned and charming as ever, selling a musical composition which had been dedicated to her, and which was played by the woman's orchestra headed by Miss Mae Schiff, whose playing of the leading melody on the violin was of unusual excellence.

It has already been announced far and wide that this particular fair is one of the most successful that has ever been held by the Actors Fund, the amount netted amounting to about $80,000.

Clara E. Laughlin

THE literary works of Miss Clara E. Laughlin are to be presented on the screen by the Wholesome Films Corporation, the newly organized Chicago producing and distributing company headed by Milton Daily, A. M. Allen and P. W. Stanhope. Miss Laughlin, who is known to millions of American readers for her popular fiction, is contributing a series of daily articles to metropolitan newspapers. The subject matter of these articles as well as Miss Laughlin's novels will be presented to the screen.

Clara E. Laughlin.

"We believe that the film presentation of Miss Laughlin's novels will bring to the picture loving public a new standard of screen wholesomeness," declared M. J. Weisfeldt, general manager of the Wholesome Films Corporations. "Miss Laughlin's works are typical of what we shall offer on the Wholesome program."

Miss Laughlin has had a remarkable career in the literary world. At the age of eighteen she was made literary editor of Interior, which now is called the Continental. While filling this position she wrote for Harper's, Ladies' Home Journal, Delineator and many others. Her first novel, "Felicity," was published by Scribner in 1907.

In 1910 she completed "Just Folks," published by McMillan, and a year later "Children of Tomorrow" was written. Both became best sellers. The latter part of 1911 Miss Laughlin wrote "Everybody's Lonesome" and a year later followed this with "The Penny Philanthropist." A unique feature in connection with this work is the fact that a certain Minneapolis capitalist purchased 1,000 copies, which he distributed among his friends.

In October of this year Doran will bring out what Miss Laughlin calls her most important novel, "The Keys of Heaven."

It is the plan of the Wholesome Film Corporation to begin production on some of Miss Laughlin's writings as soon as she can put them in scenario form. Other "Wholesome" announcements are expected soon.

Admission Prices Should Be Increased

So Declares John R. Freuler, and Says Exhibitors Should Prepare to Charge More Money.

MOTION picture theatres of the United States ought to put in effect increased schedules of admission prices at once, is the opinion of President John R. Freuler, of the Mutual Film Corporation. "Picture amusement prices are too low in comparison with the general scale of prices and in view of the costs and coming taxation," he said.

Mr. Freuler left New York for Washington, where he was to meet Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, and James P. Greer, general counsel for the American. There they expected to take up close range consideration of the problem of the motion picture and the war taxes proposed.

"It is to be expected that the motion picture industry and those engaged in it must bear a just share of the burdens of the war," observed Mr. Freuler. "But we are inclined to the view that legislators at Washington have not accurately surveyed the possibilities and the limitations of the pictures as a source of war revenue.

"It is certainly obvious that the public is going to have to pay more for pictures, since there is no extravagant margin of profit in the industry, even among the most prosperous concerns, to-day. The motion picture theaters must prepare at once to increase prices all along the line.

"The five cent theater must and can get ten, the ten cent house can get fifteen, and twenty-five cents is bound to become a much more general admission fee for picture entertainment that it is now. The problem of how to achieve this without a loss of patronage is a slightly different one in each theater, but there is always a way.

"It is unlikely that the cost of motion pictures will ever be lower than it is today—and it is a certainty that prices are going to be higher soon. The exhibitor must prepare to collect from the public."

Amy Dennis in Selig-Hoyt Comedies

HERE is the newest Selig star, Amy Leah Dennis, presented in the Hoyt feature comedies released in K-E-S-E. It is claimed by the Selig Company that Miss Amy is the youngest of motion picture stars, her age being given as just sixteen. According to reviewers, this little actress is bound to make a name for herself.

The Selig Company is to release ten or more Hoyt feature comedies. Each of these productions is two reels in length. The Selig Company has retained the funny characters and plots of the Hoyt plays and has introduced a large amount of original action and entertaining situations. Miss Dennis will appear in every one of these comedies, the first, "A Hole in the Ground" being released in K-E-S-E on Monday, May 28. The K-E-S-E organization has thought so much of these comedies that exhibitors everywhere are being accorded special opportunities of seeing them.

Amy Leah Dennis.

Miss Dennis was born in Pennsylvania and at twelve years of age proved talented as a recitationist. Later she appeared in Broadway theatrical attractions and then Mr. Selig was attracted by her work and engaged her as leading woman for the Hoyt comedies. Others of the all-star cast include James Harris and William Fables. J. A. Richmond is the director in charge. Other bookings announced are "A Brass Monkey," June 11; "A Day and a Night," June 25; "A Rag Baby," July 9.

Pathe Releases

"Blind Man's Luck," Five-Reel Melodrama Featuring Mollie King and Directed by George Fitzmaurice, and Episodes of "Neglected Wife" and "Double Cross" Serials.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

A SWIFT-MOVING melodrama that furnishes a full share of entertainment is "Blind Man's Luck," a five-reel Pathe-Astra picture featuring Mollie King and directed by George Fitzmaurice. In this offering the star and director live up to their record on the chart of past performances. The same vivacity and enthusiasm displayed by Miss King in former pictures are seen and the same dashing direction of Mr.

Scene from "Blind Man's Luck" (Pathe).

Fitzmaurice is visually evident. The one small fault with the picture lies in a tendency to slide over rather than go through more or less necessary story-detail. The viewer is asked to take for granted several things that he might have been given to know more about. This could have been done without weakening the sustained interest, which is held high and tight throughout the five reels.

Underlying the more melodramatic episodes of the story, which was scenariorized by Don Seitz, is the story of a girl who, apparently an unwilling smuggler, brings about the redemption of a wild, wealthy youth, which in turn results in a reconciliation between the youth and his father. There is much that appeals in the picture. The characters are human and the players who portray them capable. Earle Foxe is cast as the wealthy youth. William Riley Hatch is the father and Geffie Tilbury the mother.

The atmosphere of all scenes are up to the Fitzmaurice standard. There are several thrilling train-wreck scenes, and production details throughout are satisfactory.

"The Crisis."

In the fifth two-reel episode of "The Neglected Wife" serial Horace Kennedy and Margaret Warner come to an understanding with each other—they realize their love for each other. Mrs. Kennedy learns that her husband is visiting a woman's apartment. Margaret goes to Kennedy's houseboat with the editor, and for the first time the two women are face to face. Mrs. Kennedy does not know that Margaret is the woman. The two women are left alone on the houseboat, which is set adrift and blown up by Doyle, the fake mining stock promoter. The episode ends just as Kennedy is about to swim to the rescue.

"The Face of the Stranger."

The thirteenth episode of "The Mystery of the Double Cross" reveals to Phillipa Brewster the face of the Masked Stranger. This occurs after she has been instrumental in saving Peter Hale's life by promising to marry him if he will not follow the Stranger. That night Phillipa retracts her promise and promises to become the wife of Dick Annesley, the reporter. Phillipa is saved from Daddy Heinz by the Masked Stranger, who is hiding under the bed. When Phillippa sees the face of the Stranger she helps him to escape.

"The Crimson Dove"

Pulpit and Stage Meet in Five-Reel Peerless Drama Plentifully Supplied with Incident and Featuring Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE love of a minister of the gospel for a beautiful actress of easy morals, and her redemption through the clerical gentleman's devotion is the theme of "The Crimson Dove," a five-reel Peerless screen drama, featuring Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge. The story is most plentifully supplied with incident, much of it vigorous melodrama, which reveals the reverend hero as a doughty champion of muscular Christianity.

Brand Cameron, D. D., meets Adrienne Durant, a member of the Apollo Garden Company, at her father's humble home in the country, where she has gone to recover from the excitement following the suicide in her apartment of a young man who has ruined himself to obtain jewels for her. The boy's father is a member of Cameron's church. The minister, believing the actress to be an innocent country girl, falls in love with her. She accepts the situation for a time, then, in a fit of remorse, tells him the truth and, being convinced that such happiness is not for her, goes back to New York and resumes her old life. Cameron walks in upon a hilarious supper party given by Adrienne, sends a number of its male members to the floor, escorts the girl home, and starts in to accomplish her reformation. He loses his church in consequence, and goes to a lumber camp of the toughest description to preach, leaving Adrienne in charge of a mission school in the lower east side.

The minister's experiences in the camp are of the liveliest kind, and include a number of fights and the rescue of a baby and a half-witted boy after the men of the camp have set fire to Cameron's church. The timely arrival of Adrienne permits her to nurse back to health the clergyman, who has been severely burned, and they are married in the new church edifice at Summit Camp.

Events may be said to crowd one another in "The Crimson Dove." Dramatic incidents are piled up with such a free hand that they almost become monotonous, and lose much of their force. Romaine Fielding, the director, has put the fear of inaction into the scenario and the members of the cast, and everything and everybody are kept on the move. Carlyle Blackwell makes up in willingness what he lacks in weight, and invests with considerable conviction his acting of the minister. June Elvidge is entirely satisfactory as Adrienne.

Marie La Varre, Henry West, Edward N. Hoyt, Louis R. Grisel, Dion Titheradge and Maxine Elliott Hicks constitute a supporting company of excellent calibre.

"The Soul Master"

Freely Padded Five-Reel Blue Ribbon Feature by James Oliver Curwood, in Which Earle Williams is Starred.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE prolific but not always convincing James Oliver Curwood will not enhance his reputation through "The Soul Master," a five-reel Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, with a conventional and freely padded plot. The title is a handicap to begin with, being much too pretentious for so commonplace a story. The picture starts off well, but after the first reel uses up four reels in telling that which could better have been told in two. It is the tale of a man whose wife deserts him for another and takes with her his little daughter. Fifteen years later, when known as "a man without a soul," and the owner of a large department store, he is attracted by a young girl behind one of the counters. He offers her his "protection," is refused, and learns that she is his own child. Marguerite Bertsch, who directed the picture, has been able to inject but little vitality into it, and has not always made the best use of the material furnished by the author. The entire cast is weighed down by the want of conviction that follows their efforts.

"Selig-Hoyt Comedies"

"A Hole in the Ground," "A Brass Monkey" and "A Day and a Night" Lead the List, and Afford Entertainment of the Breeziest Kind.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

I WISH to recommend, right at the start, the list of funmakers selected by William N. Selig to impersonate the leading characters in the Hoyt two-reel farce comedies, one of which will be released every alternate Monday through K-E-S-E. These breezy laugh creators will be introduced to the public by "A Hole in the Ground," the first of the series, which will be released Monday, May 28.

"A Hole in the Ground."

About twenty years ago the stage had no more welcome attractions for the public than Charles Hoyt's farce comedies. Just as fighters in the ring, who mix things briskly from the start, are the most popular, so the Hoyt comedies caught on because they plunged at once into merry action. And I can fearlessly recommend the Selig-Hoyt screen comedies, because the director has lost no time in try-out sparring.

"A Hole in the Ground" introduces us at once to comical doings in the baggage room of a railroad station out on the prairie, where the station agent (William Fables) handles enormous trunks as if they were soap bubbles, to the amazement of his assistant, who can scarcely move them. Then The Stranger (James Harris) appears on the scene, and at once installs himself in the funny column by a clever, though heartless, ruse to escape paying the country yokel for carrying his trunk.

"Have you got a license as a truck?" he asks the boy. "Well here's a cigar, I won't tell the police," he says to the human horse.

The Tramp (Frank Hamilton) had been already on the scene, and riles the station agent, who a short time before had shown him the way to New York over the railroad ties, by returning and asking for the loan of a locomotive. He is viciously chased by the agent, who spouts between breaths, "Tramps in a station is fifty-fifty with fleas on a dog—can't get rid of neither."

When the Lunch Girl (Amy Dennis), who presides over the "eats" in the station, is introduced the spectator is furnished with the scene of the merriest pranks of the comedy. The lunch room becomes a veritable laugh factory, in which the Lunch Girl, the Stranger, the Tramp and the Agent are the lightning performers. The Stranger, who has been waiting four hours for his train, misses it after all. He is down in the cellar changing his shirt as it pulls in, and the final scene shows him rushing after it frantically, as it pulls out, waving the shirt which he had not the time to put on.

"A Brass Monkey."

This mirthful comedy deals with a brass monkey, which is a hoodoo to every one that possesses it. Patch Work, the owner, dies and bequeaths it to Jonah Mudd (James Harris), a friend of the deceased, and owner of a bric-a-brac store. This gains for Jonas the enmity of Dodge Work (William Fables), nephew of the deceased, who has set his heart on the possession of the hoodoo money. Genevieve (Amy Dennis), the daughter of Jonah, assists him in the store, while Birdie (Helga Sandberg), his estranged wife, spends her time in trying to collect alimony, employing her strong-armed brother, Big Bill (James Fulton), to enforce payment.

The possession of the monkey leads to the ruin of Jonah Mudd's store, and almost to the death of himself and his daughter in a chain of accidents that keeps the spectator in spasms. When Big Bill comes to collect the alimony, Jonah requests him to do his brutal work in the back yard, where his daughter Genevieve will be spared the scene. Obligingly Big Bill consents. Jonah slips the slugger his big bull dog, and Big Bill is a sight to see as he flees for his life.

The final scene is a scream. It shows Jonah chasing Dodge Work over house roofs and up and down the high smoke stack of a factory. Dodge had slipped into a cured bearskin in Jonah's store, so that he might be able to escape observation and secure the coveted monkey; but Jonah saw the bear move, and the chase began. "A Brass Monkey" will be released June 11.

"A Day and a Night."

In this comedy William Fables appears as the Rev. Abner Goode and as Johnnie Swift, prop man in a moving picture studio, the latter avocation showing that this Hoyt Comedy has been brought up to date. James Harris takes the part of Imesome Ham, an old dramatic tragedian, who feels that Fate has dealt him its worst blow when he is forced to play in a moving picture. Amy Dennis appears as Winne Saum, the star of the picture in which Ham plays.

The story hinges on the physical likeness of the Rev. Abner Goode to that of Johnnie Swift, prop man. The minister has discharged the members of his choir, and seeks pretty actresses, with good voices, to take their places. He is on such a mission as this when he visits a moving picture studio, and is mistaken by one of the directors for the prop man. The director assigns the reverend gentleman various tasks in the mechanical production of the picture, which leads to side-splitting and exciting results.

The release date is June 25.

Two Fox Releases

Virginia Pearson in "Royal Romance," "A Modern Story of Two Fictitious Kingdoms," and Theda Bara as the Heroine of "Heart and Soul," Founded on Rider Haggard's "Jess."

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"Royal Romance."

THE divinity that was universally believed to hedge a king is receiving a number of rude shocks these days. "Royal Romance," a five-reel Fox photoplay, is laid in the peaceful time when emperors and royal princesses were not disturbed by thoughts of the coming social upheaval and were busy falling in and out of love, like ordinary mortals. Adrian Johnson, the author of the story, has taken a well tried and popular recipe for making an Anthony Hope romance about fictitious ladies and gentlemen of royal blood who dwell in equally unreal kingdoms, and turned out quite a tasty batch of screen confectionery.

The Princess Sylvia objects to having her hand and heart bestowed upon the Emperor Maximilian for purely diplomatic reasons. She therefore takes advantage of the fact that he has never seen her and, passing herself off as an untitled English girl, meets the Emperor near his hunting lodge, pretends not to know his real station in life and orders him about as she would a lackey. They both fall in love with each other in due course of time and, after the proper amount of plotting and counter-plotting by all concerned, the truth comes out and the emperor marries the princess.

This royal love story has been effectively produced under the direction of James Vincent. Virginia Pearson as the royal maiden and Irving Cummings as kingly gentleman are both exceedingly human in spite of their exalted rank, which they assume with considerable success. Boyce Coombs, Nora Cecil, Grace Henderson, Nellie Slattery, Alex K. Shannon, Emil De Varny, and Charles Craig, as personages of more or less noble blood, are successful in supporting their unwonted dignity.

"Heart and Soul."

The Rider Haggard South African story of "Jess," which furnishes the foundation for "Heart and Soul," another five-reel Fox screen drama, is made up of excellent dramatic material. The author of the scenario has thought it expedient to shift the location to one of the Sandwich Islands and to introduce an alligator in the land of the ukulele and the flat-foot waltz. This slight departure from the physical facts of the country in no way interferes with the entertaining qualities of the picture. There is plenty of action in "Heart and Soul," and the heroic sacrifice made by the heroine, that her younger sister may marry the man they both love, is a bit of honest drama which commands the respect and sympathy of everyone.

The drama is well acted. Fortunately for Theda Bara, she has litte lovemaking to do. The gentler passions are not along the line of her best endeavors. She atones for this, however, by the feeling she puts into the rest of her work, and her death scene is thoroughly artistic. Harry Hillard is a vigorous and likeable hero, and equally successful in their several roles are Claire Whitney, Walter Law, Glenn White, Edwin Holt, John Webb Dillion and Alice Gale. J. Gordon Edwards directs the picture and again shows his ability to handle large bodies of extra people and to make the most of the individual efforts of the leading actors. The production is impressive.

A Pair of Paramounts

Madame Petrova in "The Undying Flame," a Lasky Production, and Wallace Reid and Myrtle Stedman in "The World Apart," a Five-Reel Oliver Morosco Photoplay.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

REINCARNATION is the theme of "The Undying Flame," a Lasky production, with Madame Petrova as the featured player. It is the work of Emma Bell, and moves at the leasurely pace of the novel for most of its five reels.

Scene from "The Undying Flame" (Paramount).

Starting in ancient Egypt, it tells of the love of a beautiful princess for a simple shepherd. Her father discovers what is going on and takes effectual measures to put a stop to the matter. He has the shepherd buried alive in a convenient tomb. The reincarnation of the lovers takes place in modern Egypt, in the persons of a young English girl and an officer in the British Army. A double scarab, once used as a love token by the princess and the shepherd, plays an important part in the development of the story, and they come to understand that they are at last united after centuries of waiting.

This highly romantic tale never reaches any great dramatic moment; but it will serve to entertain the spectator who does not demand anything but present day realism. The scenes in ancient Egypt are architecturally imposing, but some of them betray their recent origin by the brush of the scene painter. The modern scenes in the land of the Pharaohs are cleverly counterfeited.

Madame Petrova is more convincing as the princess than in the later character. Her daughter of Egypt contains no suggestion of the modern woman, the actress having the stately grace that is associated with Cleopatra but not her warmth of passion. Most of the time she seemed to have stepped down from a fresco of the palace and, as usual, her impersonation is a piece of finished art. Mahlon Hamilton is a fine figure of a man at both stages of the shepherd's existence, and acts with skill.

"The World Apart."

When George Middleton sat down to write "The World Apart," a five-reel photoplay produced by Oliver Morosco with Wallace Reid and Myrtle Stedman in the leading parts, he had a story to tell that was worth the telling, although he took an uncommonly long time before he permitted the hero and the heroine to meet. Life in a western mining camp is contrasted with existence in a New England village, the home of Beth Hoover. When that young lady does go west in search of her husband, Bob Fulton, a mining superintendent, who does not know that she is married, is not at all slow in falling in love with her. Beyond the information that the doings throughout this picture will claim the undivided attention of any reasonable human being, nothing further need be said about the plot. Wallace Reid doing the best he knows and Myrtle Stedman following his lead and the rest of the cast trailing along for all they are worth is bound to result in acting of the superior sort.

One detail mars the work of the producer. By some inexplicable oversight an excessively vulgar picture has been used as a wall decoration in one of the scenes.

"Do Children Count?"

First Three Two-Reel Units of Essanay Series to Be Released Through K-E-S-E Indicate Success—Little Mary McAlister Featured.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

A SERIES that through its breadth of appeal and the personality of its young star should build up a following that will increase with the release of each of its twelve two-reel episodes is "Do Children Count?" This is indicated by a view of the first three units titled, in the order of their release through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, "The Guiding Hand," "The Wonderful Event" and "Steps to Somewhere." The series was produced by Essanay from stories written by Charles Mortimer Peck. Each release is a separate and complete picture; but each is subsidiary to and has bearing on the master-title.

The personality and ability of little Mary McAlister, a pretty child actress of no little ability, dominates the story at all times, and it is most upon her small but capable shoulders that the series will be carried to success. The series has the homely, domestic appeal that is felt universally; and the individual pictures have been given touches such as have always brought a response.

The production of the pictures is in every way up to Essanay standards. The supporting casts to the little star are made up of Essanay players who have appeared many times before. Chief support to Miss McAlister is furnished by John Cossar and Mabel Bardine.

"The Guiding Hand."

This is the first number of the series, and is scheduled for release on June 6. The story tells of a little orphaned girl who wins her way into the heart of her grandfather. The grandfather's daughter, her husband and their two children come to visit the old man and little girl. The family of four are forever fighting among themselves, and their mean characters are further developed by their actions when they believe their wealthy relative is about to die. The old man's sickness is only a ruse, but it serves its purpose in bringing out the family's real feelings toward him, and further establishes the steadfastness of the little girl. In this release Grant Foreman is seen in the cast with the players already mentioned.

"Steps to Somewhere."

This number, released June 13, deals with the spoiled child. The parents are so much in love with the child that they take sides with her on occasions, and fight with each other over her. Finally they separate, and the child goes to live with her grandparents. The grandparents put the child through a deal which results in the girl's complete reformation. Then the little girl effects a reconciliation of her parents.

"The Wonderful Event."

Little Mary makes a hit in this number when she goes to seek a little brother in the park. She has been told that babies are found on park benches. The little girl unknowingly kidnaps a baby. All sorts of complications follow, and it finally develops that the little girl kidnapped a baby girl instead of a baby brother. Later the little girl is blessed with a real baby brother. There is much subtle humor in this number, which will be released June 20.

"Poppy"

Eight-Part Production for Selznick Program Features Norma Talmadge Adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"POPPY" represents a "miss" on quality. A popular star and an unpleasant and badly-produced story are its chief characteristics, side by side with an unwholesomeness of atmosphere. As presented the story is complicated and illogical and of questionable moral tone. Norma Talmadge is not at her best in the picture, and exaggerations such as uncalled for destruction of furniture by one of the bad men of the story are freqquent.

The story of "Poppy" tells of how a young girl converted by a cruel aunt into a drudge on a South African farm, runs away and finally finds herself in the home of an affinity of one of the three bad men of South Africa. This man takes her to his beautiful home under pretense of philanthropy, and previous to leaving on a visit to Europe he calls in a French priest who marries him to the girl, who is led to suppose that she is merely being adopted. She stays within the bounds of his home and garden without mingling with a living creature other than the servants, until one night the third of the three bad men, a bachelor, in a delirium from an attack of fever, enters the grounds by a gate that has accidentally been left unlocked. The girl happening there also a love scene is enacted which we are startled to learn near the close of the picture resulted in the birth of a child, which falls from a window in London where his mother has become famous in the literary world, and is killed. The story is given happy ending by having the husband renounce Poppy in favor of the other man.

The production is one of that questionable type of life which has nothing but its rottenness to recommend it as an entertaining subject for the screen.

"Bringing Home Father"

Franklyn Farnum and "Brownie" Vernon Featured in Five-Reel Bluebird Comedy-Drama—Released June 4.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

LIGHT as a cream puff and about as substantial and nourishing is the entertainment offered by "Bringing Home Father," a five-reel Bluebird comedy drama, featuring Franklyn Farnum and "Brownie" Vernon, and which will be released on June 4. When seen on pre-release at the New York theater, the picture brought forth a very few laughs, and did not seem to make any great impression on the audience. The audience seemed very anxious to laugh, too, and several times was led into anticipation of a humorous situation by a subtitle, only to be disappointed when the situation developed. Lack of real "meat" in the story and superficial direction account in a large measure for the picture's flatness at times. William Worthington has done much better directing than is evidenced in this offering. The laughs that were brought forth hardly compensate for the superfluity of footage.

"Bringing Home Father" is a picture that is not going to make a hit with everyone who sees it. Its airy and at times flippant treatment of the prohibition and suffrage questions belong to a passe school of humor—stuff is used that has even been discarded by newspaper cartoonists and vaudevillans. Burlesque on the drink question and on the suffrage question at the present time, especially, in the opinion of the writer, are not met.

sonalities to the screen to the betterment of the picture. The able supporting cast includes Florence Mayon, Arthur Hoyt and Richard Le Reno.

The story, which was written by H. O. Davis and scenario-ized by Bess Meredyth, tells of a youth who gets mixed up with a family composed of a beautiful daughter, a henpecked father who gets tipsy once in a while, and an ultra-suffragette mother who is running for alderman on the Prohibition ticket. Bringing home father one night, the youth is arrested as a burglar. The "wet" alderman gets him out of jail, and in return the youth promises to make the Prohibition candidate withdraw. He does this by putting liquor in the punch bowl during the suffragette's reception to the leading prohibitionists. Throughout the picture runs the romance between the youth and daughter.

Photographically and in other artistic details the offering is up to Bluebird standard.

"The Telltale Step"

Five-Reel Edison Melodrama With Shirley Mason as the Blind Heroine, a Story of New York's "Little Italy"—Released by K-E-S-E.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE life of New York's "Little Italy" is pictured with more or less truthfulness in "The Telltale Step," a five-reel Edison melodrama, written by William Parsons Lathrop, and featuring Shirley Mason as the blind heroine, Lucia Pallazzi. The father of Lucia is murdered by one of those bands of enterprising Italian thugs that are formed for the purpose of forcing its fellow-countrymen to contribute to the support of its members or be stabbed in the back. Luigi, the chief of the band, becomes smitten with Lucia, but she brings the man to justice by being able to recall the sound of his footsteps at the time her father was killed. A number of well bred Americans are interwoven with the Italian characters in the development of the story, which is a creditable piece of work and will be followed with interest.

Shirley Mason makes an appealing figure as the blind girl. With more than a fair share of good looks and animation, she is an attractive young person and acts with considerable skill. Guido Collucci, Charles Sutton, Bigelow Cooper, Nellie Grant and Bob Huggins are all good representatives of the son of Italy, and Pat O'Malley, Sally Crute and Jessie Stevens acquit themselves as acceptably as the three Americans.

The production is middle grade.

"Should She Obey"

Arizona Film Company Produces a Seven-Reel State Right Subject Treating of the Divorce Evil.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Arizona Film Company has produced for the state right market a seven-reel propaganda subject, "Should She Obey?" Its dominating themes are those of divorce and of marriages that should not have been. As a background for the picture is the action of the Nevada Legislature looking to a nationwide inquiry into the whole subject—and there will nowhere be any question as to the statement that no other body in the country has quite so much reason to take up this subject; that in no other state has it been possible so quickly and with such great facility to undo the work of the marrying authority. The producer of the picture, George Siegmann, has at considerable length shown the Nevada Legislature in session and has introduced many of the state officials, from the governor down.

The initial reel is largely given over to short declarations by prominent men, expressions of personal opinion as to the evils of the divorce and marriage laws. It is unlikely that any one seriously will take issue with what these men have to say. The scenario is credited to Walter Howey, a Chicago newspaper man. Mr. Howey has given us a tale that will carry a good measure of interest; very likely for the general public it will have a large measure of interest. The story apparently is founded upon a series of occurrences the details of which are within the knowledge of all who read newspapers a dozen years ago.

Norbert Myles portrays William Gordon, who from a shiftless youngster becomes through the aid and encouragement of the woman he marries a man of power in the steel world. Gene Genung is Lorna, the wife who is set aside when Gordon becomes fascinated by Marie Gibson, a woman of the stage. Alice Wilson is Marie. There is a subsidiary story in the lives of Henry Blake and the girl he is forced to marry after the birth of their child, the two roles being sustained by J. Webster Dill and Billie West.

The picture is well acted. The story clearly brings out the disregard of the steel man for the wife of his youth, his failure to win social recognition in spite of his financial power, and his disappearance from the public eye by reason of his marriage, which society at large refused to sanction. There are scenes of high life and low life, of simple life and fast life.

"The Serpent's Tooth"

Five-Part Mutual Production of Questionable Type Features Gail Kane.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Serpent's Tooth," featuring Gail Kane with an unusually competent cast, is one of those good-bad types of pictures that are somewhat baffling to the reviewer. It is a five-part melodrama so well made, so artistically interpreted, that one hesitates to shelve it as unwholesome screen food for the masses. Yet this is entirely true of a production which deals in a spectacular fashion with the drug and alcohol habits, and presents a number of despicable types.

The work of Gail Kane in this production is especially pleasing, and she dresses the role of the unhappy wife delightfully. In fact the picture is a singularly well-dressed one. William Conklin as the husband exhibits great dramatic power and makes a repulsive role stand out with fine individuality. The actress playing the role of Hortense, the vampire of the play, does an excellent piece of work. Jane Pascal and Edward Peil are also noticeable for their fitness for the roles intrusted to them.

The story centers about the home of a wedded pair between whom a coolness arises on account of differences in taste. The husband, who has been an artist, loses his moral balance in mixing with the smart set, and becomes infatuated with a fascinating woman of the vampire type. A child born to the man and his wife dies and because of the nervous condition of the wife her doctor administers a drug with caution. On day, however, the bottle containing the drug drops from his satchel, is found by the husband and his affinity, who plot together to convert the wife into a drug fiend. By the time that this is accomplished the husband has degenerated morally and mentally from the excessive use of alcohol to such an extent that he becomes subject to halucinations, and falls dead in a he becomes subject to hallucinations, and falls dead in a

The only fault to be found with the construction of the story is a matter of consistency. For instance, the wife who has become addicted to drugs becomes apparently instantaneously detached from her affliction. This of course is beyond reason.

"Wolf Lowry" Five-Reel Ince-Kay Bee With Wm. S. Hart, and "Oriental Love" Two-Reel Keystone.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

WOLF LOWRY" has more tragic force than most of its kind, and the stories in which Mr. Hart prefers to appear are very much of a kind. He is the picturesque border rider of horses and expert with weapons, relying largely upon brute strength for dominance of men and situations, a survival of the cave man, with a submerged strain of tenderness for womankind, the ruder nature within him softened through sex influence. In the fact that this role is intensified by some clever psychology lies Mr. Hart's superiority over his many imitators. He gives expression to the frontier bully, who has a German-like faith in the rule of force, in a state of modification from the refining influence from the weaker creature of nobler life mission that of destructive man. This is Hart's message, given in all sincerity, whether or not there is any vital necessity for it or not under present living conditions.

In this particular example he plays the role of a man who rules his community through fear. He learns that a squatter has dared to take up a claim in his valley and goes to drive out the intruder. He finds a woman in the rude cabin, a gentle creature, who has attempted to build a home for herself in the wilderness, and he thereafter attempts to protect her from injury. He saves her from an assault by the conventional villain, is shot and is nursed back to life through her intelligent devotion. Much to the amazement of his community he wins her promise to marry him. Most elaborate wedding preparations follow, but the villain has learned her secret. She is really in search of a man she truly loves, whom she pretends is a half brother. The villain brings the half brother on the scene at a dramatic moment, and the lovers plan to escape. The "Wolf," Hart, frustrates them and starts to take it out on the unfortunate lover, but undergoes a tremendous conversion and gives notice to the assembled crowd that the wedding preparations were not for him at all. He yields his place to the man who has truly won the girl's heart, deeds his property to the bride and leaves penniless, to seek his fortune in some other part of the world. This is all very well and effectively done. The play will hold.

DRAMATIC moments predominate in this five-reel number. produced by Henry McRae. The story, written by Frank H. Spearman, is an episode in the life of "Whispering" Smith, and carries the attention along in an absorbing way. This would be a straight melodrama in less competent hands, but is so carefully acted that it deserves the more dignified term of drama.

The cast is a proficient one in all of the principal roles. Chas. H. Mailes plays "Whispering" Smith, Mary MacLaren appears as the girl, Alfred Vosburg as the hero, M. Everett as the principal villain, and Eddie Polo, Don Bailey and Rex de Roselli have strong parts.

The story opens with a run on the Grand National Bank The directors are in session behind closed doors, with a crowd clamoring for entrance outside. The president, George Fuller, offers his personal fortune to save the institution. Monroe Simmons, one of the directors, who like the cashier, Tom Williams, loves the president's daughter, connives to rob the institution. He succeeds in doing this and at the same time throws the blame on Tom. The girl, who loves Tom, enlists the services of "Whispering" Smith, who takes a hand in the proceedings and finally rounds up the rascally Simmons and his accomplices.

A Dr. Mercer, who deals in the illicit sale of drugs, plays an important part in the story. He and "Hartford Red," a drug victim, conspire with Simmons to rob the bank and bring ignominy upon the hero. The round-up of the conspirators is exciting and includes a dash in an automobile after a stolen locomotive and a narrowly averted wreck.

"Star Spangled Banner" in Film

Life in U. S. Marine Corps Told in a Stirring Tale—Released in Three Reels by K-E-S-E.

"THE Star Spangled Banner," a three-reel production from the Thomas A. Edison Studios, appears to be a psychological picture of a psychological moment. "The Star Spangled Banner" deals with a story of life in the American Marine Corps and teaches a lesson in patriotism that will linger long in memory.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay have announced its release date June 10, a very opportune moment, because during the week of June 10 to 16 the Government is planning a tremendous recruiting drive for the Marine Corps Service.

Naval officials have seen and approved of this picture and have caused it to be known at more than four thousand recruiting stations throughout the United States that it will be released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay June 10. That fact alone will provide "The Star Spangled Banner" in film, with exploitation of an extraordinary character.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay have in mind a comprehensive supply of advertising for exhibitors and this will be bulwarked by millions of posters, handbills, circulars, lantern slides, store window displays, etc., etc., which the Government will begin distributing June 10 through all of its more than four thousand recruiting offices. All the Government's publicity deals exclusively with life in the U. S. Marine Corps, and as "The Star Spangled Banner" in film deals with the same subject it can be easily imagined how nicely the K-E-S-E advertising on this film will fit in with the tremendous amount of publicity material circulated by the Government.

The full strength of the Marine Corps Publicity Bureau will be exerted that week, especially portraying the attractiveness of that branch of the service to young men. This publicity and advertising is already under way, and as an example of it it may be cited that in the Saturday Evening Post there will have been circulated by June 10, the day on which "The Star Spangled Banner" is scheduled for release, upwards of eight millions of magazine display pages and half-pages on the opportunities and allurement of service with the U. S. Marines.

Edison's almost matchless photography adds charm to an unusually strong plot and well-told in this release.

A regiment of bona fide U. S. Marines assisted in making "The Star Spangled Banner," and this, it is thought, will be an especially strong feature in connection with soliciting bookings.

The U. S. Marine Corps believe that "The Star Spangled Banner" will be a means of greatly stimulating enlistments and it is now under consideration to place a uniformed member of the Marine Corps in theaters where "The Star Spangled Banner" is being shown.

"Daughter of the Gods" on Percentage.

William Fox's announcement that he would book his $1,000,000 motion picture, "A Daughter of the Gods," with Annette Kellerman, on a perecntage basis, is bringing a response from high class theater managers. Only houses that seat not less than 1,000 and where the prices are from 25 cents to $1 will be able to get this picture.

There is no doubt now that the picture will have a large showing all over the country. Samuel F. Kingston, who is booking "A Daughter of the Gods," is receiving applications in unprecented numbers. Managers in all the states have evidently been waiting for this picture, which ran for many weeks in New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

Miss Adams Supporting Miss Kennedy.

Playing the role of friend to Madge Kennedy in the Margaret Mayo comedy, which is the first picture in which this star of the dramatic stage will appear, is a young actress of the screen who has made an enviable record for herself within a very short time. She is Kathryn Adams, and she comes from Missouri; St. Louis to be exact.

Miss Adams has played a number and a variety of roles that would do credit to a more experienced picture player. She has been seen in prominent straight roles as leading lady, in "vampire" and in character parts. Perhaps she will best be remembered in the role of Oliva in "The Vicar of Wakefield" in the screen version of the play, in which Frederick Warde was featured. Playing opposite Mr. Warde Miss Adams appeared as Eppie in "Silas Marner," and in a whole series of recent productions. Her latest part before coming to the Goldwyn studio is in "Hinton's Double," a current feature release.

Miss Adams is of that type which has been described as concentrated blonde; over a face of slender and delicate lines she carries a mass of golden hair, which is almost a pale straw color. She makes an excellent foil for Miss Kennedy's well-known personality.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

BRINGING HOME FATHER, June 4.—A five-reel comedy-drama featuring Franklyn Farnum and "Brownie" Vernon. The piece contains a certain amount of humor, but not enough to compensate for its footage. The story treats, flippantly at times, with suffrage and prohibition. A full review is printed on another page of this issue.

Fox Film Corporation.

ROYAL ROMANCE, April 30.—The five-reel photoplay tells the love story of an Emperor and a Princess who dwell in those countries that are created by the author. The picture is entertaining, and is agreeably acted by Virginia Pearson and Irving Cummings in the leading parts. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

HEART AND SOUL, May 21.—Rider Haggard's novel, "Jess," was the source of this five-reel photoplay. It makes a vigorous melodrama, and is excellently produced, with Theda Bara as the star. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

K-E-S-E, Inc.

SELIG-HOYT COMEDIES (Selig), first release May 28.—"A Hole in the Ground," "A Brass Monkey" and "A Day and a Night" are the first three releases of the series. They are brimful of clean fun and merriment. William Fables, Amy Dennis, James Harris and Frank Hamilton sustain the more important characters, with fine farce-comedy, vim and effect. The series is excellently directed by J. A. Richmond. An extended review is given on another page in this issue.

THE GUIDING HAND (Essanay), June 6.—First of the new two-reel series, "Do Children Count?" Mary McAllister, a capable and appealing child actress, is featured. The story tells how designing relatives are foiled from becoming beneficiaries of an old man's will. The little girl is the guiding hand. Reviewed in this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

HER LESSON (Drew) May 14.—This is one of the funniest of Drew comedies, and shows how a forgetful wife always leaves her diamond rings in the bathroom when she washes her hands. Her husband, in attempting to teach her a lesson by stealing the rings and hiding them in his vest pocket, is treated to the scare of his life when the suit to which the vest belongs is given in his absence to the tailor to be pressed. While he rushes frantically to the tailor's the rings are returned to his wife, who has nosed the situation, and turns the tables on her husband.

NOTHING TO WEAR (Drew), May 21.—This is another of those delightful comedies being made by the Drews. In this particular instance Mrs. Marsh's mind runs to dresses, and Mr. Marsh's mind inclines toward work to such a degree that eventually he becomes ill, and gets so near heaven that he can "smell the sulphur." Previous to this illness Mrs. Marsh had only to enter his den with a plea for a new gown to attend some smart affair for which she had "simply nothing to wear," when he would quickly hand over a check to get rid of her. Her husband recovered from his illness, Mrs. Marsh discovers to her sorrow that her "Alladin's Lamp," as she calls him, responds less easily when she rubs it. After giving her a lesson in economy, however, he yields again to her whims. Very amusing.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL TOURS, NO. 29 (Gaumont), May 22.—The subjects included in this number are: "River Life near Paris"; "The Rock of Gibraltar"; and "Martinique, West Indies." These pictures are unusually attractive, and especially beautiful are the scenes on the river Marne, France.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 125, May 23.—The most interesting features of this number are the opening of the Belmont Terminal track, with scenes from the Greenhedge Steeplechase; Joffre and Viviani greeted by New York, and scenes at various ceremonies attended by them, including a review of the West Point cadets; Allied warships visit San Francisco, and a Japanese cruiser enters the Golden Gate for the first time since the beginning of the war; and the dedication of the new million-dollar Red Cross building at Washington.

JERRY JOINS THE ARMY (Cub), May 24.—In this number of the Jerry comedies he enlists, and because of his getting into a dispute with a giant who stands next him he runs away, and upon arriving at the Mexican border is attacked by bandits. Later he proves his bravery by bringing their leader to camp. Rather amusing.

BLUFFING FATHER (Strand), May 30.—An entertaining comedy in which Billie Rhodes and Jay Belasco feature. The plot of the story deals with the effort of a young man to keep up a well-furnished house until his father-in-law arrives on the scene. The furniture, which has not been paid for, is taken away on the very day of his father-in-law's arrival, and in a desperate effort to cover the deficiency he misdirects the driver of a storage house wagon so that the load of furniture, which he is returning to its rightful owners, is deposited at the home of the unfortunate pair. The secret crops out, however, but in spite of the fact dad makes a present of paid-for house furnishings to the pair.

REEL LIFE, NO. 57 (Gaumont), May 31.—In this number of Reel Life will be found the following subjects of interest: "Hand-Made Barrels"; "Adding to the Tin Supply," showing how old tin cans are gathered and turned in to be remelted; "Auto Camper-Out"; "Dynamiting a Hillside"; and "A Lion Pup."

MUTUAL TOURS, NO. 30 (Gaumont), June 5.—The places illustrated in this number are: "Teneriffe, Canary Islands"; "Notre Dame, Paris"; and "Koenigsee, Bavaria." This group of subjects are beautifully illustrated and interesting in detail.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

FLIRTING WITH DANGER (Vogue), May 26.—A two-part farce comedy not unlike other Vogue comedies in general style. The majority of the picture consists of slapstick stuff in a gymnasium, and in addition has some rather amusing scenes in which a number of people run away from a burning barrel which is shot from a gun.

THE RAIROAD RAIDERS, NO. 8 (Signal), May 28.—"The Knotted Cord" is the title of this number, which is extremely thrilling, and shows Helen dropping from a bridge to the top of a moving train. She succeeds in making her way into Ling Woo's, in the trunk into which Lady Melrose was placed in the last chapter, and from which she is taken by Helen and the baggage clerk. Thrilling scenes take place in the den of Ling Woo, from which Helen is rescued by her associates.

THE SERPENT'S TOOTH (American), May 28.—A five-part melodrama featuring Gail Kane. The picture is based on an interesting story, and is well produced. Its subtitles might be improved upon, however, and its subject is unpleasant, in fact gruesome, and deals with the converting of a woman into a drug fiend by a husband and his affinity, and of the death of the man in a drunken rage. A review will be found elsewhere.

THE FLIGHT THAT FAILED (LaSalle), June 4.—A two-part farce comedy in which a young woman is placed by her guardian in a strictly feminine boarding house to avoid having her associate with a certain young man. She tries to escape in the guise of a messenger boy, and is arrested for burglary. While at the police station she meets a former lover now a policeman, and so the play ends happily for the reunited pair.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

A RECKLESS ROMEO (Paramount-Arbuckle), May 21.—There is an unexpected amount of clever turns in this two-reel comedy, many scenes being laid in an amusement park. "Fatty" Arbuckle gets mixed up in a double flirtation, and then sees the whole thing run off at a picture theater while sitting between his wife and his mother-in-law. The star is as amusing as ever.

THE UNDYING FLAME (Lasky), May 24.—Madame Petrova appears as an Egyptian Princess in the first half of this five-reel screen drama, which has reincarnation for its theme. The production is elaborate. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

THE WORLD APART (Morosco), June 4.—With Wallace Reid and Myrtle Stedman heading the cast, and plenty of lively action in the western scenes, this five-reel photoplay is well worth showing. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

PARAMOUNT-BRAY-PICTOGRAPH, NO. 70 (Bray), June 4.—This number contains a couple of good subjects entitled "The Desert Harvest," dealing with the evolution of the cactus under Luther Burbank, and "A School for White Wings," teaching us considerable that we did not know in connection with the training of our street cleaners. The cartoon number is "Otto Luck in the Movies," the first of a series by Wallace Carlson.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

ALONG THE RIO GRANDE (Combitone), June 3.—No. 11 of the series. This reel comprehensively and beautifully takes in the section of the United States that lies at the border. We see views of the Mimbres River, the Elephant Butte Dam and diversion dams, and some of the results of the irrigation furnished. Also have been photographed enlightening views of the city of El Paso.

THE ABALONE INDUSTRY (International), June 3.—A split-reel embracing views of the Abalone Industry and a Katzenjammer Kids cartoon. The education section is interesting, showing how are obtained the shell fish whose blisters are semi-precious stones, and whose flesh is an edible delicacy. The cartoon is especially good.

BLIND MAN'S LUCK (Astra), June 10.—A five-reel melodrama featuring Mollie King and directed by George Fitzmaurice. The picture furnishes a full share of entertainment. It tells the story of a girl who brings about the redemption of a wild wealthy youth. Reviewed in this issue.

THE FACE OF THE STRANGER (Astra), June 10.—Thirteenth two-reel episode of the "Mystery of the Double Cross" serial. Phillipa saves Peter's life when, by promising to marry him, she gets him away from a trap set. Later that night Phillippa promises to marry Dick Annesley. She is saved from the hands of Daddy Heinz by the Masked Stranger. She sees his face and permits him to escape.

THE CRISIS (Balboa), June 10.—Fifth two-reel episode of "The Neglected Wife" serial. In this number Kennedy and Margaret come to a better understanding. They conclude that Kennedy's wife must not be unhappy. The two women meet on Kennedy's houseboat. They are left alone and the boat is set adrift and blown up by Doyle, the fake mining promoter.

GROCERY GRAFTERS (Rolin), June 10.—Skinny Lampton and his helpers illustrate a sure method of beating the high cost of living in this picture, and create considerable laughter during the operation. "Max in a Difficulty" is on the same reel.

LUKE'S PLUMBING BLUNDERS (Rolin), June 10.—This one-reeler is among the best of the Luke farces. An unusual amount of novel business helps it along wonderfully.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 72 (Universal), May 18.—Ore and grain ships ice bound in Great Lakes, athletics of various sorts, native dances in Haiti and numerous phases of the war situation are pictured in this number.

LIKE WILDFIRE (Butterfly), May 21.—A five-reel feature, adapted by Karl Coolidge from a story by Louis Writzenkorn and produced by Stuart Paton. Herbert Rawlinson plays the part of a gilded youth, sent by his father to open up a ten cent store in a small town. The girl in the case, played by Neva Gerber, is already in charge of a similar store. The two fall in love, after the girl has helped the youth get out of jail. The story makes an enjoyable business romance, done in a light, breezy fashion that will appeal to high class houses. The humor is of the quiet, rather subtle type. Others in the cast are L. M. Wells, Howard Crampton, Burton Law, Johnnie Cook and Willard Wayne.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 73 (Universal), May 23.—An entertaining and instructive compilation of news features, including health campaign in New York, skiing in Alaska, Gulf coast bathing season, osteopaths training for service abroad and numerous other war subjects.

THE HUNTED MAN (Imp), Week of June 4.—A one-reel drama, by Harvey Gates, featuring Lee Hill, Mignon Anderson and Malcolm Blevins. The story concerns a young husband, who reaches home wearing a pair of handcuffs. He is followed by an officer. The bank president turns out to be the principal offender and the husband is cleared by turning state's evidence. This is not a particularly strong conception, though it has a certain air of mystery in the development which holds the interest.

A BURGLAR BY REQUEST (Nestor), June 4.—A comedy number, featuring Edith Roberts, Eddie Lyons, Harry Nolan, Nellie Allen and Lee Moran. A fake burglary, in which a hobo becomes entangled, a "jag" and a mixup in apartments are plot ingredients. There is nothing particularly new in this, but it proves quite entertaining.

TWIXT DEATH AND DAWN (Universal Special), June 4.—No. 13 of "The Voice on the Wire" series. This is a wierd instalment in which Shirley and Polly wait through an entire night for the disembodied hand to strike. Polly again falls into a trance-like state and becomes blind while looking at the mysterious "thought machine." The number is tense with interest and the mystery deepens as the story moves toward its conclusion.

THE ALMOST GOOD MAN (Gold Seal), June 5.—A three-reel subject, by Chas. J. Wilson, Jr., featuring Harry Carey, Claire Du Bray, Vester Pegg and Frank and Al MacQuarrie. This is a typical Western subject, with picturesque locations and a story of average interest. The hero forms a partnership with a crook, but after meeting the girl decides to break off his unlawful relations. There are several interesting complications of a dramatic nature as the production proceeds. This is quite good, both in construction and presentation.

DRY GOODS AND DAMP DEEDS (L-KO), June 6.—A two-reel comic, which features Phil Dunham, Lucille Hutton, Merta Sterling and Chas. Inslee. Most of the scenes occur in a department store, which Phil invades as a hobo. Some of the incidents reveal too much effort at humor; others are more successful. A stronger general idea would have helped this, though it makes a fairly diverting nonsense number as it stands.

TACKY SUE'S ROMANCE (Rex), June 7.—A two-reel subject, by Tom Gibson, featuring Ruth Stonehouse, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Chester Bennett and a number of children. The girl is sole support of the latter, and in the course of the story marries a wealthy young man. The plot is slight and juvenile in tone. The subject is fairly entertaining.

DOOMED (Imp), June 7.—A dramatic number, by E. M. Ingleton, featuring Claire McDowell, Jack Nelson, Chas. Perley and Chas. H. Mailles. The story pictures the murder of a rich young man, the girl's lover being tried and sentenced to death. She visits the real criminal, a justice of the peace, and wrings a confession from him. There is some loose construction in this, but it has a good plot and sufficient dramatic strength to hold the interest well.

WHO'S LOONEY NOW? (Nestor), June 8.—A two-reel domestic comedy of a somewhat farcical type, by S. A. Van Petten. Eddie Lyons and Billie Rhodes are featured as the Newlyweds. Eddie can't eat his wife's pancakes and carries them to the office to get rid of them. Some old love letters he has written and a picture of the wife, taken with a former sweetheart, complicates matters. Each thinks the other is crazy. One calls the doctor and the other calls the police. This brings about a mixup of a generally pleasing type. It makes a funny subject of the light, farcical sort.

SIMPLE SAPHO (Joker), June 9.—A burlesque, by Jack Cunningham, featuring Gale Henry as a "potential vampire." This part is amusing and brings a number of laughs, though some of the action is rather broadly comic. She falls in love with numerous men and finally with a country youth, who carries her up-stairs, not once, but half a dozen times. A successful burlesque of the type.

Selznick Pictures.

THE POPPY (Schenck), May.—An eight-part production featuring Norma Talmadge. The picture is adapted from a story by Cinthia Stockley and has not been well produced. It presents complications that are difficult of comprehension and is morally not altogether what might be desired. It tells of how a young girl is kept in hiding in a beautiful home by a man who poses to her as her benefactor. He marries the girl, leading her to believe that the ceremony merely means adoption. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Triangle Film Corporation.

WOLF LOWRY (Triangle-Ince-Kay Bee).—An unusually strong and intense characterization by William S. Hart of the kind he most affects, done in good style throughout.

ORIENTAL LOVE (Keystone).—Of the general Keystone kind, with an added value in picturesque settings. Plenty of thrills and laughs.

World Pictures.

THE CRIMSON DOVE (Peerless), June 4.—Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge are the stars of this five-reel photoplay which is a story of the pulpit and the stage and is full of dramatic incidents. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Bluebird Directors Busy With Future Offering

Bluebirds Scheduled Up to July 16. Companies Now Working on Subjects for Release in Late Summer and Early Autumn.

WITH Bluebirds definitely scheduled until July 16, Directors Julian, Reynolds, Conway, De Grasse and Ida May Park are now engaged in preparing releases for the late summer and early autumn. "The Greater Law" has been decided on as the title for the Lynn F. Reynolds production previously referred to as "The Code of the Klondyke." This will be the Bluebird for July 16, with Myrtle Gonzalez and George Hernandez starring.

Mr. Reynolds is now employed in producing a five-reeler entitled "Mr. Opp," which will have Arthur Hoyt and Neva Gerber in the leading roles, with George Hernandez, George Cheesboro and Jack Curtis heading the support. This will be another "nature study" of the sort in which Mr. Reynolds has all along specialized.

Rupert Julian is directing and playing in E. J. Clawson's story, "My Mother," with Ruth Clifford playing opposite and Ruby La Fayette enacting the title role. Jack Conway has just completed "Little Miss Fix-It," in which Ella Hall will be the star, with George Webb, James McCandlass and Lincoln Stedman in her supporting cast.

Dorothy Phillips, under direction of Joseph De Grasse, has finished "Vengeance of the West," and is now preparing "The Rescue" under direction of Ida May Park. These mediums will serve to introduce Miss Phillips to the program in August and September, respectively, keeping up her monthly average of appearances. William Stowell and Lon Chaney, as usual, lead her supporting company.

Before going on a vacation, Myrtle Gonzalez led the Lynn F. Reynolds organization in preparing "Back to the Primitive," with George Hernandez heading her support. Most of the scenes were taken on Santa Cruz Island, the plot showing a torpedoed liner and the melting pot on a desert island where the refugees ultimately find themselves.

ARTCRAFT CHANGES RELEASE DATES.

Walter E. Greene, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, last week announced a change in the release dates of the new Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks productions now being staged at the Lasky studios in California.

Originally scheduled for release on June 17, the Fairbanks' picture, "Wild and Woolly," has been set back a week in order to give more time to the final preparation of the film and its exploitation. This photoplay will be released on June 24.

The forthcoming Mary Pickford picture, a stirring subject of great patriotic theme entitled "The Little American," is also now rapidly nearing completion at the Hollywood studio. Although originally planned for release at a later date, this production will make its first public appearance throughout the country on July 2.

Plan Film Brokers' Association

Hiller and Wilk Take Lead in Advocating Organization—Would Benefit All Concerned.

IN AN effort to bring about much-needed reforms in the film brokerage end of state rights marketing, L. L. Hiller and Jacob Wilk, of Hiller & Wilk, Inc., selling agents for "The Whip," "A Mormon Maid," "The Battle of Gettysburg," "The Wrath of the Gods" and several other features, are advocating the immediate organization of recognized film brokers. They are at present considering ways and means by which they hope to be instrumental in forming an association whose membership shall include all recognized film brokers, and whose membership in addition shall exclude the parasites who at present live on the substantiality of the men who do the real work. Some of the wrongs resulting from present conditions and some of the benefits sure to accrue from such an association were convincingly pointed out by Messrs. Hiller and Wilk in an exclusive interview with a representative of the Moving Picture World.

"Under existing conditions," they said, "everybody and anybody in the film business is a 'film broker.' Anybody who hasn't enough brains to make any money any other way tries to make it that way. This reacts not only on the legitimate brokers who are in the business to stay, but is often the direct cause of a buyer paying more for a picture than he could have gotten it for had he acted directly with the seller or with a scrupulous broker. The man who makes a business of film brokerage cannot afford to juggle the prices bid and prices asked the way these will-o'-the-wisps do. Why, only the other day there was a case that illustrates a trick used by these shady operators: A man was after a certain picture for a certain territory. He could not come to New York, and some how or other was acting through one of these so-called brokers. It develops now that he told the 'broker' that he was willing to pay as much as $6,500 for the picture. The 'broker' dickered with the seller, and finally said that $5,000 was all his 'client' would pay. Then the 'broker' wired the prospective purchaser asking him if he would pay him half of the $1,500 if he could get the picture for $5,000. The seller considered $6,500 a fair price for the picture, and turned down the $5,000 offer. The next day the seller received an offer from the prospective buyer direct offering $7,500 for the picture. So in this particular case it cost the buyer $1,000 to be represented by a 'broker.' It is people like that 'broker' who would be non-members of the association. Legitimate brokers would not be guilty of such practises. They are willing to work for fair commissions and they work above-board. It is of men whose mere membership in the association would be a certificate of trustworthiness that the association could be formed.

"Another thing that must be taken into consideration is that this business, more than any other business, is carried on largely through personal acquaintance. Say, for instance, Bill Brown happens to meet Bill Smith on his way to an office. The seller knows Bill Brown as well as Bill Smith does. Bill Brown happens to like a picture and buys it for a certain territory. Immediately Bill Smith wants a commission for having brought Bill Brown into the office. He has done no work, has done nothing that even remotely caused Bill Brown to buy the picture, but still he thinks he is entitled to a commission on the sale. That is not a fair state of affairs, and could be corrected if there were a film broker's association.

"And why shouldn't there be an association of film brokers? What arguments could there be against the formation of such an organization? Real estate brokers, advertising men—virtually every commercial field but this one has its brokers' association, and the members of the association are recognized as such by everyone in the trade. We are endeavoring to bring about a meeting in the near future so that this matter can be discussed."

Big Brenon Picture Coming

"The Downfall of the Romanoffs," With Monk Iliodor Featured, Ready for State Rights Sale in Few Weeks.

THE Iliodor Pictures Corporation, recently chartered at Albany, has, by special arrangement with the Herbert Brenon Film Corporation and Lewis J. Selznick, obtained the services of Herbert Brenon to make a vast and significant drama of the Russian revolution which will be presented in a few weeks as the biggest state rights attraction ever offered in films.

Scene from "The Downfall of the Romanoffs" (Iliodor).

This vast drama of the overturn of a nation's rulers and the establishment of human liberty is being made under the title "The Downfall of the Romanoffs," and Iliodor, the fugitive monk who was at one time the spiritual adviser of the Czar Nicholas, is the featured player.

Iliodor's own story of the intrigues and scandals of the Russian court is now appearing in more than three hundred daily newspapers throughout the United States, and this gives the picture advance national publicity of great scope.

"The Downfall of the Romanoffs" has been under way at Mr. Brenon's New Jersey studios for the past two weeks, and will be rushed to speedy completion.

A cast of remarkable brilliancy surrounds Iliodor, and a woman who has been the sensation of Paris and other continental capitals will have the most important feminine role.

Iliodor, as the featured figure in this panorama of a nation's downfall, has figured in newspapers for the past six months. His last publicity was when he engaged in litigation with one of the popular monthly magazines to regain possession of his manuscripts in a series of articles exposing the intrigues of the Russian court.

Alexander Beyfuss is president of the Iliodor company; E. Sehay is secretary and treasurer and John M. Zwicki and J. Deshan are directors. The offices of the company are on the fourteenth floor of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

SHERMAN COMING TO NEW YORK.

Following the announcement of the reorganization of the Sherman-Elliott Company, of Minneapolis, comes the further announcement that Harry A. Sherman, resigned president of that organization, has disposed of all interests in the Sherman-Elliott Company and the Elliott & Sherman Company. The Elliott & Sherman Film Corporation controls the western territory for "The Birth of a Nation," "Ramona" and other features; the Sherman-Elliott Corporation controls "The Crisis." Mr. Sherman announces that his next place of business will be New York City.

John Elliott, Mr. Sherman's erstwhile partner in the Minneapolis concern, has taken over the business and will continue to hold forth there.

Much "Kid Stuff" in "Parentage"

Children Play Important Part in Hobart Henley's Picture, Which Will Be Offered by Frank J. Seng.

CHILDREN play a very important part in "Parentage," the big thought picture soon to be offered the trade by Frank J. Seng. Hobart Henley, who wrote and directed the picture, has hinged his story on the influence parents have upon their children and their children's children, and he has used the utmost care in the selection of his boy and girl actors and actresses.

Henley was fortunate in securing Lois Alexander, one of the best child actresses in pictures. To play opposite her he engaged Matty Roubert, one of the best-known boy players. These two youngsters add a great deal to the success of the picture, and they and the rest of the "kids" furnish strong and many times amusing support to the adult characters, chief of which are Mr. Henley and Barbara Castleton.

Scene from "Parentage" (Henley).

There is one scene in this picture, taken in a schoolroom, which is said to be one of the most elaborate ever seen on the screen. Mr. Henley spent much time in taking this scene, which is true in every detail, and to the layman would seem as though it had been taken in an actual schoolroom.

"Those who have seen the picture have asked me how I managed to get such a large group of children to act so naturally for me," said Mr. Henley. "I will admit it was no simple task."

MINNEAPOLIS STATE RIGHTS NEWS.

Samuel Newton Robinson, former Fox manager in Minneapolis and Los Angeles, has opened the Film Library and Exchange at 731 Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis. Mr. Robinson has secured territorial rights to Christie Comedies, for which first runs have already been contracted for by the New Princess, St. Paul, and New Garrick theaters, Minneapolis. The New Lyric has contracted for several recent releases. Mr. Robinson states that he is in the market for short-length subjects of merit.

M. R. Dick, Produce Exchange, has secured rights to Mo-Toy Comedies and Ebony Comedies.

E. Oddy Freedman, of the Film Exchange, is sending out through Minnesota a Hawaiian duo in connection with the showing of "The Wrath of the Gods."

Green & Steffes, Loeb Arcade, are endeavoring to dispose of the Montana rights to "Ignorance."

Manager Wilson, of the American Maid Film Company, has booked "Glory" for a four-day run in the New Aster, Minneapolis.

JANE GREY ON SCREEN AND STAGE.

Jane Grey, who is scoring another splendid screen success in "Her Fighting Chance," the picture version of James Oliver Curwood's novel, "The Fiddling Man," returned to the stage immediately after finishing the picture and appeared in the title role of "De Luxe Annie," opening in Atlantic City before her latest screen vehicle made its first public appearance.

For next season Miss Grey has arranged her picture and stage contracts so that she can appear upon the screen and stage at the same time. Most of her studio work will be done in the morning under the management of A. H. Jacobs Photoplays, Inc., and will not be allowed to interfere with her stage activities, which will include appearances under the direction of Oscar Hammerstein and Lee Schubert.

JAPANESE PICTURES OPEN AT RIALTO.

The series of Japanese pictures, "The Land of the Rising Sun," were opened by the America-Japan Pictures Company at the Rialto theater, New York, on May 27. Samuel Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto, obtained some specially painted drops on the stage and the Rialto orchestra rendered, during the picture, special music orchestrated from original manuscript of Japanese music, brought over to this country and used by J. B. Millet, who produced the pictures. Mr. Millet's book of Japanese music is the only copy of these selections and is twenty-five years old.

The lobby display, which was furnished by Mr. Millet, consisted of an enormous Japanese scene painted on silk which hung over the doorways entering from the street into the lobby; a beautiful purple Japanese streamer 75 feet long, draped over the balustrade of the mezzanine balcony facing the doors entering into the lobby, and from this balcony were hung a half dozen of the original Japanese banners used in front of their theaters for display announcements.

CHINESE PRODUCTION READY FOR RELEASE.

The Mandarin Film Company, of San Francisco, has complete a seven-reel picture produced exclusively by Chinese talent, and plans are at present being made to distribute the production on the state rights plan. Most of the scenes in the picture were made in a small studio erected on the East side of San Francisco Bay.

HIRSCH GETS KING-BEES FOR NORTHERN JERSEY.

Nathan Hirsch, of the Pioneer Feature Films Corporation, New York, has bought the King-Bee Billy West Comedies for Northern Jersey. He reports big business on "Back Stage," the first of the releases.

YALE COMPANY ORGANIZED IN KANSAS CITY.

The Yale Photoplay Company has been organized in Kansas City, with headquarters in the Gayety building. Its first picture was the "Ne'er-do-Well." It is now putting out "Beware of Strangers," which was recently approved by the Kansas board of review. M. A. Tanner is manager of the company.

PHILADELPHIANS LIKE "MASQUE OF LIFE."

The Garrick Theater, Philadelphia, has reopened to present "The Masque of Life." The highly melodramatic qualities of the picture and its combination of thrill and spectacle apparently appealed to the taste of the audiences.

"CUPID'S RIVAL" (King-Bee).

King-Bee Films Corporation's fourth two-reel comedy, to be released at the end of June, is called "Cupid's Rival." Billy West, Babe Hardy, Ethel Burton, Leo White and Bud Ross are the leading members of the cast. The story is one that affords this merry band of funmakers the utmost opportunities of contributing some of their new comedy antics to the screen. Billy West is a janitor who finds himself obliged to impersonate an artist, whose delicate mission is to paint pictures of lovely young damsels. But the real artist appears, and the imposter is unmasked—not, however, before a whole series of screamingly grotesque situations have been reachd.

Scene from "Cupid's Rival" (King-Bee).

"Cupid's Rival," directed by Arvid E. Gillstrom under the supervision of Louis Burstein, is declared by those who have seen it to add another to King-Bee's growing list of successes.

Scandinavian Firm in New York

John Olsen & Co. Take Offices in Times Building—Secure "Intolerance" and "Birth of a Nation" for Scandinavia—Looking for Other Pictures.

ONE of the important shifts in conditions that the war has brought about is shown in the presence in New York of John Olsen & Co., one of the foremost film dealers of the Scandinavian countries, who have just opened offices in the Times building, and who will transfer their London representative to this country for the next few years.

Olsen & Co., of Copenhagen and London, represent the three largest renting concerns in Sweden, Norway and Denmark, including Fotorama, the Swedish Biograph and the Scandinavian Film Central.

The first purchase they made after their arrival in this country was to take over the Scandinavian rights for D. W. Griffith's productions, "Intolerance" and "The Birth of a Nation." These will be sent through the Norse countries on touring arrangements very similar to the manner in which the Griffith productions have been handled in this country.

Messrs. Olsen & Co. are exclusive buyers for the big Scandinavian firms mentioned and will be in the American market from now on for the rights to current film productions. John Olsen, the head of the firm, arrived last week, accompanied by O. Hemberg, of the Swedish Biograph, and Ernest Mattason, who has been their London representative. The latter will remain in this country and will have charge of the American offices in the Times building.

After completing the deal for the Scandinavian tours of "Intolerance" and "The Birth of a Nation" Mr. Olsen will return to Sweden and arrange for the American invasion of those countries.

"It was only about a year ago," said Mr. Olsen, "that we discovered an increasing demand for American pictures. Prior to that time our patrons wanted only the Italian and German pictures. They said the American pictures were too jerky and speedy. Last season we made arrangements for Triangle pictures and these, I think, paved the way for others. Now American subjects are in the greatest demand and have practically eliminated the old pictures. Our people like clean, wholesome films with a preference for comedy-dramas that are snappy in action but which have a sentimental appeal also.

"I find that your American manufacturers have an exaggerated idea of the possibilities in our countries. At present we have about eleven million people to draw from and can use from three to five copies of any given film subject. You see, we do not have the number of large cities or towns in proportion to our population that you have in America and, therefore, have fewer theaters to supply. However, now that the American subjects have taken a firm foothold in the esteem of our patrons, the demand will grow and this is why we are opening a New York branch. It will bring us in closer touch with the available supply of material in this country."

CENTURY COMEDIES FIND FAVOR WITH BUYERS.

The early success of Century Comedies, in which Alice Howell is being starred by Julius Stern, confirmed the judgment of Managing Director H. Edel, of New York's Strand theater, when some of the Centurys were shown on a prerelease at that house. Mr. Edel voiced his satisfaction with the result, and declared that his audiences were highly pleased. Basing his calculation upon the exacting type of audiences that assemble at the Strand, there was no further hesitation on Mr. Stern's part in launching the features for state rights marketing.

Century Comedies have found a ready market, "Balloonatics," the first release in which Alice Howell appeared as a star, having been distributed over a large share of territory by buyers for the open field. Miss Howell built up a large following during her years of service to the screen as a film comedienne, and her name means something in every community where pictures are shown.

J. G. Blystone has given his personal attention to directing Miss Howell in Centurys and has prepared three releases, now ready for circulation, and is at work upon other subjects to follow. Miss Howell will appear as a "circus queen" in a forthcoming Century, and opportunities for taking chances to gain laughs have been provided in abundance. Meanwhile "Balloonatics" will be followed by "Automaniacs" and later on by "Neptune's Naughty Daughter" in the Century series.

Julius Stern is conducting the commercial end of Century transactions from his offices in the Mecca building, New York, while Director Blystone is operating in Hollywood, Cal., with a large force of merrymakers. It is Mr. Stern's determination to "get behind" Century Comedies in an enterprising manner, backing the Alice Howell product with a heavy advertising campaign.

ROAD COMPANY FOR "INTOLERANCE" IN CALIFORNIA.

The All Star Feature Distributors, of San Francosco, has a road company touring California with "Intolerance." The company includes an orchestra, manager, operator, advance man and bill poster. A similar company is also on the road with "Civilization."

Selig Exploiting Pictures

Little Territory Left for "Beware of Strangers"—Preparing Campaign for "Garden of Allah"—"Who Shall Take My Life?" in Preparation.

WITH the virtual winding up of the sales of "Beware of Strangers" the Selig Polyscope Company is preparing a campaign of exploitation on "The Garden of Allah." The former feature is claimed by the Selig Company to be one of the most successful pictures sold on a territorial rights basis. Within a few weeks that the production has been ready for exploitation nearly all territory has been sold. The States remaining unsold for "Beware of Strangers" are Oregon, Washington, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Eastern Pennsylvania and Michigan. The quick buying of the picture is attributed not only to its artistic worth but to its commercial satisfaction as well. It ran five weeks in Chicago "Loop" theaters, including a run at the La Salle.

Plans for the exploitation of "The Garden of Allah" include premiere runs in New York City and Chicago. At the Century Theater, Indianapolis, the picture is claimed to have played to $13,000 business in one week. Those who have seen "The Garden of Allah" pronounce it an unusually beautiful production closely following the book. Thomas Santschi and Helen Ware are the featured players, and they are supported by a company of high-class artists. It is said that thousands of persons are seen in the ensemble scenes, together with camels, etc. There is also said to be an appealing love story running through the entire action.

"Who Shall Take My Life?" a stirring drama with a powerful argument against capital punishment, written by Maibelle Heikes Justice, is at present being prepared by William N. Selig. The cast includes such players as Thomas Santschi, Fritzi Brunette, Al. W. Filson, Bessie Eyton, Eugenie Besserer and Harry Lonsdale.

LAWHEAD REPRESENTING WILLIAMSONS.

Rex O. Lawhead has left New York to act as general representative for the Williamson Brothers. He will handle "The Submarine Eye" throughout the Middle West, with headquarters in Chicago. En route he stopped in Detroit and gave a private showing of the picture to a selected list of exhibitors. The Detroit showmen were enthusiastic over the production, and written expressions of their opinions have been received at the New York offices of the Williamson Brothers.

Mr. Lawhead is well known for the excellent way in which he handled "The Williamson Brothers' Submarine Expedition Pictures," the first underwater films shown in America. A definite announcement regarding a Chicago run for "The Submarine Eye" will be forthcoming from the Williamson Brothers at a later date.

STATES CLOSED FOR HILLER & WILK FEATURES.

Hiller & Wilk, of Longacre Building, New York, have been active in disposing of rights to "The Battle of Gettysburg" and "The Wrath of the Gods." Both pictures were bought for Illinois by the United Film Service Company, of Chicago; for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia by the Specialty Film Company; for Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska by E. O. Friedman, of the Premier Features Company, of Minneapolis; for Washington, Oregon and Idaho by De Luxe Features, of Seattle, and for California, Arizona and Nevada by Sol Lesser, of San Francisco. E. Santikos, of Waco, Texas, purchased the "Battle of Gettysburg" for his State.

GOLDBURG OFF ON FROHMAN SERVICE TOUR.

In conformity with the recently adopted policy of the Frohman Amusement Corporation to assist buyers of super features produced by the company President William L. Sherrill announces the completion of his plans in that direction, whereby he is now prepared to put into active effect a practical and technical assistance in the matter of exhibition of the Frohman Corporation's productions.

"I have been working on a detailed plan ever since the completion of our last production, 'God's Man,' said Mr. Sherrill, "and our service department commences operations, beginning with that production. For this special Service Department we have engaged Jesse J. Goldburg, whose successful activities in the motion picture industry are well known.

"As a part of our plan of operations, Mr. Goldburg has left New York on an extended tour of the United States, planning to stop off at Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha, Des Moines, St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo.; Wichita, Denver, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Waco, Dallas, Birmingham, Atlanta, Louisville, Boston, Montreal and Toronto.

He will interview all of the reputable and responsible state rights buyers in each of these cities, essentially for the purpose of discussing in general methods of booking and exhibition and to render such other assistance as may be requested of him.

STAGE PROLOGUE FOR "BAR SINISTER."

One of the innovations connected with Frank Hall's Broadway run of "The Bar Sinister," which began at the Broadway Theater on Sunday, May 27, is an elaborately staged prologue that plunges the audiences deep into the atmosphere of the story, which is laid "somewhere below the Mason-Dixon line." Anthony P. Kelly, the author, has centered the action about a turpentine still, introducing characters as unusual to Southern drama as are his locations, and in arranging a prologue for the Broadway Theater presentation of Edgar Lewis' production Mr. Hall took advantage of the novel features of the story.

Aided by the artists of the Lee Lash Studios, Mr. Hall has succeeded in bringing to the stage a beautiful scenic representation of a turpentine forest. In the background is seen the home of the owner of the still, while in the foreground the odd characters of the drama gather to join in the singing of Southern melodies.

"THE WHIP" CONTINUES ITS SUCCESS.

"The Whip," which was such a success in London and New York, but which, because of its size, could not be put on more than a few theater stages, now made into a big feature picture by Paragon Films, is going with the same success right into the small cities and meeting the same enthusiastic reception.

R. C. Miller, of the Poli Circuit, took over rights for New England, and he reports that it goes extremely well not only in the large cities, but even in the little towns. Reports of the same kind come from the Northwest, from Canada and from the far West. "The Whip" has started on a run at the Cort theater in San Francisco. Sol. Lesser bought the rights for California and Nevada.

In New York state Marcus Loew has taken over the rights at what is said to be one of the highest prices ever paid for a feature picture to be shown in this territory. Mr. Loew was influenced not only by the run at the Park theater on Broadway, but by what the New York papers universally acknowledged that "The Whip" was much better as a picture than it was even as an international stage success.

IDLE "MUTT AND JEFF" PRINTS AVAILABLE.

For the purpose of informing state rights buyers operating in the territories of Iowa and Nebraska, California, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, Texas, Washington, Oregon and Montana, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Canada who have been under the wrong impression concerning the availability of the "Mutt and Jeff" animated cartoon comedies, Bud Fisher states that in these districts where his product has been playing to scant distribution he would dispose of those unused prints to film men who, realizing the popularity of the "Mutt and Jeff" comedies, would personally attend to a better circulation on available subjects. Since taking over the management of the "Mutt and Jeff" pictures Mr. Fisher has discovered that in the sections mentioned his product is not receiving the proper distribution as compared with other territories.

SHERMAN-ELLIOTT COMPANY REORGANIZES.

The Sherman-Elliott Company announces that Edward Nelson has been elected president of the company to succeed H. A. Sherman, who resigned the postion. F. H. Peterson has been elected secretary and treasurer. He takes the place of John Elliott, secretary, and Edward Nelson, treasurer, both of whom also resigned. The offices of the company are in the McKnight Building, Minneapolis.

"SUBMARINE EYE" OPENS AT LIBERTY THEATER.

Williamson Brothers' sub-sea drama, "The Submarine Eye," opened an indefinite run at the Liberty Theater, New York, on Sunday May 27. A packed house greeted the picture's premiere public presentation, and seats have been at a premium for every performance since. The public by their patronage have proclaimed the Williamsons' latest production a success.

Aside from the producers' claim that "The Submarine Eye" is a super-dramatic story of intense interest, the particular appeal of greater import than mere entertainment seems to lie in the sensational revelation of an inverted periscope that is claimed to point the way to effectual preparedness against submarines.

One of the big thrills in the picture that was especially applauded was that in which a diver is trapped at the bottom of the sea by the lid of the treasure chest he seeks to open. Above the water, standing on his father's yacht, his fiance peers through the periscope and sees the tragedy enacted. The suspense is all that could be asked.

"PERSUASIVE PEGGY" FIRST MAYFAIR PRODUCTION.

M. A. Schlesinger, president of the Mayfair Film Corporation, announces that the first production starring dainty Peggy Hyland is "Persuasive Peggy," the charming story by Maravene Thompson, which scored such a hit in magazine and book form.

In the title role of Persuasive Peggy Miss Hyland is ideally cast as the young wife who ties her blustering boy husband to her chariot wheels in so diplomatic a way that he still believes himself the master. Never before has she had such wonderful opportunities in which to demonstrate her natural charm and the production promises to be delightfully wholesome and refreshing.

In order that no part of the attractiveness of the original story be lost in the adaptation, the scenario was written by the director, Charles Brabin, in collaboration with the authoress, Miss Thompson.

The settings teem with beauty and the little star wears frocks galore in which to captivate her many admirers. No detail will be overlooked, and a number of unique touches in photography and lighting effects are rumored from reliable sources.

SELZNICK RAPIDLY BOOKING "THE BARRIER."

With the reorganization of the Lewis J. Selznick exchanges practically completed, great progress has been made in the distribution of Rex Beach's "The Barrier." More than $12,000 worth of bookings were made the first three days last week, with contracts ready to sign a number of other important engagements.

Among the bookings closed last week for seven days or more were the Mall and Alhambra in Cleveland, Clinton Square in Albany, Garden Theater in Washington, D. C.; Columbia in Pittsburgh, and houses in Des Moines, Kansas City, Davenport, Johnstown and Butte.

J. Frank Brockliss, who has control of the foreign rights to "The Barrier," closed bookings for Canada and Australia. In the New York district the demand for dates indicates that every first-class house in Greater New York will play the picture before the end of the summer.

From the results so far the Selznick forces are confident that "The Barrier" will break the records of the first great Rex Beach success, "The Spoilers."

"GARDEN OF ALLAH" OPENS IN CLEVELAND.

"The Garden of Allah" auspiciously began its present run at the Keith Hippodrome, Cleveland, through the combined efforts of Cleveland and Pittsburgh men. William Moore Patch, who has done much for high class pictures in Pittsburgh, and Carl Bernthaler, orchestra leader, of Pittsburgh, traveled to Cleveland to aid the opening. Leon D. Netter and John Royal, manager of the Hippodrome, were also responsible for a part of the good work. The prices during the run are 25 and 50 cents.

The stage settings are in keeping with the film. Camels and Arabs formed combinations with screen scenes that gave the picture added interest.

SOUTH AMERICA GETS "MORMON MAID."

Scandanavian rights and rights for a large block of South American territory to "A Mormon Maid" have been sold by Hiller & Wilk, selling agents for the Friedman Enterprises, to South American Cinema Theaters, Ltd., of Buenos Aires. The deal was consummated with Carle E. Carlton and J. M. Aragon, of the South American firm, both of whom are in New York at the present time. The firm's New York office is in the Times Building. The South American territory disposed of includes Brazil, Argentine, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Bolivia.

CAMERA FEATS IN "THE CURSE OF EVE."

In filming the pictorially beautiful prologue for the Corona Cinema Company's production, "The Curse of Eve," which contains a modern story introduced by a Biblical prologue dealing with the creation of the world, the cameraman, William C. Thompson, has introduced several new feats of motion picture photography.

Thompson, who was the designer of the Thomas Dixon Studios, now occupied by Fox, and in charge of the photography for "The Fall of a Nation," experienced his chief difficulty in photographing the Garden of Eden scenes for "The Curse of Eve" through the necessity of double-exposing the entire prologue in one continuous dissolve, which necessitated taking each scene at the same diaphragm aperture, regulating the exposure throughout by the shutter opening, a process which cameramen will recognize as being most difficult when continuously dissolving in a large number of scenes.

In making the scenes for the introductory part of the production the photographic work sometimes included running the film through the camera as many as eight or nine times, and the entire prologue is developed in a continuous dissolve of one hundred parts, each of which is in its place without any cutting of the film having been done. Considering the difficulties thus encountered and the beautiful effect which resulted, "The Curse of Eve" will, no doubt, be judged as quite a triumph for the photographer.

HALL WELCOMES GOOD SPECIALS.

Frank Hall, who in spite of his activities as a state rights seller and an exchange man, classes himself first of all as an exhibitor, says that he welcomes special productions like "The Bar Sinister," "The Whip," "Civilization," "Joan the Woman," etc., as opportunities to keep his theaters in the de luxe class and thereby justify himself with the public in demanding fair admission prices.

It was such pictures as "The Bar Sinister" that enabled Mr. Hall to charge a twenty-five cent top price at his Strand Theater, Newark, N. J., and so convinced is he of the value of such features to exhibitors who are striving to build up their business that his Newark exchange handles only the biggest and best that the state rights field affords.

"My experience has been that people want to see the best pictures on the market and are more than willing to pay for them," says Mr. Hall. "Exhibitors who get the best and let their people know it by extensive advertising can charge top prices for their seats and play to real money all the time. Knowing the demand for special pictures which will give exhibitors a chance to raise their prices and make a noise about it, I bought the world rights to "The Bar Sinister" with perfect confidence that it would be a tremendous success, and it promises to make a new record as an attraction that will play long runs at special box office prices."

EASTERN RIGHTS ON "WOMAN AND BEAST" CLOSED.

Graphic Features, controlling the five-reel Marie Shotwell feature, "The Woman and the Beast," announce the sale of the New York State and Northern New Jersey rights to Lenox Film Corporation, with offices in the Leavitt building, on Forty-sixth street, New York City. The Lenox also own New York State on the first picture in which Miss Shotwell appeared—"The Witching Hour." Julius Levine, president of the Lenox, closed the deal on behalf of his firm.

The Globe Feature Film Corporation of Boston, of which Harry G. Segal is general manager, has secured the New England States on the same subject.

Five prints will be used in New York and three in Boston, according to an official of the Graphic Features, who are now located in their new offices in the Candler building, 220 West Forty-second street, New York City.

HATCH BUYS "SUBMARINE EYE" FOR JERSEY.

The Williamson Brothers, producers of "The Submarine Eye," announce that they have sold the New Jersey rights of their underwater drama to the J. Frank Hatch Film Company, of 284 Market street, Newark.

Mr. Hatch has the reputation of being one of the biggest and most successful showmen in the country. He has fathered the motordrome portable track for racing, has operated film exchanges in Cleveland and Pittsburgh, and has handled "The Fall of a Nation" and other big productions. He now owns and operates several theaters in Newark.

FRIEDMAN LEAVES FOR MINNEAPOLIS.

Benjamin Friedman, head of the Friedman Enterprises, Inc., which corporation owns "A Mormon Maid," has left New York for a visit to his home in Minneapolis. Mr. Friedman will stop enroute at the larger cities in the interests of his firm. He reports very good business throughout the country on "A Mormon Maid." He states that the picture was especially well received in long runs in Buffalo and Cleveland.

"BABBLING TONGUES" ABOUT COMPLETED.

Ivan Film Productions announce that their William Humphrey picture, "Babbling Tongues," is virtually completed. It is now being cut and titled. The theme of the picture was taken from the Bible—the fifth and sixth verses of the third chapter of St. James—which states: "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity. It setteth on fire the course of Nature, and is set on fire by Hell."

William Humphrey, who produced the picture, says: "I consider 'Babbling Tongues' my best achievement. Of all the pictures I have directed during the past seven years I have never been given the opportunities I have been given with this one. I have had free sway and free choice of subject. I am ready to be judged by the most fastidious critic as regards the outcome."

The story of "Babbling Tongues" was written by Mr. Humphrey and George E. Hall. The cast is composed of Grace Valentine, James Morrison, Paul Capellani, Louis Beaudet, Carolyn Birch and others.

The picture is said to be a strongly dramatic indictment against gossip, and a visualized sermon whose message for good will be felt by all who see it.

"THE LABOR LEADER" COMPLETED.

International Exclusives Limited, of London, are just putting the finishing touches to "The Labor Leader," the first of their British-made super-productions which will be ready for showing to the trade very shortly. The story is one of exceptional strength, the production is on an elaborate scale, and the cast includes such well-known theatrical favorites as Owen Nares, Fred Groves, Lauri de Frece, Fay Compton and Christine Silver.

A considerable amount of interest is being evinced by the trade in this film, and inquiries have been heavy, in view of the fact that it is the first production by Thomas Bentley since his successful subject, "Milestones," which is at present attracting extraordinary business throughout England.

Low Warren, late editor of Kinematograph Weekly, has now joined International Exclusives, Limited, as joint manager and will occupy a seat on the Board of Directors.

This is the firm whose picture, "Tom Brown's Schooldays," recently received the signal honor of a command performance before King George at Buckingham Palace.

TRADE TO SEE "THE GREAT WHITE TRAIL."

The Whartons—Leopold and Theodore—have departed from the usual lines of their motion picture industry, with the result that they are celebrating their third anniversary in business partnership by becoming independent producers for state rights buyers. All of which means that there will be more than usual interest in the Broadway Theater the morning of June 1, for it will be then that the Whartons will give an exhibitor's showing of their first super-feature under the new plan, "The Great White Trail."

Doris Kenyon forms the featured personality of the picture, which is in eight reels. Supporting her are Paul Gordon, Thomas Holding, Hans Roberts, Edgar Davenport and a large cast. The story and direction are by Leopold D. Wharton, and the tale is that of New York and the Yukon during the day when the "mushers" trailed their way into the north that they might find the hidden gold of the Klondike.

The showing at the Broadway is to be given at 10 o'clock in the morning. A number of invitations have been issued to the exhibitors, and the demand for them has been heavy.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"THE MYSTERY OF NO. 47" (Selig).

Ralph Herz is the star in "The Mystery of Number 47," the Selig Red Seal Play released Monday, June 4, in K-E-S-E. This unusual comedy-drama was written by J. Storer Clouston and is said to abound in plot interest, in comedy situations and intense climaxes. In brief the story has to do with an elderly gentleman who collects china and writes of the minor poets of the sixteenth century. Without any cause whatsoever on his part, Fate snatches the gentleman out of obscurity and he is described in the sensational press of two continents as a dastardly murderer. Great rewards are offered for his apprehension.

Scene from "The Mystery of No. 47" (Selig).

In the support of Mr. Herz the Selig company promises a capable cast, including Nellie Hartley, Louizeta Valentine, Edgar Murray, jr., James Fulton, Fred Eckhart, Casson Ferguson and Lloyd Sedgwick. Otis B. Thayer is the director in charge. The play is located in England, and many beautiful scenic effects are promised.

FINISH STUDIO WORK ON "AUCTION BLOCK."

With the taking of a big gambling house raid the final studio scenes of "The Auction Block," the second production of the Rex Beach Pictures Company, was completed, and there remains only a steel mill scene, which will be taken in Pittsburgh. Director Trimble will then start on his task of cutting and titling the picture, which will be ready for exhibitors September 1.

"The Auction Block" has a number of sensational scenes, including an exact reproduction of the famous Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic, with the show going on and the audience present. Another sensational scene is the chorus girl dinner given by a Pittsburgh millionaire, which reveals New York's fastest set at their merriest.

A phase of "The Auction Block," which will cause unusual interest, is that a number of characters are founded on famous Broadway figures; for instance, the theatrical manager in the picture is a thinly disguised impersonation of Flo Ziegfeld, while another character is modeled after the late "Diamond Jim" Brady. Another prominent character is founded on a Pittsburgh millionaire who is notorious for his Broadway escapades.

FARRAR TO START ARTCRAFT PICTURE IN JULY.

Geraldine Farrar, who recently arrived in California to appear in Artcraft Pictures, will commence work on her initial offering under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille July 1. Director De Mille, who is at present staging the new patriotic Mary Pickford subject, "The Little American," at the Lasky studios, will shortly conclude his work on this film upon which he will take a well-earned vacation. Mr. De Mille will visit his cattle ranch for a few weeks, and then return to the studios to work with Jeanie MacPherson on the new Farrar stories.

"FIRES OF REBELLION" (Bluebird).

Ida May Park, one of the few women devoting themselves to producing pictures, makes her second contribution to the Bluebird program July 2, when Dorothy Phillips appears in "Fires of Rebellion." Story, scenario and direction by Miss Park makes the offering a tribute to the genius of the feminine. Miss Park alternates with her husband, Joseph De Grasse, in directing Miss Phillips in her monthly appearances among Bluebirds, the release current for May 21, "The Flashlight," being Miss Park's first production.

"Fires of Rebellion" presents and unfolds a social labor problem, and its appeal will be direct and forceful in cities and towns where factories and mills constitute the chief industry. There is sufficient force and power to the plot, added to Miss Phillips' histrionic gifts, to make the production attractive in all sorts of localities—but factory and mill workers will especially delight in seeing the "under dog" succeed against oppression.

Lon Chaney and William Stowell will, as usual, be chief in Miss Phillips' supporting organization, Belle Bennett, Golda Madden, Alice May Yost, Richard La Reno and Edward Brady completing the organization. "Fires of Rebellion" will be the sixth Bluebird Miss Phillips has starred in since she came to the program last December. She is scheduled for regular monthly appearances for some time to come.

SLOMAN NOW LOOKING AHEAD.

Edward S. Sloman, who directs William Russell in Mutual-American productions, takes the responsibilities of fatherhood with intense seriousness. Baby Leslee Sloman is only a few weeks old, but her dad has already selected the college to which he is going to send her.

"LAND OF THE LONG SHADOWS" (Essanay).

Essanay will release the first of its series of Western photo-dramas June 18. "Land of Long Shadows" is the title. Trade showings of this feature, which is a comedy-drama, will be presented at all branches of the K-E-S-E within a few days.

In "Land of Long Shadows" Jack Gardner, musical comedy favorite, makes his debut on the screen. Mr. Gardner is widely known for his stage appearance in "Madame Sherry," "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Belle of Mayfair" and Broadway's latest musical comedy success, "Oh, Boy." Reports from Essanay's western field of action are that Mr. Gardner has done excellent work in his screen premier. His supporting company includes Ruth King, C. J. Lionel and Carl Stockdale.

Scene from "Land of Long Shadows" (Essanay).

"Land of Long Shadows" was filmed for exteriors in the Canadian Northwest and presents much of the scenery of that country. One of the novelties of the picture is a pack of trained timber wolves. Essanay promises in this production an entirely new yet typical picturization of red-blooded western life. The story was written by W. S. Van Dyke, who also directed its adaptation to the screen.

P. 1635 & 1636 turn out

Three Stars in Two Paramount Productions

Wallace Reid, Myrtle Stedman and Vivian Martin Head the Bill for Week of June 4.

WALLACE REID, Myrtle Stedman and Vivian Martin will be the stars in two Morosco features which will be issued by Paramount the week of June 4. Mr. Reid and Miss Stedman will be seen in a very clever mining story called "The World Apart," while Vivian Martin will add her inimitable charms to the success of the production entitled "Giving Becky a Chance."

Surrounding these two features for this week will be the sixty-ninth edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the seventieth of the series of weekly trips around the world, personally conducted by Burton Holmes, entitled "Surabaya—The Busy Burg of Java," and Victor Moore's cleverest Klever Komedy entitled "Bungalowing."

Wallace Reid, who has become one of the most popular of the Lasky stars, was cast for "The World Apart," a Morosco production, as no better actor in the country could play the part. He makes an excellent young mining superintendent, and the production is one of the most elaborate that Morosco has turned out this year. The cast includes John Burton as Roland Holt, Eugene Pallette as Clyde Holt, Florence Carpenter as Rose de Braisy and Henry A. Barrows as Jack King.

An entirely new phase of Vivian Martin's mentality has been developed in the production "Giving Becky a Chance," for it gives her an opportunity of demonstrating her inimitable ability as a danseuse, and the story of the production is especially interesting because it shows the evil effects of deception. The cast includes Jack Holt as Tom Fielding, Jack Richardson as Ross Benson, P. H. Sosso as Mr. Knight and Alice Knowlan as Mrs. Knight.

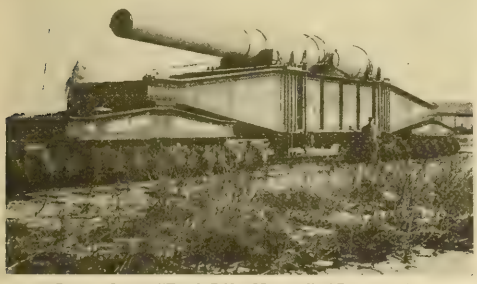
Now that things Hawaiian are quite the vogue, and one dances and dines to the strains of the latest tune from the island of perpetual summer, the ukulele has come into its own, and in the sixty-ninth release of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs the making of this instrument is shown in a very clever manner. In the same release there is shown how on the rocky coast of New Zealand excitement is granted to the fishermen who go trawling for snappers. Then, too, there is a subject entitled "The Key to Beauty," an exposition of the methods adopted by some of our famous stage beauties in preserving and developing their charms, while the "little feature" is very well rounded with a cartoon of Bobby Bumps, who goes "Daylight Camping."

In the seventieth of the series of weekly trips around the world, which Burton Holmes is conducting for Paramount, he takes his fellow-journeyers to "Surabaya—the Busy Burg of Java. Surabaya is the busiest headquarters of the Dutch in the Far East.

Nothing quite so hilarious has ever been given to the screen by Victor Moore than his single reel comedy, "Bungalowing," in which Mr. Moore works out an exceptionally clever comedy style, the idea of taking a bungalow in the suburbs; some the antics and tactics that are developed in this comedy plot are the most laughable that have ever been conceived.

HOW BIG GUNS ARE MOVED (Reel Life).

An instance of the timeliness of the pictures appearing in Gaumont's magazine in film, "Reel Life," is seen in No. 59, the issue released through Mutual, June 14. This is a picture of how big guns are moved. Instead of saying that it is being placed "somewhere in America," one can be more specific—the gun is being mounted "somewhere on the Pacific coast." Pictures were taken by a Gaumont cameraman over a period of a week or more, since a seventy-ton gun is not lifted into place with what one might call rapidity.



Scene from "Reel Life No. 59" (Gaumont).

The advantage to an exhibitor of showing "Reel Life" is obvious. It has pictures which are "up to the minute," material that is of continuing interest. It is edited with the one idea of giving spectators pictures of subjects about which they are already vitally interested, or else in which they can immediately develop such an interest.

"THE STOLEN PARADISE" (World).

The World-Pictures Brady-Made release for June 18 has Ethel Clayton as its star player and is called "The Stolen Paradise." It contains the altogether uncommon complication supplied by a blind man who is married to a counterfeit bride and does not discover the deception until several years have elapsed and a child has been born of the union.

The man, impersonated by Edward Langford, loses his eyesight in rescuing from fire a young woman to whom he thought himself rather strongly attracted.

Scene from "The Stolen Paradise" (World).

"The Stolen Paradise" has a big scenic punch in a fire incident where a laboratory, situated underneath a hall where a masquerade ball is in progress, blows up and starts a conflagration most realistically produced. The sentimental punch occurs where the young wife, perfectly secure in her happiness, sees her whole heart-structure pulled down around her ears in ruin as her husband realizes the trick that has been played upon him.

Miss Clayton, who has risen to remarkably high favor in World-Pictures, finds in this role a singularly striking opportunity for the expression of a wide range of emotions, and it is said by those who have witnessed the private exhibitions of the performance that it is considered one of the most moving of her many brilliant contributions to the screen.

CAMERAGRAPH HAS UNIVERSAL TRAINING FEATURE.

Frank R. Abrams, president and general manager of the Cameragraph Film Manufacturing Co., Inc., has just completed a picture in two reels which shows all details of universal military training, that can be duplicated in all schools. This picture was produced at the New York Military Academy with 400 students participating.

One of the features is the Cadets, acting as honor guard at the reception given by the Governor of the State of New York to the members of the French Commission on the grounds of Washington's headquarters, Newburgh, N. Y. The boys range in age from 8 to 18 years.

Francis Holley, of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, at Washington, D. C., has requested Mr. Abrams to show these pictures at the Arlington Auditorium to the officials of the Government, which will be screened there in a few days.

"UNCLE SAM, AFLOAT AND ASHORE" (Selig).

"Uncle Sam, Afloat and Ashore," is the title of the Selig feature film soon to be released in General Film Service. This production is particularly timely. It presents the activities of the United States Army and Navy. A large battleship fleet, part of which recently joined the Allies across the waters, is shown in battle formation; the activities of the sailors; how the big naval guns are worked, and all other details concerning the life of Uncle Sam's sailor boys are presented in an interesting manner.

The operations of the members of our regular army and of our National Guardsmen are also shown. Scenes are presented giving an idea of how the rookie is developed into a soldier. These and other pictures are not only highly entertaining, but vitally interesting to the American people at this time.

LEATRICE JOY MAKING HIT.

Miss Leatrice Joy, one of the most charming young women in screen land, who recently joined the ranks of comediennes, is making a hit in the Paramount single reel comedies produced by the United States Motion Picture Corporation under the production name of Black Diamond Comedies.

Butterfly Heads Universal for June 4

Zoe Rae s Featured in "The Circus of Life"—Many Other Subjects of Interest.

LITTLE Zoe Rae, the talented child actress, is featured in the Butterfly Picture, "The Circus of Life," a five-act human interest drama, which heads the Universal program for the week of June 4. The story was written by E. J. Clawson and directed by Rupert Julian. It is an appealing story which affords the little star ample opportunities to display her versatility. The principal roles are played by such noted screen stars as Mignon Anderson, Emory Johnson and Harry Carter. "The Circus of Life" will be presented Monday, June 4. On the same day will appear the Nestor comedy, "A Burglar by Request," featuring that inimitable trio of funmakers, Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and Edith Roberts.

"The Almost Good Man," a Gold Seal three-part Western drama with Harry Carey in the leading role, is the feature offering of Tuesday. This is an unusual Western story written by Shelley Sutton, put in scenario form by Charles J. Wilson, Jr., and directed by Fred A. Kelsey. There is a big surprise at the end of the picture. Prominent in the cast supporting Harry Carey are Claire DuBrey, Bester Pegg and Al MacQuarrie. The Victor comedy, "A Box of Tricks," with Billy Mason and Marcia Moore, is the other Tuesday release.

All the scenes in the L-KO two-part comedy, "Dry Goods and Damp Deeds," which appears Wednesday, are laid in a department store and the fun is uproarious from the start. The principals are Phil Dunham, Lucille Hutton, Charles Inslee and Merta Sterling. Issue No. 74 of the Universal Animated Weekly and the Laemmle drama, "The Missing Wallet," featuring Edwin August, will also appear Wednesday.

Ruth Stonehouse is the star in the Rex two-part comedy drama, "Tacky Sue's Romance," which will be released Thursday. The other release of this date is the Imp drama, "Doomed," with Charles Mailes and Claire McDowell in the principal roles.

On Friday, June 8, the feature is the two-act Nestor comedy, "Who's Looney Now?" featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Morgan and Billy Rhodes. It concerns the mix up occasioned when a newly married couple believe one another crazy. Issue No. 22 of the Universal Screen Magazine is also released on this date.

The Bison two-reel cowboy drama, "The Scrapper," featuring Jack Ford, is the chief offering of Saturday, June 9. It is an exceptional drama in which cowboys are the principal characters, as most of the action takes place in the East. The Joker comedy, "Simple Sapho," with Gale Henry and Jack Dill, and the fourth issue of the new special single reel feature, Universal Current Events, will also appear on this date.

The Imp drama, "The Hunted Man," with Mignon Anderson and Lee Dill in the leading roles, and the Powers split-reel, "Them Are the Happy Days," a comedy cartoon, and Superstitious China, a Dorsey Educational, are the offering for Sunday.

During the week the thirteenth episode of the great mystery serial, "The Voice on the Wire" entitled "Twixt Death and Dawn," well be released. Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber are carried through more thrilling situations in this episode.

GAUMONT'S "TOURS" OF SPECIAL INTEREST.

The great admiration of the United States for France, which has had its recrudescence in the present war, will make doubly interesting Gaumont's "Tours Around the World," No. 32, released through Mutual, June 12. The French picture which has the place of honor in this issue shows the wonderful castle and grounds at Versailles. Aside from the fact that it is one of the great beauty spots of the world, its historic interest is great. Other pictures on it are Capri, Italy, the picturesque island south of Naples, and Antigua, an island of the British West Indies.

The second Gaumont single-reel to be released this week is Mutual Weekly, No. 128, which reaches the screen June 13. It will contain the usual assortment of patriotic news pictures, as well as other events of importance.

"Reel Life," No. 59, is released June 14. Its longest section is devoted to showing how a large publishing house is equipped to turn out 12,000,000 copies each month. "How Big Guns Are Moved" is a section that makes a most timely picture. It shows the moving of a seventy-ton gun which is to protect a port on the Pacific coast. A third section is devoted to the hemp industry of rural Roumania. The photography is particularly beautiful, and the archaic old-world methods extremely entertaining. The reel concludes with a picture of the koala, or eucalyptus bear. This strange little creature, an inhabitant of Australia, combines certain features of the rabbit, bear and kangaroo.

BEBAN WORKING IN HIS OWN SCRIPT.

"A Roadside Impresario" once more introduces George Beban upon the screen in a dual role of author and star. It is a Pallas-Paramount picture directed by Donald Crisp, who has presided over all of Mr. Beban's recent productions. Mr. Beban is Guiseppe Franchini, an Italian fisherman who becomes separated from his wife and little daughter by accident. They depart for America and Guiseppe, learning of this fact, starts out to find them in company with Bruo, his trained bear and bosom companion. The animal figures much in the story.

Among those in support of Mr. Beban are Harrison Ford, Fred Huntley, Adele Farrington and Julia Faye.

Johnny and Emma Ray in Movies

Popular Funmakers to Be Seen in Weekly One-Reel Characteristic Comedy for General Film.

AFTER having rocked musical comedy and vaudeville audiences out of their chairs for years with their pranks on the speaking stage, Johnny and Emma Ray are making their debut as motion picture laughmakers, under the auspices of General Film Co. After a year spent in producing a series of successful one-reel screen comedies featuring "King Casey," interpreting the exclusive personality of this famed comedy team has been prepared and regular releases will be made beginning June 11 on General Film's steadily increasing list of selected short subjects.

Johnny and Emma Ray starred so long in their inimitable Casey and other sketches, such as "A Hot Time," "Down the Pike" and "In Society," that their name is a household word from coast to coast. They have a tremendous following. To satisfy its expectations in film comedies the Rays, although working on pictures a long time, did not present any for release until a high standard had been insured. The first number of their series is scheduled for June 11 and is entitled "Coughing Higgins." It is directed by Tom MacEvoy, who will handle Johnny and Emma Ray in pictures which are to follow "Casey the Bandmaster" and "Casey the Fireman," the releases being for June 18 and 25, respectively.

From General Film comes a prediction that Johnny Ray will prove a most refreshing movie comedy character, remarkable for his originality, while Emma Ray as his foil will keep up on the screen her clever style as known on the stage. The intention of the Rays to do motion picture work was generally known throughout the country, and eagerness to see them has been manifested in a mail shower demanding the date of the first release.

"HEIR OF THE AGES" (Pallas).

"The Heir of the Ages," a Pallas-Paramount picture starring House Peters, has two distinct phases; one which concerns only the Cave Man era, and the other pertaining to present day conditions in a western mining town. The cast supporting Mr. Peters includes Nina Byron, John Burton, Henry A. Barrow and Adele Farrington. John Burton will be remembered for his extremely clever character interpretations, and Adele Farrington is well known for her clever work in support of numerous Famous Players-Lasky stars. Miss Byron and Mr. Barrows have also appeared in previous pictures, the latter most recently in "The World Apart."

The prologue to "The Heir of the Ages" shows all the characters in the Cave Man era and pictures the strong man making love after the peculiar fashion of the Cave Man and doing battle against his rivals. It is a fascinating story with a distinctly novel treatment.

HELEN BADGLEY BACK IN PICTURES.

After a long absence from the Thanhouser studio, Helen Badgley, famous as "The Thanhouser Kidlet," is back on the job. Of course, the "Kidlet" is much older now; in fact, is no longer really a "kidlet." She is eight years old!

"Oh, yes, I've grown up," says Helen, "and I hope the people around the studio will call me 'Miss' now."

One thing must have indicated to Miss Badgley that the studio recognized she had grown up. She was given a separate dressing room. In the old days she "made up" with some older member of the stock company. Now she occupies her own room adjoining that of Jeanne Eagels, whom, with Frederick Warde, she supports in the new feature.

"Yes, Miss Eagels and I are in it," concedes Helen.

"It," by the way, is "Fires of Youth," Emil Chautard's first Thanhouser-Pathe Gold Rooster Play, which is released June 15.

ATLANTA FIRE PICTURED IN MUTUAL NO. 126.

The most important event of the week—aside from the great war preparations—has been the destructive fire which swept through a large section of the city of Atlanta. The Mutual Weekly, with its characteristic enterprise, secured excellent pictures during the progress of the conflagration, which are shown in its issue, No. 126. The pictures were received only a few hours before closing time, but a place had been left for them on the reel and the Gaumont laboratory forces worked overtime to get them to exhibitors without any delay.

A war picture of timely interest presents General Pershing, the gallant leader, who will head the first troops sent to France. What will stir the imagination and indignation is the series of pictures of Roye, a town recently recaptured from the invaders.

BARA COMPLETES FIFTH SUPER DE LUXE FILM.

Theda Bara has just finished work on a new super de luxe production for William Fox. This is the fifth picture made by the famous portrayer of the vampire woman since Mr. Fox inaugurated his super de luxe features. Her other films of this class are "The Darling of Paris," "The Tiger Woman," "Her Greatest Love" and "Heart and Soul."

What the Metro Players Are Doing

Ethel Barrymore, Mabel Taliaferro, Emily Stevens, Emmy Wehlen and Viola Dana All Busy.

WORK on four Metro wonderplays was started during the week. Ethel Barrymore is busily engaged in a picturization of Basil King's popular novel, "The Lifted Veil." Mabel Taliaferro returns to the screen in "The Will o' the Wisp," from the pen of Katherine Kavanaugh. Emily Stevens is rushing work on William Christy Cabanne's patriotic story, "The Slacker," and Emmy Whelen is to be seen in "The Trail of the Shadow," written by O. A. C. Lund and adapted for the screen by June Mathis.

Miss Barrymore finds in the role of the heroine of Basil King's story a part that will allow her a splendid opportunity to display the unusual dramatic ability for which she is famous. In this production Miss Barrymore will be assisted by William B. Davidson, who supported her in "The Call of Her People," and by Frank Gillmore, who makes his screen debut in this wonderplay. George D. Baker is directing Miss Barrymore.

As Sheila Desmond in "The Will o' the Wisp" Miss Taliaferro is sure to add many people to her already large list of admirers. The role of the vivacious Irish colleen fits this star to perfection. Her leading man will be Thomas J. Carrigan, who has the role of Neil Dacey, a dashing Irish lieutenant. Others in support of Miss Taliaferro will be Samuel J. Ryan, Nathan Sacks and Clara Blandick. This will be the first Metro picture directed by Tod Browning, who recently came East from the Fine-Arts studio.

Emily Stevens is rushing to completion "The Slacker." Walter Miller, Leo Delaney and Dorothy Haydel are among those selected to support Miss Stevens. Mr. Caabnne is directing the picture.

Emmy Whelan will undoubtedly find her way further into the hearts of the patrons of motion pictures as Sylvia Mason, the heroine of "The Trail of the Shadow." It is a big story with a great climax. In support of Miss Wehlan Eugene Strong, Frank Currier and DeJalma West will have prominent parts. Edwin Carewe directs.

Viola Dana and her entire company worked all week at Marblehead, Mass., where the exterior settings for "Aladdin's Other Lamp," which John H. Collins is directing, are being photographed.

MANY "PUNCH" SCENES IN BRENON PICTURE.

While most melodramas, both stage and screen varieties, depend for their success upon the one big "punch" scene, Herbert Brenon's production of "The Lone Wolf" for Selznick-Pictures contains three big incidents, any one of which would be sufficient to establish the piece as a supreme thriller.

DOWLING HAS BIG ROLE IN BARRISCALE SUPPORT.

When "Bawbs o' the Blue Ridge," the Triangle-Kay Bee production in which Thomas H. Ince will present Bessie Barriscale, is released June 3, admirers of the versatile Bessie will be gladdened by a sight of her in the attractive role of an untamed mountain girl. They will also find much to amuse and interest them in the striking character work of J. J. Dowling, who takes the part of Phinneas Bradley, aged and crusty miser.

Scene from "Bawbs o' Blue Ridge" (Triangle).

This is the sixteenth big feature in which Dowling has taken a prominent part since joining the staff of Thomas H. Ince. Most of these appearances have been made in Triangle productions.

WILLIAM RUSSELL IN "SHACKLES OF TRUTH."

William Russell, who has just completed a new play under Mutual-American auspices, "Shackles of Truth," released by Mutual June 4, is seen to advantage. In "Shackles of Truth" Mr. Russell is given greater opportunity for the display of his versatility than usual.

The plot of "Shackles of Truth" must be accepted as one of the most convincing ever devised for the screen. Its complications are thrilling to a degree because of their unusual character, yet free from such intricacies as sometimes bewilder the spectator and nullify the effect of the spectacle through over complication.

Scene from "Shackles of Truth" (Mutual).

The direction of the play has been admirably handled by Mr. Sloman. There are no unnecessary ramifications in it. Every bit of action is essential to the development of the plot and there is action enough to satisfy even the most ardent advocate of something doing.

One of the most striking features of the play is Russell's brilliant acting in a part that calls for quick changes from the reposeful, intellectual type to the angry young college athlete intent on punishing treachery and resenting insult.

"THE SHADOW OF NIGHT" (Selznick).

"The Shadow of Night" has been selected as the title of Robert Warwick's latest Selznick-Picture, just completed by Director Loence Perret, under the working title of "A Modern Othello." This picture will follow "The Silent Master," the Warwick production now ready for general release.

In changing the title of "'A Modern Othello," Harry Rapf, president of the Robert Warwick Film Corp., was guided by his belief that next to the drawing power of the star, the interest of the public in any production depends upon the attractiveness of the title. In order to get a long list of titles to select from, Mr. Rapf offered a prize of $25 for the best title suggested by any member of the working staff at the Selznick studio. "Shorty" Smith, the "props" of the Warwick company, was the winner.

MARGUERITE CLARK IN REPERTOIRE.

In many of theaters throughout the country where Paramount Pictures are being shown regularly more business is being added by the latest idea that has been put into operation, that of showing Marguerite Clark in repertoire. The idea has been promoted through Paramount Progress, the exhibitors' aids magazine issued by Paramount each week, and the idea has met with success. Theaters which have followed out this idea are giving Miss Clark's pictures an entire week in their town, advertising it well and cashing in on one of the biggest stunts that has ever been promoted for exhibitors.

MARIE WALCAMP IN NEW UNIVERSAL SERIAL.

Marie Walcamp, Universal star noted for her work in "Liberty" and other big productions filmed at Universal City, is to be starred in a new serial to be produced by Director Jacques Jaccard.

This serial, which will be made in sixteen episodes of two reels each, will deal with underworld life in the great outdoors. Much of the atmosphere will be laid about the Canadian mounted police, and Jaccard, who is writing the story himself, declares it is a patriotic theme, without, however, battle scenes or anything else pertaining to actual warfare.

"THE ROAD TO LOVE" WARWICK'S NEXT.

Harry Rapf announces that Robert Warwick's fourth Selznick production will be "The Road to Love," from the original story by Leonce Perret, work on which was started last week. Elaine Hammerstein will again play opposite Mr. Warwick.

LAMBERT HILLYER, DIRECTOR.

Lambert Hillyer, formerly of the Triangle-Ince scenario staff, is making his bow as a director in beginning production at Culver City, of one of his own stories in which Olive Thomas will be featured.

Newark's Big City Theater Changes Hands

Picture Theater on Orange and Seventh Streets, Near Roseville Station, Passes Into the Control of a New Corporation.

By Jacob J. Kalter, 25 Branford Place, Newark, N. J.

NEWARK, N. J.—The new City theater, Seventh and Orange streets, which has been under the control of the United States Amusement Company, has been transferred to a new corporation. The new owners are the B. & S. Amusement Company, with Samuel F. Leber, attorney, as registered agent, with offices at 800 Broad street. The firm is capitalized at $50,000. The officers of the corporation are Joseph Stern, president; Emanuel Linderman, vice-president; Philip Bornstein secretary. Arbaham Tanzer is also listed as one of the incorporators, and Leon O. Mumford is the resident manager of the theater.

The recently acquired show house is one of the largest and prettiest in the city. Having a seating capacity of over 1,400, it is situated in the exclusive residential section of Roseville. With such a high-class clientele to satisfy, it is but natural to conclude that nothing but the best at tractions will be booked. A glance at the coming attractions confirms the above statement. Booked to appear at early dates are "The Crisis," Selig; "Within the Law," Vitagraph; "The Easiest Way," Selznick; "Joan the Woman," Lasky; "20-000 Leagues Under the Sea," Universal; "Romance of the Redwoods," Artcraft.

The men behind the new venture are all well known in film circles hereabouts The president of the concern, Joseph Stern, is also president of the Exhibitors' Association of Essex County. Mr. Stern is also the owner of the National theater, Belmont avenue, Newark.

Mr. Linderman, vice president, is also president of the Essex Amusement Company, which control the Playhouse, 535 Clinton avenue, and the Criterion, 517 Central avenue.

Secretary Bornstein, of the B. & S. Amusement Company, evidently likes the position of secretary, Mr. Bornstein holding that position in the local exhibitors' association as well as in the Exhibitors' League of New Jersey. Mr. Bornstein is another who deserves credit for his work in organizing the exhibitors. At present he manages the Criterion theater, Central avenue, Newark.

Leon O. Mumford, resident manager of the City, is an old-time show man. Mr. Mumford claims the distinction of having opened the first film theater on Broadway the old Manhattan theater, the present site of Gimbel Brothers' store. From this venture Mr. Mumford came to Newark and became connected with the Arcade theater. After seven years' continuous service at the Arcade, Mr. Mumford went to Orange, where he successfully operated the Lyric and the Strand theaters.

Louis Lyon at Civilization.

Newark, N. J.—Many friends of Louis D. Lyon will no doubt read with pleasure of his promotion to the managership of the Civilization Film corporation, Strand theater building, 118 Market street. Mr Lyon succeeds Lynn S. Card, who leaves Newark to be traveling representative for the Frank Hall Productions, Inc. This new position will carry Mr. Card throughout the United States and Canada.

Mr. Lyon's rise in the film world has been fast, but merited. Starting in as an exhibitor at Lodi, N. J., where he ran the Star theater, Mr. Lyon soon entered the exchange field as booker at the Newark office of Pathe. When Lynn S. Card became manager of the Mutual Film's office here he found a capable assistant in Mr. Lyon. From assistant manager at the Mutual, Mr. Lyon rose to representative of the Civilization Film Corporation.

As his assitant Mr. Lyon is fortunate in obtaining the services of James M. Ashcraft. Mr. Ashcraft formerly managed the Philadelphia office of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, and more recently acted in the capacity of represtnative in Newark of the same concern.

Henry Siegel Returns to Selznick Productions.

Newark, N. J.—We are in receipt of a communication from Henry Siegel, formerly manager of the Newark offices of World Film and the Bluebird, announcing that he has returned to the Selznick Productions as assistant to Sol J. Berman. Mr. Siegel's latest position was with Herman F. Jans. Mr. Siegel was one of the most popular exchange men in the state, and his deserving promotion will be welcome news to the Jersey exhibitors.

New Theater at Glassboro.

Glassboro, N. J.—Charles Abbott, Main street, this place, has awarded contracts for the erection of a moving picture theater, 40x100, to cost $5,000.

Bluebird Moves Exchange.

Newark, N. J.—The Bluebird Film exchange has broken off the ties that bound that concern to the Universal in this city, and George R. Carter, manager of the local Bluebird, has secured separate offices in the Strand theater building, 118 Market street.

Baltimore's New McHenry Theater Opens

Beautiful Photoplay House on Light Street Has Seats for 1,080 Persons—Begins Service Under Direction of Bernard Depkin.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mount Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The McHenry theater on Light street, near Cross, in this city, was thrown open to the public on Saturday, May 26. This exquisite photoplay theater was erected at a cost of $75,000 and is under the direct supervision of Bernard Depkin, Jr., supervising manager of the Parkway interests, the officers of which are practically the same as the Southern Amusement Co., who are operating the McHenry theater. They include: Harry W. Webb, president; Jacob W. Hook, vice president, and the directors, including the officers, are: Douglas H. Gordon, Charles H. Classen, George R. Willis, Henry L. Duer, George R. Webb, J. E. Richardson, Eugene Bolster, George Weems Williams and John B. A. Whetle.

The seating capacity of this theater is 1,080 people. A large Moller organ has been installed, the screen is a gold fibre and all the latest improvements in ventilation, heating and adornments have been employed to make this house one of surpassing elegance. The architect is Oliver B. Wight and the builder the Cogswell-Koether Co. A detailed report of the construction with photographs will be sent to the Moving Picture World in a short time.

Jules Verne Story Here.

Baltimore, Md.—The exceptional masterpiece, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," opened up an engagement at the Academy of Music on Monday, May 28. Manager Harry A. Henkel is presenting it in a first class way.

Broadway Celebrates Anniversary.

Baltimore, Md.—J. Louis Rome, managing director of the Broadway theater, 509 South Broadway, and attorney for the Maryland Exhibitors' League, celebrated the first anniversary of the opening of this theater last week and arranged a special program. Besides this, he presented each of his patrons with a photograph of the star appearing in the feature each day, together with other novelties and surprises.

Building Permit Charge Now in Force.

Baltimore, Md.—On Monday evening, May 21, the building permit charge ordinance, which has been pending before the City Council, was passed by both branches and the vote consisted of 20 for and 5 against it. The charge for building permits is to equal $1 per $1,000 of the entire cost of the work and in the case of new buildings $1 is to be the minimum charge This amount also constitutes the minimum charge for alterations and repairs.

Two Week Benefit at Parkway.

Baltimore, Md.—The Baltimore Chapter of the D. A. R. has arranged to have a benefit at the Parkway theater, at the matinees, during this and the coming week. Arrangements for this affair were made through Harry W. Webb, president of the Parkway Theater Co., and Bernard Depkin, Jr., the manager. It is being held in the interests of the Patriotic Work of the Baltimore Chapter.

J. Louis Rome Aids Education.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the courtesy of J. Louis Rome, manager of the Broadway theater, 509 South Broadway, this house is to be used once a week by the Talmud Torah Free School, to take 75 pupils to the theater each week in an endeavor to heighten their interest in their studies. Scenics and educations will be shown.

Benefit Showing of "Civilization."

Baltimore, Md.—Through the courtesy of Manager Frederick C. Schanberger of the Auditorium theater, and a publicity campaign on the part of the Baltimore News, all the performances of "Civilization" last week at the Auditorium were given as a benefit for the Children's Fresh Air Fund.

Governor at Arcade Theater.

Salisbury, Md.—An impromptu reception was held in this city on Monday, May 14, at the Arcade theater, through the courtesy of Harry B. Hearnes, the owner and manager. Governor of Maryland Emerson C. Harrington was the guest and he spoke on the agricultural needs of the country.

George Smiley Leaves Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—Word has reached us that George Smiley, who for some months has been handling the Max Linder Comedies in Baltimore territory from the Washington exchange, it is understod has now resigned that position to go to Philadelphia where he will take up duties with another company.

Dream Theater Brightens Up.

Baltimore, Md.—Dr. Leonard K. Hirshberg, the new proprietor of the Dream theater, 582 North Gay street, and his live wire manager, Samuel K. Smith, are closely co-operating to make this house exceptionally comfortable for their patrons. A corps of decorators and carpenters have been busy for the past week and have put an entirely new dress on this house. Soldiers and sailors in uniform are admitted free of charge and he is arranging to have students from the Talmud Torah Free School come to one of his matinees each week to help them in their studies.

New England News Letter

New Atlas Studios at Work.

NEWTON, MASS.—Friday, May 18, marked the opening of the new Atlas studios at Newton, Mass. Under the supervision of General Director Dadmun, who is also the president of this company, scenes were taken both in the studios as well as many exteriors. Beatrice Roberts, who won the Boston Movie Ball beauty contest, was the particular object of the camera the first day, and while the name of the first picture is held a secret it is evidently a backwoods story from the garb of the beautiful Beatrice, who wore a rough dress, her hair flying free in the wind, and barefooted Miss Roberts made a picturesque appearance in one of her scenes.

This new studio is located in one of the most scenically beautiful spots of Massachusetts. It cost $30,000, and is thoroughly equipped with the latest and most up-to-date paraphernalia for the production of pictures. It is built of stone and has a large stage floor space. The glass roof is pitched at such an angle that it affords the best possible light and the studio is wired for the latest electric lighting effects. The studio is also in easy motoring distance of good locations for scenic requirements of any script, as Massachusetts is justly famous for its natural scenery. On the floor directly beneath the stage is located the laboratory, film rooms, assembling rooms, prop and dressing rooms.

Pennsylvania Censorship Balked by Judge

Selznick Company Is Victor in Suit Over "The Easiest Way"—Julge Patterson Decides That the Censor Board Is in the Wrong.

By F. V. Armato, 144 N. Salford St., West Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—A legal battle between the Lewis J. Selznick Productions company and the State Board of Censors over the feature picture, "The Easiest Way," has resulted in a victory for the former. Judge John M. Patterson, in Court of Common Pleas No. 1, decided last week that the picture could be produced if certain scenes and subtitles were eliminated.

When the picture was submitted to the censors for license they cut out the title, many subtitles and a number of scenes. The Selznick company then brought suit to have the censors overruled. In his opinion Judge Patterson decided that the Board of Censors had abused their discretion in eliminating the title. He discussed the difficulty of setting an exact line between what is moral and what is immoral, giving examples of books and pictures which have been defended and attacked on ethical grounds by prominent critics. Judge Patterson's decision was handed down after several hearings had been held in the case and he had seen the photoplay produced at a private exhibition. The Stanley Company, which is presenting the film here, announced that the picture would be revised according to the court's decree.

Following the disposition of the case, Stanley V. Mastbaum made public a letter forwarded by him to Governor Brumbaugh claiming that the censors have not used proper discretion in conducting their business. The letter says, in part: "The board is not consistent in ordering many eliminations, as what has been eliminated in one picture is allowed in another picture, but the companies are compelled to submit to their unjustifiable rulings due to the fact that an appeal to the courts and the subsequent delay means loss of thousands of dollars."

Hart Reception in Quaker City a Warm One.

Philadelphia, Pa.—William S. Hart, the Western hero, was given a rousing reception here last Wednesday, when he arrived to give Quaker City fans a chance to view him in person. Mr. Hart was met at the station by a delegation of local exhibitors and members of the local Triangle, who conducted him to the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, where a banquet had been arranged by Herbert Givens, of Triangle, and Abe L. Einstein, of the Stanley Company. The itinerary included the Apollo, at 52d and Thompson streets; the William Penn, at 41st street and Lancaster avenue; the Arcadia, at 15th and Chestnut streets, and the Iris theater in Kensington. Mr. Hart's party included C. H. Bristol, advertising manager of the Triangle; Bert Lennon, press representative, and Don B. Keyes, official photographer. E. J. O'Keefe, the live Atlantic City exhibitor, joined the Hart party at Wilmington, Del., and W. Hunt, from Wildwood, met him at the Arcadia. William J. Heenan, of the Stanley corporation; George W. Metzer, of the William Penn, and Charles Segal, of the Apollo, were among those present.

F. W. Sweigert Now With Paramount.

Philadelphia, Pa.—F. W. Sweigert, formerly manager of the International Film, is now local representative of the Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle comedies for the Paramount corporation.

Central Market Street Co. Buys Chestnut Hill House.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Manager Frank W. Buhler, of the Central Market Street Amusement Company, has added another theater, the Belvidere, in Chestnut Hill, to the rapidly growing list. Following the recent acquisition of the Ruby theater by the same company it comes as added testimony to Mr. Buhler's able and progressive management. The Belvidere is situated in an exclusive residential section, and requires special attention in the matter of programs and policy. There seems little doubt, however, that the problems to be met will be successfully surmounted by Mr. Buhler.

Oscar Morgan Made General Sales Manager.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Oscar Morgan, former publicity manager of the local Famous Players, distributors of Paramount Pictures, has been promoted to the office of general sales manager. Mr. Morgan attained the new position through the success of his fair and consistent methods of pushing Paramount's interests.

Glann to Do Paramount Publicity.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Allen Glann, a former newspaper man, until recently publicity director of the Philadelphia and Western Railroad, has been appointed publicity manager of the Paramount exchange here.

W. J. Clark Goes with Red Cross.

Philadelphia, Pa.—William J. Clark, who was employed by the Stanley corporation, left last Friday for France with the local contingent of the American Base Hospital No. 10. Mr. Clark was one of the most popular young men in the Stanley forces, and his departure was keenly felt.

Stanley Theater Manager to Wed.

Philadelphia, Pa.—William Katz, manager of the Stanley theater, has become engaged to Miss Elsie Parker of this city. Mr. Katz is popular with the Stanley clientele, and has been manager for nearly three years.

Jack Rosenthal Takes Model Theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Jack Rosenthal has taken over the Model theater at 435 South street, a house of 1,000 capacity. He plans to make extensive alterations and improvements in the property.

Michael A. Carman to Manage Colonial.

Reading, Pa.—Carr and Schad's Colonial theater in Reading is to be under the management of Michael A. Carman. The Colonial is a 2,000 seat house, and is one of the largest and most comfortable in the state. Music is furnished by an orchestra of fifteen musicians and a Kimball organ that is said to have cost $15,000.

North Carolina Has a Fluke Tax Bill

Governor Signs Bill With Amendment Legislature Though It Had Been Stricken Out—Lets Counties Put Added Tax on Theaters.

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

RALEIGH, N. C.—Representative Clayton Grant of Wilmington, N. C., has recently spent much time at the State Capitol in an endeavor to unravel a peculiar tangle which occurred in the passage of a bill recently, relative to the taxation of motion picture houses.

The bill in question, the state revenue tax measure, was recently passed by the state legislature. In drawing up this measure in the lower house it was the intention to prevent the taxation of motion picture theaters by the county authorities of the state, except where the houses were outside of the limits of incorporated towns.

When the bill was before the Senate for consideration, Senator Thompson induced that body to adopt an amendment permitting the taxation of the theaters by the counties. Later, in conference, it was decided to eliminate the amendment, but by a mix-up in the preparation of the bill as finally passed, that section was not removed and was part of the bill as signed by the governor, leaving the motion picture theaters liable to taxation by county authorities.

Governor Bickett has been asked to make special recommendations to the various county authorities that, since it was not the intention of the legislature to permit county taxes on motion picture theaters, they refrain from assessing such taxes.

City Boosting in Washington.

Washington, D. C.—The Washington Chamber of Commerce is conducting a "Forward Washington" campaign taking in new members by the hundred. Among the moving picture men who have become members are Sidney B. Lust, Fulton Brylawski, E. Lawrence Phillips, and Rudolph Berger. Although one of its latest recruits, Mr. Lust has already been impressed into the "Forward Washington" movement and assigned duties which contemplate the placing in all of the theaters of Washington of slides of the city-booster type.

Manager Lanahan of V-L-S-E in New Quarters.

Washington, D. C.—The V-L-S-E exchange is about to pick up its belongings at 811 E street, northwest, and flit to 712 Eleventh street, northwest, the former home of the International. For quite some time Manager Lanahan has been looking around for a new home for the exchange.

At the new place, everything will be on the one floor and a great deal more space will be obtainable. There will still be one flight of stairs to climb but after one gets to the top he will find everything so convenient that those few steps will be overlooked. Manager Lanahan is particularly pleased with the prospects, and is glad to get out from under the load of worries that the present quarters, because of their limitations, have heaped upon him.

Geo. A. Crouch and Florence C. Sauber Wed.

Washington, D. C.—George A. Crouch, manager for Harry M. Crandall at the Ninth and E Street theater and in charge of the secretarial work incident to the entire Crandall string of the theaters, and Miss Florence C. Sauber, who has been one of the pianists at the Ninth and E Streets theater since its opening, were the participants in a little drama played locally and quietly in which they were the hero and heroine, respectively, with a minister of the Gospel and a few witnesses as the other members of the cast.

Mr. Crouch is known to all of the members of the motion picture industry in this section as "Cotton." He is very popular and is one of those chaps who is always on the job. He started in as a youngster seven years ago with Mr. Crandall at the latter's airdome at North Capitol street and New York avenue, and has been with him ever since receiving a number of promotions during that period, until now he ranks third in the Crandall organization.

Alan Bachrach Will Probably Get Commission.

Washington, D. C.—The next time there is a big parade on Pennsylvania avenue it is more than likely that at front of one company of Infantry troops will be seen a film-man-captain. V-L-S-E has lost one of its best men and the Government bids fair to get a fine one—Alan Bachrach is one of the boys now in training at Fort Myer in the Officers' Reserve Corps and it is more than likely he'll come through a captain. Alan Bachrach has been in the "picture" business practically all of the time since he finished his education. He started in as a photographer with a studio on F street. The next step was to become the manager for the Brylawski interests at the Casino theater, and then he entered the film business. Almost since the opening of the office here, he has been a member of the sales force of the V-L-S-E previous to which time he was with the World Film Corporation. He is one of the best known among the traveling men in North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland. "Good Luck" is being wished him by all his friends in the industry.

While Mr. Bachrach is wrestling with weighty problems of drill on the Fort Myer parade ground, John J. Payette will visit his old friends in the V-L-S-E territory, for the latter has severed his connection with the General Film Co. He has been assistant to Manager Nelson for some time and has been with the General nearly all of the time that he has been in the selling end of the business. Before joining that company he was an exhibitor himself and so is pretty well equipped with a knowledge of both sides of the game.

The V-L-S-E people have lost pretty nearly fifty per cent. of their employees, all of whom have gone into the service of the United States Government. At the local branch, in addition to Mr. Bachrach, two girls, Anna Beattie and Mrs. Capewell, have left the office force to join the American Red Cross. All of the employees who enlist or who are commissioned have been promised that their positions will be held for them so that when they finish their service they can start in again just where they left off.

Manager Haled to Court for Hart Crowd.

Washington, D. C.—William S. Hart created a great deal of commotion here last week when the mob who had gathered in Ninth street to get a view of the great film favorite broke bounds, got into the Garden theater, and blocked up the fire exits, stairs, aisles, and every bit of available floor space. Just about the time the crowd was the greatest somebody sent in a riot call for the police and at least one of the downtown police stations was denuded of its men to be sent to the theater. When they arrived they were just as unable to control the crowds as were the theater attaches. The management was haled into court the following day but released when it was explained how things were.

Mr. Hart was booked to appear twice at the Garden theater but, unfortunately for the crowds who had gathered to see him at the last show, he was detained and could not get there in time. This necessitated the refunding of a large number of admissions and Tom Moore, owner of the theater, is endeavoring to secure Mr. Hart's presence here at some later date to appease a whole army of disappointed patrons.

Ventilation in Norfolk Theaters Suspected

Complaints Have Been Made About Condition in Certain Local Houses—Health Department Warns Proprietors and Waits for Improvements.

NORFOLK, VA.—The Norfolk department of health has instructed the city sanitary inspector to notify the managers of the various motion picture theaters that steps will have to be taken to improve the ventilation.

A number of complaints have been received from time to time that some of the theaters were not as well ventilated as they should be, and inspection by the health department of the city proved that this was a fact, the majority of the offenders being the smaller houses.

The big houses, it was found, were almost all as well ventilated as could be desired, but some of the smaller theaters were not equipped with the necessary devices for keeping the air pure and fresh. While this condition, although unpleasant, was bearable during the winter, the advent of warm weather made it very noticeable.

A study of all the houses has been made by the health department, and the manager of each will be notified of the particular needs of his theater, and will be given a reasonable length of time to comply with the findings of the board of health. Failure to comply with the desires of the board, it was stated, would be followed, after allowing the theater men a reasonable period to make the necessary changes, by further action compelling them to comply with the rules of the health department.

In many of the houses which do not now come up to the standard desired by the city authorities, it was found that all that would be necessary to ventilate the theaters properly would be the installation of ventilating fans.

In general, the condition of the Norfolk theaters and, in fact, those all through Virginia, is excellent, and the department of health anticipates no trouble in inducing the theater men to make the minor changes which will be suggested. The department keeps a close watch upon the theaters and endeavors to work with the theater men in securing the best possible conditions.

HOW CRANDALL ORGANIZES HIS THEATERS.

"Locks Them Up in Pairs" Under One Manager to Each Two Houses—Plans Further Organization.

Washington, D. C.—Harry M. Crandall, head of a string of theaters in Washington, has adopted a new scheme for the management of the various houses. He has, to use his own expression, "locked them up in pairs," with one man directly responsible for each pair.

Thus it is that Joseph Morgan, who is general manager of all the houses and Mr. Crandall's first assistant, is held directly responsible for all matters pertaining to the Savoy and the Knickerbocker theaters. The latter is now undergoing construction.

The downtown houses will be looked after by George Crouch. In his territory will come the house now at Ninth and E streets, and the Metropolitan theater, for which ground has just been broken. In addition to this, Mr. Crouch is in charge of the bookkeeping and all clerical work, and is also directly in charge of cashiers.

The Apollo and Avenue Grand theaters are under the supervision of Jack Keenan, who is assisted by J. B. Upperman as house manager of the Apollo, and Louis Fowler as house manager of the Avenue Grand.

Mr. Crandall finds that this is a most satisfactory way to handle his rapidly growing business. It cuts down the number of people who would be responsible for the many details of the business. All troubles are referred to these three men and, where necessary, they are sent on to Mr. Crandall. Although the business has been divided up in this way, it must not be taken for a minute that Mr. Crandall has given up any of his former activities. He is now figuring out a scheme for having all the work incident to the theaters done on the premises by regular employees of the Crandall Amusement Company. Thus it will be that he will have a man designated as superintendent of machinery. He will be a competent electrician and operator and can take care of the electrical equipment at the six houses. There will also be a carpenter and painter. Where such a man is not regularly attached to a string of theaters, it is frequently found to happen that the managers will wait for some little time until they have a full day's work before they would have repairs made or additions taken care of. With a man on the job, correct care will be taken of the little details and as soon as something happens or needs caring for the man will be put on the work. Next will come a sign painter, for the six houses, when the two now under construction are completed, will have work enough to keep a man pretty busy.

Buffalo Screens to Boost Liberty Bonds

Theatrical Managers Association Expects to Sell Over $100,000 of the New Liberty Loan Bonds—Will Advise Purchase on Its Screens.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 152 N. Elmwood St., Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The members of the Buffalo Theatrical Managers' Association expects that at least $100,000 of Liberty bonds will be sold in this city as a result of its efforts. The association, representing practically every moving picture, vaudeville or legitimate house in Buffalo, has pledged itself to assist in the sale of the bonds. At the last meeting of the association the plan to urge on the public the desirability of buying bonds was considered. It was decided that the best way of approaching the public was by means of the screen.

The managers also decided to organize in their theaters clubs of employees to buy bonds. Ira Mosher, manager of the Palace moving picture theater, Buffalo, has already organized the employees of his house. Without exception, they have agreed to do their bit to make the liberty loan a success. Application blanks have been distributed among the patrons of the theater who showed an interest in the loan. As a part of a campaign of public education the theaters will show cartoons and other matter advertising the loan.

William S. Hart Appears at Shea's.

Buffalo, N. Y.—William S. Hart appeared in person at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, Thursday evening, May 17. A large audience greeted and applauded the famous star. His stay in Buffalo was brief, and his appearance was confined to Shea's Hippodrome.

William Hickey Dies.

Hornell, N. Y.—The funeral of William Hickey, musical director of the Picadilly moving picture theater, Rochester, was held recently in Hornell, N. Y. Pneumonia was the cause of his death. He was the son of Michael J. Hickey, chief of the Hornell police. Mr. Hickey was for years musical director of the Herald Square theater, New York, and at one time was a member of Sousa's band. He was also a composer and teacher.

Complaint About Uncensored Pictures.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Mayor Fuhrmann, of Buffalo, was recently visited by Mrs. Frank Stryker, heading a committee representing the Federation of Women's Clubs of this city. The visitors demanded that something be done regarding the censorship of the films shown in local theaters. They declared that in most cases the Nation Board orders certain parts of films cut out, but that in Buffalo no recognition is taken of the order. Mrs. Stryker asked that an inspector be appointed by the mayor to look after the films. At a special meeting called for an early date the women will again register their complaints, which will be taken before the city council.

Mayor Fuhrmann said the club women's request that the recommendation of the National Board of Review be carried out would receive attention. A similar statement was made by Henry W. Killeen, representing several moving picture interests.

Special Pictures for Children Wanted.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A campaign for appropriate moving pictures for children is being conducted in this city. The committee of the Buffalo Federation of Women's Clubs, which has been giving attention to pictures, is making common cause with the Affiliated Committees for Better Films of New York City. The purpose is to show selected pictures for children Saturday afternoons.

James Cummings Quits Regent Theater.

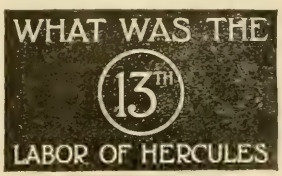
Buffalo, N. Y.—James Cummings has resigned as manager of the Regent moving picture theater, Buffalo, with which he has been connected for some time. Mr. Cummings has not announced his future plans.

Elmwood Gives Boy Scout Party.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Manager Weinberg, of the Elmwood moving picture theater, had as his guests a large party of boy scouts on a recent Saturday afternoon. The special attraction was "The Adventures of a Boy Scout," a five-reel film, portraying a scout's varied and interesting experience. An object lesson in manliness and resourcefulness was featured. This was the first and only time the film was shown in Buffalo. Scout Commissioner Rich, of Buffalo, saw a private screening of the production, and as a result of his recommendation many boys attended the entertainment.

Divine Sarah Draws Capacity Houses.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Casino theater, which shows moving pictures in conjunction with its vaudeville program, closed an unusually successful week with the six-part production, "Mothers of France," featuring Sarah Bernhardt in the title role. Crowded houses were the rule.



F-I-L-M Club Protests New State Tax

Pennsylvania's Proposed Tax of One Cent a Lineal Foot on Motion Picture Film Declared a Burden to the Industry—Committee Sent to Protest.

By Pittsburgh News Service, 6016 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The F. I. L. M. Club held a largely attended meeting on May 22 to take action against the proposed tax of 1 cent per lineal foot on moving picture films, as embodied in a bill now pending before the state legislature. It was brought out that this tax would place a burden upon the industry and that its effects would be highly injurious. Coming at the time of the assessment by the Federal Government of a high war revenue upon the amusement business the proposed state tax is regarded as altogether unjust and discriminatory. According to the provisions of the bill the owner or lessee of the films would have to pay the tax at the time of receiving a certificate of approval of any film from the State Board of Censors.

A committee, composed of Al. W. Cross and Henry Miller, was appointed by the F. I. L. M. Club to go at once to Harrisburg and confer with the judiciary committee of the legislature, at which conference it is expected that the leading film manufacturers will be represented. According to the latest advices from the committee, the outlook for the defeat of the measure is favorable.

S. L. Diggs to Build New Theater at Clearfield.

Clearfield, Pa.—A handsome new theater is to be erected soon at the corner of Third and Locust streets, Clearfield, Pa., by S. L. Diggs, a pioneer exhibitor of this section. The house will be called the New Princess, and Mr. Diggs will spare no expenditure in bringing it up to the highest standard of modern construction and equipment. The seating capacity of the theater will be 1,400. It is planned to have the house completed and ready for opening in the fall. Mr. Diggs conducts with much success the present Princess theater in Clearfield. He entered the exhibiting business in Clearfield ten years ago and is one of the best-known men in the field.

Silverman Bros. Enlarging Their Strand.

Altoona, Pa.—Silverman Brothers, leading exhibitors of Altoona, Pa., have closed their Pastime theater and are preparing to enlarge their Strand. The latter house now has a seating capacity of 1,800, which will be increased to 1,900. The addition to the Strand will be made by combining it with a portion of the Pastime, which adjoins it, and plans are under way for making this house one of the largest and finest in the state.

Business Notes and Personals.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Among the latest important acquisitions of the Pittsburgh Metro service is the Selig eight-reel special production, "Beware of Strangers," for the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia territory. Inquiries for this notable subject are already heavy, Manager Alexander reports.

Kenneth Rapp, son of Matt Rapp, prominent exhibitor of Sharpsburgh, Pa., who conducts the Theatorium and Kathryn theaters, has taken the position of assistant booker at the Independent Film exchange.

It is announced that T. C. Bronstetter is no longer connected in any capacity with the local Universal office, the Independent Film exchange.

The Kum Bac theater, East Ohio street, Northside, Pittsburgh, has been purchased by E. W. Reed.

Fire Ousts Cincinnati Audiences

Blaze in Upper Story of Avenue Theater Drives Patrons from Three Nearby Houses —Cool Headed Musicians Help Squelch Panics.

From Kenneth C. Crain, 307 1st National Bank, Cincinnati

CINCINNATI, O.—What threatened to be a really disastrous theater fire was turned into a comparatively innocuous affair Sunday night, May 20, when a blaze broke out on one of the upper floors of the Avenue theater, on West Fifth street, while the second show was in progress. The house adjoins the Colonial, one of the larger West Fifth street houses, and both are operated by Huss Bros., while the Lubin and the Alhambra are only a few doors away in the same block. The fire obtained such headway that Manager John Huss, in charge of the Colonial and the Avenue, soon saw that the audiences must leave, and so announced. A panic was imminent, especially as smoke was getting into the auditoriums, but the coolness of the girl musicians, two in each house, in playing lively airs to facilitate the exit of the crowds, calmed the people, who passed out quietly and without injury.

A little later similar action was taken at the Lubin and the Alhambra, as a matter of precaution, and in all well over a thousand persons left the four theaters without panic. The fire department managed to put the fire out after considerable damage had been done to the upper floors of the Avenue building, and some damage by smoke and water had been suffered by the theater proper, as well as in adjoining structures, the total loss being estimated at something between $25,000 and $35,000.

The Colonial was so little damaged, however, that it was able to operate as usual on Monday morning. The Avenue, having borne the brunt of the trouble, has been closed, and will be completely remodeled before it is again opened. The fire only anticipated the plans of Huss Bros. for extensive alterations to the Avenue, as it had already been decided to close the theater about July 1, and architects had already arranged plans for the changes, which will give an added seating capacity of 100 persons, making a total of 350.

New Palace Amusement Co. Formed.

Cincinnati, O.—The Palace Amusement Co., which will operate the new Palace theater, to be built on Sixth street and Lodge alley, has been organized, with John J. Harris, of Pittsburgh, as president, E. F. Albee, of the Keith interests, and I. Libson, of Cincinnati, who is to be manager, as vice-presidents, and Ben L. Heidingsfeld as secretary. The out-of-town men interested in the theater were in the city a short time ago to look over the property, with W. H. McElfatrick, the New York architect who will design the building. As already announced, the house will have a capacity of about 3,000, with a large main floor and a roomy balcony. Operations on the building will begin as soon as possible after July 1, the date on which tenants of the buildings on the ground have been given notice to vacate.

Ohio Censors Refuse to Pass Petrova Picture.

Cincinnati, O.—The Ohio censors are beginning to shut down again, the latest victim of their power being "The Soul of a Magdalen," featuring Mme. Olga Petrova. The production was to have been shown beginning Sunday, May 20, at the Walnut theater, and Manager Libson had advertised accordingly, when at the eleventh hour he received word to the effect that the censors had concluded not to permit the picture to be shown. He substituted the Artcraft production of "A Poor Little Rich Girl," with Mary Pickford, which was so successful in its run at the Walnut a few weeks ago. In the meantime, the Petrova picture will be taken up again with the censors, the suggestion being that with certain alterations it may pass the board.

H. Serkowich a Local Liberty Loan Publicity Man.

Cincinnati, O.—Cincinnati moving picture theaters are relied on by the financial experts who are handling the local publicity for the Liberty Loan to help push the distribution of the war bonds, and for this purpose H. Serkowich, secretary of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of the Chamber of Commerce, has been added to the publicity committee. The managers of the various houses had already announced their willingness to aid the cause with their screens, and audiences are now having appeals placed before them to subscribe as liberally as possible to the big bond issue.

Max Shagrin to Have Charge of Strand.

Youngstown, O.—Max Shagrin, formerly owner and manager of the Market street theater, which he built and which he disposed of a few days ago, has been made manager of the Strand theater, the city's largest and most modern moving picture house, owned by F. Ullman, of Buffalo. Mr. Shagrin will have exclusive charge of the house, and is planning bookings of attractions which will maintain a high level. The opening bill under his management was the production of "The Americano," with Douglas Fairbanks. The former manager of the Strand was Raymond Daniels.

Sam Dagan Takes Princess Theater Property.

Piqua, O.—The Princess theater building, on Main street, which has been owned by Rush Ziegenfelder, of Greeley, Colo., has been disposed of to Sol. Dagan. It is valued at about $22,000. Mr. Dagan has made no announcement as to his exact plans, but it is understood that extensive improvements to the property, especially the theater, will be made when current leases expire. Walter Henne has a lease on the theater which continues for three years longer. Plans for increasing the seating capacity of the Princess by making the house deeper have been discussed for some time.

Potato Matinee at May's Opera House.

Piqua, O.—Manager Kress of May's opera house has fallen in line with the campaign against the high cost of living by staging a potato matinee, school children being admitted for one or more potatoes each or a small quantity of sugar. The provisions taken in at the matinee were donated to the Piqua Memorial Hospital, and the announcement that this was to be the case helped materially in swelling attendance, as many children came with cash donations for the benefit of the hospital. A "Fatty Arbuckle" comedy was the feature of the matinee.

Youngstown, O.—The Park theater showed the Lasky production of "Joan the Woman," with Geraldine Farrar in the leading role, for two days recently, with marked success. The production ran continuously from 1 o'clock in the afternoon to 11 at night, with admission prices ranging from 25 to 50 cents in the afternoon and from 25 cents to 75 cents at night.

Cleveland News Letter.

From M. A. Malaney, 218 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland.

New Alhambra at Marion to Open.

MARION, O.—Marion is soon to have a big new theater when the Alhambra will be opened within a month or so.

The Alhambra is the project of W. D. Clark, a pioneer picture man of Marion and the State of Ohio. He has operated the Columbia for many years. This house will close when the Alhambra is opened.

Marion then will be pretty well supplied with theaters. The other houses are the Marion, Col. Foster's fine theater, the Hart, Star and Rex.

Dixon Enterprises Control Kenton Shows.

Kenton, Ohio.—The Dixon enterprises have acquired control of the theaters in Kenton, and now only the Opera House is running. There were at one time three theaters.

Interesting Policy of New Mall Duplex.

Cleveland.—The New Mall Duplex theater is trying out a program of short subjects in the Lower theater. Five reels of comedies, news films, cartoons, educational subjects, etc., are shown, while upstairs the feature picture is presented continuously. Patrons may see one or both shows. The short program is attracting many busy people, who drop in for an hour's entertainment of the lighter sort.

Hart's Cleveland Date Arranged.

Cleveland.—W. S. Hart was scheduled to arrive in Cleveland Friday, May 28. An elaborate program was arranged for, including "Hart Day" at the baseball park.

Max Schagrin Takes New Strand.

Youngstown.—The fine new Strand theater has been taken over by the well-known exhibitor Max Schagrin, who has disposed of his Market street house.

The Strand is a beautiful house and with Mr. Schagrin's experience in the film business ought to be a big success.

Earl King on Road for Universal.

Cleveland.—Earl King, for many years with theaters in Cleveland in the capacity of treasurer, has become affiliated with the Victor Film Service, and is now on the road selling Universal films.

Mr. King was with the Miles theater for several years and was formerly manager of the Lyceum.

Joe Callages Buys Salem Opera House.

Salem, Ohio.—J. F. Kerr, for many years owner of the Salem opera house, has disposed of his theater to Joe Callages, another exhibitor.

A. J. Mentz Guest of Screen Club.

Cleveland, O.—A. J. Mentz, special representative of the Barnett Film Attractions, handling "Joan the Woman" and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," was a guest at a recent luncheon of the Cleveland Screen club.

He had just returned from the northwest, having spent several months in Montana, and gave some very interesting facts about the film business in that territory.

"The exhibitors there are better gamblers," he said. "They book a big feature, pay a fancy price, and then get their money back doubled by advertising it strong and charging a dollar top price. However, there is litte competition there, and consequently, in most cases, the exhibitor gets away with it."

Cleveland.—The Stillman theater, Cleveland's beautiful new theater, has contracted for Bluebirds. It starts June 10 with Ibsen's "A Doll's House."

IN DETROIT.

Paramount Rearranges Local Territory.

Detroit, Mich.—H. A. Ross, manager of the Paramount exchange at Detroit, announces that under the new distribution plan, sixteen counties of Northern Ohio, and some counties in Indiana will hereafter be handled from Detroit. This week Mr. Ross announced that the second 52 Paramount features, making 104, were now ready for release open booking. Exhibitors are signing up in groups of one and two dozens.

Casino Feature to Release Conquest Pictures.

Detroit, Mich.—John H. Kunsky of Detroit, 2206 Dime Bank building, officially confirms the report that he has purchased the Michigan rights to Conquest pictures, made by the Forum Film Co. He will release them through the Casino Feature Film Co., 34 Farmer stret, which is under the management of C. C. Randolph.

Wuerth Theater Opened at Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—The newest theater in Michigan is the Wuerth theater at Ann Arbor, which opened on May 15 with "The Valentine Girl." The house is owned by J. F. Wuerth, who also operates the Orpheum theater. He will continue both theaters. The booth equipment consists of two Simplex projectors, transverter, etc.

Michigan Bluebird Franchise Sold

George W. Weeks Now Controls All Bluebird Releases in Michigan and Northern Ohio—Temporary Offices Taken on Sixth Floor of 75 Broadway, Detroit—Gets Both Past and Future Films of This Make.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH.—One of the biggest deals ever put over in the history of local filmdom is the buying of the Michigan and Northern Ohio distributing rights to Bluebird pictures by George W. Weeks of Detroit. For seven years Mr. Weeks was affiliated with the Universal company in Michigan. He resigned on May 19th. As soon as his resignation was sent in to "the powers that be" Mr. Weeks started to negotiate for the state rights on Bluebird productions, as he could see big possibilities ahead for these pictures.

The deal having been consummated, Mr. Weeks immediately set about to look for suitable exchange quarters from where to handle bookings on Bluebird productions, and he succeeded in getting a temporary lease of the sixth floor of the building at 75 Broadway, where he is just across the hall from the Triangle exchange.

Mr. Weeks takes over all of the Bluebird productions already released, including "Hell Morgan's Girl" and "The Eagle's Wings," all of the paper, and advertising matter, as well as all of the future Bluebird pictures. This new deal between Mr Weeks and the Universal shows plainly the friendly relations existing between Mr. Weeks and officials of the Universal. Julius Singer, field man, and E. H. Goldstein, general manager of Universal exchanges, represented the Universal in the deal.

Mr. Weeks' territory will comprise all of Michigan and the nortnern part of Ohio.

Henry Fried Appointed Detroit U. Manager.

Detroit, Mich.—Henry Fried has been appointed manager of the Universal exchanges in Detroit, Toledo and Grand Rapids. Mr. Fried comes to Detroit from New York City, where he had charge of the Mecca branch. He has been with the Universal for a number of years. Mr. Fried announces that Charles A. Stimson will be in full charge of the Toledo and branch offices, while Sam H. Barrett will be manager at Detroit. Mr. Fried will make his headquarters at the Detroit office, 101 West Fort street, with complete supervision over the other branches at Grand Rapids and Toledo.

The selling organization of the Universal in this territory now comprises Joseph Horwitz, Douglas Dickerson, Ira B. Cohen, Walter Collins, Jim Mooney, Herbert Mitchell and Norman Widger.

Here's Where We Touch Up Smith.

Detroit: Mich.—We regret having "lost out" the Detroit news letter last week, but this was unavoidable, and you know these things will happen. The reason we refer to the Detroit letter being left out was because so many of the exhibitors asked last week "What's the matter with Smith's letter in the World." It certainly shows that the news letters are read and that they are an important part of each issue.

Hart Appears at the Orpheum.

Detroit, Mich.—William S. Hart, Triangle star, personally appeared at the Orpheum theater, Detroit, on Saturday, May 26. The Orpheum has the first-run Triangle franchise in Detroit. Mr. Hart is on a short tour of all the principal cities.

Brief Mention and Business Notes.

Detroit, Mich.—"Intolerance" started an indefinite engagement at the Detroit Opera House on May 14. Each day seemed to show improved business, and the second week is going even better than the first. The engagement is sure to last two weeks longer, which would mean that "Joan the Woman," the next attraction, would start about June 4.

A. I. Shapiro, manager of the Selznick exchange in Buffalo, was a Detroit visitor last week.

J. M. Duncan, manager of the Vitagraph exchange in Detroit, reports that "Womanhood" will play an indefinite engagement at the Washington theater, starting June 3 and it will also play a full week at the Empress in Grand Rapids in June, being the opening attraction under the picture policy of that play house. "Within the Law" is also slated for an engagement at the Washington, Detroit, and the Empress in Grand Rapids.

George Keppie, manager of the Escanaba branch of the Standard Film Service, was a Detroit visitor last week on his way to Cleveland and New York. Mr Keppie will not return to Escanaba, as he has some big producing plans.

Exhibitor Vogel Dies in Burning Theater

In Calumet, Michigan, Crown Theater Burns—Owner and Manager Smothered by Smoke—Cause of the Blaze Not Discovered.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

CALUMET, MICH.—A fire, the origin of which has not been determined, destroyed the Crown theater, on North Fifth street, and resulted in the death of John C. Vogel, proprietor and manager of the theater. The gloom cast upon the community is indicated by the expressions of regret at the untimely passing of Mr. Vogel. A touching tribute was that among the hundred who visited the Calumet Elks' temple, where the remains lay, were scores of little children who had been made happy by him at his free matinees.

Rumors that the operator filled a dressing room heater with gasoline instead of kerosene were denied. In his story he said that he and another operator noticed smoke, while they were in the operating room, about 6 o'clock, and went to turn in the alarm. One hurried to Mr. Vogel's room to awaken him. He burst into the room and found the manager asleep on the bed. He partially aroused him, and Vogel sat up on the edge. However, he seemed dazed, and did not respond. Franquist was driven from the room by the volume of smoke. After some efforts firemen with ladders got the unconscious manager out through the window. It was impossible to save him after he was taken to the hospital.

The loss on the theater is about $3,000. The funeral services were conducted at the Elks' temple under the auspices of the members of that organization, the Eagles and other fraternal organizations. The remains were sent to Cass City, Mich., for burial. Among the tributes to him was one by the Calumet business men. "John C. Vogel was a lover of children. He was simple in heart, warm and spirited and kindly, and every child who spoke to him during his life was greeted with a kindly word. John C. Vogel was a generous man, which is probably the reason he died poor."

White Bill Vetoed by Governor of Michigan.

Lansing, Mich.—The White senate bill, which would amend the law relative to state control of moving picture theaters, was vetoed by Governor Sleeper. State Marshal Winship declared that the bill would permit the use of projector apparatus which is now under the ban.

Escanaba, Mich.—A good plan for furnishing entertainment for 150 lumber workers and their families at the almost isolated town of Shelldrake has been arranged. Alex M. Chalmers, secretary of the Bartlett Lumber Company, was in Escanaba to book films for twice-a-week shows for the men and their families. Shelldrake, which is on Whitefish Bay, is inaccessible of rail and hard to reach by automobile, being reached by the company's boat from the Soo. Mr. Chalmers has been contemplating allowing the men to pay a dollar a month, which would entitle their families to see all the shows.

Law Suit Over Muskegon Theater

Muskegon, Mich.—A long fight for the possession of the Lion theater in this city has been ended by the decision of Circuit Judge James E. Sullivan that Frank E. Sayles is entitled to occupy the building in preference to Charles Murphy, who has been in possession.

Penalty for Smoking in Michigan Theaters.

Lansing, Mich.—State Fire Marshal John T. Winship has sent out a notice to local fire chiefs in the state to co-operate in breaking up the practice of smoking in theaters and moving picture houses. It is said that several fires in the state have been traced to smoking. Attention is called to the penalty of one hundred dollars or ninety days in jail or both.

Exhibitor-Author Sees His Own Photoplay.

Whitehall, Mich.—A current release on the Brady-Made World program, "The Page Mystery," was seen by its author for the first time in his own theater on Friday, May 25. He wrote the story from which "The Page Mystery" was taken, and he also is a lessee of the Nufer-Adams playhouse. Through the courtesy of Mr. Brady he was able to show this picture almost as soon as it was released by getting a special print of it from New York.

Propose 11-Cent Tickets in Louisville

Shall the Extra Cent That May Be Asked by Federal War Tax Be Paid by Exhibitor or Patron—Some Figure a Loss Either Way.

Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The proposed war tax on moving picture theaters is about the only subject that local exhibitors have been discussing during the past few days. Every time a couple of exhibitors meet the matter is brought up, and everything appearing in the press or trade papers is eagerly read. Of course, the exhibitors are all against this increased operating cost, but according to several of them there is nothing to do but accept the tax at a crisis like the present, and the whole thing is, "How best to handle the matter?"

Several of the exhibitors are in hopes that the general eleven cent ticket will be adopted if the tax is put on at all. Otherwise some exhibitors would figure to absorb the one cent tax and hold their old rates. If this were done it would cause considerable trouble, and cut into profits materially. Some of the local exhibitors feel that the average patron will lay down the additional penny without a murmur, and that it will not seriously hurt business. Others figure that in any event it will hurt business, claiming that it means the breaking of a third nickel, and that this will be felt.

Summer Out-of-Door Season Opens.

Louisville, Ky.—A few days of warm weather has started the public moving toward the parks again, and business with the downtown houses has been somewhat quieter. Several of the outlying airdomes are preparing to start operations within a few days. The Sunday crowds at the parks have been felt during the past two weeks, and the outdoor amusements will cut in on the exhibitors from now until fall. However, the theaters are getting their fans into operation again, and doing everything in their power to make the houses comfortable. One advantage that the theaters have over the local parks is that the parks are at a considerable distance from the city, while the theaters are centrally located. The open air theater at Fontaine Ferry Park is its greatest drawing card.

National Opens with Light Vaudeville.

Louisville, Ky.—The National theater, operated by B. F. Keith, will run light vaudeville this summer it has been announced. The management in a recent advertisement stated to the people of Louisville that a five act vaudeville performance would be on the boards, a charge of ten cents being made for matinees, and ten and twenty for night performances. Three shows are to be given daily, starting at 2:30 o'clock, 7:15 and 9 o'clock p. m., and four shows on Saturdays and Sundays, there being two matinee performances on both of these days. Considerable work has been done on the theater in transforming the stage, etc., so as to represent an Italian garden, with natural foliage, aquariums, birds, fountains, etc. The bills are to be changed each Monday and Thursday. The company has tried summer vaudeville and also pictures at the house in several past years, and as a rule has wound up the summer season with pictures.

Where Passes Are Not Plentiful.

Louisville, Ky.—An exhibitor, in commenting on a big crowd at a recent fifteen cent show at the Majestic theater, said: "Yes, and you can just bet that ninety-nine out of every one hundred of those people represent a paid admission." Such is verily the case. Manager L. J. Dittmar has never believed in "papering" the house, and doesn't know what an annual pass looks like. Stockholders only get single slips, and not averaging more than two of these slips a week. The newspaper boys also get single admission slips from time to time, but the crowds attending the Majestic represent paid admissions, and at fifteen cents per. Several of the other houses are careful in distributing paper, but a few of them have only a large percentage of passes and free paper represented when they do have big shows at which every seat is badly needed. The paper is all right when the business is punk, but the annual pass generally gets the exhibitor in bad.

The Princess Amusement Co., operators of the Orpheum and Casino, and holding an interest in the Star theater, is another concern which is opposed to passes. This company has never had any passes printed, and never issues any.

Louisville Children's Film Board Elects.

Louisville, Ky.—At the annual meeting of the Louisville Board of Censorship for Children's Motion Pictures, Mrs. Fred Levy, of Louisville, was re-elected for another term as president. Other officers elected were as follows: Mrs. W. Montz, vice-president; Miss Annie S. Waters, recording secretary; Mrs. Philip Barbour, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. J. B. Arbegust, treasurer.

The last children's picture show of this season, it was decided, would be given on May 26. Mrs. Levy is wife of Fred Levy, head of the Big Features Rights Corporation, of Louisville, who is also connected with the Keith interests. The local censorship board is merely an organization to view and pass on films for the straight children's shows on Saturday mornings, and does not interfere in any way with general films. Mrs. Levy promoted the first children's show given in Louisville, and started this movement, which has since spread all over the country.

Kentucky News Notes.

Louisville, Ky.—The East Broadway theater recently showed Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law," raising prices from ten cents to fifteen cents during the showing. This is out of the ordinary for a suburban house, as few of them ever raise prices.

Louisville, Ky.—"Civilization," after a successful run at Macauley's, was shown in the Palace theater, a negro house, where it went so big that it was rebooked for a day.

Louisville, Ky.—Johnson Musselman, manager of the Star theater, has quit showing news weeklies, reporting that his patrons demand snap and action, and that as long as he is getting ten cents in a former nickel house it is up to him to give them what they want. During a recent showing of "Unborn," a picture featuring birth control, Mr. Musselman had his lobby filled with baby dolls in life size, attracting considerable attention. The film was recently shown at the Walnut theater at advanced prices. "Damaged Goods" is also booked.

Louisville, Ky.—Theodore Holland, of the General Film, was recently in Louisville. Another visitor was Walter Van Walker, formerly of the Indianapolis General, who is now with the K-E-S-E Indianapolis office.

Louisa, Ky.—The Prestonburg Amusement Co. has opened its summer airdome, and has been handling good business in spite of cool weather.

Falmouth, Ky.—The management of the Duncan theater, in complying with the state fire laws, has ordered a general remodeling of its exits and the installation of fire fighting equipment and modern fire escapes.

Vincent R. Bartlett Goes to O. R. C. Camp.

Lawrenceburg, Ky.—Vincent R. Bartlett, manager of the Lyric, was recently accepted by the Officers' Reserve Corps, and ordered to the encampment at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, near Indianapolis. Mr. Thomas Peak has taken charge of the house during Mr. Bartlett's absence.

New Theater in Helier.

Helier, Ky.—The Star theater is having a new house erected, foundation work having already started. The management had been discussing plans for remodeling the old house, but found that the work could not be handled satisfactorily.

St. Louis Airdomes Opening.

By A. H. Giebler, 4123 Westminster Pl., St. Louis, Mo.

First Warm Days Bring Announcement of Open Air Shows.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The first warm days of spring in St. Louis brought about announcement, from all sections of the city, of airdomes opening up. It is to be hoped that by deferring the openings until this late date that they will be able to avoid the recurrences of the past two summers, when a number of outdoor shows were opened about the middle of April, then had to close for fully a month before the weather permitted the reopening of the airdomes.

Crystal Feature Dome.

The Crystal Feature Dome, at 5850 Delmar, under the management of the Skouras Brothers, who also operate the Pageant theater just across the street from the Dome, opened on Saturday night, May 19, with the World Film feature "Maternity" as the headliner, and comedy and travel pictures to round out the program. The Crystal is beautifully decorated with flowers, shrubbery and many bright lights.

Maple Airdome.

The Maple Airdome, at Kingshighway and Maple avenue, also a very handsome outdoor theater, opened on the first warm night last week with an all picture program.

The Largest Open Air Theater.

The Hamilton Skydome, at Hamilton and Easton avenues, claimed to be the largest open air theater in the country, with its seating capacity of 6,000, opened on May 24, with three numbers of vaudeville and photoplay features as its program. The Hamilton has been beautified with new decorations and attractive landscape gardening, and is one of the most beautiful places of its kind in the city. Maurice Spyer, who furnishes music for the Columbia theater during the theatrical season, will again direct the orchestra at the Hamilton.

Lyric Skydome.

The Lyric Skydome, on Delmar and Taylor avenues, about two blocks away from the West End Lyric theater, and under the same management, began on Monday, May 21, to show the West End Lyric program in the evening. The West End Lyric, as during the last two summers, gives a matinee performance at 2:30 in the afternoon, and the program is then moved to the Skydome for the evening. Mrs. J. W. Cornelius and her son, James Cornelius attend personally to these two west end show places.

Delmar Airdome.

The Delmar Airdome, next door to the Delmar theater, 4936 Delmar avenue, also opened on Monday night. The Delmar is reached through the lobby of the theater, and in case of sudden rain the program can be moved from the airdome to the theater in a few minutes.

Motion Picture Aids Recruiting.

DES MOINES, IA.—Manager L. A. Sheridan of the Pathe exchange in Des Moines is responsible for a most successful moving picture campaign, which has been carried on in connection with the recruiting for the Navy over Iowa. Manager Sheridan learned that Ensign E. J. Gillam, in command of the Des Moines navy recruiting station, had sent two uniformed representatives over the state, spending several days in the small towns distributing pamphlets and urging the enlistment of all eligible young men. With the co-operation and enthusiastic indorsement of Ensign Gillam, Mr. Sheridan booked the Pathe picture, "Our Fighting Forces," in the leading moving picture house in the town in which the Navy men were working. Following is the list of theater managers who have co-operated with the recruiting officers and aided considerably in the recruiting:

J. Milowslowsky of the Palace theater in Des Moines, F. S. King of the King theater in Estherville, C. E. Nelson of the Electric theater in Burt, Detheram and Yeakel of the Star in Kanawha, Frederickson and Hoien of the Opera House in Ringsted.

R. S. Garrett of the Strand in Sheldon, R. W. Healey of the Lyric in Garner, A. L. Klienpeter of the Bell theater in Wesley, Geo. C. Pettit of the Gem theater in Lone Rock, Elmer Johnson of the Idle Hour in Gurnsey, J. F. Henryhan of the Majestic in Nevada.

Geo. Lieve of the picture house in Atkins, J. B. Marion of the opera house in Malcom, G. W. Thomas of the opera house in Dowds, W. E. Roby of the Strand in Truro, Albert Stuart of the Gem in Murray, Wm. H. McKenzie of the Englert theater in Iowa City, T. W. Dolan of the picture house in Aurora, R. O. Schumacher of the picture house in Garnavillo, W. E. Waterhouse of the Hildreth theater in Charles City.

F. C. Birnum of the Lyric in Osage, Leo Muelhaupt of the Casino in Marshalltown, H. H Milamg of the Lyric in Roland, A. W. Walton of the Grand in Perry, W. A. Matlock of the Princess in Ames, H. C. Steen of the opera house in Boxholm, B. A. Kiely of the Princess in Early, Dan Itle of the opera house in Radcliffe, Blair and Mitchell of the picture house in Mitchelville.

Iowa Exhibitors, New Theaters, Changes.

Grinnell, Ia.—It is rumored about here that C. E. Budd is contemplating tearing down his Lyric theater and erecting a new and more modern show house.

Marengo, Ia.—C. E. Hildebrand has purchased the Orient theater in Marengo from R. W. Lungen. The new management has remodeled the place, painting it all in white with lattice work around the screen and in the lobby, giving the whole a cool and refreshing appearance.

Lake Mills, Ia.—James Neste has purchased the Dime theater from C. G. Rholl.

Livermore, Ia.—F. E. Collins has purchased the Idle Hour theater from O. N. Johnson.

West Liberty, Ia.—Mr. Miller has again opened the Opera House in West Liberty.

Lake City, Ia.—J. H. Candy has purchased the Isis theater from Mrs. I. L. Johnson.

Churdan, Ia.—W. S. Cochren has purchased the Regent theater in Churdan from I. T. Peacocke.

Interstate Office Notes and Personals.

Des Moines, Ia.—Miss L. L. Taft, the daughter of C. C. Taft, one of the heaviest stockholders in the Interstate Film company, is in full charge of the Interstate Film office at Room 1, in the Novelty Bldg. on Fifth and Locust. It is always a source of great amazement to exhibitors who call at the Interstate office when they ask for L. L. Taft, the manager, and Miss Taft demurely announces that she is "he."

M. Rosenbloom, formerly roadman for the Fox company in Iowa and Nebraska, is now acting as salesman in this territory for the Interstate.

Jake Schlenk, manager of the Princess theater in Sioux City, and who recently joined forces with the Interstate in the handling of state right features, was in town last week. Schlenk intends to go to New York very soon to purchase several other features for the Interstate.

The Interstate Film company are planning to send a roadman over Iowa in a car, carrying the film with him and exhibiting them in the smaller towns, where, when the new railroad regulations go into effect, it will be impossible to ship film.

Ordinance Favors Cheaper Picture Shows

Indianapolis Council Has New Measure That Would Ask Eight Times Higher License Fee for Theaters Charging More Than Five Cents.

From Indiana Trade New Service, 864 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Ordinances for licensing motion picture shows, baseball parks and concert and music halls were introduced at a special meeting of the city council recently by Edward R. Miller from the first district. All were referred to the Public Welfare committee of which Miller is the chairman.

The proposed ordinance relating to motion picture shows stipulates that "for the operating of each motion picture show, where an admission of more than 10 cents is charged, there should be required an annual license fee of $100; where ten cents or less is charged, a fee of $25, which shall be in addition to any license fee required of the operator of the motion picture machine."

This ordinance is expected to be the subject of hot debates at the next regular meeting of the council, when it will likely be called up for the second reading. The ordinance comes just at a time when exhibitors are wondering as to the outcome of the proposed war tax, and has given the motion picture men of Indianapolis something more to worry about.

The ordinance, as it stands, would effect the Circle, the Alhambra, the Colonial and some of the other larger downtown theaters which charge 15 cents admission. It is more than likely, according to one motion picture man, that an organized fight will be made against the measure by the local exhibitors.

Charles W. Wilson Takes Charge of New Theater.

Portland, Ind.—Charles W. Wilson has been chosen as manager for the new Princess theater here. Mr. Wilson will begin his duties this week, and it is probable that the new photoplay house will be opened to the public by next Monday night.

John Stahlnecker May Rebuild the Irwin.

Goshen, Ind.—Workmen have started tearing down the second story portion of the Irwin opera house, recently destroyed by fire, and if negotiations now being conducted by John Stahlnecker, of Coldwater, Mich., for the purchase of the property are consummated a new motion picture house will be erected on the site. Mr. Stahlnecker was in Goshen a few days last week, and went over the proposition in detail, but refused to give a definite statement regarding it.

"If I decide to return to Goshen and build a theater it will be a fireproof structure," said Mr. Stahlnecker, "and will be given over entirely to motion pictures. My idea is to set the chairs on a concrete floor, and cut several exits along the alley wall. I would try to make it one of the best in this section of the state."

Two New Picture Theaters in Newcastle.

Newcastle, Ind.—This city is not going to suffer for lack of "some place to go" this summer even though the city park probably will not be ready for use this year.

In addition to five motion picture shows now in operation, two more will be added in a very short time. The building which C. B. Thompson is erecting at the corner of 18th street and C avenue has been leased by Ralph Brayton. Mr. Brayton says he intends to open up a real up-to-date photoplay house as soon as the room is completed.

Another new motion picture house is now being built at the corner of South Main and Race streets. The place will be known as the "New Strand." It will have a seating capacity of 600, a pipe organ, ice water and a ladies rest room, making it one of the best equipped motion picture houses in this part of the state. It is expected that it will be opened about June 1.

New Theater at Terre Haute to Be Built.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Work will be started in a few days on the new vaudeville and motion picture theater that is to be erected by the Bankers' and Brokers' Association of this city on the site of the old Varieties theater, according to a recent announcement by some of the officers of the association. The new theater will have a frontage of 85 feet, and a depth of 130 feet. It will have a seating capacity of 1,500, of which 960 seats will be on the ground floor and the remainder in the balcony, and will cost approximately $65,000.

Newcastle, Ind.—The Newcastle Motion Picture Company, a newly organized concern, is to engage in the exhibition of motion pictures. The capital stock is listed at $5,000. The directors of the company are Ralph Swearingen, John D. Snell and L. C. Allison.

Hartford City, Ind.—Miss Helen Clark, daughter of Charles Clark of this city, has announced her engagement to Lawrence Hipskind, also of Hartford City. Mr. Clark and Mr. Hipskind are the owners of the Orpheum theater, and Miss Clark has been the leader of the orchestra at the theater. Both were formerly residents of Wabash, Ind.

Bluffton, Ind.—Eugene Larkin and Charles Gray, of Cloverdale, Ind., have purchased the Star theater, on West Market street, from W. H. Rupright, of Ossian, and will take charge immediately. They contemplate making several improvements in the interior of the place within the next few weeks.

Des Moines Visitors—Film Happenings.

Des Moines, Ia.—G. C. Martin of the Princess in Cedar Rapids was a caller at the Interstate office last week.

C. H. Witmer of the Lyric theater in Valley Junction, also Mr. and Mrs. Anderson of Brown and Anderson of the Princess theater in Boone called at the Standard Film office last week.

Hugh Bennett Joins Standard Sales Forces.

Hugh Bennett has been added to the sales force of the Standard office. Mr. Bennett has been connected with several film companies in this city.

Marty Williams, manager of the Standard in this city, plans an extensive trip this week through Oskaloosa, Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Marion and Iowa City.

Bucking Slack Days in Kansas City

Exhibitor Talks with More Than Modicum of Sense on the Problem of Getting Patrons When General Business is Slack—Managers in Small Cities Have a Good Chance to Become Centers of Civic Activities.

Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO. Moving picture exhibitors are like all other business men in this district—doing their bit toward keeping business going as usual. And many of them take the task rather much in earnest.

"My business fell off somewhat, like most of the rest of the exhibitors," said one, "just after the war started. And it looked gloomy. But I talked with merchants and they told me the same thing. I hear merchants now trying to stimulate their trade by persuading people to buy, hoping thereby to keep trade going strong. And I am tickled to death that I don't have to use their arguments. All I need to do is to advertise a little stronger than I have been advertising in the past for people to come in and see the show.

"The merchants have, I believe, made the mistake of believing that they could stimulate trade by showing people that patriotism required them to spend money. The moving picture industry isn't doing that. We don't invite people to the theater with the request that they spend money with us in order that our help may be paid, and that we may make money, and that the film producers may get theirs, and the industry thus be kept on its feet.

"The merchants are coming to the same view of the remedy for the temporary paralysis that the moving picture men have been employing. They are shying away from appeals to spend money out of patriotism and are putting more gray matter into plans to do better advertising and better merchandising."

Another exhibitor takes the view that the moving picture theater is the salvation of most towns, as to keeping business going as usual. The picture show is usually the place where a crowd can be gathered, if any place. And the presence of a crowd at a picture show is a good way to stimulate the local merchant.

The exhibitor in many a town will have the opportunity of his life to take a leading part in civic matters this summer. For he may have more pep than most of the other merchants, and can get them together, to plan and execute community enterprises, affairs that will bring people to town, that will improve the city spirit, and get everybody working together for the interests of the entire district. And this is just what a good many are going to do in Kansas and Missouri. The fact that the exhibitor will profit also by the increased number of visitors will give the exhibitor a good talking point, and back up his arguments, rather than being a detriment to his position. He will get his benefit and the other merchants and business men will get theirs, too.

Warm Weather Helps Business.

Business in the Kansas City district has been improving with the advance of spring. There was some bad weather that interfered somewhat, but fine spring weather for two weeks, with only a few days of rain, has been the rule. The previous rains had provided needed moisture for crops, and the open weather gave farmers a chance to do necessary work. The later rains came in time to give moisture to crops just planted. The country is feeling fine, and there is a marked increase in optimism.

Robinson, Kan., Exhibitor Prospers.

Robinson, Kan.—Harry Neptune, owner and manager of the local moving picture show here, has had the best business of his five years since last August, and it is right now going as good as ever. Mr. Neptune uses Pathe at his two shows a week. Incidentally, he has recently bought a new Buick, and he is putting his farm to the limit of its production this year.

Merit Theater Opens.

Kansas City, Mo.—Among the many evidences that the moving picture trade is improving in Kansas City is the opening of the Merit at Thirty-first and Main streets. V. D. Hudson is managing it and is said to be enjoying a good patronage.

A. Barrett Managing the Murray.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Murray theater, 3204 East 27th street, is now under the management of A. Barrett, formerly manager of the Mozart. George Seidhoff is the owner.

C. W. Young Heads Kansas City Fox Branch.

Kansas City, Mo.—C. Whitney Young, since January 1 manager of the Denver exchange of the Fox Film, has been made manager of the Kansas City office, and took charge May 22. Mr. Young is familiar with this office and the territory. He entered the establishment as booker when the office was opened in September, 1914, and served in that capacity until last January. He succeeds E. H. Wachter, who remains with the company in a different capacity. A. F. Bergen, booker at the Denver office, succeeds Mr. Young there.

K-E-S-E Branch Office Moves.

Kansas City, Mo.—The K-E-S-E office at Kansas City has been moved from quarters on the second floor of the Ozark building to newly remodeled quarters which occupy half the top floor of the same building. The new arrangement will expedite the handling of business through the larger area used. J. E. Storey, manager of the exchange, is particularly pleased with the fine light and air which will be advantageous to the assistants.

Samuel Appelbaum to Be Globe Salesmanager.

Boston, Mass.—Samuel Applebaum has been appointed salesmanager for the Globe Feature Film, and will have charge of all road men handling this company's pictures in the New England territory.

Kansas City Territory Theater Jottings.

Alma, Kan.—The Colonial theater is now open for business.

Argentine, Kan.—H. H. Bosustow has purchased the Lyric theater and is having it remodeled.

La Cygne, Kan.—Earnest Creager has bought the interest of U. G. Stewart in the picture show business formerly operated under the name of Stewart and Welborn and has changed the name to "The Liberty," Welborn and Creager, Managers.

Grainfield, Kan.—C. L. Kline will open a picture show.

Fort Scott, Kan.—The Theaterette is closed while improvements are being made on the building.

Nekoma, Kan.—Work has begun on a new opera house.

Little Rock, Ark.—A new airdome is being built for Thalheimer Bros., 100x150 feet with a seating capacity of 1,750.

Fort Worth, Tex.—The Crusader Film Corp., will erect a moving picture studio devoted entirely to the production of temperance plays.

Kerrville, Tex.—The Airdome is now open to the public.

Clarendon, Tex.—The Dixie theater has been closed.

Sweetwater, Tex.—The Lyric theater has moved to summer quarters in the Airdome.

Mineral Wells, Tex.—The Majestic theater has been opened by Mrs. W. H. Taylor.

The Melba Amusement Co., St. Louis, Mo., have let the contract for the erection of a new moving picture theater to cost $50,000 and to be completed by Oct. 1. The ground floor will have a seating capacity of 1,450.

Bevier, Mo.—The Rex airdome is being remodeled.

Fredericktown, Mo.—W. W. Strother is erecting a large building, the first floor of which will be used for a picture show.

Cassville, Mo.—Leonard Mitchell has purchased an interest in the Star theater and has added some new machinery.

Beaver, Okla. — Spangler Bros., are erecting a new theater building.

Okamah, Okla.—The Jewell theater has reopened, having been closed for repairs.

Ryan, Okla.—Chas. Atkins, has bought the Folly theater from W. Z. Spearman.

Paul's Valley, Okla.—The Regal theater is now under the management of H. Bently.

Wilburton, Okla.—C. W. DeVere has taken over the Cozy theater.

Commerce, Okla.—Manager Veteto, of the Rex theater, is building an Airdome.

Rosel, Kan.—E. L. Breedlove has opened a first class picture show.

Stafford, Kan.—H. M. Dunham and W. S. Leach have purchased the Gem theater.

Olathe, Kan.—Wilson and Weldon will open the Moneta theater for the summer.

Kansas City Screen Clubs Fade Out End

Some Instructive Considerations in Reasons for Demise of Local Film Men's Social Club—Was the Open Bar One of Them?

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The Kansas City Screen Club has ceased as a social organization; the quarters, which had been elaborately fitted, have been sold to an individual, who is running the establishment for his own benefit.

The demise of the Screen Club contains some instructive lessons, perhaps, for film men in other communities who wish to organize. At Kansas City a few men put a great deal of time and energy, as well as much of their own money, into the enterprise. They hoped to develop a society with headquarters that would be of real benefit to the industry here. They are naturally keenly disappointed at the failure. There is one chief reason for it—the lack of co-operation from the mass of picture men. The members did not "come through" with their dues.

There was another incidental lesson, according to one or two of the film men. The quarters had a bar attachment which was open during the parties to which ladies were invited. While the film men themselves did their best to keep the parties keyed to a good pitch of propriety there were said to have been two or three occasions on which guests did not respond to the key.

Kansas City tried to have a press club two or three years ago with bar attachment; it failed. Many members of the press club were convinced after the obsequies that a press club can't exist without liquor. There are some of the film men who say the same thing yet, about a screen club. But many others are frank to say that a new screen club probably would get further and accomplish more if the bar were eliminated. Consideration is given the Kansas exhibitors who are not averse to a cooling—or heating—beverage when they get into a dry state; but at that a good many of the exhibitors as well as the exchange men get along nicely without it when they travel in Kansas, or do business there.

While there is no official suggestion from the former members of the Kansas City Screen Club on the subject, observation of the experience here can provide the suggestion that Screen Clubs can accomplish more good, in cities like Kansas City, without the bar.

Prairie State Jottings

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FRANKLIN, NEB.—Lee Snee has taken a five year lease on the Franklin opera house, and will operate a moving picture show.

Sidney, Neb.—A new theater to cost $25,000 will be erected here.

McCook, Neb.—The Temple theater showed the Boy Scout film for the benefit of local scouts.

Dakota Items.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Sioux Falls exhibitors held a meeting, and decided to wire the Senators from this state to use their influence against the passage of the bill providing for ten per cent. tax on the gross sale of tickets.

Sinai, S. D.—Announcements have been made that bids would be opened Saturday, June 9, for the construction of a brick opera house here. Severt Kalberg, Theodore Hougholm and Albert Quail are members of the committee.

Belfield, N. D.—Construction of William Dahlheimer's opera house has begun.

Werner, N. D.—A moving picture theater has been opened by J. B. Stoit and Glen Robinson.

Lidgerwood, N. D.—O. Krippner has purchased a moving picture theater here.

Tripp, S. D.—L. A. Huber has sold his interest in the Idle Hour theater to C. M. Kndlls.

STRAY ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Minneapolis Wants Hart to Stop on Way Back.

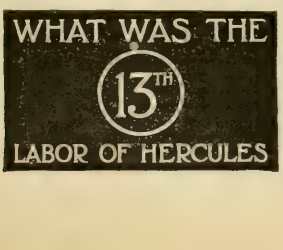
Minneapolis, Minn.—Efforts are being made by a local theater through the World representative and Manager R. E. Bishop of the Triangle exchange to get William S. Hart to return to Los Angeles from his New York vacation trip via a Northwest route so that he might spend a day here. Mr. Hart spent much of his early life in North Dakota and western Minnesota, and it is thought likely he will give offers made him careful consideration on this account.

Standard Film Abolishes Deposit System.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Exhibitors of Iowa in Nebraska will be pleased to learn that the deposit system has been abolished in the Standard Film office in Des Moines. Marty Williams, manager, made the announcement the latter part of this week.

Tax Rate of Harford County.

Belair, Md.—The county commissioners met in this city on Monday, April 30, and fixed the tax rate at 90 cents, which is 30 cents lower than the 1916 rate and the lowest since 1902.



Memphis Sunday Shows Now for Charity

Fight Against Sabbath Closing Law Adjusted for Time by Exhibitors—Pastors' Union Must Be Satisfied Till Matter Can Be Settled.

J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tenn.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—The fight against Sunday opening of theaters in Memphis appears to have been settled for the time being at least, through a medium of turning over all receipts, minus actual operating expenses, to charity. This plan was adopted after conferences between the theater managers and counsel, and will serve to breach the differences between the theater men and the Pastors' Union until some definite settlement can be effected whereby the houses will be allowed to remain open, unrestricted by any charitable donations. The policy of turning over the receipts to the Associated Charities went into effect on May 13, and will remain at the present status for some time to come, according to a well-informed representative of the industry.

Much discussion has been brought up by the public at large, through the press and otherwise, and the following article was recently advanced by a public-spirited citizen of Memphis:

"The state of Tennessee is not demanding that the theaters in Memphis close, so the Sunday question is purely a local affair. The Pastors' Association procured 700 names after about three months' effort from the pulpit and a house-to-house canvass to a petition asking that the officials take away our Sunday amusements. More than 10,000 people signed counter petitions in three days, among whom were every prominent merchant and practically all the members of the best business and social clubs of our city, insisting on keeping the theaters open. If the people shall rule, it's time for other Memphians to assert their rights, and I for one believe that amusements are needed now more than ever before, as the war will bring many sorrows, so that diversion every day is a necessity, particularly on Sunday, for the vast majority whose work is such that they cannot get it on the other six days."

Prosperity Comes to Nashville Houses.

Nashville, Tenn.—According to general belief the condition of the amusement business is a good barometer of the commercial situation. According to one of the leading moving picture magnates of this city the business conditions in Nashville are in a most healthy condition now and bid fair to show a decided improvement during the balance of this year. In a recent interview, he stated as follows: "I believe that we are on the eve of a more prosperous period than we have experienced for the past several years and believe that men in all lines of business are going to get a share of this prosperity. As to my own business, for more than two years until about November of last year, it had suffered, and I am sure considerably more than other enterprises. In the winter we began to experience some improvement, and in the months of March and April we were especially pleased with our showing. The past two weeks have shown us an increase of twenty-five per cent. over any like period since the European war was begun.

"I have long had a habit of noting individuals who attend our theaters. I have noticed in the last few weeks many familiar faces that I have not seen at our shows in a long time, and it has also been impressed upon me that a great many strangers, or I might say new people to me, are becoming regular attendants at the theaters. These people look prosperous and happy, and I believe they are. I see no good reasons for anyone to get nervous over the business situation, for with the present excellent prospects for bumper crops this fall, with seven billion dollars of new money turned loose in our country for various purposes, with newspapers carrying advertisements daily begging for labor at greatly increased rates, there will be plenty of prosperity for all of us who are willing to attend to business and put in a reasonable number of hours daily at intelligent and diligent effort."

Bushman and Bayne in Nashville.

Nashville, Tenn.—Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, stars of the Metro pictures, will appear in Nashville on May 29 for matinee and evening performances at the Ryman Auditorium, where they will render a vaudeville sketch for the benefit of the American Red Cross, under auspices of the local Red Cross association. It is proposed to raise $2,500 from these performances to be used in equipping an ambulance for the American hospital corps on the French battlefields. An interesting feature of the event will be the beauty contest, in which much enthusiasm has already been aroused. Metro is offering to the three young women who sell the highest number of tickets to these two performances a trip to Birmingham with all expenses paid, where they will be guests at the Bushman-Bayne ball, and will then go to New Orleans, where they will appear in a film featuring the noted stars.

Knickerbocker to Finance Trip.

Nashville, Tenn.—Manager W. H. Wassman of the Knickerbocker announces that a popularity contest will be inaugurated in June, the winner of which will be awarded a vacation trip to Buffalo, Toronto, Niagara Falls, etc., with all expenses paid. Much enthusiasm has been aroused locally over the project and it bids fair to carry through to a successful conclusion.

Nashville Bijou Sold to Starr.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Bijou theater, a handsome Fourth avenue house for colored patronage, has been sold by the Chatt-Nash corporation, a New York concern, to Milton Starr of Nashville. Mr. Starr has had the lease on this property for some time, and will continue to operate it as a colored motion picture house. The deal was engineeeed by W. W. Dillon & Co., local realty dealers.

Court Holds Sunday Ball Legal.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Chancellor Garvin on May 19 decided that Sunday baseball in Chattanooga was legal, and declined to enjoin the local ball club. This case was closely followed by Chattanooga theater men in general, and some of its features will probably be brought into play in fighting the Sunday theater closing cases in future. The case at hand grew out of the efforts to enjoin the Chattanooga ball team from playing Sunday baseball under the general Sunday observance law, and the bill was filed by the attorney general in the nature of a quo warranto proceeding.

Kaufman Closes in Alabama.

Memphis, Tenn.—A. H. Kaufman, president and general manager of Kaufman Specials, a local distributing concern, recently made a trip to Birmingham and surrounding territory in the interest of bookings, where he closed several healthy contracts for the Flora Finch comedies.

New Orleans Theaters Improve

How Local Exhibitors React to the Modern Educated Demand for the Best Shows and Theaters of Real Comfort—Suburban Houses Feel Need of Good Music—Good Theaters Growing Better.

By N. E. Thatcher, 3801 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—There has been a marked manifestation on the part of the better motion picture exhibitors in the New Orleans film exchange territory of the desire to improve their shows by the latest appliances for personal comfort, by new and tasteful decorations and by the employment of regular orchestras.

Several new theaters in this section are under construction and in every case there appears to be anxiety on the part of the projectors to make their houses the last word in convenience, elegance and stability. Other and older theaters have been subjected to the brushing up process, with the result that the unprogressive exhibitor who has been content to drift with the tide, already sees the shoal waters ahead of him.

Small Exhibitor and the Exchanges.

By close planning the small exhibitor could meet all of the requirements of the local film exchanges and he gave small heed as to whether these requirements were just or unjust. Or, he may have calculated, like Hamlet, that it were better to submit to the deposit system than to have the producers trying something new to him. In any event, the business rocked along and small notice was given to the changing signs of the times. The most far-reaching of these changing signs was the fact that the patrons of the picture shows were becoming very nimble minded when it came to the judging of a picture. Coincident with this development of the public's ability to pass irrevocable judgment on a production for the public, with its money, comes about as near to being the judge and jury as can well be imagined, came the slump in the quality of the feature productions. Instead of an occasional program picture being bad it became an event of note to find one that was good. Patronage became precarious, the public got so the protestations that a coming feature was the best ever were regarded as the untruthful raving of an exhibitor who knew better.

Patrons Say That Pictures Sag.

The exhibitor has not been at fault. He has realized that he must do something to hold his patronage and, despairing of the quality of the pictures, he has turned to other means to maintain his prestige. Carefully selected musical programs and kindred embellishments have been the first expedients. Nearly every theater of any pretensions now has its orchestra or, at least, a competent player who fits the music to the picture. The Josiah Pierce & Sons houses have all been shorn of the player pianos. The Lafayette theater has featured its musical program, which is under the direction of Don Phillipini, a well-known New York musician, who obtains some wonderful results with the twenty-five professional performers in his organization. The Triangle theater makes a specialty of its music, employing performers who have shown a remarkable aptitude for giving each production an individuality. The Istrione theater at Jackson, Miss., has installed a complete orchestra and it is amply appreciated. Manager Laden's only complaint is that as soon as he gets a good musician trained to perfect motion picture work, some fellow from New Orleans tempts him with the bright lights and about three dollars more a week, and he is gone—followed by Manager Laden's characteristic comment. Other theaters are making the same brave attempt to keep up appearances, but they are beset by the open declaration of their patrons that the pictures themselves are sagging and an improvement must be made or patronage will still further be withdrawn.

The open booking promises to give the exhibitors some hope, for they can at least refuse to run the program stuff that is manifestly bad, and this may compel an improvment in the quality of pictures.

New Liberty Expected by September.

New Orleans, La.—All of the major contracts for the erection of the new Liberty theater have been executed between the builders and the Boehringer Amusement company and the actual work of building is now under way. Contractors were slow to make guarantees under the present unsettled conditions and Manager Boehringer was just as careful about beginning construction work prematurely. With his customary thorough methods, he delayed the beginning of work until everything was ready and warranted the reasonable expectation of an early completion of the theater. It is now expected that the building will be ready for occupancy some time in September. Provision appears to have been made for every contingency.

Program Rearrangements in New Orleans

Opening Days of the War Bring a Lull in the Trade—New Diamond Theater Opens—What Local Theaters Are Showing.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Within the past two or three weeks there has been a veritable upheaval in the motion picture situation in New Orleans. Several circumstances have combined, some of them untoward circumstances, to disconcert the exhibitors. The war has been one factor. Occasional enlistments have affected the personnel of the house organizations. However, attempts are being made to cheer up pessimists by pointing out that in England and France entertainment enterprises have seldom been so well patronized as at the present time.

The war flurry would not have been so noticeable at any other time than the present, for it comes just at the time of the seasonal change when the people are longing for outdoor amusement and the opening of the parks and the inauguration of the Sunday excursions have cut into the attendance at the photoplay theaters. Day audiences have been rather thin of late, but the night attendance at most of the theaters has been all that the house could accommodate.

New Diamond Theater.

One of the most remarkable instances of this kind has just occurred here. The old Lyric theater was a vaudeville house. It was located in a rather proscribed district and it didn't engage in any moral uplift among its neighbors. It was owned by men of affairs and men of vision. The place was thoroughly remodeled and equipped with the very best motion picture appliances to be found. The name of the theater was changed to the "Diamond." The new theater was only one block from the Triangle theater which, under the tenacious and efficient management of Ernst Boehringer, had been made the leading motion picture theater of the city. On the opening night the theater was jammed to the doors. Faces that had never been seen in that locality before were freely sprinkled in the crowds. Automobiles were parked before the house for the first time in their aristocratic service. And the Diamond has been going right along like that ever since. Manager Chisholm frankly admits that he is not a motion picture exhibitor, but that he is attempting to learn as fast as he can. He has created precedent. He will not allow any picture to be shown until it has been seen and approved by himself and his friends who are called in from other businesses to view it. The surprising thing about this arrangement is that he has been enabled to buy or reject such "program" releases as suited his fancy and film exchange managers appear to be very anxious to serve him. Quality, whether state right or program stuff, is the only thing considered in booking pictures for this house, and it has had the effect of causing other managers who have been complacently working by the rule to do some very significant thinking.

What Other Houses Are Doing.

Coincident with the opening of the Diamond theater, there has been a marked rearrangement in the film service in some of the Canal street houses. The Globe theater, Herman Fitchtenberg's cosy and costly house on Canal street, has taken over the Triangle service from the Lafayette theater. The Pearce interests have been endeavoring to arrange the best possible programs for their first-run theaters, and of late have been presenting some of the high-class special features. These having paled upon the public, are being abandoned. The K-E-S-E regular service has been installed in the Tudor theater as the headliner for the week.

The Portola, one of the smaller Canal street houses, will show second-run pictures five days in the week, running 10 cent features on Saturday and Sunday, while the Columbia theater, which was lately remodeled throughout in keeping with a new marble front, will be turned over to popular-priced vaudeville and will be eliminated from the Boehringer enterprises.

D. Callahan to Manage Southern Triangle in New Orleans.

New Orleans, La.—The Southern Triangle Corp., the operating branch which controls the Triangle output for eleven Southern states, changed its local office. Harry M. Owens has been transferred to the Dallas, Texas, branch after accomplishing notable results here. He was one of the first users of newspaper advertising to reach the exhibitors in this territory, and incidentally saved a lot of expense money for traveling salesmen. The new manager is D. Callahan, an experienced film exchange manager, who comes here from Atlanta, Ga., to relieve Manager Owens. Manager Callahan has already inaugurated some new features in the conduct of the business which appear to be getting good results and, above all, he has already made a lot of good friends. He is a very pleasant gentleman socially and a very energetic one in a business capacity.

MINNEAPOLIS FILM JOTTINGS.

"Jazz" Woodhouse Managing Publicity on "Civilization."

Minneapolis, Minn.—The man who put the word, "jazz" into Minneapolis' vocabulary is J. S. Woohouse, manager of the Lagoon theater, Lake and Hennepin. For the past two years Mr. Woodhouse has been connected with Minneapolis enterprises in Minneapolis. He was first publicity man for Saxe Bros. at the Lyric and Strand theaters. Then he went with Ruben and Finkelstein to handle the advertising and publicity for the New Palace, New Grand, New Garrick and New Aster. He left this firm to take charge of the publicity and advertising for "Civilization" in seven states, with headquarters here. Following that exploitation, he took the management of the Lagoon, a residence section theater, with 1,400 seats.

J. S. Woodhouse.

Breileins Entertain Film People.

St. Paul, Minn.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Breilein of the Breilein theaters here were hosts to about twenty film people at their home recently. Richard C. Travers, former Essanay star, was among those present. The party began with the closing of the exhibitors' convention ball in Minneapolis and broke up in the wee small hours.

D. W. Chamberlain in Washington.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Daniel W. Chamberlain, owner of the American theater here, has gone to Washington, D. C., to represent the Exhibitors Corporation of the Northwest in battling the proposed ten per cent. war tax. Mr. Chamberlain was former secretary of the organization and has been very active in affairs of the body for several years. The Exhibitors Corporation has voted to present Miss Rose Tapley of the Vitagraph company with a loving cup.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Manager W. K. Howard of the Greater Vitagraph exchange staged a special showing of "Within the Law" at the Strand theater here Thursday morning, May 10, for the benefit of Minneapolis exhibitors.

Minneapolis' Last Last Year's Manager Goes

Otto N. Davies of Metro Resumes Law Practice—More Than a Half Dozen Film Men Change During the Week.

By J. L. Johnston, 704 Film Exchange Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — Some people have believed the film business is a "joke." We have thought not—writing this column every seven days has almost proved it, but we are now willing to make the soft statement that the film business (hereabouts) is "funny." The old stuff about the rolling stone and the green moss has certainly been included in "keep the ball a rolling" as far as Minneapolis is concerned. The past week saw the passing of the only local exchange manager who was on the job a year ago—Otto N. Davies of the Metro. Also the past week saw the changing of more than a half dozen other film men.

Changes in Minneapolis' film circles are hasty and numerous. Exchange men hold open meetings at restaurants to find out where they are going to work. The writer met George W. Malone at noon Monday and asked him who the manager of a certain exchange was. "I don't know," replied the "governor," "I've not been back to the office since eleven-thirty." And Malone would rather be right than be president, too.

E. M. Ames has succeeded Otto N. Davies as manager of the Metro, the New York headquarters having purchased the exchange and Mr. Davies having resumed his law practice. A. A. Hixon has left the Metro and joined the Elliott-Sherman exchange. W. Larrabee has also left the Metro and entered the automobile business. E. Taub has succeeded O. Moore as auditor of the Metro and Thomas C. Goldrick has left the Lochren exchange to assist Mr. Taub. George W. Malone has resigned from the Universal-Laemmle exchange and joined the Metro exchange as Twin City salesman. Walter H. Stafford has left the Selznick exchange and has not announced his future plans. L. Chandler has left the Universal exchange, in fact, the day after his marriage. Fred M. Ford, former Pathe roadman, has been appointed city salesman for the Greater Vitagraph at St. Louis. Manager W. K. Howard of the Vitagraph exchange has added J. L. Souther, R. L. Connelly and D. W. Rosenberg to his sales force.

Outside of these few changes and appointments everything was werry, werry quiet.

Joseph Maitland Takes Charge of Breilein Theaters.

St. Paul, Minn.—Exchange men are not the only changeable people. Joseph Maitland has resigned as manager of the Strand, the Friedman theater here, and taken charge of Henry Breilein's three houses on University avenue, the Faust, the Verdi and the Victoria.

Geo. Granstrom Managing the Strand.

George Granstrom, who was manager of the Strand two years ago and who since has managed the University, New Franklin and Park theaters of the Twin Cities, has returned to his old desk and is now handling the executive affairs of the big theater.

exchange, benedict and human dynamo. Mr. Fox assumed the management of the Artcraft shortly after the first of the year, coming from the "Ramona" department of the Elliott-Sherman exchange. Mr. Fox has brought the Artcraft's business in the Northwest up to an enviable standard through hard work and the able assistance of Mr. Rose, his only roadman. Mr. Fox is five feet four in low shoes and throws and bats righ-handed.

Northwest Film Theater Brevities.

Austin, Minn.—F. G. Latta is contemplating the erection of a $50,000 picture play house here in the near future.

Biwabik, Minn.—E. T. Sanberg has sold his interests in the Grand theater to William Dominick.

Hibbing, Minn.—William Rezac, proprietor of the Princess theater here, has recently taken hold of the executive end of the Power theater here also.

Adams, Minn.—Mike Schneider is erecting a new photoplay house in this city. The theater will be opened to the public within six weeks.

Moorhead, Minn.—Sam I. Field is the owner of the new picture theater being erected in the Rasmussen building here.

Northfield, Minn.—Fred W. Boll has sold the Gem theater here to the Grand Theater Co. of this city.

Stillwater, Minn.—E. H. Phillips has purchased an interest in the Hilltop theater here, according to reports.

Dickinson, N. D.—S. J. T. Davis has leased the Ray theater here from Mrs. W. G. Ray.

Culbertson, Mont.—Peter Slustrop has purchased the interests of Walter Bolmgren in the Princess theater here and has taken charge of the house himself.

Anaconda, Mont.—Herbert Riley has taken over the management of the Liberty theater here.

Broadview, Mont.—L. A. Garver will be the owner of the new motion picture theater to be erected here shortly.

Brookings, S. D.—A. C. Workman has purchased the Fad theater here from C. C. Erie.

Some Special Feature Hits in New Orleans

"Womanhood" Makes the Best Appeal—Patriotic Accessories Contribute to Its Success—Other Big Films of Recent Date.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Within the past few weeks attention of the more prominent exhibitors has been turned toward special feature productions. "The Birth of a Nation" ante-dated the regular rush by a few weeks and had an indifferent patronage, but the open season for specials began with "Intolerance," which was shown at the Tulane theater under the guise of a dramatic production. The management of the Tulane insists that as soon as a motion picture is shown in that house it ceases to be a photodramatic and becomes a dramatic production. By what process of reasoning this conclusion is reached is of no consequence. The public don't look at it that way, and the result is that dramatic-photodramatic productions do not get over very well where the lines of demarkation are so closely drawn.

"Intolerance" had a week run, as did "The Daughter of the Gods"—also "dramatic" despite the Fox imprint. Then came "Joan the Woman," which went into the Tulane frankly as a superb motion picture and the house was crowded at every presentation. "Civilization" at the Tudor theater had as good a patronage. But the feature production that has been accorded the greatest patronage has been "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," which has been the offering under the very best of environment at the Lafayette theater. The showing began on Monday, May 13, and the picture has caused no end of favorable comment. It is screened with all of the accessories to contribute to its success. At each presentation some citizen of note made a patriotic address and the army and navy contingent lent every assistance. It was a notable presentation and the Saenger Amusement company is well pleased with the success of the enterprise.

San Francisco's Market Street Theater Sold

Sam Gordon Buys the Hallahan & Getz "Home of Movies"—Policy for Present Will Be Exclusive Moving Pictures.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Market Street theater, on Market street, near Mason, for many years conducted by Hallahan & Getz as the "House of Movies," but for some time past operated by the owners of the Portola theater, has been taken over by Sam Gordon, a well known exhibitor of this city, whose connection with moving pictures dates back almost to the time of their introduction here. It is announced that moving pictures will be shown exclusively, for the present at least, and no marked changes are planned in the policy of the house. This theater is centrally located, and has a seating capacity of about one thousand.

The taking over of this house is but one of a number of changes that have been made of late in which Mr. Gordon has figured. He has sold a one-half interest in the Lyric theater, on Fillmore street, to Theodore Rothschild, who was at one time well known in local theater circles, and who had a chain of vaudeville houses in the state before the fire of 1906. He has disposed of the Broadway theater in the North Beach district, but still conducts the Washington Square theater in that part of the city, showing moving pictures exclusively. He owns the Liberty theater, also in the North Beach district, but this has been leased to an Italian dramatic company.

Jobelmann a Club Man.

San Francisco, Cal.—William H. Jobelmann, publicity manager for the Turner & Dahnken circuit, has been made a member of the San Francisco Newspapermen's Club, an exclusive organization for members of the editorial staffs of local papers.

Miles Bros. Move Offices.

San Francisco, Cal.—Miles Bros., formerly located at 1145-1147 Mission street, have moved to upstairs quarters at 1149½ Mission in the same building. The laboratories have always been upstairs, and all departments of the business are now on one floor.

New Mission Theater to Be Enlarged.

San Francisco, Cal.—Although the New Mission theater of the Kahn & Greenfield circuit has been built but a little over a year, and is still one of the largest district houses in this city, with a seating capacity of 1,800, it has been found to be too small to accommodate the business offered, and plans are being prepared by Reid Bros., architects, to enlarge it. The balcony will be extended back over property recently secured, and room will be made for about five hundred additional seats. This house, under the management of Robert F. Abraham, has met with remarkable success since the opening day.

Export Business Good.

San Francisco, Cal.—A splendid export business is being done in theater supplies and films out of San Francisco, almost every steamer leaving for the Far East takes out large lots. G. A. Metcalfe recently made a large shipment of carbons to Java, where exhibitors are doing a big business, from all reports, and the Breck Photo Play Supply Company has also made some heavy shipments. There is a big demand for films throughout the Pacific countries, and this is expected to show a marked increase as quickly as American business men go after this business in earnest.

Harry Hunter and Henry Thuman.

Harry Hunter first engaged in the film business in 1912, when he formed a partnership with Max Alpert at Seattle and commenced booking one of the first features brought into the Northwest, Tolstoi's

Henry Thuman and Harry Hunter.

"Resurrection." He then went to San Antonio, Tex., where the Independent Film Exchange was formed. When the Independent Film Exchange of San Francisco and the Union Film & Supply Co. of Los Angeles and San Francisco consolidated he was placed in charge of the Los Angeles branch. He later accepted the management of the Apex office at Portland, Ore., and a short time afterward went out on the road for the Mutual out of that city. He then joined the Metro organization at Seattle.

Henry Thuman started in the days when two-reel productions were considered ambitious efforts. For a time he bought the Warner releases in the Northwest, but later sold out, and has been engaged in other lines until recently.

Back From Honeymoon.

San Francisco, Cal.—Aaron Goldberg, manager of the Peerless theater on Third street, is back from his honeymoon trip to the Grand Canyon. A short stop was made at Los Angeles to visit some of the studios.

Essanay Reopens at Niles.

San Francisco, Cal.—For several weeks an army of carpenters, electricians and property men have been at work rejuvenating the large Essanay studio at Niles, Cal., which has been reopened after having been closed for more than a year. Photodramas of the red-blooded West, to be known as the Essanay-Niles features, will be produced, with Jack Gardner in the leading role. President Geo. K. Spoor, who has made a careful study of the present day problems of exhibitors, has become convinced that the Western type of pictures is growing in popular demand rather than diminishing.

The Neighbor Was Welcome.

San Francisco, Cal.—C. M. Hill, assistant to general manager Herman Wobber, of the Progressive company, is the proud father of an infant Hill, who is destined, it is fondly predicted, to become a Paramount. About two o'clock one morning, recently, Mr. Hill heard a neighbor pounding on the wall. "Look here," cried the neighbor, "I can't sleep with that baby yelling like that. If you don't make it stop, I will." The response from the other side of the wall was characteristic of the obliging Hill. "Come right in," he said, "you'll be as welcome as the flowers in spring."

Ushers May Become Soldiers.

San Francisco, Cal.—A number of moving picture houses in this city now employing men ushers are considering the employment of women for this duty to enable the men to join the colors. F. B. Henderson, manager of the local Orpheum, has received a telegram from Martin Beck, president of circuit, instructing him to prepare at once to replace men ushers with women, and to urge the men to do their duty to their country. Hugo Hertz, house manager of this theater, served during the Spanish-American war as a member of the U. S. Marines, and is now raising a company from among the employees of local theaters, having already secured the signatures of more than two hundred. Almost all the local theaters are showing slides favoring enlistment, and are assisting the military authorities in every way possible.

Invents Natural Colored Movies.

San Francisco, Cal.—Leon F. Douglas, inventor and chairman of the board of directors of the Victor Talking Machine Company, is rated one of the greatest geniuses of the age by the select group of citizens who viewed a set of natural colored pictures in his laboratory at San Rafael on May 16. Douglas has discovered the secret of transferring to the film the most delicate gradations of color, these remaining faithful in the minutest detail. Regarding the invention he said in part: "As my patents have not been issued I am unwilling to explain the process in full at this time. I can say, however, that with a simple attachment on any ordinary moving picture camera now in use a negative is made, and up to this point the process is precisely the same as the regular black and white process. After the positive is finished in the usual way it is treated with chemicals to bring out the colors. This additional treatment, which brings out the colors in the black and white film, costs about one-half a cent per foot. When you consider that the cost of producing a 5,000 foot picture play is from $10,000 to $250,000, you can see that the extra cost of producing it in natural colors is comparatively infinistesimal. The simplicity of this process lies in the fact that any projecting machine now in use in moving picture theaters will display the natural color pictures without alteration. In fact, parts of a play can be in black and white, and parts in natural colors, as far as the projecting is concerned." The first series of these films in the natural colors will be devoted to gathering together notable figures in contemporary American history, and the receipts from their exhibitions will be for the benefit of the American Red Cross.

SPOKANE NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Sponsorship Committee Protests.

Spokane, Wash.—The Sponsorship Committee of the Spokane Federation of Women's Organizations has issued the following statement in regard to a picture shown in Spokane during the week of May 6 which was not approved by the committee:

"The Sponsorship Committee of the City Federation of Women's Clubs wishes to correct the statement printed in the advertisement of one of our local moving picture theaters and also thrown upon the screen at each show during this week, which reads: 'This picture was not approved by our local sponsorship committee of one.'

"Three members of the Sponsorship Committee, by invitation of the manager, were present at the trial run of this picture, and in consultation after the show agreed that it could not be approved, owing to the lewdness and vulgarity in several of the scenes. The committee was approached by some leading business men who have become interested in our work and who were watching for our decision on this picture.

"The members of the committee have instructions from our chairman to be as broad-minded as possible when passing on any picture or performance. We have tried to be both liberal and just, having in mind only the protection of our young people."

This report was given out by Mrs. Samuel Offner, who is secretary of the Sponsorship Committee, of which Mrs. H. M. Prager is chairman.

R. S. Tucker Buys Second Theater.

Moscow, Idaho.—R. S. Tucker, one of the most prominent exhibitors of Idaho, manager of the Orpheum, Moscow, has just purchased the Strand theater in this city. He now controls both local houses. Mr. Tucker has always shown a consistently high class program, and patrons of his theater can be sure of the best at any time, which is the only way to make friends of your patrons and keep them friendly.

Recruiting Campaign in Spokane With Films.

A two weeks' campaign of illustrated lectures and motion pictures to boost navy recruiting in Spokane and vicinity was launched here May 13 by A. B. Provost, of Portland, chief machinists' mate in the United States navy.

His activities include illustrated lectures on the navy, its condition and its needs, at each of the daily programs at local motion picture show houses of the city. His talks are interspersed with views of some of the country's latest and mightiest fighting machinery of the sea, the pleasures and the work of life in the navy, and are topped off with a feature film entitled "America Preparing," and 1,000 feet of film and 16 slides.

"Womanhood" Shown and Aids Recruiting.

Spokane, Wash.—On telegraphic instructions from the adjutant general at Washington, D. C., to Captain H. E. Mitchell of the army recruiting office in Spokane, representatives of the army, navy and marine recruiting offices were present at the Clemmer theater, for the week of May 13, where the new Vitagraph preparedness film, "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," was shown to crowded houses. The unusual sight of marines, sailors and soldiers in uniform in the theater lobby and the vestibule greeted patrons of the theater, and the men distributed recruiting literature.

Jesse Crawford played a rousing musical score which added much to the appeal of the offering on the screen.

Spokane, Wash.—Charles E. Stilwell, manager of the Casino, Class A, and Rex motion picture houses, has just purchased a five-room modern stucco bungalow at W. 617 Carlisle from Dennis J. Wood for $3,500. The house was recently built by Mr. Wood and has never been occupied.

Spokane, Wash.—James McConahey, a pioneer moving picture exhibitor and manager of the Best theater, closed its doors Sunday, June 6, in order that the building could be wrecked to make room for the new addition to the Crescent store, which will cost $400,000. Mr. McConahey's plans are undecided for the future.

Threaten 5-Cent Summer Shows

In Portland, Oregon, Big Legitimate Theaters Are Planning Five Cent Shows During Dull Summer Months—Exhibitors Maintaining Shows Through the Whole Year Do Not Look Kindly on Plan—Not Fair, They Say.

By Abraham Nelson, Majestic Theater Building, Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, ORE.—It is reported that the Baker theater is contemplating showing big photoplays for a nickel during the summer months. This is following the usual custom of turning the legitimate and stock houses into photoplay theaters rather than to keep them dark during the warm weather. The regular exhibitors are not exactly pleased over this report, and are ready to express in strong terms their feelings toward exchanges which supply service at such low prices as to make this summer competition profitable to the legitimate theaters. The legitimate houses, having a big seating capacity and having made their profits during the winter season, charge 5 cents during the summer for seats that usually command $2 prices, and are content with making running expenses. Exhibitors who have found it absolutely necessary to charge 15 cents admission throughout the year in order that the standard to which they have built their shows may be maintained, and the photodrama that they have popularized through their continued efforts progress, feel it is unfair for these nickel men to enter the field for the purposes that they are, and more unfair for high class exchanges to put their service into these temporary five cent shows.

Grand Ball Plans Perfected.

Portland, Ore.—At the time of this writing matters relative to the Annual Convention and Grand Ball, May 29 and 30, are moving so rapidly that each day brings a new series of events.

Miss Margarita Fischer, Oregon girl, will come from San Diego to be the guest of honor for the event, and she will lead the grand march. Miss Dorothy Dalton, whose many screen appearances here recently have won her thousands of Portland friends, is another stellar visitor whose appearance is guaranteed.

Committees headed by Messrs. Meighan, Parker, Myrick and Nelson have been busy making arrangements, and the three ball rooms of the Multnomah hotel have been engaged for the occasion. There are thirty members of the league on the sub-committees to arrange the work prior to the convention, and thirty more members from all parts of the state are scheduled to take charge when the festivities begin.

Richardson Is Appreciated.

Portland, Ore.—"It sure did sting some of us, but we liked it," is the way one operator commented upon the lecture of F. H. Richardson at the Columbia theater, May 13. A visit to the projection booths a few days afterwards found one operator affixing a new aperture plate; another was out scouting for high class lenses.

"We are throwing a twenty-five per cent. better picture this week than we were last," said one manager after he had listened two and a half hours to Mr. Richardson's pointed remarks, and others proudly admit the same thing.

Effort Made for Sunday Opening.

Eugene, Ore.—Dan Kellaher, conceded to be the man who killed the Oregon state Blue Law, recently visited this city in an effort to abolish the local Sunday closing ordinance. Indications are that his efforts will be successful. He showed the city council where, although moving picture shows were closed by the ordinance on Sunday, alleged high class musical attractions and artists were invited to perform in the churches, and that prices ranging to $2 a seat are demanded at times at these church affairs.

Mr. Kellaher is candidate for city commissioner in Portland on the anti-blue law platform.

Theater Changes and New Houses in Oregon.

Portland, Ore.—W. H. Brower, formerly an exhibitor in Woodland, Washington and in St. Helens, Oregon, has opened the Woodlawn theater here, a suburban house that has been closed for some time.

Roseburg, Ore.—The Palace theater has been reopened by E. L. Cooper, who formerly conducted a theater in Pendleton, Ore.

Burns, Ore.—L. M. Johnson has sold his interest in the Levens theater to P. G. Smith.

Florence, Ore.—Durban and Hamilton have opened the Princess theater here.

Brief Portland Film Items.

Portland, Ore.—George Bligh, of Salem, accompanied by Judge D'Arcy, an old time theater owner there, were recent visitors in Portland. Mr. Bligh advises that he has discontinued the use of vaudeville.

W. A. Ayres, Sunnyside theater, recently gave a successful matinee for school children under the auspices of the Oregon Hygiene Society, showing a five-reel hygienic subject.

Pathe held a trade showing of "The Neglected Wife" at the Hippodrome theater, May 15, that was well attended.

Pathe Manager Surprised.

Portland, Ore.—W. W. Kofeldt, branch manager for Pathe, experienced every feeling from dismay to ecstacy, when, on May 16, L. A. Samuelson, booker, told him a strike among the employees was about to be called. Going into the exhibition room, manager Kofeldt discovered it was a lucky strike when the assembled employees presented their chief with a handsome gold watch, the day being his birthday.

W. W. Kofeldt.

Mr. Kofeldt has been three years with Pathe as cashier and manager, ten months of this time being spent in San Francisco as cashier, and the balance in Portland.

More Expensive Seats May Carry War Tax

Spokane Exhibitors Have Not Definitely Decided on Method of Meeting the Proposed Federal Tax on Tickets—Will Readjust Rates.

By S. Clark Patchin, E. 1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Increases in moving pictures and vaudeville admission prices are already being considered by Spokane managers, following the news of the proposed war tax. A tax of one cent on every ten-cent ticket has been suggested, with the five-cent houses exempt. Managers assert they cannot meet the added burden at the present scale of prices.

It is declared to be impracticable to add only the required extra cent to the price of admission, because of the confusion that would result in making change in pennies. It is regarded as likely that the managers will adjust their price schedules in such a manner that the more expensive seats will carry most of the war tax.

Manager E. Clarke Walker of the Pantages theater, a moving picture and vaudeville house, said that no policy has yet been decided upon for the houses on the Pantages circuit. He believes the Spokane house will be forced to go on a straight "ten-twenty-thirty" basis if the law is enacted.

Picture managers also have said that they would be obliged to readjust their schedules. In a general way, the 10-cent houses will have to raise to 15 cents and the 15-cent theaters to 20 cents. The increase may be divided in such a way that the public will not find the added admission a burden. This can be done in some instances through rearrangement of seats and the adoption of a reserved seat policy.

New Brunswick Merger Joins Seven Theaters

Academy of Music Company of New Glasgow Absorbs Itzit Amusement Company—N. W. Mason Heads New Concern—Other Officers.

By F. F. Sully, La Tour, St. John, N. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The largest motion picture merger ever recorded in the Maritime Provinces and representing an investment of more than a quarter of a million dollars was made known last week to the World correspondent by N. W. Mason, of New Glasgow, N. S., while spending a few days in the city. The Itzit Amusement Company, of which Warren Smith was manager, has now been absorbed by the Academy of Music Company, which is headed by Mr. Mason. The Itzit company formerly controlled Itzit at New Glasgow, the Jubilee theater at Stellarton, and the Crescent theater at Westville.

The Academy of Music Company now operates, in addition to these theaters, the Roseland at New Glasgow, completed and opened but a few months ago, the Empire at Westville, the Academy of Music at New Glasgow, and the Opera House at Trenton, now in the course of construction.

Mr. Smith, formerly at the head of the Itzit, has withdrawn from the picture business altogether. The officers of the new company are: N. W. Mason, president and manager; Harry McNeill, vice-president; H. B. McCullough, secretary, and A. F. McCullough, treasurer. The policies of the houses will remain practically the same as before, except that the Itzit will be returned to its old policy of motion pictures, eliminating the musical tabloid.

Mr. Mason says that the Trenton Opera House, which will be ready for business about July 1, will seat about 500 people. It will cost in the neighborhood of $12,000. Although built entirely of wood, the fire hazard will be reduced to a minimum, for the company has bought a large tract of land surrounding the building, which will accordingly enable the builders to keep it altogether free from contact with any other structure.

Moncton Decides Not to Tax Tickets.

Moncton, N. B.—The decision of the city government to abandon for the present the application for legislation to impose a one-cent tax upon motion picture theater tickets was finally reached Friday evening, after a long and heated session of the city council. In opening the discussion, Alderman Robinson said that he had, after some consideration, decided to oppose the measure for the present. It smacked to some extent of class legislation and, of course, this was something that the council would not knowingly consider. He said that the legislation committee had thoroughly gone over the matter and decided it would be better to eliminate the clause, although the mayor voted in favor of it.

Alderman Robinson said, however, that he would like to see the theaters pay a larger tax than they do at present, but that the council would have to find some other way of getting at it. Adopting the cent tax, would, it was felt, be imposing it upon the people and not on the proprietors. He then moved that the clause be eliminated.

W. Marshall Black Dies.

Wolfville, N. S.—W. Marshall Black, one of the most prominent figures in the motion picture industry in Nova Scotia, died here a few days ago. Mr. Black, who had been very active in the public life of Wolfville, was owner and manager of the opera house, a well-appointed and up-to-date theater. He was at one time mayor of the city. He is survived by his wife and three children: Reginald, who is now at the front in France, and the Misses Mary and Violet, at home. He was a 33d degree Mason, and was one of the few men in the Maritime Provinces to attain that rank in the order. He had been a member of Halifax Lodge.

Newcastle, N. B.—Baby Marie Osborne made such a decided hit here in the Pathe Gold Rooster play, "Hold at Twilight," that Billy Richards has booked it for a return engagement. This is one of the few pictures that has played a return engagement in this section, and the event is all the more noteworthy coming such a short time after the original presentation here.

Film Notes From Maritime Provinces.

St. John, N. B.—I. Soskin, special representative of the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, and Harry Price, who has charge of the Canadian territory for the Artcraft and Monarch productions, were recent visitors in St. John. Mr. Soskin spent a few days of his two weeks' vacation here, and then left for a few days' fishing in Halifax. Mr. Price said his mission was purely a mercenary one.

St. John, N. B.—Beginning about the first of June, the B. F. Keith Imperial theater will make important changes in its picture policy. On Monday and Tuesday of each week it will run the Monarch and Selznick productions, on Wednesday and Thursday the Triangle, and the last two days of the week the Vitagraph productions, which have a large following in St. John.

Dominion, N. S.—J. B. Liscombe of the Royal theater has had his operating booth renovated and newly equipped and has added a Power's 6A machine, purchased from S. Starfield of the Independent forces.

Sydney, N. S.—John Kattahar, owner and manager of Kattahar's theater, which has been playing to good houses during the past season, has negotiations under way to secure a large piece of land in the central section of the city to erect a new motion picture house. As far as can be learned the house will seat about 800 people.

St. John, N. B.—The picture and vaudeville programme at the opera house and the Lyric theater were augmented during the past week by the appearance in nurse's costume of Miss Winifred Evans of Toronto. She sang several patriotic and recruiting songs, written by Canadian authors. She left St. John for Sussex, to appear at C. F. Givan's Lyric theater.

League Offers Use of Screen to Government

New Brunswick Exhibitors Will Aid in Educating People to a More Effective Patriotism—Showing How to Plant Gardens.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The full co-operation of the motion picture exhibitors of New Brunswick was recently offered to Premier Walter E. Foster by Walter H. Golding, president of the Maritime Provinces Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, in order to stimulate the increased production campaign. Mr. Golding made a special trip to Fredericton, the capital city, and laid before the government the avenues through which thousands of people could be reached every night in the week.

The government felt that the motion picture industry could be a power for good in aiding the work which has been so well started by the provincial officials. The Maritime Provinces, more perhaps than any other part of Canada, have felt the depressing effects of the war. The people living in this section have been saddened by the heavy toll collected for the capture of Vimy Ridge, yet they are taking up the work of home defense, by cultivating the land, with a ready and willing hand. Up to the present time it has not yet been found necessary to enlist the services or rather the influence of the screen to bring people to a full realization of their duty to their King and country.

Later in the season it is possible that practical suggestions, accompanied by illustrations, will be thrown on the screens, pointing out to amateur gardeners just what should be done to insure maximum returns of their crops. This is one way in which the motion picture industry could play an important part. Individual exhibitors have pledged themselves to support the plan as readily as they threw themselves into the recruiting campaign.

London, Ontario, Increases Its Theater Tax

Canadian City With 58,000 Population Makes New Rate for Picture Theaters—Large Houses Will Now Pay $500 a Year License Fee.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St. E., Toronto, Ontario.

TORONTO, ONT.—London, Ontario, has decided to increase the municipal tax for moving picture theaters from $20 to $420 per year, according to the seating accommodation of each respective house. A special committee of the City Council, delegated for the purpose, has fixed a schedule of annual fees greatly in excess of present charges. The new rates will be as follows: Up to 500 seating capacity, $100; 500 to 1,000 seats, $200; 1,000 to 1,500 seats, $400, and over 1,500 seats, $500. All theaters at present pay only $80 per year, regardless of size. London has one or two fine new theaters and these are the ones which will be hit most by the new tax arrangement, as their capacity is over the 1,500 mark. The fees for concert halls, cigar stands, garages, auctioneers, circuses and slot machines are also heavy. London has a population of some 58,000 people.

The First Presbyterian Church is the first London church to be equipped with a moving picture projection machine. This will be used both on Sundays and during the week for the edification and education of church "patrons." It will be used regularly at the Sunday School.

Photographs of Licensed Operators Required.

Toronto.—The clauses of the Theaters and Cinematographs Act of Ontario respecting operators' licenses have been augmented by a new regulation which provides for the taking of duplicate photographs of the license holders. One of the pictures is to be kept on file in the municipal building at the place where an operator resides, while the second is to be attached to the license card. This is intended for identification so that outsiders cannot claim a lost or misplaced card by mistake or otherwise. The regulation has already gone into effect.

Canadian Universal to Distribute Motiograph.

Toronto.—The Canadian Universal has become Canadian distributor for the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., Chicago, manufacturers of the Motiograph projection machine. The Canadian Universal has offices in Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

Toronto Theaters Raising Rates.

Toronto.—There is a tendency among Toronto exhibitors to raise admission prices. Several of the suburban theaters are among the leaders in this respect, the fee at these houses having been raised from 10 cents to 15 cents. The show business is costing more, it is declared.

Mitchell Granby Recovering.

Toronto.—Mitchell Granby, former manager of the Fox office at Toronto, is now on the road to recovery after a serious breakdown which necessitated a lengthy stay in Wellesley hospital. Granby will spend the next three or four months in the country in order to recuperate.

W. F. Barrett Wins Vitagraph Prize.

Toronto.—W. F. Barrett, Toronto manager of the Greater Vitagraph, is now the owner of a Ford automobile which he won as a result of achieving the largest aggregate of business among all Vitagraph offices on the North American continent. It was only a few months ago that Mr. Barrett resigned from the local Mutual branch to assume the management of the Toronto Vitagraph headquarters.

Twenty-one Toronto Theaters Book "Great Secret."

Toronto.—Twenty-one Toronto theaters have booked the Metro serial, "The Great Secret," the first episode of which was released during the week of May 21. The theaters are as follows: Model, Rex, Imperial, Reo, Dundas Playhouse, Beaver, His Majesty's, National, Eclipse, Broadview, College Playhouse, Academy, Coliseum, Brighton, Kum-C, Willowvale, La Reta, Classic, Cum-Bac, Vermont and Crescent Palace.

Big War Tax in British Columbia

Province Proposes a Ticket Tax of Five Cents on Every Admission—Exhibitors Form an Association to Combat So Exorbitant a Rate—A Graded Rate on Tickets According to Price Has Been Offered.

By Chas. S. Thomson, 645 Bernard St., Vancouver, B. C.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Every exhibitor in British Columbia is now anxiously awaiting developments in regard to the proposed War Tax on theater tickets. The Provincial Parliament evidently considers that the motion picture business is the easiest means of making money in the province, for they have gone one better than any state or province on the whole American continent by proposing a tax of five cents on every admission ticket. This would work out at something like forty-five per cent. of the gross revenue of the theaters.

Directly the facts were made known, the exhibitors of Vancouver organized the British Columbia Association of Moving Picture Exhibitors, and every theater in the province was communicated with to ascertain the views of all concerned in regard to the proposed tax. A delegation was appointed to wait on the government, but on account of many difficulties in the way, the entire case for the exhibitors was outlined in writing and forwarded to the minister of finance. In this communication it was plainly stated that if the five-cent tax becomes law, attendance at the theaters will decrease to such an extent that many will have to close their doors, and the few who do remain open will have a hard struggle to even pay expenses. At the same time, the exhibitors wish it to be understood that they are not in any way opposed to taxation as such, and are fully prepared to do their utmost to help in the great cause which all true citizens have at heart, but they feel most strongly that if the government's proposal is carried out without amendment, it will cripple the entire industry throughout the province. Not only that, but the government itself will get less revenue than would accrue from a much lighter tax, with business practically undiminished.

The Exhibitors' Association has suggested a tax of ½-cent, 1 cent and 2 cents, according to price of ticket. It is to be hoped that the government will take this suggest. n seriously and act accordingly. At the present moment, word is being anxiously awaited from the minister of finance as to a convenient date to meet an exhibitors' delegation to thrash the whole matter out.

Vancouver, B. C.—Griffith's second masterpiece, "Intolerance," is now enjoying a two-weeks' run at the Orpheum, which has just closed its vaudeville season for the summer vacation. This is the first visit of this colossal spectacle to Western Canada, and on all hands people are discussing it and comparing it with "The Birth of a Nation." Some favor one, and some the other, but the majority seem to be agreed that although "Intolerance" is a gorgeous and bewilderingly marvelous spectacle, with powerful moral lessons, at the same time it lacks the heart appeal and the poignant thrills of the "Birth of a Nation."

Dominion Film Corporation.

Burnaby, B. C.—The question as to whether the Dominion Film Corporation should be allowed to start a moving picture industry in Burnaby, B. C., and whether a grant of a twelve-acre tract of land valued at $28,000 should be given by the municipality to the film corporation as a site for its studios, was put to the entire electorate on Saturday, May 12.

The local council had already decided in favor of the project, but before signing an agreement with the corporation, they decided to put the matter before the citizens themselves. The latter fully endorsed the council's action, and by a good majority decided to allow the corporation to operate and to give them the land they desired.

The terms of the agreement stipulate that the film company shall immediately build studios, administration building, etc., at a cost of not less than that of the land itself, namely, $28,000, and that they shall commence the actual taking and producing of photoplays within four months of the date of the agreement. If the film company fails to carry out its promises in any particular, it immediately loses all title to the land, which then reverts to the municipality.

The project appears to be sound enough on the surface, but the big question which remains to be decided is whether the Dominion Film Corporation will be able to turn out pictures of sufficient merit to successfully compete with their American rivals. If they can do so, the lack of duty on their film will enable them to get a monopoly of the whole Canadian trade, but, on the other hand, if they are unable to deliver the real stuff, not even the cheapness of their product will save them from extinction. We shall see what we shall see!

AS OTHERS SEE US

NEW YORK AMERICAN:

"One of the few motion pictures seen on Broadway worth the Broadway scale of admission prices. Like taking a trip on the flying carpet of Prince Ahmed of the 'Arabian Nights.' One of the most charming entertainments that can be imagined."

NEW YORK EVENING WORLD:

"Refreshingly free from the sensationalism to which the screen is so often given and possessing picturesque charm. Both interesting and enlightening. From beginning to end, 'A Trip Thru China' is fascinating."

NEW YORK WORLD:

"Of exceptional value, both for its informative and entertaining qualities."

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL:

"A motion picture with a purpose of value, more than mere entertainment. The picture is entertaining, with frequent amusing scenes, remarkable scenic views and exceptionally good photography."

NEW YORK TIMES:

"Some excellent pictures of the New Life of the Chinese Republic."

NEW YORK TRIBUNE:

"Viewing China via the motion picture at the Eltinge is almost as interesting as viewing it from the back of an observation car. The scenes in The Forbidden City are magnificent."

NEW YORK EVENING MAIL:

"The most instructive and entertaining view of China that has ever been recorded. Not only has beauty of picture been the aim of the producers, but there are plenty of humorous scenes which will prove of particular delight to the young folk."

NEW YORK EVENING TELEGRAM:

"This is an art motion picture that stands alone as an educational travelogue and replete with interesting and humorous scenes."

NEW YORK MORNING TELEGRAPH:

"It is not only interesting, but it is unusually impressive for its sincerity and faithfulness in every detail. The spectator realizes that he is not only being entertained, but also educated and given information that he could not acquire by months of reading."

SELIG WORLD LIBRARY NO. 2.

The World of Wonders.—About seventeen centuries ago, a Manchu prince ordered the burning of the books of Confucius. Those who held on to Confucius were punished by being made to build a great wall across the northern boundary of China. Thirty feet high, fifteen feet wide at the top and 1,500 miles long, the wall was built to keep out the wild tribes of raiders from the north.

The Wall Is Traced.—Until recently the great wall of China was supposed to stop at the Nan-shan mountains. Dr. Stein has discovered remains far to the west along the Tarim River. This wall was built for the same purpose as the Romans' wall across England and, like the latter, failed in its purpose.

Things You Should Know.—Bees have their love stories, their quarrels and dreadful tragedies. They are architects, builders, chemists, organizers, and some murderers. They have queens, princesses and lazy drones.

Bees Loyal to Their Queen.—Loyal to their queen, the bee workers follow her to some tree branch, and when she rests they form a swarm about her to protect her from harm. Before leaving their hive to follow their queen, the bees gorge themselves with honey. In this state they will not sting. In the center of this swarm is the queen surrounded by her maids of honor.

Moving Day for the Bee Family.—Finding a dark box kindly offered by the men the queen bee enters the new hive and is followed by her court. A community of hives and yet each bee not only knows his home but knows also each other member of his colony. Guards at the door will kill or expel any strange bee entering their hive.

Architects Design Them.—Architects design these six-sided wax cylinders knowing that such a form gives the maximum capacity for the amount of material used. The cell builders meet on an exact center like engineers building a tunnel can do with surveyors' instruments to help them. During the warm lazy days of Summer the bees work at their tasks, and if they are born early in the season, die of overwork.

THE FRAMED MINIATURE (Two parts).—The cast: Eric (Robyn Adair); Arnold Dale (Leo Pierson); Rosalia Dale (Virginia Kirtley); the Stable Boy (Harvin Cox). Written and produced by Burton L. King.

Eric, a strolling artist, meets Rosalia Dale and learns to love the maiden. Arnold Dale, Rosalia's father, does not approve of the love making and with every means in his power endeavors to separate the young pair.

A stable boy, working for Dale, in revenge, steals into the house and discovers the hiding place of a pearl necklace which he takes, together with a framed miniature portrait of Rosalia. He takes the necklace and throws away the miniature. Dale, discovering the theft, believes that the artist has stolen both the portrait and necklace. In the meantime Eric finds the framed miniature, and he takes it with him, believing that it is a sign of Rosalia's love.

Months later Arnold Dale and his daughter visit Eric's studio. There Dale sees the framed miniature of his daughter from which Eric has painted a portrait. He touches a hidden spring and the real pearl necklace is found, the necklace stolen by the stable boy being but a counterfeit. Dale then makes no further objections to the courtship of the artist and his daughter.

THE LOVE OF PRINCESS OLGA (Two Parts).—The cast: Princess Olga (Louizetta Valentine); Billy Craig (Casson Ferguson); Mrs. Craig (Angela Dolores); Ivan (Fred Eckhart); Count Boris (M. C. Von Betz). Written by James Oliver Curwood. Directed by Otis B. Thayer.

Olga Petroff, a Russian Princess, whose father is spirited to Siberia by the plottings of Count Boris, comes to America. The princess books passage in the steerage, and is following Count Boris, who is in the diplomatic service. Arriving in New York, and becoming separated from Ivan, her guardian, she is saved from death in an automobile accident by Billy Craig, a newspaper reporter.

Later, Princess Olga accepts the position of maid to Mrs. Craig, Billy's mother, and Billy falls in love with the beautiful princess.

Ivan, who has been shadowing Count Boris, notifies Olga that the diplomat will be a guest at the embassy ball. Billy Craig is assigned by his newspaper to the function. As it is a masked affair, he is not recognized by Olga or Ivan, who are also present in disguise.

Olga attracts Count Boris and entices him into the conservatory, where Ivan overcomes the diplomat and secures the keys to the Count's apartments. This action is overseen by Billy Craig, who, following Olga to Count Boris' apartments, saves the girl from death at the hands of the Count's servants. Olga has obtained the important papers at the Count's home, but in the fight she loses them and they are recovered by Billy.

Billy Craig returns the papers to Olga the next day, and is told by her that she is a Russian princess, and that the papers will free her father from Siberian servitude. Ivan returns to Russia with the documents, and Olga remains in America as the wife of the newspaperman.

MOVIE STUNTS (Featuring Tom Mix).—In this production we see Tom Mix at his best. He performs deeds of courage and skill in horsemanship and marksmanship as well as in roping. The long series of sensational film exploits of Tom Mix have been carefully assembled in this production, and are given as a convincing presentment of the hazards that necessarily accompany the work of a motion picture "stunt" actor.

Buck Logan, "The Scrapper," is always spoiling for a fight. He was in love with Helen Dawson, the school teacher. But she was tired of her lonely life, and resolved to return to the city at the first opportunity. The boys rode over to say good-bye. Buck proposed for the twentieth time. He had that day saved her life, but she did not recognize any obligation.

In the city, Helen found it difficult to make both ends meet. She was unable to find employment. She was seen one day by Jerry, a parasite. He visited Martha Mayes, unprincipled woman, proprietor of a questionable establishment. They laid plans, for Helen was the type of girl to attract wealthy Colonel Stanton. Archie pretended to attack Helen, and Jerry came to the rescue, and walked home with her.

Several months passed. Buck and the boys were sent to the city with a shipment of cattle. The boys did not find much to attract them, and went to the stockyards. Jerry had an adventure. A girl twisted her ankle and he helped her home.

In the meantime, Jerry had made Helen think him a friend, so when he said that his sister was giving an entertainment, and wanted her to be there, she accepted. The "sister" was Martha, who offered to lend her an evening gown. The girl accepted, and was introduced to Colonel Stanton. He began making advances which aroused her suspicions, and she tried to push him away. Buck, lead by the girl he had befriended, arrived. Buck recognized Helen and demanded whether any one wanted to fight. His challenge was accepted by most of the men and he had Helen telephone for the boys. A fight took place, with Buck holding his own for some time. The boys arrived. Jerry and Archie seized Helen and carried her to the roof. Buck managed to free himself and pursue them. He threw Archie over the roof and downed Jerry. Then he followed Helen down the fire-escape, where the boys, in a battered condition,, joined him one by one. Martha gazed disconsolately at her wrecked furniture, while the boys escorted Buck and Helen to a train leaving for the West.

GOLD SEAL.

THE ALMOST GOOD MAN (Three parts—Released Week June 4).—The cast: Dick Glenning (Harry Carey); Hal Norton (Al. MacQuarrie); Jim Manville (Frank MacQuarrie); Pete Willis (Vester Pegg); Kitty Manville (Claire Du Brey). Scenario by Chas. J. Wilson, Jr. Produced by Fred A. Kelsey.

Dick, broke and friendless, is footing it to Red Gulch, when he is noticed by Willis, an outlaw, and accepts his proposition to hold up the stage. Jim, the Wells Fargo agent, fears a visit from the auditor, for he has been using the money for gambling. He receives word that his daughter, Kitty, is to return on the stage.

Dick and Willis hold up the stage in which Kitty is the only passenger, but find the money has not been shipped. Dick reprimands Willis for his treatment of Kitty, and returns her jewelry. Kitty remarks that he seems to be an almost good man and gives him a ring.

Hal, a gambler, who has won much of Manville's money, is sorry for the wife, and returns some of the money to Mrs. Manville. He meets Kitty.

Later the payroll arrives and is placed in Manville's custody. Willis plots to get it. Dick meets Kitty. He escorts her home, and they meet Norton. Dick sees a reward for Willis, wanted for murder. He tells Willis he is through and warns him to leave. Willis is determined to stay and get the money.

To relieve her mother's mind, Kitty asks her father where he gets the money with which he gambles. Manville confesses and adds he must have a thousand dollars or face imprisonment. The girl thinks of the reward and, knowing Dick is one of them, she has a struggle trying to choose between the two men.

Manville gambles with the payroll and soon is broke. Going to the office, he writes a note telling of his embezzlements and shoots himself. Meanwhile, Dick has followed Willis and has forced him to leave Manville's office. While keeping guard he is startled by Manville's shot. Shortly afterward, Norton returns to give the money back. Dick sees Norton read the note, places the money in a drawer, and upsets the place to give the appearance of attempted robbery.

The next morning Willis accuses Dick of double crossing him and writes a note, which he slips under the sheriff's door. Dick is arrested. Norton tries to exonerate Dick. Meantime the sheriff has received a photograph of the man wanted for murder, and recognizes Willis. Norton affects Dick's escape and suggests they allow the girl to decide, telling her the truth. Kitty is overcome. Norton, believing Kitty loves Dick, is about to leave when she throws her arms about him. Dick realizes he has lost, and, gaining permission from Kitty to keep the ring, he rides away.

BUTTERFLY.

THE CIRCUS OF LIFE (Five parts—Released Week June 4).—The cast: Danny (Pomeroy Cannon); Mamie (Elsie Jane Wilson); Bouvais (Harry Carter); Kate (Mignon Anderson); Tommie (Emory Johnson); Daisy May (Zoe Rae). Written by E. J. Clawson. Produced by Rupert Julian.

In a cheap rooming house lived Danny, Bouvais, Mamie and Kate. Danny was the driver of a brewery wagon. He and Mamie were married. Gaston, a painter, believed every person was a plaything of Nature, and all acts predestined by the nature of the person. He jarred Mamie's happiness, telling her there was nothing awaiting her but tragedy. Kate was in love with Tommie, who had fallen in with bad companions. He made many promises to stop gambling and drinking, but broke them.

Mamie admired Bouvais, although she did not understand him; but when he betrayed her she hated him, especially when he said that she had fulfilled her destiny. She refused to tell Danny who the man was. Danny was heartsick. Gradually he changed in appearance; he drank more and more, and his manner became gruff and sullen. He loved the child, however; she was the one bright spot in his life.

During the next five years, these inmates of the rooming house drifted downstream. But Daisy, Mamie's child, was happy with her broken doll, adoring Danny. Mamie had promised to divorce Danny and marry Bouvais. It was Daisy's fifth birthday. Kate and some youngsters were preparing a surprise party. Danny took her on the wagon. He met some friends. One made a wager he could not drink twelve glasses of whiskey. The child urged him to take the dare, and Danny won. On the way home he lost control of the horses; they dashed down the street, and when he summoned forth all his strength to keep from tramping down a child, Daisy May was thrown under their hoofs with a sudden stop. Danny carries her to the house, stupefied and unable to believe the little one was unconscious.

Mamie, brought to her right senses, refused to go with Bouvais. With the help of Kate and Danny, she watched over the child. Bouvais was also moved, for he was fond of Daisy May. One day he told Mamie he had concluded to marry her, but she raged at him, rushing to tell Danny who the "man" was. Danny at first was going to kill Bouvais, but finally forced him to leave. For the sake of the child they decide to live together again, so that she may have her parents with her. Tommie suddenly braced up, having hidden from two policemen. Urged by Kate, he gave himself up. Kate waited, and when he was released they started over again. Daisy May got better and Danny ceased to drive a brewery wagon, but changed to a milk wagon, taking the child with him sometimes, while Mamie remained at the cottage or worked in the small garden. Bouvais married a matter-of-fact woman, who bullyragged philosophizing for a certain time and then boxed his ears.

JOKER.

SIMPLE SAPHO (Released Week June 4).—The cast: The Vampire (Gale Henry); the Country Youth (Jack Dill); the Artist (Milton Sims). Written by Jack Cunningham. Produced by Allen Curtis.

Gale sells hot dogs and is a potential vampire. An artist sees her and thinks that she is good material for caricature. He lures her to Paris with a roll of bills. The country youth says good-bye to his sweetheart and goes to the city. He meets Gale, who proceeds to vamp him to a finish. She then leaves the artist for whom she is posing, and leaves with the poet. But she deserts him for a man of wealth. He gives a masked ball for her. Jack is there as a shepherd, and the crowd makes fun of him. He falls for Gale, and places her in a fountain which is not running. When the crowd rushes to her in admiration, Jack is jealous and turns on the water. Gale faints. Jack then carries her to his home, up flight after flight of stairs. He is nearly exhausted, when her mask falls off. He drops her, and runs, she after him, right out into the country, where he grabs his sweetheart and marries her at once, to save himself from Gale.

POWERS.

SUPERSTITIOUS CHINA (Dorsey Educational—Released Week June 4).—Nearly all merchandise in China is carried by water, as there are few other highways. The interior commercial capital of the province of Sechuan, called Chungking, is set upon high ground overlooking two rivers. This province has eighty million inhabitants, and adjoins Tibet, at the head of the Yangtze River. We see the gates of the city, and then the public laundries, where the Chinese use the primitive method of beating the clothes against the rocks. We see a public lamentation over a death. The Chinese not only mourn their dead but worship their spirits. White is the mourning color. We see the ancient "Feast of All Souls" being celebrated in the city of Chungking. The Chinese believe that everything in nature, whether animate or inanimate, possesses a soul. Therefore they burn quantities of paper money on that day, so that the souls of the dead may be supplied with the soul of the money. The American Consulate strikes a modern note. We see a rich man being carried in a Sedan chair through the streets.

THEM WERE THE HAPPY DAYS (Cartoon Comedy—On Same Reel As Foregoing).—The old man goes to sleep and dreams that he is a boy again. He finds a vacuum cleaner and plays with it. Every one who comes near him is sucked into it, including his darky nurse. After many other adventures, he wakes to regret his lost youth.

NESTOR.

WHO'S LOONEY NOW? (Two Parts—Rel. Wk. June 4).—The cast: Eddie Newlywed (Eddie Lyons); Billie Newlywed (Billie Rhodes); A. Archibald Buggs, M. D. (Lee Moran). Produced by Al. Christie.

Eddie and Billie are at their first breakfast after the honeymoon. Billie is making the pancakes. She puts salt instead of sugar in them, and Eddie is afraid to tell her of it, so he hides them in his pocket. He throws the last batch under the table and goes off to the office, forgetting them. Just as he is leaving, her old trunk from home arrives. She opens it and finds the picture of the man to whom she was engaged before she met Eddie. She hides it under the bureau cover, but it falls behind the bureau. At the office, Eddie finds a package of his letters from a girl to whom he was engaged before he married Billie. He decides to hide them. She discovers the salt in the cakes, and is sorry for Eddie. She resolves to tear up the picture before he can see it. She goes to the bureau but it is not there. She thinks that Eddie has found it, and reads in the paper that a man has killed himself because he was driven insane by finding a picture of his bride in the arms of her former sweetheart. She is worried.

At the office, Eddie reads of a bride who went crazy on discovering letters written by her husband to another woman. He is called to his employer, and Billie enters while he is gone. When he returns the men in the office tell him that she went dippy and that they sent her home in a taxi. Eddie thinks she has found the letters. He rushes home, where each thinks the other crazed with grief. Eddie sends for Dr. Buggs. Each humors the supposed madness of the other. Billie phones the police.

At the office, the janitor finds Eddie's letters, which have fallen into the waste basket. He sends them with a note, explaining that the bearer does not understand English. When the man arrives, Billie takes him for an officer, and Eddie takes him for the doctor. There is a great confusion, during which Eddie finds the picture, and Billie finds the letters. The misunderstood man has dropped them in his flight. When the doctor and the officer arrive, they each try to arrest one of the Newlyweds and both resist arrest. Finally they manage to persuade the doctor and the officer that neither is crazy, and a scene of reconciliation follows.

A BURGLAR BY REQUEST (Rel. Wk. of June 4).—The cast: Ed (Eddie Lyons); His Wife (Edith Roberts); Harry (Harry Nolan); His Wife (Nellie Allen); Hank (Lee Moran). Produced by Louis Chaudet.

Ed and Edith have just moved into their flat. Across the hall are Harry and his wife. She leaves her jewelry around, and he gets a friend to play burglar. Ed comes home late from lodge. He meets Hank, the tramp, and takes him home with him. They enter Harry's flat by mistake. Harry takes Hank for his friend in a make-up. He gives him his wife's jewelry. Then Harry is called to the phone by his friend, who says he is sorry he could not be there to play burglar for him. Harry is in consternation, and calls an officer. There is a chase, for the two wives have been awakened, and Hank beats it with the cop after him.

IMP.

THE HUNTED MAN (Rel. Wk. June 4).—The cast: Gilder (Lee Hill); His Wife (Mignon Anderson); His Child (Gertrude Messenger); Detective (Malcolm Blevins). Scenario written by Harvey Gates. Produced by John McDermott.

Gilder, a clerk, is charged with embezzlement, and put in jail. He manages to escape and returns to see his wife and child. He finds a note from her saying that she has gone with another man. He is leaving with vengeance in his heart, when stopped by the detective. He tells him that he can go free, if he will reveal the hiding place of the money. He does so. His wife then rushes into the room, telling Gilder that it is all a trick, and that the detectives have forced her to write the note. He goes into the bedroom with her, and breaks down beside the child's crib. The phone rings, and the detective learns that they have found the money and with it the president of the bank, who has used Gilder as his tool. The detective informs Gilder, and advises him to tell the State all he knows, and that he will probably be freed.

DOOMED (Rel. Wk. June 4).—The cast: Anne Blackwood (Claire McDowell); Will Curtis (Jack Nelson); George Allen (Charles Perley); Chaplain (George Berrell); Roger Murray (Chas. H. Mailes). Scenario by E. M. Ingleton. Produced by George Cochrane.

Anne is betrothed to Will, but George Allen, a cad, covets her. One night he accosts her. She screams and Will frightens him away. Will follows George to his home, and they fight. Will, to release himself from a death grip, cuts George's hand, and warns him that he will kill him if he ever touches Anne again. A crowd of villagers, including Roger Murray, a curious character, watch the fight through the window.

The next morning Will is arrested for the murder of George, who is found dead. Circumstantial evidence is against him. Anne searches for some means of freeing him. The chaplain joins Will in his belief that Murray is the real murderer. He tells Anne of his suspicions. She goes to Murray, and by pretending to love him exacts a confession of murder from Murray. She wounds the lamp in front of the window, while Murray is getting the stolen money, and two detectives enter. Will is freed and Murray takes his place behind the bars.

LAEMMLE.

THE MISSING WALLET (Rel. Wk. June 4).—The cast: Jerry (Edwin August); Lucy (Jeannie MacPherson).

Jerry Marvin is in love with Lucy, the daughter of the owner of a number of fishing smacks. Arthur Granby, his foreman, hoped to marry Lucy, and her father favored him, and had warned Jerry to keep away from her. On payday the captain tells Jerry to bring him his coat with his wallet in it. Jerry delays to talk to the village fool, and when he returns with the coat, the captain cannot find his wallet. Jerry is suspected, and Arthur advises the captain to watch him. Only Lucy believes in him. The fool finds the wallet, and hides it in the stateroom. Jerry determines to leave the village. He is wrecked off the coast. Lucy sees him, and helps him to land. The fool returns the wallet and the captain apologizes.

VICTOR.

A BOX OF TRICKS (Rel. Wk. of June 4).—The cast: Billy, a waiter (Billy Mason); Bess (Marcia Moore); her mother (Sylvia Ashton); lover (Charles Dorian); the girls (Peggy and Violet Sbramm). Scenario written by Harry Wulze. Produced by John Steppling.

Billy, a waiter with savings, comes to the summer hotel and registers as a foreign nobleman. He becomes popular with the girls. Bess' mother determines to capture him for her daughter. Billy buys a conjuring outfit from a showman, and invites the guests to a show. Charles bribes a small boy to steal the hat which he has hidden in the trick box. Billy searches for another, and grabs one off a woman's head. Her wig comes with it. This is Bess' mother. The boys from the city arrive and tell the guests that Billy is a waiter. They all chase him. He takes refuge in mother's room. She is hiding her bald head, and he promises to return her wig and say nothing, if she will support what he says. When they all break in, the mother has to offer her daughter's hand to Billy to make him keep her secret. But Charles and the boys are outside the window. They pull him through it and throw him in the lake. Then Charles takes Bess in his arms.

L-KO.

DRY GOODS AND DAMP DEEDS (Two Parts—Rel. Wk. June 4).—The cast: A. Wayfarer (Phil Dunham); Beautiful Sewing Girl (Lucille Hutton); I. M. Shoddy (Charles Inslee); Forelady (Merta Sterling).

Phil arrives in town on top of a freight car, dressed in an autoist's outfit. He sees I. M. Shoddy, the proprietor of the dry goods store, persecuting a defenceless sewing girl, and trying to persuade her to enter his car. Phil rescues her and follows her to Shoddy's store, where she works. She gives him an orange as a souvenir, and he saves a piece of the peel. He waits outside, and through the window sees the shadow of Shoddy undressing a wax model. He rushes into the store, and after explanations, is given the position of porter.

He meets the sewing girl, but Merta, the forelady, falls in love with him, and makes it hard for him to meet the girl. Phil has all sorts of adventures in the store. He gives away the goods, and a policeman is called who chases him. He pretends to be a model, and escapes. He waters the flowers on a lady's hat, and finally, when a customer gives him her baby to hold, he puts the child in the cash basket, and swings it to the bundle girl.

He sees a girl putting stockings for display upon a dummy, and is shocked, and later when a real customer is trying on stockings, Phil gets in wrong by thinking her a dummy. A veiled woman comes in. Phil pursues her, and when he finds she is colored, he faints. At last he finds Lucille in the sewing room, and plays a song for her on the sleeve-board. Shoddy has been watching him, and now he enters, knocks Phil out, and carries the girl to the cellar. He ties her to a pillar, and turns on the water. Phil follows and there is a fight. Lucille is drowning, and though Phil tries all sorts of ruses, he cannot manage to get into the cellar to rescue her. At last he is thrown out of the window, and falls through a manhole into the flooded cellar, and finds himself with Lucille at last.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS (Chapter No 8, "A Knotted Cord"—Two Parts—May 2).—Helen Holmes, working with the secret service force of the K. & W., has secured evidence against Burke, double-crossing official of the road, which appears likely to run him to earth at last. In company with her faithful associates she trails the "Railroad Raiders" gang to its rendezvous, prepares a trap to capture the entire gang and is all but successful, the plan being sprung just in time to let the robbers escape after a fight.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS (No. 9, "A Leap for Life"—Two Parts—June 4).—Helen discovers a plot to rob an express car which contains a valuable consignment. The car is on the ferry slip ready to be transferred across the bay when the raiders, with a steam barge, unload the freight and make off with it. Driving an automobile at top speed to reach the ferry, Helen arrives just too late, but leaps the gap in the machine, landing safely on the deck. Meanwhile the raiders have placed a time bomb on the boat and, seeing Helen and Roy Wilson, they shoot, wounding Roy, just before the explosion occurs.

Helen ties the unconscious form of Roy to a raft and swimming with one hand and pushing him before her with the other manages to reach the shore. The raiders, seeing the explosion, believe that Helen is finally disposed of.

ZEPPELIN ATTACK ON NEW YORK (May 14).—A fancy of what might happen if the Kaiser's Zeppelin fleet should make an attack on New York is depicted. The Zeppelins are shown on their course across the sky as they come over the sea laden with bombs.

The big city is shown darkened and the harbor lights extinguished, as all Manhattan Island holds tight and waits. A bombing aeroplane is shown, scout aboard, as it soars off into the upper air.

There is a battle in the night-blackened sky. The Zeppelins are seen dropping their bombs of fire and explosive on the great skyscrapers of lower Broadway. The defending aeroplanes rush about. Then comes a hit. A Zeppelin is blasted to bits, burns in air and crashes to earth a cindered mass. Victory for the defenders.

LA SALLE.

THE FLIGHT THAT FAILED (Two Parts—June 4).—Madge, an heiress, is sent to Mrs. Gibson-Brown's Retreat to escape a certain Dark Man. They will not be parted, however, and decide to elope.

As Madge appears on a balcony in boy's clothes, the Chief of Police, who is driving by, takes her for a burglar and arrests her. Her youth attracts him and he takes her to his home instead of to jail.

At the bachelor abode of the Chief, complications arise and after a strenuous half hour the heiress faints and the Chief discovers her sex. The Dark Man is later arrested and brought to the Chief's house, where the maid recognizes him as her husband. Madge, her romance spoiled, discovers the Chief to be her childhood sweetheart and all ends happily.

MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTION.

SHACKLES OF TRUTH (American—Five Parts—June 4).—The Governor of a Western State must fill a vacant United States Senatorship. His choice narrows to two members of the same law firm. Gerard Hale, generous and sincere, the junior partner, and Luther Snaith. A cloud has recently risen between the young men, as they are both in love with the Governor's daughter, Marion.

Gerard's mother's health has been delicate since the death of Gerard Hale, Sr., and the doctor states her heart is affected, and any shock would cause her death. The Governor admits to Gerard that he is hesitating between Snaith and himself, and Gerard speaks up for his junior partner. Gerard takes Marion to a dance. Snaith proposes and is refused. Believing his partner is the lucky man he taxes Marion with it. She intimates her affection for Gerard, but that he has not yet spoken.

In the meantime, Tom Shores, released from the penitentiary, finds his sister Mary with a two-year old child. She explains she has married since he has been away. He becomes suspicious and forces her to tell the truth. She says the man's name is Hale, and she has not seen or heard from him for over a year. Tom swears to "get" the man who has deceived her. The papers carry an announcement of the Governor's indecision as to a choice between Hale and Snaith.

Mary and her brother arrive at the offices of Hale and Snaith, and Mary forces her brother to wait until she has seen Mr. Hale. She meets Snaith and assures him her business with Gerard is personal. She sees Gerard and recognizes a picture of his father. It is the elder Gerard she wishes to see. She is informed that he has been dead for over a year. Overcome with emotion she rushes from the office. He runs after her but loses her in the crowd outside the building. In the meantime Tom has seized Snaith and given away enough of the situation to arouse Snaith's suspicions.

Snaith is delighted to have something on his partner, and engages detectives to seek the couple. That night Tom succeeds in finding the home of Gerard Hale and breaks in, determined to have a reckoning with the supposed betrayer of his sister. They struggle, and Gerard is victorious. Gerard denies the charge, but Tom demands that he face Mary and the baby and himself. Gerard faces Mary the next day and she tells her brother of the mistake. Gerard, overcome at his father's dereliction, gives Mary a check for fifty thousand dollars. As Mary and Tom leave, the detectives seize and examine them. Mary has with her a bundle of letters from the elder Hale.

Mrs. Hale and Marion stopped in at the office when Mary and Tom are brought in to be identified. Mary insists Gerard can vouch for her. Gerard is forced to say the letters and check are his. It is the only way to save his mother from the shock of learning the truth. Marion leaves, but Mrs. Hale insists upon taking her and the baby home. Mrs. Hale leaves with Mary. Snaith receives two of the Hale letters from the detectives, and learns it is the elder Hale who is the delinquent.

Mrs. Hale is upset over the affair and confined to her bed. Snaith calls to show Gerard the letters and says unless the latter refuses the position of Senator he will deliver the letters to Mrs. Hale. Gerard orders him out and Snaith draws a gun. The two men struggle and the gun is discharged. The noise arouses Mrs. Hale. She reaches the library and falls in a faint. Mary and the butler carry her back to her room.

Mrs. Hale feels her end approaching and asks Gerard to do his duty and marry Mary. He agrees. Mary insists she will tell Mrs. Hale, but Gerard refuses, because it would be fatal to his mother. The minister comes. In the meantime Mary telephones for Marion and tells her the truth. While Mary is proceeding to Mrs. Hale's bedroom, Gerard tells her that it is too late, as his mother is dead. So Gerard is not forced to make the supreme sacrifice.

Stronger Light
The light from an Alternating Current arc comes alternating from both carbons, while from a Direct Current arc it always comes from the same carbon. The Direct Current arc can therefore be arranged so that the maximum amount of its light always passes through the lens, while it is impossible to do this with an Alternating Current arc. A Direct Current arc also gives off more light for the same current than an Alternating Current.
If your electric service is only Alternating Current, a

GAUMONT.

TOURS AROUND THE WORLD, NO. 31—(June 5).—In its June 5 release of "Tours Around the World," the Gaumont Company offers one of the most attractive contributions in the entire series of travel pictures. Three continents have been called upon to supply material. From Africa come pictures of Tangier, a seaport of Morocco. One sees the arrival at the port, where are being loaded cattle, wool and dates. After viewing the small harbor there is a ramble through the streets with their white limestone houses which are dazzling in the bright sunlight. Pictures of the natives give no small part of the amusement derived from this section of the reel.

The country in Europe contiguous to Morocco is Spain, and here the spectator views the Monastery of Piedra and the famous cascades near Saragossa. The monastery was built in 1194, and through its grounds run the picturesque cascades, the most beautiful in Spain. The various falls are seen from the best locations.

Europe also contributes another section of this reel in "Winter in Galicia." The pictures show the sports which were favorite winter pastimes on the eastern slope of the Carpathian Mountains. After viewing the scenes one is able to appreciate the barrier which protects Hungary from Russia on this front.

St. Kitts, an island of the British West Indies, was discovered by Columbus in 1493 and by a Gaumont cameraman in 1917. Basseterre, the capital, has a population of 10,000, the island itself having 30,000 inhabitants. As these are mostly negroes, the pictures have a great deal of local color in them. There are views of the mountains and fields, in addition to the scenes of town life.

REEL LIFE NO. 58 (June 7).—Everything from making a shoe by machinery to making plants grow by electricity seems to have been included in Gaumont's entertaining "Reel Life" No. 58. "Modern Footwear" takes one through a big shoe manufacturing establishment, showing how everything is systematized to permit the making of 40,000 pairs of shoes a day.

"Bass Fishing in Florida" will delight the followers of Izaak Walton and amaze all others who are not acquainted with the size and gameness of this fish. A typical fishing camp is pictured on Lake Ponsette, Rockledge, Fla.

Ever since the "Titanic" went down there has been attempt after attempt made to perfect the launching device devised to get lifeboats quickly into the water. "Launching a Lifeboat" shows an improved method whereby three men can get a boat over the side of a ship in 10 seconds. The old method required seven men and took four times as long.

"Electrical Gardening" shows how the wizards of science coax plants with electricity. So stimulated, they grow with amazing rapidity. The pictures illustrate how a charged wire is passed close to the tops of the plants to induce growth. The picture is remarkable in that it shows the actual discharge of the current.

The reel is completed with pictures of "Physical Education" as practiced by French athletic clubs. After pictures of rhythmic exercises by the Dalcroze method there are other exercises by the Demeny method. These are especially adapted for children.

Modern Egypt—Major-General Sir Hector Leslie (Warren Cook); Colonel Harvey (Charles W. Martin); Mrs. Harvey (Violet Reed); Captain Harry Paget (Mehlon Hamilton); Grace Leslie (Madame Petrova). Story by Emma Bell.

Ancient Egypt—The beautiful daughter of Pharaoh is loved by a shepherd, but her father refuses to permit her to marry beneath her rank and sentences the shepherd to death. Before he is executed he breaks a double scarab, giving one portion to the princess, requesting that the other be buried with him, according to the superstition that their souls will thus be reunited in a later incarnation.

Modern Egypt—Grace Leslie, daughter of an English officer, has come with him to inspect the garrison at Soudan. A polo match takes place and Grace has occasion to hand the ball to Captain Paget. As she does this she has the sensation of having performed the same action at some other time.

Other incidents occur which give her the same feeling, until the culmination is reached when a fortune-teller gives her a half scarab, telling her not until she shall have found the other half will her happiness be complete. Grace is inclined to laugh at her own foolish thoughts on the subject until she sees Captain Paget, whom she knows to have been on duty, riding off towards the desert.

Learning from her father that he is going to order a "surprise drill," and realizing if Paget were found missing it would mean court-martial and disgrace, she starts to find him.

She comes upon him talking to one of the women of the garrison, who had lured him to an appointment there. Misunderstanding, Grace goes back to her father, while Paget, unable to explain his absence, prepares to accept a dangerous post in a remote part of the desert.

As he is packing he comes upon a scarab which he kept as souvenir and, wanting only to forget, tosses it out of the window, where it falls at the feet of Grace who, having learned the truth about the interview, is coming to atone for her misjudgment.

Wonderingly they piece together the two halves, which exactly fit and realize the old superstition has at last brought them together for the fulfillment of their destiny of centuries ago.

SUSIE OF THE FOLLIES (Black Diamond—May 28).—The cast: Susie (Beatrice Joy); Mr. Lamb (Billie Quirk); his wife (Ruth Elder); father (Julian Reed); mother (Betty Shales).

Lamb's wife is visiting her parents and he decides to renew his acquaintance with Susie of the Follies. He writes two letters. One to his wife and one making an appointment with Susie. Upon meeting Susie he discovers he has mixed the envelopes and realizes his wife will get the letter intended for Susie. He telegraphs her he is dead and for her to return home. He rushes to the parents' home hoping to intercept the letter—only to find that it has been forwarded home.

The wife, accompanied by her father and mother, return and are unable to locate Lamb's body. Father, who is somewhat of a sport does not seem to worry much. In the meantime Susie calls at Lamb's house. She proceeds to have a merry time with father, much to the old man's consternation.

Lamb comes on the scene and feigns death when wife and mother appear. Father in desperation hides Susie, and the letter is delivered to the wife. Lamb in order to prevent her reading it comes to life, accuses father of harboring a woman and drags Susie from her hiding place. Father is getting his when Susie gives a plausible explanation of her presence and exchanges the troublesome letter, and everybody is satisfied.

IN COLORFUL CEYLON (Burton Holmes Travelogue—May 7).—It is not often that your patrons will get a chance to take a trip through a veritable Garden of Eden. On his trip Burton Holmes will show them many strange and unusual sights of the Far East that they never before have witnessed, such as A Buddhist funeral procession of a much beloved saint. Don't run away with the idea that this is going to be sad—far from it. It will appeal to them the more like a joyous Carnival when they see it, the beautiful water falls of St. Clair, the tea fields and hosts of other sights equally interesting, finally the journey ends up with a water scene, showing the Cingalese people taking on the best sport in the land—bathing.

THE WORLD APART (Morosco—Five Parts—June 4).—The cast: Bob Fulton (Wallace Reid); Beth Hoover (Myrtle Stedman); Roland Holt (John Burton); Clyde Holt Eugene Pallette); Rose de Braisy (Florence Carpenter); Jack King (Henry A. Barrows). Story by George Middleton.

Bob Fulton is a mining superintendent in a small town in the west. He saves Rose de Braisy, a dance hall girl, from the attentions of Jack King, the dance hall owner, and she falls in love with him, but the affection is not returned.

In the East, Clyde Holt, whose father owns the mine, is caught trying to rob his father's bank and sent West with a letter to Bob to give him work. He induces Beth Hoover to secretly marry him and Beth gives him her ring. Clyde goes West, refuses to take interest in his work and falls in with King. Having been caught cheating, he and King plan to rob the safe of the mining company and are caught by Bob. A fight ensues and Bob is shot. Clyde escapes. Beth comes West, arriving the day after the robbery. Bob is nursed by Rose. Beth is told Clyde has gone away and sees his ring on Bob's finger. Bob, thinking he has killed Clyde, tells Beth so.

Bob recovers, falls in love with Beth, asks her to marry him and she confesses she is Clyde's wife, just as Clyde returns. The sheriff searches Bob's cabin and Clyde and Beth hide. When the sheriff demands to search the other room, Beth appears and says that she is the only one in there. Clyde climbs out of a window just as the sheriff is leaving and is shot. Beth, realizing she is free, looks toward Bob with a great understanding.

BUNGALOWING (Klever Komedy—June 4).—Vic has bought a bungalow and his family and his furniture, after many mishaps, arrive. Vic and his wife manage to get the place straightened out. During the night, however, they were nearly eaten alive by mosquitoes.

Vic gets up at dawn but is unable to do much planting on account of the mosquitoes. He fools them by making a gas mask out of a sheet, and then proceeds with his planting. In the meantime the boy awakes, thinks Vic is a ghost and wakes his mother, who screams loudly. Vic establishes quiet. He then goes fishing, but when he reaches the water that the agent said was a lake, he is disgusted, for it is a swamp. He gives each of the children a line. In a short while the little boy falls in the water and Vic saves him. All the lines and the children get tangled up. A storm comes up and Vic hustles things together to get home. The wind blows like a cyclone, and with difficulty they manage to reach home, when the bungalow goes like a merry-go-round and Vic starts chasing it to get in. He does not succeed. The wind stops and the bungalow stops and Vic is all in. He realizes what the agent meant when he said: "Swept by the Ocean Breezes." As Vic climbs on the porch the little boy says: "Daddy, make it go 'round some more." Vic passes away.

AN AMATEUR ORPHAN (Thanhouser—Five parts—June 3).—The cast: Marcia Schuyler (Gladys Leslie); "Quincy" (Isabel Vernon); Marcia's Father (Thos. A. Curran); Marcia's Mother (Jean Armour); Dick (Chester Morris); David Benton (Ray Hallor); Dave's Father (Justus Barnes).

Marcia's father hit upon a plan to get rid of Quincy, a straight-laced scientific governess, by sending Marcia to boarding school, while he and his wife would take a trip to Japan. Marcia was delighted with the plan until she learned that the school was conducted on a scientific basis. Catching Quincy at the right moment, when the infuriated woman had just been discharged, Marcia makes her consent to a wild scheme. Quincy has a little niece, who was to go to the orphanage, so Marcia implores her to let them change places. Quincy agrees, so Marcia goes to the orphanage under the name of Jane Perkins.

Marcia for the first time plays and lives as a child should. Climbing up a high spiked fence, Marcia slipped and fell. Dick Walton, a young college boy, riding by on a horse, saw Marcia and came to her assistance. Believing her to be an orphan, he determines to have his mother adopt her, but to his astonishment, Marcia refuses.

WHAT WAS THE 13TH LABOR OF HERCULES

Farmer Benton adopts Marcia. There she meets Dave, the black sheep of the family, and in her he finds a long needed friend. Dave won Marcia's confidence when he saves her from a whipping at the hands of his father. Dick, on a vacation, pays a visit to Marcia, and Dave experiences the first pangs of jealousy.

Through the newspapers, Marcia learns that her parents have returned and are searching for her. She schemes so that Dave shall receive the reward for her return. Later Dave and Dick find positions in the same office and soon both are in line for a higher position providing they appear at a directors' meeting at eight o'clock. Marcia calls up Dave to come and see her before going. Arriving at her home, Dave is detained until the last moment.

THE NEGLECTED WIFE (Episode No. 4, "Beyond Recall"—Two parts—June 3).—The cast: Margaret Warner (Ruth Roland); Horace Kennedy (Roland Bottomley); Mary Kennedy (Corene Grant); Edgar Doyle (Neil Hardin); Frank Norwood (Philo McCullough).

Margaret telephones Kennedy: "I am not hurt, but terribly discouraged, and I have no one to turn to but you."

Rushing to her assistance, he determines to take her with him, assuring her that he will find something for her to do. Margaret's story of privation is too much for her overwrought nerves, and she collapses.

Kennedy rushes to his residence. Regaining her senses, Margaret remonstrates with Kennedy, saying "You brought me to your home—your wife?" When he assures her only the butler is in the house, Margaret feels more at ease. Kennedy informs Margaret that he has rented an apartment, and that he is going to take her there.

Frank Norwood, a magazine editor, has a clash with Doyle, when the latter tries to bribe him stating that if he will drop a certain story from his magazine, he will give him a big advertising contract. Norwood orders Doyle out of his office. Mary decides to come home for the night. Finding her husband away, she waits up for him. She finds a comb. Whose can it be? Mary receives a note. "Better watch your husband," it says. Mary, agitated, desperate, realizes her husband is untrue.

MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS (Episode No. 12, "The Riddle of the Cross"—Two parts—June 10.)—The cast: Philippa Brewster (Molly King); Peter Hale (Leon Bary); Bridgey Bentley (Ralph Stuart; Dick Annesley (Gladden James); the Masked Stranger (? ? ?).

After an exciting automobile chase, Peter and Dick overhaul a taxi-cab containing a veiled woman Peter believes to be Philippa.

"You will fool me no longer," he says, as he tears the shoulder straps of her gown, baring her right arm. There was the mark of the Double Cross. But his triumph was short-lived. The woman, lifting her veil, was a stranger who had tricked him by painting the mark of the Double Cross on her arm. Annesley laughs at his discomfiture.

The action centers about the attempt of Bridgey to force Philippa to marry him. Bentley has discovered the details of a secret stock transaction contemplated by Philippa's father. He knows that if this information is made public, the Brewster family will be ruined and the fortunes of Brewster's friends swept away. Philippa, determined to save her father, agrees to marry the man she fears and hates. Her father learns of her contemplated sacrifice and forbids the marriage. With a gun in the hands of Bentley pointed at his head, he gives orders to his brokers which will wipe out his fortune. Dick, however, discovers the plot and saves the day.

MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS, No. 13, "The Face of the Stranger" (Two parts—Week June 10).—The cast: Philippa Brewster (Molly King); Peter Hale (Leon Bary); Bridgey Bentley (Ralph Stuart); Dick Annesley (Gladden James); the Masked Stranger (? ? ?).

Bridgey Bentley resorts to desperate measures to remove his rival. He called Daddy Heinz, an ex-convict. Daddy's son, disguised as the Stranger, delivered a note to Peter asking him to go to Ratoor's Alley that evening. Philippa, suspecting treachery, warns Peter. He laughs and tells her he will go unless she marries him immediately. She refuses. Peter keeps the appointment. He is followed by the girl he loves. Despite her pleas, Peter starts to follow the Masked Stranger, and it is only by promising to marry him that she holds him back. The two slip into a nearby doorway, and as the Stranger rushes back, Peter captures the Stranger.

In a lodging house Bentley and the gang are gathered. Daddy, in the doorway, is waiting, shotgun in hand. As Peter, Philippa and the Stranger approach, the man dressed in Peter's clothes breaks free and starts down the street. Daddy empties both barrels and the fugitive drops dead. But it is Daddy's own son who was forced by Peter and the Stranger to change clothes with him.

That night, Peter goes to the Brewster home to marry Philippa. To his astonishment he finds her in the arms of Dick. Annesley confesses that Philippa has just consented to be his wife. Philippa denies having promised Peter to marry him.

BRINGING HOME FATHER (Five parts—June 4).—The cast: Peter Drake (Franklyn Farnum); Jackie Swazey ("Brownie" Vernon); Eliza Tilly Swazey (Florence Mayon); "Pa" Swazey (Arthur Hoyt); Mike Clancy (Richard Le Reno). Scenario written by Bess Meredyth. Directed by William Worthington.

Mrs. Eliza Tilly Swazey is the "man" of the Swazey family—consisting of her daughter, Jackie, and "Pa," who is as putty in the hands of his wife. Mrs. Swazey decides she will run for alderman on the Prohibition ticket. "Pa" is helpless. Jackie "sat up and took notice" when a handsome man flirted with her from a house across the way where a sensational entertainment was in progress. "Pepful" Peter Drake decides to desert the "bunch" and go to the Swazey home and interview Jackie. Mrs. Swazey comes out, bound for the party across the way to demand that peace in the neighborhood shall be restored.

When she sees Peter he declares that he is a member of the Anti-Vice Committee sent to keep watch of the hilarious outfit. Through this explanation Peter wins favor with Mrs. Swazey, who enlists him in her campaign and makes him promise to march at the head of her political parade. Peter is game.

After the parade "Pa" and Peter meet at the club and imbibe until navigation, especially for "Pa" becomes a scientific operation. Peter carries "Pa" home. He drops him at the foot of the stairs and awakens everybody. "Pa" says he has been assaulted by a burglar. "Ma" summons the police and Peter is apprehended and rushed to jail.

When the Swazeys go to Police Court things look bad for Peter until he enlists "Pa" through threatening to expose him. "Pa" goes to Clancy, candidate for Alderman in opposition to Mrs. Swazey, and Clancy gets Peter out after his promising to compel Mrs. Swazey to withdraw from the contest by midnight or back to jail he must go. Mrs. Swazey holds a reception, promising to serve her "Bone Dry Punch." After she has made a speech the punch is passed and everybody takes to it. Peter and "Pa" doctored the punch and the party breaks up in a mild riot. The prohibitionists declare Mrs. Swazey's name shall be erased from the ticket. Jackie and Peter hurry to the marriage bureau while "Ma" is sleeping away the effects of her "Bone Dry Punch" and "Pa" is rejoicing in the dawn of personal liberty.

THE LIVING BOOK OF NATURE. By Raymond L. Ditmars. Odd Hoofed Animals.—An aggregation of striking forms and several of a great rarity. Here is shown the only specimen of musk ox that is living in captivity in the world. It was captured north of the Arctic Circle and was filmed during the midwinter to show the excessive coat of hair that protects it from the frightful cold of the winds that sweep the arctic Barren Grounds. The curious horns set upon the head like a crown.

The scenes shift to animals from tropical zones, but living at great altitudes—in the Andes of South America. These are the vicunas, llamas and alpacas. Their grotesque forms cause them to look more like animated caricatures than wild animals. With jumps to remote parts of the map the portrayal shows the yak, of Thibet. Thence follows an entertaining scenic tale of the American buffalo and an animated map telling the tragic story of the close to utter extinction of America's most noble wild animal.

THE LIVING BOOK OF NATURE (Surgery at the Zoo).—The eccentric and varied care of a great collection of wild animals is little realized. Requirements are many and the ingenuity of those in charge is taxed to the extreme. A surprising story is told in the scenes that show how a squad of husky keepers carry a twenty-foot python to the zoo hospital to treat the creature's sore mouth and assist it to shed its skin. The monkey with an injured arm has this member covered with a plaster jacket. When he shows a desire to remove the bandages, he is provided with a stiff collar of such breadth and design that he appears to be donned in court dress of Elizabethan times. The toenails of the big tortoise are filed, the claws of the woodchuck must be trimmed to proper length, and medicines for small mammals with sluggish appetites are administered from a bottle prepared to tempt the patient to swallow the solution. Quarantine regulations for newcomers are shown and explained.

ROYAL ROMANCE (Five Parts).—The cast: Princess Sylvia (Virginia Pearson); Emperor Maximilian (Irving Cummings); Gerald (Boyce Coombe); Miss Mcpherson (Nort Cecil); Duchess Marcia (Grace Henderson); Baroness Maxine (Nellie Slattery); Prime Minister (Alex. K. Shannon); Luis Romero (Emil de Varny); Lord Fitzroy (Charles Craig). Directed by James Vincent.

Princess Sylvia refuses to wed the Emperor Maximilian of Rhaetia because his ministers and not his heart suggested the match. On a hunting trip she meets the Emperor travelling incog. He falls in love with her at once, despite the fact that she is posing as an English girl. When he is called to his capital Sylvia and her mother follow. There she saves him from an assassin.

After introducing his saviour to the court, Maximilian asks her to become his morganatic wife. She refuses and then he determines to make her his empress.

The ministers are stirred at this. The Premier determines to block the match and asks Gerald, Sylvia's brother, to compromise the English girl by taking her to an inn. Gerald agrees.

That evening Maximilian and his minister surprise Sylvia and Gerald at supper in a private room. The Emperor turns to leave the place in anger, when Gerald introduces her as the Princess Sylvia, his sister. Then all misunderstandings are cleared up and Maximilian asks Sylvia to become his empress. She accepts.

THE SLAVE (Five Parts—June 3).—Caroline is the forelady of a Fifth avenue fashion shop. She spurns the tempting life of luxury led by the models of the place. "Old Moneybags," a frequent visitor at the shop, proposes to her. He is twice Caroline's age, and the girl hesitates about accepting him. Her mother, also a victim of the unending struggle to live, tells her that all marriage is honorable.

Caroline's brain is in a whirl that night. As she crawls into bed, she takes up "The King's Favorite," a "best seller," which she has read and re-read. As she reads, the characters in the book appear before her in the form of those of her daily life. She falls asleep.

Then follows a dream portraying her life as an old man's darling and a slave of luxury. She sees herself setting forth on a continual round of pleasure, with a great warning climax.

Caroline wakes, trembling. She gazes out upon the row of tenements. As she eats her breakfast, Moneybags comes for his answer. Caroline disregards the dream and says "Yes." She knew the past, and she dreaded a future like it. What the new future may bring she will chance.

DO CHILDREN COUNT? (First episode, "The Guiding Hand"—Two Parts—June 6).—The cast: "Billy" Bell (Mary McAllister); Stella Apperson (Mabel Bardine); Peter Apperson (John Cossar); Bernard Bell (Grant Foreman).

"Billy" Bell, orphaned by a sea disaster, lives with her rich grandfather and has won a warm place in the old man's heart. The Appersons, avaricious relatives, have their eyes on his wealth, and fearful lest "Billy" get the most of it, seek a means to oust the little girl. But Grandfather Bell suspects the plot, and gets his family doctor to announce that he is dying. Immediately the Appersons throw "Billy" from the home and usurp everything for themselves. At this moment Bell appears. Driving the designing Appersons from his home, he recovers "Billy" and proclaims her his "guiding hand."

THE MYSTERY OF NO. 47 (Five Parts—Selig—June 4).—The cast: Irwin Molyneux (Ralph Herz); Harriet (Nellie Hartley); Eva Wilson, "a lady's housemaid" (Louizetta Valentine); Lord Francis Phillamore, in love with Eva (Edgar Murray, Jr.); Bishop of Bedford, a troublemaker (James Fulton); Inspector Bray, of Scotland Yard (Fred Eckhart); Buffington, of the Tribune (Casson Ferguson); Aunt Margaret (Mrs. Wiggin); Fitzroy Jones (Lloyd Sedgwick); Cadbury (Tom West); Jane (May White). Scenario written by J. Storer Clouston. Directed by Otis B. Thayer.

Irwin Molyneux, a collector of china, is regarded by his friends as a model citizen until the cook resigned and his wife elected to do the cooking herself to entertain the Bishop of Bedford, then he became a much sought supposed assassin, wanted for killing his wife, and suspected of butchering the maid.

This took place at No. 47 Hyacinth road, London. Scotland Yard sought Molyneux; London's newspapers exerted their resources in the same direction, even the nobility joined in the search.

Had Mrs. Molyneux scorned conventionality and admitted that she was "substituting" for her cook, and was not visiting at an adjoining villa as her husband told the Bishop, all this confusion would have been avoided. The plot becomes so involved that Molyneux is hired by a London paper under an assumed name to find himself.

When the threads are straightened Molyneux is cleared, his wife is alive and happy, and his cook turns out to be the sweetheart of Lord Francis Phillamore.

FILLING HIS OWN SHOES (Five Parts—Essanay—June 11).—The cast: William Ruggles (Bryant Washburn); Ruth Downing (Hazel Daly); Dick Downing (Roderick LaRock); Dorothea Westbrooke (Lyda Dalzell); Roxana (Virginia Valli); Rosa (Helen Ferguson); Bulbul (Louise Long). Directed by Harry Beaumont. Story by H. C. Rowland.

William Ruggles, an American shoe clerk, joins the Turkish forces in the Balkan war. He rescues a wounded Turk. The latter dies, but in gratitude bequeathes to Ruggles $1,500,000.

The will stipulates, however, that Ruggles must accept the guardianship of the Turk's wards—Roxana, Rosa and Bulbul. Ruggles moves the three maidens to Paris. Here he renews his acquaintance with Ruth Downing, the daughter of his former employer. The two fall in love, whereat Roxana is driven to a jealous fury.

She attacks Ruth, attempting to hurl vitriol into her eyes, but Ruggles intercepts her. Roxana escapes, later marrying a Parisian. Believing Ruggles had been involved in some intrigue with Roxana, Ruth renounces her love.

But Ruggles experience comes to his aid. Using the same persuasive powers gained in selling shoes, he convinces Ruth of his innocence, and she marries him.

A BRASS MONKEY (Selig—Two parts—June 11).—The cast: Jonah Mudd (James Harris); Genevieve, his daughter (Amy Dennis); Dodge Work (William Fables); Birdie (Helga Sandberg); Big Bill (James Fulton). Written by Charles Hoyt. Directed by J. A. Richmond.

Jonah Mudd, a victim of circumstances, and I. Dodge Work, meet to hear the will of Patch Work read. I. Dodge Work, the nephew, is vindictive when Uncle leaves him a brass monkey, his most cherished treasure. Jonah is unable to pay alimony to Birdie, his divorced wife, and she urges her "little" brother onto him.

Before Birdie's brother appears, Jonah falls down a stairway, is hit by a telephone pole and has a series of exciting episodes with Genevieve, his daughter. Birdie's brother, Big Bill, proceeds to attend to Jonah Mudd, but encounters a fierce canine. Finally at an auction sale, I. Dodge Work garbs himself in the skin of a gigantic bear. Jonah believes the bear a live one. With a revolver, he gives chase and a sensational pursuit results. The end comes when Jonah and the bear are lifted through roofs by the force of an explosion.

THE MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER (Third Series. No. 9, "Musty B. Young"—Essanay—May 27).—Musty applies for a job as office boy, but is turned down because he is too old. He visits a doctor to get some elixir of youth, but drinks too much and is reduced to a sprightly two-year-old. Musty's infantile pranks result in wrecking the palatial mansion of the kind-hearted young lady who adopts him, and peace is restored only when the butler gently but firmly deposits him in the ash can.

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

WITHIN THE LAW (May).—The cast: Mary Turner (Alice Joyce); Joe Garson (Harry Morey); Aggie Lynch (Adele De Garde); Mr. Gilder (Anders Randolf); Dick Gilder (Walter McGrail); Inspector Burke (Eugene O'Rourke); Dist. Atty. Demerest (Robert Gaillard); Helen Morris (Billie Billings); Sarah (Grace Bunce); Detective Cassidy (Joe Donohue); English Eddie (Bernard Randall); Ted Decey (Bernard Seigel). Directed by William P. E. Earle.

Mary Turner is accused of the theft of another department store employe. Notwithstanding her protestations she is convicted and sent to prison for three years. But before starting her trip to Sing Sing she is granted an interview with Gilder, the proprietor of the department store, her accuser. She first begs for mercy which is refused, and then she gives him the solution of stopping the store thefts.

"Pay your girls more than six dollars a week," she tells her former employer, "that will stop the thefts, and save the girls." He sneers at the advice.

While studying law in prison Mary realizes that there are many ways of breaking the law and yet remaining "Within the Law." This discovery is made use of by Mary upon her release from prison. Without funds, she is thrown on the bounty of members of the underworld, forgers, burglars and a woman parasite. She is their adviser. They break the law continually but still remain "Within the Law."

Aggie Lynch, the parasite, enslaves a man of wealth. She suggests blackmail by selling back to him the love notes he has written to her. Mary shows that the legal blackmail is a breach of promise. The result is the same but the consequences differ. Aggie gets her $10,000 by settlement of the breach of promise case. She remains out of prison to where she would have gone had she attempted to sell her letters directly to her admirer.

Mary, herself, obtains $30,000 from two real estate swindlers who first attempted to swindle her. She keeps the $30,000, laughs at the swindlers and remains "Within the Law."

Joe Garson, noted as a forger and the lover of Aggie, falls in love with Mary. He watches over her, protects her in every way.

As a direct contradiction of this is "English Eddie," another underworld character who becomes a spy for the police, leads his companions into a burglary prearranged for the benefit of the police, which causes his murder by Joe Garson, but ends in the arrest of the entire outfit.

Mary later captivates Dick Gilder, the son of the department store proprietor who caused her arrest. She ensnares him and marries him. Then she informs her antagonistic father-in-law, "You gave me a prison number and I have changed it for your name."

Eventually the Gilder shop girl who stole from her employer and secreted the stolen merchandise in Mary's locker, confesses and the play is brought to a conclusion with the most dramatic scene of the entire play, when Joe confesses to the murder of English Eddie and in the presence of her husband takes leave of Mary preparatory to his trip to the electric chair.

THE SOUL MASTER (Five Parts—May 28).—The cast: Robert Travers (Earle Williams); Arline (Billie Billings); Ruth (Katherine Lewis); Laura Wilson (Julia Swayne Gordon); Forest Crampton (Albert Howson); Mrs. Brundy (Annie Brody); Her Child (Mildred May); Peter Grant (Donald Cameron); Monty Fitzburgh (Denton Vane). Written by James Oliver Curwood. Directed by Marguerite Bertsch.

At the age of six, Bobby is disillusioned as to women through the eloping of his mother with an old time lover. The father, when the boy is 17, dies, broken in spirit. At twenty-five, Bobby confides in Dr. Brandt why he has no thought of marrying. Dr. Brandt tells of the splendid women he meets in the slums, doing charity work. He induces Travers to accompany him. He meets one of the ladies, Arline. Belief in this woman's goodness grows into an affection which terminates in his marrying her. He does not realize her charitable work is not prompted by her heart, but by the desire to keep up with the fashions in her set.

Two years later, when their marriage has been blessed with a little girl, Ruth, Arline falls under the influence of Crampton, whom she gave up because she felt that he would never make good. He returns wealthy, and the glamor of his success makes her forget her duty. Travers finds her in his arms. He is about to kill him when Arline stuns her husband with a blow. Frightened, they leave the unconscious man, taking the child with them.

Fifteen years later, Travers is owner of a chain of department stores. He is known as "a man without a soul." Learning of a threatened strike, he goes over the building and sees behind a ribbon counter, Ruth, who is just receiving a note with a carnation from Peter, the clerk in the receiving department, who is engaged to marry Ruth as soon as he saved up $200. Her lightness of heart attracts him, and he tempts her with the thought of the things she should have. In the meantime he sends his ultimatum that the employees must return to work or quit. The girl looks at him sadly, saying: "You thought that because I was poor it would make a difference." She does not blame him; she feels he must be unhappy. This is the beginning of an attraction which he cannot understand, which grows more and more pure. Little by little his gay friends pall on him. One of their number falls in love with Ruth, after she has become clerk in Travers' office. Travers protects the girl from this man, who is unworthy of her.

Meanwhile Laura Wilson, who loves Robert Travers, grows jealous. Travers, finding he cares too much for Ruth, sends her back to the ribbon counter. It is here that Laura Wilson influences the girl to take the position as a companion. The girl leaves Travers with a note of thanks for what he has done for her, but no mention of where she is going. Travers has his suspicions and follows her to Laura Wilson's in time to save her from the advances of the "Pierrot" character who loves her. He discovers through a picture on her dresser that she is his daughter. Dazed, he goes in fancy among the people in his employment, promising to make restitution. He comes out of the vision to realize that Ruth and Peter are just back of him. As he looks at Ruth she runs into her father's arms. He is willing to give her to Peter, whose worthiness he has tested. But he makes Peter realize he cannot give her up so soon, and, after all, she belongs to him.

WORLD FILM. CORP.

THE CRIMSON DOVE (Peerless—Five Parts—June 4).—The cast: Brand Cameron (Carlyle Blackwell); Adrienne Durant (June Elvidge); Faro Kate (Marie LaVarre); Jim Carewe (Henry West); Jonathan Gregg (Edward N. Hoyt); Joseph Burbank (Louis R. Grisel); Philip Burbank (Dion Titheradge); Minnie Zugg (Maxim Hicks). Directed by Romaine Fielding.

Cameron is minister of a fashionable church. Philip Burbank, son of one of his parishioners, is infatuated with Adrienne Durant, a comedy star, whose love affairs have made her notorious. Phil steals his mother's jewels for Adrienne. She is loath to take them, and when his father calls, she returns them, saying she never wants to see Phil again. Phil confesses to Cameron, who tries to effect a reconciliation between father and son; but Phil commits suicide when denied admission to Adrienne's apartment.

Cameron contracts diphtheria, and when convalescent, goes to the country for a rest. To escape the condemnation of the public Adrienne flees to her father's country home. There she resumes her own name, Mary Darwin. She meets Cameron and they fall in love. Dr. Stewart, one of Cameron's parishioners, visits him and recognizes Mary as Adrienne. She reveals her past to Cameron, and believing that he never could be contented with her, she leaves for New York. Cameron follows and traces her to a cafe, where she is giving a drunken party to drown her sorrow. Enraged, he drags her home, and, pitying her, forgives her.

Cameron's parishioners denounce him and he is forced to resign. He goes to Summit Camp, a timberland town owned by Gregg. The lumbermen are drunkards, gunmen and ex-convicts. There are but few women, one the widowed mother of a half-witted boy; another, Faro Kate, an outcast, in love with Carewe, the saloonkeeper.

On Sunday, the men surge toward the church. They mock Cameron and some even throw stones. Carewe demands to know why Cameron has come, and he replies: "To take some of the hell out of this camp, and I am going to stick until I have made men of you." When they attempt to enter the church in this boisterous spirit, Cameron reminds them that he will deal with them as men first. A fight ensues and Carewe is led off, defeated and bleeding. Cameron finishes the next man, and the lumbermen decide he is game and they will give him a chance.

Adrienne accepts charge of a school for poor children, one of Gregg's philanthropies. She wins their hearts, but one girl refuses to behave. When Adrienne dismisses her, the child's mother comes and recognizes her. She calls a meeting and demands that Adrienne be removed. A new teacher is appointed in her place, but the children are so unhappy that she is reinstated.

Carewe leaves Summit Camp with Nevada, a half-breed girl, and when Kate tries to stop him, he beats her. She is about to throw herself over a cliff when Cameron restrains her, and pleads with her. Carewe soon tires of the half-breed girl, and kills her, and a posse tracks him. He hides in the church, and Cameron does not shield him when the sheriff arrives.

Kate denounces Cameron, saying he is a stool pigeon, and has been making love to her, and that he is the father of her child. The men set fire to the church in an attempt to burn Cameron. Inside are Kate's baby and the half-witted boy. Cameron rushes up and, recognizing what is happening, rescues the boy and the baby. Kate confesses she lied about him.

Adrienne reaches Summit Camp and nurses Cameron back to health; a new church is erected on the site of the old one, dedicated to "Brand Cameron, God's servant and Man's friend." Cameron and Adrienne are married in the new church.

METRO PICTURES.

LADY BARNACLE (Rolfe—Five Parts—June 4).—The cast: Lakshima (Viola Dana); George Morling (Robert Walker); Maharajah Bhartari-Hari Pal Singh (Augustus Phillips); Krishna Dhwaj (William B. Davidson); John Morling, George's father (Henry Hallam); Mary Fanning, George's fiancee (Marie Adell); Asoka-Kuhan-Roy, prime minister (Fred Jones); Nizam of Bandorporia (Henry Leone); Anne Marble, Morling's stenographer (Ricca Allen); Rev. Enoch T. Fanning (Harry Linson); Capt. O'Malley (Gerald Griffin); Lakshima's maid (Nellie Grant). Directed by J. H. Collins.

Krishna Dhwaj, son of the Maharajah of Rhamput, is in love with Lakshima, the daughter of the Maharajah Bhartari, but the two rulers have other plans. Krishna is sent to America. Lakshima, ordered to marry an old man, decides to end it all, and jumps into a lake. She is rescued by George Morling. Lakshima tells George since he saved her life, she is his slave. When she hears he comes from "Boston, America," she refuses to leave him. He protests, but Lakshima says she is going with him to America. He tries to elude her, but dressed in boy's clothes she smuggles herself on board ship.

Morling always prided himself on his reputation. Moreover he is engaged to a conservative girl, Mary Fanning, daughter of the Rev. Enoch T. Fanning. As they near shore, he puts Lakshima into a trunk and leaves her while he breaks the news to his father. His stenographer overhears the conversation, releases her and takes her home. The two Morlings are horrified to find the trunk empty.

Lakshima insists on being dressed in the American fashion. She pawns a ruby and soon appears in high-heeled shoes and a decollette gown. Mary and her father dine at the Morling residence. The clergyman has expressed the hope that George has not succumbed to the temptations of heathen nations, when Lakshima rushes in and kneels at George's feet. "Sahib, I come," she exclaims. "You not lose me yet!"

The announcement causes consternation. Mary returns her engagement ring. However, she is determined to do her duty, and takes Lakshima home with her.

The Maharajah and his prime minister come in search of Lakshima, believing George Morling has abducted her. They demand that he release her instantly. He takes them to the Fanning residence, but Lakshima has vanished. The Rajah gives George just thirty-six hours in which to produce the girl. The hours pass, and George and his father are bound and gagged by two Hindoo servants, who stand ready to strike at a signal from the Rajah.

Lakshima suddenly appears, bringing her beloved Krishna. She has found her way to Harvard and has married her Hindoo sweetheart. To Mary she says, "I marry man of my choice. Now you marry man of yours. And stick to him just like I did—like barnacle!"

The Morlings are released, and there is a second wedding in "Boston, America."

THE HAUNTED PAJAMAS Yorke Film Corp.—Five parts—June 11).—The cast: Richard Hudson (Harold Lockwood); Frances Kirkland (Carmel Myers); Jack Billings, Hudson's chum (Ed. Sedgwick); Judge Billings, Jack's father (Lester Cuneo); Francis Billings, Jack's younger brother (Paul Willis); Jenkins, Hudson's servant (Harry de Roy); Elizabeth Billings, Jack's sister (Helen Ware); Colonel Kirkland (William DeVaull); Chinaman, Hudson's mysterious visitor (Goro Kino). From story by F. P. Elliott. Directed by F. J. Balshofer.

Richard Hudson, a clubman, by mistake sends a friend in China cheap cigars, intending to send good ones. In revenge, the friend sends him silk pajamas. Hudson is unconscious of the fact that the pajamas are bewitched—that the silk was the property of an Empress, and anyone wearing them becomes transformed into someone else. The pajamas fit all wearers, and as soon as the top button is fastened, the color changes to black.

Dick puts them on and becomes a savage-looking Chinaman. His man Jenkins tries to put the intruder out. Hudson cannot understand his valet's manner. He overpowers Jenkins, and locks him up in a closet, releasing him next morning. By that time, once more in his own clothes, he has resumed his normal appearance. Jenkins, believing that the experience is an hallucination, signs the pledge.

Dick has promised his friend Jack Billings to entertain his brother Francis. Francis arrives when Dick is out and puts on the pink pajamas and is changed to Frances Kirkland, a girl from China visiting his sister Elizabeth. Dick is amazed to find a pretty girl in his apartment. He and Jenkins go out, leaving her alone. Next morning, waiting at the pier with a box of flowers, he finds only an unknown youth.

Jack Billings puts on the pajamas and assumes the likeness of Frances' father, Colonel Kirkland. He makes a disturbance, is arrested and thrown into a cell. Jack sends for his father, Judge Billings, but the Judge, not recognizing him, refuses to do anything. Jack finally steals a tramp's clothes and escapes.

Dick has been invited to the Billings' to meet Frances. He rushes up, speaks in endearing terms, and mentions their former meeting. She is mystified, and when he speaks of the black silk pajamas she is furious. She is surprised to learn later that he is Dick Hudson. Not understanding but "willing to forgive a Harvard man almost anything," she consents to talk to Dick. He asks the Judge for her hand, believing she is Elizabeth Billings. The Judge consents, as Elizabeth is not especially attractive.

Col. Kirkland arrives on a surprise visit. Dick attacks him, thinking he is the man who has created a disturbance in his apartment. Frances pleads for him. Then the Colonel tells the history of the pajamas and Dick asks the right father for the right girl. Together they burn the haunted pajamas.

TRIANGLE FILM CORP.

AMERICAN—THAT'S ALL (Triangle Production—Five Parts—June 3).—The cast: Monte Boggs (Jack Devereaux); Hazel Stanley (Winifred Allen); Father Boggs (Walter Walker); Mother Boggs (Mrs. Blanche Davenport); the English butler (Charles Mussett); the lounge lizard (George Rennavent); Lady Vere de Vere (Miss Cummins); Lady Vere de Vere's brother (Jack Raymond). Story by Robert Shirley. Directed by A. Rosson. Supervised by Allen Dwan.

Monte Boggs, the son and heir of the pickle king of America, has just completed his education at Harvard. His father is spending his spare time and money trying to establish a family tree, besides hunting up a titled wife for Monte. Monte takes the whole affair as a huge joke, for he is love with Hazel, who is a regular American girl, with no frills. She will not marry Monte because the perfectly good pickle money had made him quite useless in the world. Monte, unable to reach an agreement with his father, finally leaves home.

When Monte tells Hazel what has happened she insists that they be married at once. Things do not go well with the young couple, as Monte's father is still very bitter. Finally Hazel hits upon the idea of getting an option on the entire output of vinegar for the next year.

The way the pickle king is brought to terms provides humorous situations.

BAWBS O' BLUE RIDGE (Ince-Kay Bee—Five Parts—June 3).—The cast: Barbara Colby (Bawbs) (Bessie Barriscale); Ralph Gunther (Arthur Shirley); Phinneas Bradley (Joe Dowling); Jubal Wade (Frank Burke). Story by Monte M. Katterjohn. Directed by Chas. Miller. Supervised by Thomas H. Ince.

Bawbs is a wonderous girl, a veritable dryad of old, living again in the mossy carpeted mountain woods. Her only relative is a spinster aunt, Maw Becky, and her only playmates are the bugs, bees, frogs, birds and insects of the mountains.

Ralph Gunther, an author, comes to the Blue Ridge mountains seeking solitude while writing a new novel. He sees Bawbs dancing in the woods and makes her acquaintance. Maw Beckey provides strong opposition against his suit, and thus he is compelled to meet Bawbs at appointed spots in the woods.

A game of cross purposes ensues, in which Maw and a miserly old hermit figure, but the result is favorable to Ralph and Bawbs.

CACTUS NELL (Two Parts—Mack Sennett Keystone—June 3).—Polly Moran, the sheriff, tries to hold the affections of her lover, Wayland Trask, as well as uphold the laws as sheriff.

All is well until a vampire causes trouble between the lady sheriff and Trask. Other circumstances convince Polly of his guilt until in the Indian camp bullets straighten out the tangle.

Fire Extinguisher

A simple, sure protection for studio or exchange

NEGATIVE films which can never be replaced—hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth—were destroyed when fire wrecked the Famous Players Studio. Even New York's efficient fire department arrived too late to prevent the rapid spread of the film-fire.

The Johns-Manville Fire Extinguisher NEVER arrives too late—it's always ready, and deadly to any incipient fire. Discharged by air pressure previously stored up—or by pumping. REMEMBER that this "two-way" method is exclusive with the Johns-Manville Fire Extinguisher.

Just have a Johns-Manville Fire Extinguisher at every danger point—it's your cheapest insurance and surest protection. Any studio, exchange, or theatre which neglects this simple precaution is taking a big and unprofitable gamble.

ARGUMENT

ARGUMENT WITHOUT PROOF IS USELESS—WITH CORROBORATION, IT CONVINCES AND JUSTIFIES PREJUDICE AND PRACTICE.

WHEN WE ARGUE IN FAVOR OF "SPEER PROJECTOR CARBONS," WE ARE WILLING TO PROVE EVERY STATEMENT.

THE FACTS ARE:

That a combination of a Speer "Cored" upper and a "Hold-Ark" lower will improve your projection.

That the hard core of the "Hold-Ark" assures absolute steadiness of the arc.

That ghosts and aggravating shadows are eliminated by the brilliancy of the light.

That every carbon is uniform and can be depended upon for efficient results.

That a mere trial of "Speer Carbons" will cause you to use them unhesitatingly thereafter.

That samples will be supplied willingly, to those who desire additional proof of the foregoing arguments.

"The Carbons with a Guarantee."

PORTER CAPTURES THE SUBMARINE EYE

PORTER equips the LIBERTY THEATRE with the WORLD'S BEST PROJECTORS for WILLIAMSON BROS.' GREAT PICTURE, "THE SUBMARINE EYE." PORTER'S SERVICE STATION is working overtime on all the BIG BROADWAY PRODUCTIONS. Porter's service station takes care of all, either day or night.

B. F. PORTER, 1482 Broadway at Times Square, NEW YORK "Porter does what others only promise to do."

IT'S LIKE THIS

Your production requires the same quality of skill in DEVELOPING and PRINTING as it does in the making—if it is to meet with public approval.

Our service insures this.
Investigate and be convinced that our service is indispensable to your success.

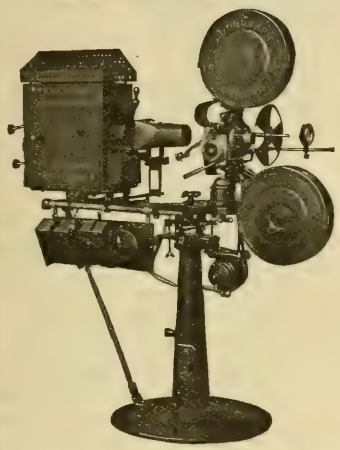
DEPENDABILITY



Mr. A. Hickman, of Local 219, M. P. O. Minneapolis, Minn., says:

"In traveling for the Birth of a Nation Co., I used two MOTIOGRAPH machines, and I want to say that I operated these machines, set them up in 106 towns, took them down after the show each night and used them every day, and during the period I did not have ONE stop.

"There was never a hitch in my show and the up-keep on the two machines was 75 cents for one set of tension springs; which really were not necessary, but as I was under instructions to keep my equipment up to the highest standard of perfection that I could, I made this purchase and I really could have finished my trip without them."

Place Motiograph Projectors in Your Booth and you will get

—MAXIMUM MACHINE LIFE AT MINIMUM COST
—SUPERIOR SERVICE WITH SUPREME PROJECTION

"Wars cannot be conducted without money. It is the first thing to be provided. In this war it is the most immediate help—the most effective help—that we can give. We must not be content with a subscription of two billion dollars; we must oversubscribe this loan as an indication that America is stirred to the depths and aroused to the summit of her greatness in the cause of freedom. Let us not endanger success by complacent optimism. Let us not satisfy ourselves with the reflection that some one else will subscribe the required amount. Let every man and woman in the land make it his or her business to subscribe to the Liberty Loan immediately, and if they cannot subscribe themselves, let them induce somebody else to subscribe. Provide the Government with the funds indispensably needed for the conduct of the war and give notice to the enemies of the United States that we have billions to sacrifice in the cause of Liberty.

"Buy a Liberty Bond today; do not put it off until tomorrow. Every dollar provided quickly and expended wisely will shorten the war and save human life."

AN EXCLUSIVE FEATURE OF POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH

When the lower lop is lost, the film necessarily rips or tears apart. While making repairs an impatient audience is entertained by a dark screen.

Power's Automatic Loop Setter eliminates this constant source of trouble by continuously maintaining the lower loop.

The loop forms around Roller A. Any slackening of the loop draws the roller upward thus disengaging the take up. The loop immediately assumes normal proportions. The roller springs into its original position and the take up again starts to operate.

CHAPIN TRIUMPHS

After Playing to Capacity Business at The STRAND

"The Lincoln Cycle"

Opens at the

GLOBE THEATRE

for an

INDEFINITE RUN

Mind-Gripping
Heart-Touching
Soul-Thrilling

OPINIONS OF THE CRITICS OF THE NEW YORK DAILY NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHED ON MONDAY, MAY 28TH, 1917:

By the Critic of the NEW YORK TRIBUNE:

"The Strand chose Benjamin Chapin to present the whole pictorial programme. It is divided into four distinct stories, 'My Mother,' 'My Father,' 'Myself,' 'The Call to Arms.' The most sweetly tender of these is 'My Mother,' where Mr. Chapin plays Tom Lincoln, the father of the President. It seems incredible that the father and the son were played by the same actor, for, as Tom Lincoln, Mr. Chapin has managed to suggest a character quite different from that of Abraham Lincoln. Even physically he seems totally different, but this is art. Mr. Chapin has gathered together a splendid cast."

By the Critic of the NEW YORK AMERICAN:

"The 'Lincoln Cycle' is something more and higher than a picture-play. It is at once an inspiring appeal to the patriotism of the nation, a page from history red-lettered with great things, and a public document of inestimable value."

By the Critic of the NEW YORK GLOBE:

"The faithful portrayals by Benjamin Chapin, which are thrown on the screen at the Strand give the audience many glimpses of the purposes, the struggles, the aspirations, and anxieties, and open, so to speak, the window of Lincoln's great soul."

By the Critic of the NEW YORK EVENING SUN:

"The 'Lincoln Cycle' justifies the moving picture. It is by all odds the most sincere and most uplifting feature picture ever seen at the Strand, or at any other theatre, for that mater. Benjamin Chapin and the other players lived their parts like real human beings."

By the Critic of the N. Y. EVENING TELEGRAM:

"The 'Lincoln Cycle' is a big epic film. Here is shown a life history, with its comedy and tragedy, its struggles and failures, and its mighty triumph, so graphically portrayed that the audience is held spellbound."

By the Critic of the NEW YORK SUN:

'Benjamin Chapin is said to have devoted five years to the finishing of the 'Lincoln Cycle,' shown at the Strand yesterday, or longer than it took the great emancipator to settle the Civil War The verdict of an impartial judgment is that both endeavors were worth the total elapsed time. Chapin has welded various incidents of the martyred President's life into a coherent, dramatic story."

By the Critic of the NEW YORK TIMES:

"Patrons of the Strand should be condemned to seeing trashy modern photoplays all the rest of their days if they do not flock to see the 'Lincoln Cycle.' The pictures, made by Benjamin Chapin, are replete with episodes, humorous, and full of pathos of the humble life of the Lincolns."

By the Critic of the NEW YORK JOURNAL (ZIT).

"There have been war pictures, sex pictures, melodramatic pictures, educational pictures, religious pictures—pictures that cost a million—pictures whose directors get more than the picture earns, but it has remained for Benjamin Chapin to give to the world a picture that will go down in history as positively the most artistic, most educational and most beautifully acted. Every theatre in the United States is going to play this picture. Thank goodness there is a picture being presented that hasn't any love-sick, mushy stuff or a villain running around to stab another man in the back, and the hero jumping out and saving the girl. This is a picture that will go down in history as a tribute to the motion-picture camera, and if the managers and Benjamin Chapin don't make a million, they have the honor of presenting to the public an artistically finished piece of work, which in later years, when we are all dead and gone, will stand out when others have been put to sleep and buried. Be a volunteer and see the Lincoln Cycle. Don't wait until Draft Day, for you may be ordered to see it."

26 SHOWS IN SIX DAYS

Ben Wilson Greets "Voice on the Wire" Patrons at Many New York Houses.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Ben Wilson, the popular star of "The Voice on the Wire," had a long, legitimate experience before taking up screen work, so that it was no novelty for him to face audiences last week when greeting them in person at the Marcus Loew theatres. He established a record, however, in his swing around the circle, visiting at the conclusion of the current episode of the famous mystery serial twenty-six houses in six days. Ben says that by Saturday it seemed quite normal to spend a large share of each evening in evening clothes, riding around Greater New York in a taxi. A sample of one evening's activities was the Wednesday night program. Starting at the 42nd Street house at 7:45 he was at the Orpheum at 8:15, at the West End at 8:45, at the National at 9:00 and at the Boulevard at 9:30 p. m. Great crowds attested his popularity, wherever he appeared. Mr. Wilson will shortly begin a tour of the United States on a similar errand.

Preparedness Pictures Prove Popular

BOSTON, Mass.—The popular news of the day is unquestionably the activities engendered by the "state of war." This was well evidenced at the burst of applause and the enthusiasm which greeted the showing of the popular Universal Animated Weekly—"first on the screen with the world's best news" at local theatres the past week. Recruiting pictures proved especially popular, as did the "Liberty Loan" views which included some intimate glimpses of activities in that connection in many parts of the country. Aviation scenes, preparedness movements, latest types of weapons of war—all were greeted with the closest attention. All of which proves that the people like to be informed while they are being entertained.

Increasing Popularity

Marks 25th Weekly Release of the Universal Screen Magazine

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"The world's every work in moving pictures week," is the fitting slogan adopted for the Universal Screen Magazine, which had its twenty-fifth weekly showing on the current release date. Following closely the demand of the public, by keeping in closest possible touch with hundreds of Exhibitors, the editors have been more than ordinarily successful in increasing the popularity of the subjects shown during the entire period. Progress in industry and manufacture seem to be one of the most popular forms of subjects, with Domestic Science, Physical Culture and new Inventions second only. Coming at the end of the program are the marvelous Miracles in Mud, animated sculpture by the famous Willie Hopkins. One of the big features of the current release is Jiu-Jitsu for women, posed and demonstrated by two exceedingly clever people.

FRANEY'S FILM FUN

Popular Universal Comedian Makes Laughter Grow in Burlesque Comedy.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The current issues of the trade papers contain advertisements of a three-reel Universal comedy that marks a new achievement in film fun. Headed by William Franey, one of the best known of the Universal Comedy companies has completed the filming of a screaming burlesque of the Universal's famous spectacular dramatic production, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." Four reels were made, and these were after cut to three, consequently it is packed with swift action and moves at a stirring pace from start to finish. While direct bookings are being accepted at the Universal Offices, State Rights will also be sold. The title is "The Cross-Eyed Submarine," and every N. Y. reviewer has accorded it unstinted praise.

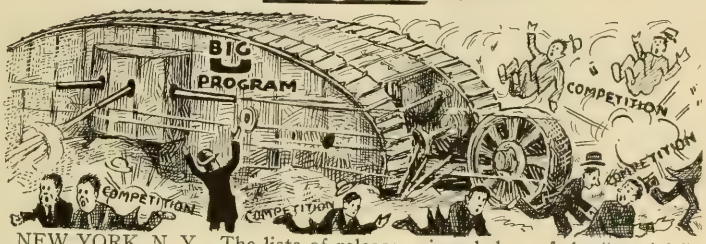
EMMA CARUS IN LATEST SONG HIT

"Let's All Be Americans Now" Features Popular Artist.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"Song Hits in Photoplay," the Universal split reel which is released every three weeks, announces as the current issue the tremendously popular patriotic song, "Let's All Be Americans Now." The featured player in this notable song hit is Emma Carus, the popular musical comedy and vaudeville star. Miss Carus has done more than her share in putting this latest favorite across, and it is fitting that she should play the lead in the moving picture of the story of the song. The fans have gone wild over this novelty release and Exhibitors who take advantage of the opportunity to run a Song Contest in connection with the showing are playing to capacity.

Ahead of the Procession

Many Novelties Among "Specials" on the Big Universal Regular Program



NEW YORK, N. Y.—The lists of releases given below of the "specials" and the "regulars" on the weekly Universal Program Service give proof that this sterling service gives Exhibitors greater QUALITY and greater QUANTITY than all competitive programs combined. The many novelties among the specials are just what the wise Exhibitor is looking for to strengthen a weak show, help put over a weak feature, or to use as the foundation of an open booking program which makes the most popular form of moving picture entertainment in thousands of theatres today.

SPECIALS

On the Universal Program Week of June 25

BUTTERFLY—"MAN AND BEAST" (Five-Reel Drama)—Eileen Sedgwick and Kingsley Benedict.
NESTOR—"THE WAR BRIDEGROOM" (One-Reel Comedy)—Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.
GOLD SEAL—"THE GOLDEN BULLET" (Three-Reel Western Drama)—Harry Carey and Fritzi Ridgway.
L-KO—"HER DARING, CARING WAYS" (Two-Reel Comedy)—Merta Sterling and Lucille Hutton.
UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY—No. 78.
UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE—No 25.
JOKER—"HIS FATAL BEAUTY" (One-Reel Comedy)—Wm. Franey.
IMP—"THE DOUBLE-TOPPED TRUNK" (One-Reel Drama)—Allen Holubar and Gretchen Lederer.
POWERS—"DUKE DOOLITTLE'S JUNGLE FIZZLE" (Comic Cartoon) and "IN THE LAND OF MANY TEMPLES" (Dorsey Educational)—Split Reel.

There's spice and virility in these "specials." They carry just the right wallop that gives your patrons the same contented feeling that they have after enjoying a delicious meal. It is the sort of entertainment that makes the fans say kind things about your show on leaving and that brings them back the next night. They will cost you a slight advance over the pro-rated rental of the complete program, but they are worth it, and will show increased profits for you.

REGULARS

On the Universal Program Week of June 25

VICTOR—"DAMAGED GOODNESS" (One-Reel Comedy)—Ernie Shields.
VICTOR—"HER CITY BEAU" (One-Reel Comedy-Drama)—M. K. Wilson and Edith Roberts.
BIG U—"THE POINTED FINGER" (Two-Reel Underworld Drama)—George Pearce and Gretchen Lederer.
VICTOR—"SWEDE HEARTS" (Two-Reel Comedy-Drama)—Neal Hart and Janet Eastman.
101-BISON—"MONEY AND MYSTERY" (Two-Reel Western Drama)—Eileen Sedgwick and Kingsley Benedict.
BIG U—"LOVE'S TURMOIL" (One-Reel Drama)—Edna Maison.

These red-blooded dramas and unusually funny comedies are backed by good stories, popular stars, brilliant direction and the lavish production that comes as a sure thing from the world's largest studios in Universal City, Cal. Here is the sort of material that you need to lay a firm foundation for the best program show it is possible to book. Look over the two lists given here and you will realize that when it comes to the "goods" the Universal has them.

ARTCRAFT

—The Name That Stands For The Ultimate In Motion Picture Making And Distribution

More than 5,000 exhibitors in America bear testimony to the superlative quality and drawing power of Artcraft productions and to the fairness of Artcraft's leasing policies.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has acquired control of Artcraft and adjusted distribution dates so as to enable the exhibitors to play the great Artcraft pictures without having to pay for the Paramount features of the same release date.

Artcraft Pictures in the future as in the past will be distributed under the "star series" selection plan. The coordination with Paramount commencing August 5th gives the Artcraft exhibitor protection so that when he plays a new Mary Pickford-Artcraft feature he will not be in competition with one of her previous program releases.

Artcraft distributes the productions of the world's most popular stars and directors.

MARY PICKFORD

Eight Productions

"She is more vital to the success of a motion picture theatre than seats to sit in," said a commentator about Mary Pickford.

He should have added that where her pictures play there are never enough seats!

Known as "The World's Sweetheart," Mary Pickford has been the most potent power for increasing patronage than any other single agency in motion pictures.

Her Artcraft releases include "The Poor Little Rich Girl," "A Romance of the Redwoods," "The Little American," (for early release) and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" (now in course of production).

There will be eight Mary Pickford releases during the coming year.

Douglas Fairbanks proved the greatness of men screen stars. His tireless vitality, teeming with good humor, won instant popularity. His name is synonymous with capacity houses.

His first Artcraft picture was "In Again—Out Again." A good title, since audiences throughout the country came again and again to see him. A typical Fairbanks photoplay, "Wild and Woolly," will be released soon.

Artcraft announces seven of his pictures during the coming year.

GEORGE M. COHAN

Two Productions

George Cohan is the man who made "Broadway" famous—the author and actor who has closely touched the hearts of the great American public and reaped the tremendous benefit of his joyous nature and "drawing power," both for himself and exhibitors showing Artcraft Pictures.

"Broadway Jones" has proved a tremendous attraction from the "box office" point of view and from the standpoint of satisfying and pleasing audiences.

His proved ability and "drawing power" demand all the pictures he can make, but his dramatic engagements only allow time for two great Artcraft Pictures for the year.

ELSIE FERGUSON

Seven Productions

One of the most beautiful and talented actresses in the world.

Since her earliest stage days she has always been a "box office" attraction that could be counted on anywhere in the United States.

Her great dramatic talent and successes, among which are "The First Lady of the Land," "The Strange Woman," "The Outcast," "Margaret Schiller," "Shirley Kaye" and brilliant revivals of the classics, and her position in American theatrical history as the successor of Mary Anderson and Julia Marlowe, demand at least seven Artcraft productions for the coming year.

CECIL B. DeMILLE

Four Productions

Master mind, genius, artist, the personification of directorship and founder of the Lasky School of Motion Picture Art. Master of photographic illusion and a man schooled by David Belasco, Artcraft Pictures Corporation has in Cecil B. De Mille's productions four great attractions.

"Joan the Woman" is still in the minds of all—as an example of the heights to which the motion picture can ascend when in the hands of a master of his art.

Mr. De Mille's four personally directed pictures do not include his two productions in which Geraldine Farrar will star.

GERALDINE FARRAR

Two Productions

America's most popular prima donna and one of the greatest screen attractions in America to-day.

Her histrionic ability, physical fortitude and courage, placed her in the enviable position of being the one possible living choice for the part of Joan of Arc in the great photoplay, "Joan the Woman," and the only actress who could have accomplished such a masterly piece of work.

Her triumphs in "Carmen," "Maria Rosa," and "Temptation" have made her pictures some of the most desirable attractions obtainable to-day.

Miss Farrar's grand opera engagements limit her pictures to two productions, each to be personally directed by Cecil B. De Mille.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH

Six Productions

The name of Griffith is a magical one in the motion picture industry. It means super-production, limitless imagination and directorial genius.

The man who conceived "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" will personally direct six shorter, but no less tense, photoplays for release through Artcraft during the coming year.

These pictures will bear his name, a "capacity" mark for any theatre, anywhere.

Mr. Griffith will return soon from the European battle front where, under the auspices of the British War Office, he is recording for all time the greatest struggle of the ages.

Progress and Profits

Commencing August 5th next, Paramount and Artcraft Pictures Corporations will coordinate their systems of photoplay distribution, and the productions of both companies will be leased to exhibitors along identical lines.

This means that the opportunity to exhibit the great productions and unrivaled stars of Paramount Pictures is open to all exhibitors. Paramount's policy of fairness, cooperation and protection which has won and deserved confidence in the past will be enhanced in the future by a great effort to achieve even a higher degree of service.

On succeeding pages is additional data about the Paramount plan and the stars, old and new—with the number of Paramount Pictures in which each will be starred for the coming year.

MME. PETROVA

Eight Productions

The newest and one of the greatest of all Paramount's vast array of stellar attractions is Mme. Petrova.

Her world-wide tours in concert and vaudeville and distinguished theatrical engagements, and her many screen successes in which sheer dramatic power and histrionic force have carried her forward to personal triumphs, have created for her a host of patrons. Her following is one of the largest enjoyed by any screen star, as shown by the "box office."

Her first Paramount Picture has been by long odds her greatest screen triumph to date and its reception betokens great returns for future Petrova triumphs, of which there are eight scheduled for the next year.

This stellar combination has jumped to stardom in a remarkably short time by their ability to portray "youth." They look it and they act it. They make you and me and the whole American public dream again the dreams of our youth.

Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," Dickens' "Great Expectations," and Gene Stratton Porter's "Freckles" have played to the largest number of "extra days" through the "big towns" of any Paramount Pictures for the same period since release date.

The famous authors and stories helped, but the "drawing power" and ability of these young stars to put their pictures over give exhibitors an opportunity to book eight of them in the next year. The Pickford and Huff pictures are the kind that make your patrons come back for more.

GEORGE BEBAN

Three Productions

One of the best known character artists appearing on the screen today is George Beban. He stands without peer in character delineations on both stage and screen. Comedy and pathos are intermingled in such pleasing proportions as to make his pictures marvels of dramatic skill.

Since his first motion picture, "The Italian," followed by "An Alien" and "Pasquale," his pictures have been unequalled drawing cards in several of the largest cities and very popular the country over.

FANNIE WARD

Eight Productions

One of the most charming and versatile actresses, with a long string of stage successes, surmounted by a remarkable screen career, is Fannie Ward.

Best remembered as a comedienne on the stage, it was no wonder to her long list of admirers when she portrayed the leading role in "The School for Husbands," a light comedy.

Fannie Ward is best known to photoplay patrons, however, as a tragedienne, and no one who saw her play the irresponsible society woman in "The Cheat"—branded by a Jap for selling him out, will ever forget it. This picture started photoplay history, startling the amusement world by giving to the stage its first play from the screen. The success of this picture was largely due to Miss Ward's dramatic power and her subsequent successes have proved her right to a place with "the greatest drawing cards on earth." Miss Ward will appear in eight Paramount productions during the coming year.

JULIAN ELTINGE

Three Productions

Unique in the American theatre, Julian Eltinge has won great fame and thousands of followers because he does one thing better than anyone else. As an impersonator of feminine characterizations, he has no equal.

After five years a headliner in high class vaudeville, Mr. Eltinge became a star in musical comedy and his successes, "The Fascinating Widow," "The Crinoline Girl" and "Cousin Lucy," have been seen in practically every city of size in America. In New York where his popularity has grown with the years, a theatre—The Eltinge—bears his name.

Paramount anticipates distinctive photoplays with Mr. Eltinge, of which three are announced for the coming year.

VIVIAN MARTIN

Eight Productions

Vivian Martin, with her big appealing eyes, her blonde curls and her way of witchery, is one of the big stars of the Paramount Program. There is an illusive charm about her, a sort of mingling of shy youth and mature depth, that has placed her among the most popular artists of the screen. Miss Martin has appeared in "The Stronger Love," "Her Father's Son," "The Wax Model," "The Spirit of Romance," "The Girl at Home," and other photoplays, which have attracted and held public patronage. She will appear in eight productions for Paramount next year.

WALLACE REID

Eight Productions

Wallace Reid is one of the most popular male stars on the screen today, who first attracted attention among screen patrons in "The Birth of a Nation."

When a fitting "Jose" was desired for Geraldine Farrar's "Carmen" Mr. Reid was selected for the part. Again he appeared with Miss Farrar as Eric Trent, in the great masterpiece "Joan the Woman." His physical prowess quite as much as his perfection of feature has made him steadily advance in popularity, until without question he is one of the biggest stars appearing in Paramount Pictures.

Among his best known Paramount successes are "The Golden Chance," "The Yellow Pawn," "To Have and to Hold," and "The Prison Without Walls." Mr. Reid will star in eight big productions under the new plan.

ANN PENNINGTON

Two Productions

Little "Ann of the Follies"—one of the brightest stars that twinkle on Broadway, or "The Great Right Way," no matter what the name of the town!

In "Susie Snowflake" the little dancer displayed a sincere, intelligent, gifted power of delineation that made a host of patrons, and proved when "The Rainbow Princess," her next picture, came along—by the number of rebookings and the gross business reported by exhibitors—that there should be at least two of her pictures for the next year.

With the superb quality of Paramount Pictures the variety of subject and appeal of such stars as Ann Pennington makes it a necessity for an exhibitor to book all the Paramount Pictures.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA

Eight Productions

Sessue Hayakawa has brought to the American motion picture the mysterious, the magic and mystic of Japan. No foreign-born actor of a generation has won so many admirers as this brilliant young Japanese, whose interpretations of the problems of the Oriental in Occidental lands has given him a unique place in the motion picture firmament. His wonderful playing in "The Cheat," "Alien Souls," "The Soul of Kura-San," "The Bottle Imp" and "The Jaguar's Claws" foreshadows brilliant and popular productions, of which he will contribute eight through Paramount to exhibitors during the coming year.

BILLIE BURKE

Three Productions

Miss Burke's piquant beauty, her appealing femininity and the gentleness of her impersonations have made her name a household word throughout the land. Miss Burke has attained an enviable position as a screen favorite. She is undeniably America's premier stage comedienne.

Paramount is privileged to announce, by arrangement with F. Ziegfeld, Jr., three of her productions during the ensuing year. The first of these will be "The Mysterious Miss Terry," by Gelett Burgess, followed by a visualization of W. Somerset Maugham's great drama of the Northwest, "The Land of Promise," in which Miss Burke appeared on the dramatic stage. The greatest authors, directors and players will contribute their genius to her new Paramount productions.

PAULINE FREDERICK

Eight Productions

No one who witnessed it will ever forget Pauline Frederick's last appearance on the stage in "Joseph and His Brethren." This was the climax of a successful stage career which gave her the enviable position of the leading emotional actress of the day.

At the height of her career Miss Frederick deserted the stage for the screen, where she appeared in the Famous Players' production "The Eternal City." From the beginning she became one of the biggest drawing cards on the Paramount Program. Her artistry has marvelous depth and power, and she has duplicated a brilliant stage triumph on the screen.

Her best known screen productions and favorite Paramount Pictures are "Bella Donna," "Sapho," "Audrey," "The Moment Before," "The Slave Market," "Sold" and "Zaza."

Pauline Frederick will appear in eight Paramount Pictures under the new plan.

MARGUERITE CLARK

Eight Productions

Long will "Miss George Washington" and "Snow White" live in the minds of exhibitors as direct return boosters.

Each of Miss Clark's pictures seems to "outdraw" her last. The reputation she has built up with the aid of the superb Paramount Pictures and her long chain of successes have absolutely established her future "drawing power" as one of the leaders in that charmed circle of the "sure-fire," "rain or shine," dependable stellar attractions that "crowd" theatres.

With such famous plays as "The Amazons," from which her next picture is adapted, she will have even greater triumphs.

PARAMOUNT-BURTON HOLMES TRAVEL PICTURES

are the most famous travel pictures ever released, and are fast bringing the people of the United States to realize the truth of Mr. Holmes' famous slogan, "To travel is to possess the world."

The Exhibitor's Salvation:

> "The feature picture cannot with any degree of certainty be relied upon for an evening's entertainment for all kinds of people. When such a condition arises the miscellaneous part of the program made up of short and diversified subjects, combined with a superlative musical program, has proven to be our salvation."

Harold Edel, Managing Director Strand Thea., N. Y.
(From Dramatic Mirror)

Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures are sure to please. They are also "drawing cards" since thousands of people have read Burton Holmes' books and seen his lectures advertised for thirty years or more.

Get a few new people every week—and keep them all coming back—and soon you won't have seats enough to hold them.

Single Reel Comedies

Victor Moore

has lately been releasing a series of single reel comedies among which are "Flivvering," "Moving," "Bungalowing" —probably the best single-reel laugh-makers ever released. Each one of them has been selected from the thousands on the market for the famous Strand Theatre, New York, each week.

Black Diamond Comedies are the last word in tricks, photographic illusion, and rollicking, riotous, screamingly funny one-reel comedies. In certain localities these pictures have proven the biggest drawing cards among the Paramount short subjects.

Paramount-Bray Pictographs are the most advanced single reels released. It is a semi-comedy one-reeler, blending entertainment with education in a most palatable style. "The Magazine on the Screen" and the Bray Cartoons make one of the most popular and "best sellers" of the Paramount single reels.

Advantages of the New "Open Booking" Plan for Distributing

Paramount Pictures

The "Star Series" System combines all the stability of the program plus the advantage of selective open booking.

Particular advantage to the Paramount exhibitor is the elasticity of the plan, whereby he may play the great attractions released through Artcraft without having to pay for the program pictures of the same release date.

He may choose for his patrons the stars he knows by past performances attract the greatest audiences and please the greatest numbers.

Through the establishment of the finest service department ever created, Paramount will lend such aid and assistance as never before has been given to the exhibitor. Big and small—all will benefit. From national advertising to local circularization, the hand of cooperation will be untiring in the service of the Paramount exhibitor.

"WRATH OF LOVE"

THE CAST

Roma Winet.....	Virginia Pearson
Ethel Clarke.....	Louise Bate
Bob Lawson.....	Irving Cummings
Mrs. Lawson.....	Nellie Slattery
Dave Blake.....	Frank Glendon
Caddy	John McCann

Story by Mary Murillo

A splendid story of love and jealousy in which intrigues by international spies furnish the complications, makes "Wrath of Love," Virginia Pearson's newest production, of timely interest. This is the plot of Miss Pearson's coming release:

Rome Winet suffers from passionate jealousy but lives happily with Bob Lawson, whom she has just married. When war comes, she grows violently jealous of Ethel Clark, who has been left in Bob's care by Dave Blake, his chum. Dave has left to enter his country's service. When he returns on a furlough he goes to the home of Bob's mother where Ethel is staying.

While Dave is there, Bob joins them. He warns Dave that spies are following him. Just after Dave flees, Roma chances by and her finding Bob and Ethel together drives her frantic. Jealousy at subsequent events makes life almost unbearable for her. She sees Bob go on mysterious missions to the rear of his estate where Dave is hiding; then she sees Ethel go there. Roma does not know the girl is carrying important papers, and she unbraids Bob for his apparent attentions toward Ethel.

Roma persists in misunderstanding the motives of her husband until a hard battle with the spies in which Dave and Bob are successful, clears away the difficulties, and she realizes how unjust she has been. The woman is freed at last from her one besetting fault.

Kiddie Feature

Another marvelous picturization of a great story has been practically completed in William Fox's studios at Hollywood, Cal. Telegraphic advices from the Coast are enthusiastic over this new product for the Fox Kiddie Features. C. M. and S. A. Franklin, undoubtedly the most capable child directors in the world, were in charge of the cinema and they have made a masterpiece.

William Farnum in his greatest picture, "When a Man Sees Red," from the novel, "The Painted Lady," by Larry Evans, which ran in the Saturday Evening Post. Scenes in Honolulu, San Francisco and the South Sea Islands. A $200,000 special film de luxe.

"SIX CYLINDER LOVE"

"Six Cylinder Love," the current Fox-film comedy release, is two reels of jollification, two reels chock-full of chuckles. Tom Mix, the world's champion cowboy, is featured in this laugh-bringer. Mr. Mix also directed it. This new comedy's release was delayed for a short time while a sufficiently large adding machine to count the laughs was installed. "Six Cylinder Love" is a fast riding, twin-six comedy in every way.

BARA HAS TRIUMPHAL TRIP

Theda Bara's transcontinental journey to the William Fox studios in Hollywood, Cal., continues to be a real triumphal trip. When Miss Bara left New York for Chicago, her private car was filled with flowers from admirers.

At Chicago, the world famous William Fox artiste received a tremendous ovation.

It is expected that Miss Bara will be at Los Angeles early this week. The Fox studios in Hollywood, Cal., have been put in gala dress in the star's honor.

If Fox exhibitors are not receiving their publicity material regularly, or are not getting the kind of publicity they desire, they will favor the Fox Publicity Bureau if they write the department.

Gossip

Virginia Pearson demonstrated her patriotism last week by selling Liberty Loan Bonds in Namm's big department store in Brooklyn.

Work progresses rapidly on Gladys Brockwell's new subject. The supporting company includes such notables as Bertram Grassby, Jewel Carmen and Willard Louis.

Trust Valeska Suratt to keep one step ahead of modern styles. One of the hundred milliner's creations she wears in "The Slave" is adorned with "live" lilies.

Few persons in picturedom could play Caroline Rankin's role in "Some Boy!" Few would wish to. Miss Rankin, weight 92, has the part of a skeleton.

It is rumored that on one dark and dismal day, director John G. Adolfi took part of the film for June Caprice's "A Small Town Girl" by the light of Miss Caprice's radiant smile.

Major Charles W. Gordon, of the British Army, who writes under the pen name of Ralph Connor, is the author of the story chosen for William Farnum's first Eastern play since 1915.

Outside of the war, the most exciting thing still remains the fight on top of the swiftly moving freight train in William Fox's cinemelodrama, "The Honor System."

George Walsh, the effervescent William Fox star, has immortalized the down-trodden press agent for the silent stage.

George's peppery impersonation in "Some Boy!" is so "wild and woolly" that he has to disguise himself as a woman to overcome the effects of one of the stories he sends out. The plot moves with the rapidity characteristic of all of "Smiling George's" features.

Goldwyn's Exhibitor Policy

THE POLICY of Goldwyn is one of sanity and cleanliness; of honor and dignity. It is a policy under which the Goldwyn organization and all exhibitors will meet as business men.

With this policy we feel sure all exhibitors will come to regard Goldwyn, from the start, as "the company that keeps its promises."

Goldwyn proposes to eliminate much of the red tape of the picture industry; to remove many of the sources of irritation that exhibitors have heretofore encountered.

This should make all exhibitors feel that here at last, is an organization that wishes to feel it is in actual partnership with the men who show Goldwyn Pictures to the public.

May we ask you to wait until our branch managers and other representatives in all sections of the country call on you before you decide upon any plans or contracts involving the future and the prosperity of your theatre?

Goldwyn Is Not Building On Sand

THE rock bottom foundation of all Goldwyn Pictures will be the stories we purchase for production. We do not fear to tell exhibitors that Goldwyn ranks the story itself as the first essential.

Next, and of equal importance, is the manner of its production. A hundred skilled factors are contributing their talents and genius to every Goldwyn Picture.

The powerful personality of a popular star in every picture is Goldwyn's third element.

Goldwyn has not trusted to any one element to make its productions successful. We have combined three elements into one. By doing this Goldwyn utilizes every ounce of star values without placing exhibitors at the mercy of stars.

That sane critic, Mr. Hector Fuller, of Indianapolis, had uncanny foresight when, as long ago as last December, he wrote of Goldwyn as "the picture company with brains."

MUTUAL PICTURES HELP EXHIBITORS' SUMMER BUSINESS

FOR the summer months, when business ordinarily suffers a slump, Mutual Film Corporation offers exhibitors an unusual lot of five and six reel Mutual—"Big Stars Only"—Pictures. Exhibitors should plan to make their summer business their season of biggest profit taking. The announcement that Mutual Pictures starring such popular favorites as Mary Miles Minter, Nance O'Neil, Gail Kane, Marjorie Rambeau and others of like fame are on the screen at any theatre should pull capacity houses.

All Quality Productions.

Mutual Pictures offer stories by famous authors, enacted by stars of note, under the direction of real artists. Just to cite a few instances, exhibitors can book such Mary Miles Minter subjects as "Youth's Endearing Charm," "Dulcie's Adventure," "Faith," "A Dream or Two Ago," "The Innocence of Lizette," "The Gentle Intruder," "Environment," "Annie-For-Spite" and "Periwinkle;" such Marjorie Rambeau subjects as "The Greater Woman," "Motherhood," "The Debt," "The Mirror" and "The Dazzling Miss Davison;" such Nance O'Neil subjects as "Mrs. Balfame" and "Hedda Gabler;" such Gail Kane subjects as "Whose Wife?" "The Serpent's Tooth;" such William Russell subjects as "My Fighting Gentleman," "High Play," "The Frame-Up," and "Shackles of Truth;" such Margarita Fischer subjects as "The Pearl of Paradise," "Miss Jackie of the Navy," "The Butterfly Girl" and "The Devil's Assistant;" such Jackie Saunders subjects as "Sunny Jane," "The Wildcat," "The Checkmate" and a "A Bit of Kindling." All these pictures are now available. Soon to be released are such Edna Goodrich subjects as "Reputation," "Queen X" and others; such Ann Murdock subjects as "Outcast" and "The Imposter;" such Juliette Day subjects as "Betty and the Buccaneers," and other Minter, Rambeau, Kane, Russell and Saunders subjects.

Directors of Note.

Directors of note are responsible for all these Mutual—"Big Stars Only"—Pictures. Men like James Kirkwood, Frank Powell, Edward Sloman, Rollin Sturgeon, John O'Brien, Henry King, Dell Henderson and Harry Pollard are directing Mutual Pictures. Make certain of a big summer business now. Visit your nearest Mutual Exchange and arrange for a whole list of Mutual—"Big Stars Only"—Pictures.

"The Immigrant" Is Next Chaplin Film

"The Immigrant" has been chosen as the title of the next Chaplin-Mutual Special. This is the eleventh of the Mutual-Chaplins released since the signing of the famous $670,000 contract. Chaplin's role in this forthcoming offering is different from anything that he has attempted in the past and is sure to win him just as much praise—to make just as many millions laugh. The usual all-star supporting cast, including, of course, dainty Edna Purviance and gigantic Eric Campbell, will again be in evidence, each member provided with ample opportunities for his or her peculiar abilities. "The Immigrant" is the eleventh Mutual-Chaplin Special. Those already released include "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M.," "The Count," "The Pawnshop," "Behind the Screen," "The Rink," "Easy Street" and "The Cure." If you haven't shown them all, visit your nearest Mutual Exchange without delay and arrange to do so. If you have shown them, repeat bookings will mean big box-office receipts.

Repeat Bookings Prove Profitable

Exhibitors more and more are coming to realize the value of the repeat bookings. Practically every theatre that has played a return date on any of the "Big Stars Only" series of Mutual Pictures, has done an even bigger business on the second showing than when the production was first presented. Pick out the Mutual star most popular with your patrons. The nearest Mutual Exchange will be able to arrange repeat bookings for you. The second showing will reap a golden harvest from the seeds planted by the advertising on the first presentation.

MARY MILES MINTER IN "PERIWINKLE" HAS BIG OPPORTUNITIES

MARY MILES MINTER'S third offering in her Second Series of Mutual Pictures is scheduled for release the week of June 11th. "Periwinkle" is its title. James Kirkwood directed it. It is in five acts and was written by William Farquhar Payson especially for Miss Minter.

Abounds in Heart Interest.

Heart interest abounds throughout every foot of "Periwinkle." It is a picture that will instantly appeal to old and young, men, women and children. Miss Minter enacts the role of a little girl, cast ashore from a shipwreck when a baby and adopted by the crew of a life-saving station. She is promptly named "Periwinkle," and as she begins to grow up becomes more and more fascinating to the men of the coast guard service. And then one day another shipwrecked victim is washed ashore—a young man of apparent wealth and breeding. After he is nursed back to health he meets and is instantly attracted by Periwinkle. She, too, finds much to admire in the stranger. As the days pass the friendship ripens into a real love affair, though the stranger makes no proposal of marriage. The tanned and bearded life-savers fear their little Periwinkle is getting herself in deep water and make haste to safeguard her in what seems to them the only way, by summoning a minister and demanding that the stranger shall marry her then and there. The stranger resents outside interference and things seem to be drifting into a dreadful muddle when—well, the final scenes contain a surprise that will satisfy any audience and that brings final happiness to both Periwinkle and the stranger.

Directed by James Kirkwood.

James Kirkwood, whose past performances as a director are known to every exhibitor, staged "Periwinkle." Its settings are quaint and unusual, but perfect in every detail. Dainty little Miss Minter never had a role better suited to her personality. Any Mutual Exchange is prepared now to book the Minter Series. Arrange to show all the pictures on your first open dates.

Former Shubert Star Aids Marjorie Rambeau

Frazer Tarbutt, fresh from a triumph with the Shubert Stock Company of St. Paul, is now a member of the company supporting Marjorie Rambeau. In "The Dazzling Miss Davison" he makes his screen debut, opposite Miss Rambeau.

A record to be proud of

Beyond all question Pathe serials have brought in more money to exhibitors' box-offices than any other photoplay productions. Consider the phenomenal success of "The Perils of Pauline", "The Exploits of Elaine", "The New Exploits of Elaine", "The Romance of Elaine", "Who Pays?" "The Red Circle", "The Grip of Evil", "Who's Guilty?" "Neal of the Navy". "The Shielding Shadow", "The Iron Claw", "Pearl of the Army", "Patria", "The Mystery of the Double Cross" and now the latest

Read This!

The dear public will welcome a really funny comedy in which there is no throwing of blueberry pies, no chasing of a "Weary Willie," and no policemen of odd dimensions that move as if pulled by strings. Such a comedy is "A Hole in the Ground," one of the series Selig is making in two reels for release in the K. E. S. E. program. There is a refreshing absence of stock antics and silly gestures usually found in funny films. The usual audience will be amused at the clever turns and never miss the thread.—Motography.

Edwin Carewe in directing "Her Fighting Chance" has carefully preserved the throbbing, pulsing action of the original story by James Oliver Curwood, called "The Fiddling Man." The part of Marie affords Jane Grey the opportunity of putting to use her splendid talents as an emotional actress. Although she wears no fine clothes, she is beautiful and obtains and holds the sympathy throughout. This drama should have a wide appeal and should entertain any audience.

MOTOGRAPHY

Without wasting any time getting at the meat of the matter the exhibitor can count on this picturization of James Oliver Curwood's novel, "The Fiddling Man," as a feature of exceptional merit, a live red blooded story of the land of the deep snows, rough and free mannered people, sledges and "huskies." There is action, plenty of it, and it is all well defined and convincing. The picture is worthy of being "State righted." It is way and above the average six reel program offering. It stands the test in the three big essentials, story, acting and production.

Motion Picture News

James Oliver Curwood's virile story of the Canadian Northwest, has been given a magnificent setting by the producers. Several times was the invitation audience at the Broadway theatre moved to applause by the transplendent beauty of the scenes In all respects "Her Fighting Chance" is a picture the likes of which are seldom seen. The story has one long, powerful vein of suspense. Technically, the scenes have been so arranged that the utmost has been gotten from this valuable property. Certain incidents are withheld from the audience just long enough, and when finally they are flashed across the screen their effect is thrilling, to say the least.

Morning Telegraph

This story of love and revenge in the North country is an intensely interesting feature, a thrilling and inspiring production. Acting, story and setting are superb and the film ranks among the most artistic and entertaining features ever produced. A novel double exposure introduces Jane Grey as herself and in character, and from the opening scene there is interest and action in the film and suspense held throughout. The wonderful Arctic country has been vividly pictured and yet film footage is not taken up for the sake of scenery alone. The background of every scene is picturesque, and every scene a vital part of the story.

TRADE REVIEW

Three very important points that constitute a thoroughly entertaining photoplay are embodied in this production, namely, an interesting and consistent story, splendid photography and a high water mark in productive perfectness. The locale is laid in the northwest, which affords ample opportunity for some very realistic snow scenes, and in this respect not one point of value has been overlooked by the director that would in any way add to the thorough convincing atmosphere and realism that the photoplay undoubtedly contains.

"Her Fighting Chance" is an entertainment of value and one worthy of the exhibitor's attention. It lacks all sex elements and avoids the melodramatic, but sticks closely to consistency, making it all in all a production of merit.

New York Star

Edwin Carewe, under whose direction this film was produced, has seldom done anything better. In fact, all the way through direction and photography stand out preeminently. Jane Grey, for once in her life, has been properly cast, and her support, who include Thos. Holding, Percy G. Standing, Edwin Porter, Fred Jones and Wm. Cohill, capable artists, help the general morale of the picture. The story, an out-of-doors tale, will appeal to both old and young and is quite refreshing in spots. The titles, toning and tinting are all that could be desired. "Her Fighting Chance" ought to be a corking State Rights seller.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Viewed purely on its dramatic side the picture is an excellent example of what can be accomplished on the screen with a good story and a competent star and cast in the hands of a thoroughly capable director. The picture gets over on the strength of story and manner of presentation without resorting to the spectacular. The characters are well selected both as to type and ability. This also holds good of the minor characters, who furnish convincing "atmosphere" to Mr. Curwood's virile story of the North woods. The novel is full of plot-action and permits of many tense situations, all of which have been retained in the film.

VARIETY

This photodrama was adapted from James Oliver Curwood's story of the northwoods, "The Fiddling Man," and is typical of the Curwood breezy style, Edwin Carewe directing the screen production and doing a masterly and efficient job of it. The picture made an A-1 impression and the story was consistently narrated from start to finish. Miss Grey does bully work. Her stage experience stands out all the way and as the wife of Jan Thoreau, wrongly charged with the murder of a government mail carrier, who would give herself up to a brute in order to save her husband from being hanged, she makes an effective character through expressive natural acting.

IT IS THE KIND OF FILM THAT WILL GO ANYWHERE."

PARALTA PLAN

THE motion picture exhibitor today is just as legitimate a merchandiser as the local druggist or the corner groceryman. He is entitled to exactly the same protection. Neither the druggist nor the grocer will promote the sale of any line of goods that is likely to be taken from him at any time. WHY SHOULD THE MOVING PICTURE MAN?

ALL experience in merchandising teaches that "Restricted Territory" and "Exclusive Sales Rights" are the greatest incentives to full co-operation by the retailer. The exhibitor is nothing more or less than a film merchant—a caterer in entertainment to the people in his community. Why should he spend his money making popular a certain program or line of productions that may be taken from him on a few days notice—or without notice at all—and turned over to a competitor?

UNDER the Paralta Plan an exhibitor owns and controls Paralta Plays in his own exhibiting territory for twelve months, with the privilege of cancellation on any two-productions notice. He can cancel but Paralta Plays cannot. He absolutely owns and controls them for twelve months. He has the satisfaction of knowing that he is working for himself from the moment he secures a Paralta Exhibiting Franchise. A Paralta exhibitor, working under a Paralta Exhibiting Franchise, "saves money and makes money the same day."

Facts and Comments

IN one of the many briefs submitted at Washington in regard to the proposed war taxation, we find the somewhat peculiar reasoning that if no tax is put on the five cent theaters we are likely to see a large number of houses, now getting ten cents, go back to a five cent admission. In other words to escape a one cent tax, they will give up other four. Surely this is a deduction worthy of an "efficiency expert." Then again, if the tax is imposed on the cheaper theater will it make conditions any better for the higher priced house? Let us hope the legislators at Washington will untangle the mass of contradictory advice sent in by the industry and arrive at a decision that will put the smallest end of the burden on those least able to bear it.

NATIONAL Organizer Fred J. Herrington of the Exhibitors' League has had more experience of the problems that confront the average exhibitor throughout the country than most men. In a recent interview he expressed the belief that ninety per cent. of the trouble and annoyances of every branch of the industry would be eliminated by proper organization of the exhibitors. The shortsighted exhibitor who books a film for one day and keeps it for three, to spite the exchange as he thinks, but who in reality harms much more his fellow-exhibitor who was booked right after him; the exhibitor who boosts the rental price on his competitor and the exchange manager who encourages this ruinous competition until he and every other exchange finally lose a customer by the closing of a theater that cannot meet the weekly cost of film; the outrageous salaries to film stars which compel producer, renter and exhibitor alike to work like horses to pay these inflated salaries are just a few glaring examples of what might be set right by a strong organization of exhibitors with the right men in control. Exhibitors everywhere, organize!

THE art of exhibiting moving pictures is as yet only understood by a very few. We still have a vast majority in the ranks of exhibitors who are content to sit around all morning, open their theater and ticket booth a half hour before time for their shows to open and are then surprised that the people do not flock to their theaters. Even when they do get a good audience, as many theaters still continue to do, how far short of what a discriminating public are entitled to expect is the presentation of the program. A visit last week to one of our large New York theaters resulted in just such a disappointment. A splendid series of films were shown without the slightest attempt at a suitable setting; no particularly appropriate music where the greatest possible opportunity was presented; no effort at special lighting or stage setting, with one commendable exception at the very opening; no building up to a final climax and burst of enthusiasm on the part of the audience although the theater management are likely to wait a lifetime for a similar opportunity to do all of these very things. When so much has been accomplished along this line it is surprising to find a lack of effort or ambition or desire to make the most of every program.

WE all lose interest at times and just plod along without any enthusiasm in our work. In the exhibiting end of the moving picture business, with a few shining exceptions, we seem to have reached that stage where the first enthusiasm and novelty has worn off and are content to go along without any attempt at progress or improvement. It was a realization of this condition in the projection end of things that determined the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and F. H. Richardson of our staff to undertake his present tour of lectures or talks to operators and managers. The letters received from all parts of the country that Mr. Richardson has visited show that a revival of interest on the part of operators in their work and its possibilities for improvement has been an immediate result. Greater interest, enthusiasm, pride and intelligence in our work is bound to result in improvement. Better projection and improvement in theater management must result in increased patronage and better business all round. The possibilities are far from exhausted, there are yet large deposits of hidden ore to be mined and coined in the amusement and entertainment of the American public and the moving picture men have far and away the best medium for the purpose.

Taken on Trust

By Louis Reeves Harrison

THAT is what a program means.
There is a claim made by producers
That their product gets poor showing,
That the presentation of good pictures
Is far behind intrinsic merit.
There are no doubt exceptional cases
Where features are not done full justice,
But how about the general average?
Is not high merit itself exceptional?
When theaters book a regular program
There is a vast audience to consider.
More people go to see the movies
Six times over than to theaters
Of all other kinds and classes.
The millions of one day's attendance
Represent our national spirit,
Our steady stride toward advancement,
Our moving on to something better
Than what is or ever has been.
What is there at all responsive
To our hopes for human betterment
In the stale old repetitions
Of what was done in days gone by?
What in the wornout imitations
Of Camille, Carmen and Cinderella?
Where is all that wondrous merit
Of production that we hear about?
How about the exhibitor's program?
How can it be made from such stuff?
Where is all the lovely imagery
Promised by this vigorous young art?
No producer made our audiences.
Those audiences really made possible
The wealth produced by moving pictures.
Those audiences have been recruited
From home life and from the family.
They love the vital, human story.
Many are simple and good-natured.
They are not at all hard to satisfy.
But they are quite capable of enjoying
A greatly improved entertainment.
The exhibitor may have his faults,
But he is at least progressive.
No one knows better than he
That his whole success or failure
Hangs on what his customers witness
On the screen, not on the billboard.
Big posters may excite the curious—
They are like the printed menu
Pasted on a restaurant window—
They lead the passerby to enter—
Thereafter it depends on service
Whether or not he comes again.
We want no programs of red paper.
Bills of fare are not to feed on.
Our greatest need is comprehension
Of this subject in its entirety;
Not this shallow view or that one
Limited to one personal requirement.
The fault lies less with exhibitors
Than with those who fail to recognize
That something different is needed
To picture American characteristics.
Our people have an impulse toward art,
A large amount of inventive genius,
A tendency to business organization,
Some strong ideals of racial honor,
Chivalrous sentiments, kindly hearts
And a lot of humorous, common sense.
How often are they so visualized?
We have not yet achieved a nation.
We have only thrown some light upon
A government of pure democracy.
We are in the midst of self discovery,
Seeking, finding and advancing,
Always and ever looking forward.
The New Art bears a strong resemblance
To ourselves, both in its crudity
And in its capability of development.
Why should it not look forward with us?
It should be far more representative
Of our thoughts and inclinations,
Keep in contact with our experiences,
Keep step with our general movement.
We are in a period of readjustment,
Entering upon great responsibilities.
There'll be drama in our new relations
With that old world lost in turmoil.
How can we trace romantic meaning
In our part of earth's great drama
Now unfolding before our eyes?
What is to be the outcome for us?
What a great field is lying fallow!
A thousand and one nights of story,
Of struggle, romance and adventure,
All vital and close to our hearts,
Are unfolding to the eyes of genius,
While we dabble in stale theatricals,
Ancient opera and unbaked fiction.
Turn some brain-light on the unfolding
Of a greater drama than all centuries
Of past history have yet provided.
That work means a breadth of vision
For the men who tell the stories,
And we shall need some bigger brains
Among those who use selective taste
In visualization at the studio.
There will always be plenty of boneheads—
The supply of them seems inexhaustible—
Including those who come from Wall Street
To transform a game of artistry
Into stock-jobbing propositions.
The commercial idea of a program
Is one partly good and mainly rotten,
Which goes to show how little men know
About providing for the entertainment
Of people by millions in great variety.
The truth is that not a single firm
Of all those making moving pictures
Has a good will worth considering,
Not based on three big factors,
The play itself and story structure,
The handling by imaginative treatment,
And interpretation by fine performers.
Without these three in combination
There can be no dependable program.
Only one factor is not sufficient.
Even two can be spoiled by the third.
There is but one safe road to quality—
That of making it uniform and dependable,
Combining all factors and therefore worthy
Of full confidence when taken on trust.

Individual Producers

By Sam Spedon

THE advent of the individual producers into the motion picture industry suggests that it is being divided into units and the mobilized studio forces of several companies of players under one roof and one producing company is rapidly decreasing.

Every day we hear and read of individual producers and players forming their own companies, releasing under their own names and distributing their pictures through different exchanges.

May Account for Present Conditions.

This state of affairs may account for many things that we are all debating just now. It may account for the demand for stars who have become so well and favorably known the trade-marked producing companies mean nothing to them and, as they cannot afford to pay them the salaries they demand, the stars therefore prefer to gamble on the draft of their names and go into business for themselves. It may account for the published invitations by several exchanges that they will be glad to release any pictures of standard quality, and it may account also for many individual productions of different standards already being released through some of the established exchanges. This ready and proffered means of distribution is certainly an encouragement to individual producers and incidentally gives hope to many of the "fly-by-might" speculators. It may be accountable for the formation of the many projected exchanges.

Mergers Perhaps.

Mergers of all kinds are springing up like toads after a storm ,traceable to the same cause perhaps. Recently we have read about the exhibitors' circuit mergers, and consequently the demand for open booking. The merger exhibitor says he wants the best pictures, the best drawing players or whatever constitutes the best. He insists upon having a choice and rebels against dealing exclusively with one or two exchanges and using prescribed brands. The exhibitors' circuits contemplate purchasing pictures outright and possibly producing pictures for their own use. We heard a man state only a few days ago before a body of exhibitors that it would only be a question of a few months or years before a combination of exhibitors would produce their own pictures and he would be willing to show them how to do it; declaring it was no trick, only a matter of brains.

Every Convenience.

"Wise men build houses that fools may dwell therein" applies to the motion picture industry, although many of us may think it should be reversed. Studios have been built and fitted up all over the United States, many of them now idle, players, producers, cameramen, etc., etc., have been educated and made in them so today all these essentials can be employed by the week, month or year and the producer is not obliged to assume obligations of overhead beyond the time necessary to produce his picture. Commercial plants are now established here and there, which will do developing, printing and trimming if need be. With all these ready made helps and conveniences at hand is it any wonder we have so many individual and venturesome producers entering the field? Yesterday we heard a representative of an old line producing company say, if the worst came it would change its plant into a commercial establishment and manufacture for industrial and individual producers.

The Creator.

State rights buyers are becoming more numerous, because they can offer pictures on an open market and calculate on a certain basis of profit on their purchase price. They buy on merit and quality and sell accordingly. The individual producer is the offspring of the state rights system, which is the most active competitor of the exchange system as conducted on the program plan without corresponding quality. The state rights exchange is a possible and probable development of the near future to be counted on by the industry, owing to individual productions.

Tabloid Splashes

By Sam Spedon.

IT'S a queer world where nobody lives and we will be lucky if we get out of this one alive. If we didn't talk we wouldn't say anything. If we didn't write we wouldn't have anything to read. We will therefore proceed to "shoot" a few tabloid splashes of vulcanized facts and comments into this page for what they are worth.

The Cause of Most Troubles.

Nine out of ten of the industry tell us the business is in a terribly chaotic state and follow the information with the query, "What is the trouble?" We do not pose as an oracle, but we venture this opinion—Most of all the trouble lies in over production. Quality is always sacrificed to quantity. It is a breeder of business stagnation. It leads to misrepresentation and cutthroat competition.

The Remedy.

"Very good Eddie!" We admit it and venture to advance a remedy—Produce less and better pictures. The better the pictures the sooner the public will become accustomed to them and demand them. When the public demands them the exhibitor will demand them, because the public will pay to see what it wants. The better the pictures, the better the theaters and the better the theaters the better the conditions under which the pictures will be shown. It dissolves itself into a survival of the fittest. The best will always supplant the worst and exeunt rotten pictures with their rotten producers and rotten exhibitors into the garbage can of oblivion. The sooner they are eliminated the better the business will be.

Be Cheerful.

Now that war and belated summer are here we all have more or less cause to be anxious. Statistics show that in time of national anxiety there is need for relaxation and mental diversion and there are no greater and more rational than motion pictures. We of the industry, as well as others, may naturally be depressed, but we can at least look for a strong reaction that will bring with it a beneficial outcome. There are many things to make us glad during this crisis, we have been relieved of a grievous war tax on films and incidentally we have received the recognition of the Government, which will place motion pictures in a stronger and better position than ever.

Would Exempt Majority of Picture Theaters

Senate Finance Committee Votes to Leave Untaxed All Straight Houses Where Admission Doesn't Exceed 25 Cents

Washington, D. C., June 1.

THE Senate Finance Committee today tentatively agreed to exempt from the admission taxes provided for in the general revenue bill which passed the House of Representatives last week all moving picture theaters the admission charge to which does not exceed twenty-five cents. It is an important fact in connection with this action that the exemption applies only to "straight" motion picture shows—in other words, in the case of vaudeville it will not obtain. In announcing this action, Senator F. M. Simmons, chairman of the Senate Finance Committe, stated that this exemption applied to moving picture theaters only, and it was done because of the educational opportunities offered the poor man by moving pictures. He likened these smaller-priced admission houses to the five-cent cigar, which the Committee has also refused to tax because of its being a poor man's proposition.

Senator Simmons declared that the proposal to exempt the theaters charging not more than twenty-five cents for admission, emanated from Senator Boies Penrose, of Pennsylvania, and when the latter was interviewed by the Washington correspondent of the Moving Picture World as to why this action had been taken, he declared it to have been the sentiment of the committee that because of the educational opportunities afforded the people by moving pictures at least some of the shows should be exempt from the tax and the twenty-five-cent admission seems to have met the requirements all over the country better than any other figure.

"For instance," said Senator Penrose, in explaining the committee's action, "in the north, the twenty-five cent show remains the poor man's proposition, while in the small towns and villages of the south, the five and ten cent shows predominate, with the quarter shows in the larger cities, so that the latter amount seemed both equitable and acceptable to all of the members of the committee.

"We desired to favor the 'movies' because of their educational value, and because of the fact that during the stress of the war, and the anxieties and distress that might exist among the people, our citizens should not be deprived of this cheap amusement.

"This plan was adopted as the culmination of a great deal of discussion that was had within the committee. The amount of the exemption was in controversy. The United States is a pretty big country and the rate I proposed seemed to best meet all conditions throughout. There was a motion to tax all motion picture theaters, from the cheapest, the five-cent show, to the most expensive, but this was voted down, and the majority of the committee also voted down the move to tax the ten-cent shows and all others for which a larger admission charge was made."

Senators Penrose and Simmons both wanted to impress it upon the readers of this paper that this tax exemption has only been tentatively agreed upon for the reason that the action was not taken by the full committee, there having been seven or eight absentees. Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, stated that he was sure that at least two or three of these would favor the cutting out of all theaters from the tax provision where the admission charged did not exceed twenty-five cents. "We do not look upon this as final," they said, but from a knowledge of conditions it is safe to say that the committee will not stray from their purpose as outlined above.

Senator Penrose referred to the visit to Washington of a large number of moving picture men and stated that their appearance and the facts and figures which they offered were very helpful in enabling the committee to arrive at its final decision. He laughingly remarked that there were so many men, and so many different views, that at times it was somewhat confusing. No regular hearings were held other than those previously announced at which the motion picture men were present en masse; the various men merely visiting the senators individually.

The Committee declined to make any exemption in the case of shows other than those devoted entirely to motion pictures, for they could see nothing educational about them, and educational features of the amusement industries were all that they had eyes for.

The provisions of "Title VII—War Tax on Admissions and Dues," as far as moving picture and other theaters are concerned, as adopted by the House of Representatives, are as follows:

Sec. 700. That from and after the first day of June, nineteen hundred and seventeen, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission or subscription to any place to be paid by the person admitted, and a tax of five cents for each admission of each person (except in the case of a bona fide employee and children under twelve years of age and municipal officers on official business) admitted free to any place for admission to which a charge is made, to be paid by the person so admitted. In the case of persons having the permanent use of boxes or seats in an opera house or any place of amusement or a lease for the use of such box or seat in such opera house or place of amusement there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to ten percentum of the amount for which a similar box or seat is sold for performance or exhibition at which the box or seat is used or reserved by or for the lessee or holder: Provided, That the tax on admission of children under twelve of years of age where an admission charge is made shall in every case be 1 cent. These taxes shall not be imposed in the case of a place, the maximum charge for admission to which is 5 cents. Where the words "5 cents" now appear, under the action of the committee, when the Senate bill is reported to the Upper House, there will appear "25 cents."

It is further provided that "No tax shall be levied under this title in respect to any admissions all of the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious, educational, or charitable institutions, societies, or organizations, or admission to agricultural fairs all the proceeds of which inure exclusively for agricultural purposes.

"The term 'admission' as used in this title includes seats at tables, reserved or otherwise, and other similar accommodations, and the charges made therefor."

Senate Action Gratifies First National

Amendment Exempting Admissions of 25 Cents in Line with Association's Recommendations.

THE action of the Senate Finance Committee in voting to exempt from taxation all houses charging admission of 25 cents or less will not surprise one representative group of film men. That it will please them goes without saying, for it is toward this end that for the past three weeks the members of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit have been exerting all their energies.

The first steps taken by the association were on May 11, on which date General Manager J. D. Williams sent a telegram to all members urging them to get in touch with their Congressmen. This was the message:

"Tax proposal Washington getting serious. Get in touch immediately by wire with your Senators and Congressmen recommending them to have all tickets up to twenty-five cents exempt from taxation, otherwise half the picture shows will be compelled to close."

The sending of the telegram and the idea underlying it were the result of Mr. Williams' experiences in Australia at the time that colony was framing its war tax. When by reason of his wide knowledge of amusement conditions in the big island he had been asked by certain legislators to give them the benefit of his experience he had suggested that all houses charging less than a shilling be exempted. The advice was not accepted in full, but the Australian Parliament did exempt up to and including six pence admission, or approximately what in this country would be 15 cents.

All the subscribers to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, as well as their associated exhibitors, have been very much on the job ever since. Tom Moore, whose business interests are in the capital city, was the chief representative of the association, and he was ably aided by all the members. Mr. Williams explained to a World man that the officers and members of the First National were keenly alive to the possibilities for harm that might lie in an ill-considered war tax on motion picture theaters, and especially as to the effect of the measure on the smaller exhibitors.

"While all of our members are owners of large houses," said Mr. Williams, "they never for a moment lose sight of the fact that the great majority of houses in this country come within the classification of small theaters and that they are consequently the backbone of the industry. It is from these enterprises that must come eventually the profit in all motion picture productions."

The First National does not believe that the fight for the smaller exhibitor has been won as yet. It believes the Senate amendment is likely to encounter opposition in the House of Representatives, and that all exhibitors should lose no opportunity to impress upon their representatives in the House just how they would be affected by the original measure. In the furtherance of this idea, under date of June 2, the following letter has been sent to all franchise holders of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit:

Since sending out the telegram and letter of the 11th May to our franchise holders regarding the exemption of all tickets up to 25 cents on the proposed amusement war tax most wonderful work has been accomplished by many of our members. The personal interviews which have been obtained with many of the Senators and Congressmen representing the territories covered by our franchises have had an excellent effect on the question.

The Senate Finance Committee, as no doubt you will have read by the time this letter reaches you, has agreed to this exemption and the matter is sure to be referred back to the House in a few days. Keep at the good work. Our arguments are right, and we will win out in the long run I feel sure for the following reasons:

(1) Seventy-five per cent. of the people who patronize 5 and 10 cent shows have not a sufficient income to be taxable.

(2) The Government has no desire that the poorer class of people should be reminded each time they enter a picture show that they must pay war tax.

(3) The time and trouble expended in collecting this tax, both by the Government and the exhibitors, would be out of all reason in proportion to the amount collected.

(4) The Government has no desire to tax educational institutions, and our 5 and 10 cent picture shows certainly come under that heading for the poorer classes of our population.

(5) Should the 5 and 10 cent shows be taxed a great many exhibitors would charge 4 and 9 cents admission in order to make the amount of admission and tax an even coin.

There are many more reasons which could be advanced for the exemption of tickets up to 25 cents, and we sincerely trust that you will keep up your good work along these lines.

I would suggest that you also impress upon your Senator and Congressman that if the tax were imposed on these shows it would certainly be repealed before it had been in operation a year.

FILMS TO BOOM LIBERTY BOND BUYING.

From now until the close of the great Liberty Loan campaign the motion picture theaters of America will make a daily appeal upon the screen to twenty million people to invest in the new issue of Government war bonds. Both motion picture trailers and slides will be used.

The big campaign has been inaugurated by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. One committee already has begun shipping seventy-foot trailers to all theaters. These will be attached to a reel to be screened at every showing, thus making certain that everyone who visits a motion picture theater will have the direct appeal put up to him.

The trailer, which will take over a minute to project, makes much of President Wilson's patriotic words at the close of his speech, asking Congress to decree that a state of war existed. Following a speaking picture of President Wilson is this paragraph:

> "To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured."

The Government requests that publicity regarding the Liberty Loan shall cease on the 15th day of June, as subscriptions to the loan close at this time; accordingly, this trailer need not be shown after that date. Slides will also be used to supplement the trailers during the next two weeks.

SCHERTZINGER DIRECTS RAY IN "SUDDEN JIM."

Director Victor Schertzinger, with Charles Ray and Sylvia Bremer, with a company of twenty people, returned to Culver City this week, from Felton, Cal., where they have filmed the principal scenes of "Sudden Jim," by Clarence Kelland, in which Thomas H. Ince will present Ray as star. A trestle, nine hundred feet long and eighty feet high, in places, which has been abandoned by a lumber camp, was turned over to the Triangle-Ince players for destruction. Three hundred pounds of dynamite and black powder was used in blowing up this trestle for an important scene in this story, and it has proven the most realistic scene of its kind ever produced.

LAMBERT HILLYER NOW A DIRECTOR.

Director Lambert Hillyer began work this week on Olive Thomas' second starring vehicle under the Triangle-Ince banner. Hillyer is the author of the story, as well as the director. Charles Gunn has been selected as the leading male character. Miss Thomas will be presented in a part well suited to her real self, as she will portray a girl who goes to the big city and becomes the idol of Broadway, winning her girlhood sweetheart after many exciting adventures.

Selznick Would Enioin Miss Young

Files Suit in District Court to Prevent Her From Appearing in Films Produced by Another.

THE Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, Inc., is determined to compel Clara Kimball Young to carry out the terms of her contract with the corporation to appear exclusively in feature films produced under the direction of Lewis Selznick until September, 1921, and with that end in view has filed a suit in the United States District Court to enjoin her from appearing in films produced under the management of any other company or individual.

In the complaint filed on behalf of the corporation by Konta & Kirchway it is alleged that the film actress is attempting to rescind her contract and procure a modification of the agreement with the object of obtaining terms more remunerative to herself for her services and that she has attempted to create the impression that the corporation has perpetrated a fraud upon her to raise an excuse for breaking the contract.

Despite the fact that the corporation claims the actress has refused to appear in the production of anv films since last March it is alleged she has been receiving her salary of $1,000 weekly continuously and has now received advances of $25,000 for which she is alleged to have rendered no services whateyer.

Under the terms of the contract executed at the time of the formation of the corporation which was organized to exploit feature films starring Clara Kimball Young and as subsequently modified at her request, she received 499,000 shares of stock in the corporation and became vice-president and treasurer of her company.

The complaint recites further that the defendant induced the corporation to elect Harry A. Garson a member of the board of directors last January and that since that time she has followed his advice in all matters relating to business. relations with the corporation and that she is now carrying on negotiations to appear in films under his direction.

The contract provides for the appearance of the actress in eight feature film productions annually, and the company formed to exploit productions starring her that if she fails to carry out the terms of her contract the company will be compelled to go out of business.

The actress alleges that despite the fact that the original arrangement when she agreed to appear in films under the direction of Selznick provided that they would share the profits she alleges that he formed a corporation known as the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc., which became the distributing medium of the releases and through the formation of this corporation she alleges others participated in the profits to her damage.

MARGERY BENNETT IN "THE GIRL, GLORY."

Margery Bennett, the younger sister of Enid Bennett, plays an important part in her sister's latest screen success, "The Girl, Glory," by C. Gardner Sullivan, in which Enid is presented by Thomas H. Ince.

Margery has only been in this country for a few months, having left her home in Australia to join her sister in screen work, and this is her first prominent part since joining the Ince forces.

As the chum of Glory Wharton, the granddaughter of a Civil War veteran, she displays marked aptitude in her rendition of the quaint characterization, which is enhanced by her appealing girlishness. The part calls for a little Miss Prim—severe dress, plain coiffure, harsh lines. But, for all this, it is evident that Enid Bennett's sister will run her a close race for beauty honors. One sees evidence behind the "makeup" that Margery is a beautiful girl.

YOUNG TO DIRECT BESSIE BARRISCALE.

James Young, who will direct Bessie Barriscale's first Paralta production, "Rose o' Paradise," founded on the popular American novel by Grace Miller White, author of "Tess of the Storm Country," is himself making the working manuscript. Mr. Young has not only made a reputation as a director, but he also enjoys high standing in dramatic circles as a playwright and adapter of novels to dramatic interpretation. The work of photographing "Rose o' Paradise" will begin the second week in June.

CAMERAMAN DE VINNA WITH PARALTA.

Clyde De Vinna, one of the most expert of cameramen, has been engaged by the Bessie Barriscale production company to photograph this actress in "Rose o' Paradise." Mr. De Vinna's contract with Triangle expires in June and he will then join Miss Barriscale at her Hollywood studio

Richardson Looks Over Great Northwest

Visits Aberdeen, Tacoma, Seattle and Everett, Washington—He Finds Above-the-Average Houses in Seattle

Aberdeen, Washington.

ABERDEEN, Washington, lies fifty-four miles off the main route. To make it from Portland, one must get off at Centralia, climb aboard a jerkwater train on a tank road, ride thirteen bumptious miles, get off and climb into another train which carries one to the destination. At Centralia I found W. A. Kirkpatrick, president of Chehalis-Centralia union, subjecting all skirtless passengers to a rigid once-over, seeking opportunity, so he said, to "shake the hand of Richardson." The union was much disappointed that I could not stop a day with them, but it could not be done, and right here in Centralia our angriest angry passions went on a spree. In New York I had doped it out that I could leave Portland at 2.10 p. m., make connections at Centralia and get into Aberdeen at 7.40, but three separate railway passenger agents in Portland swore a mighty swear that it could n-o-t be done, so we wired Aberdeen to expect us at 9.50 p. m., and took the 4.10 instead, only to discover that Portland passenger agents are full of prunes, and that the 2.10 d-o-e-s connect. I bit (almost) a chunk out of the corner of the station. Nineteen thousand miles of loop the loop is just one dear, sweet thing after another. G-r-r-r!

At Aberdeen I found W. H. Shields, president Local Union 429, and another whose name has slipped from memory's halls, waiting, and soon we were busy projecting ideas into the brain of a gathering of twenty Aberdeen, Hoquiam and Montesano managers and operators. There were times when the operators giggled, as they stole covert glances at solemn visaged managers, and other times when managers grinned broadly at the operators, who wore faces which would instantly have secured them jobs as professional pall bearers. But the gathering was appreciative, also it had wisdom to realize that although the medicine might not be sugar coated, it was, nevertheless, good for the system, and they not only swallowed it gracefully, but evinced willingness, even after a two-hour and fifteen minute talk, to take more.

After the lecture, a remarkably well served light lunch was indulged in. It consisted of a neatly arranged crab or lobster salad, and two slices of what I took to be veal loaf, coffee, olives, pickles and ice cream and cake served upon a flower decked table. It struck me that this spread was just the thing for a midnight affair. It does not have the somewhat objectionable crudeness of a so-called dutch lunch, looks nice, assembles the people at a prettily decorated table, is not at all expensive, and does not require much time for its serving—an important item.

The Aberdeen local contains only nine men, yet it made a most creditable showing at the lecture—twenty men present. After the lecture a vote of thanks was tendered the Moving Picture World and the projection editor, who replied that the best thanks would be to put into practice those things set forth in the lecture.

Aberdeen and Hoquiam lie practically adjoining, and are centers of a lumber district. There are huge saw mills, and on cars I saw logs any of which would produce ample lumber to build a moderate sized frame house complete.

I left at 8.30 a. m. and had no chance to even look at Aberdeen theaters.

En route to Tacoma, I changed cars again at Gate and at Centralia, and found President W. A. Kilpatrick, president Centralia-Chehalis Local Union 401, again waiting, this time accompanied by Secretary R. R. Metz and Brothers R. V. Griner and H. A. Kirkpatrick, with whom I had a most pleasant twenty minute chat.

I snapped them, with accompanying result. Glad to know you, and to cement our long distance friendship with a personal acquaintance.

Tacoma, Washington.

At Tacoma, Washington, the boys were holding down the station platform, while outside purred the usual choo-choo wagon. Our happy home for the day was the Hotel Tacoma, which sets on the edge of the bluff overlooking apparently about four-fifths of creation. During the afternoon we were automobiled out to Defiance Park, a most charmingly beautiful suburban public park with wooded drives. We also had opportunity to view Tacoma's Stadium—a gigantic structure of concrete, seating, as I remember it, about 30,000 people, though fully 40,000 have been within its limits upon gala-day occasions. It was this stadium we were consulted about something like a year ago, with regard to the projection of a 35-foot picture. Truly the thing is a huge proposition; also incidentally it is a unique one in that it is in the form of a half oval, wth the open end facing directly out toward and something like 200 feet above the surface of Puget Sound. It is owned by the city and controlled by the Board of Education. In my judgment, a 25-foot picture could be projected with fairly good results, always provided the operating room be located in approximately the center of the stadium field. If it were located at the rear end the focal length of the necessary objective lens would be so long that it would be extremely difficult to match up the optical system of the projector in a way to avoid tremendous waste of light.

During the afternoon I inspected a few Tacoma theaters. Tacoma still has a considerable number of the old type "storeroom" theaters, and in some of these the auditorium lighting is considerably worse than bad, though the operating rooms were very fair for that type of house—that is to say as regards size. In all cases, however, they were flooded with light, almost the entire back end of one being glass. In the auditorium of the Melbourne theatre there were 17 bright sidelights, a brilliant red light in the upper right hand corner, a "ladies parlor" sign to the left of the screen, quite brilliantly illuminated; also there was a clock to the left of the screen. Altogether, that auditorium contained twenty-four lights, practically every one of them objectionable in greater or less degree.

A. E. Soult, one of the old timers, and a personal friend whom we knew in 1913, and whose friendship we valued and do still value, was in charge of projection. Everything considered, Brother Soult was delivering good results.

In the Bijou, another storeroom type theater, the inevitable, omnipresent, picture-murdering clock was in evidence; also there was a brilliant red light to the right of the screen, and bright daylight showing through two fan openings, one to the right and one to the left of the screen. There was some discoloration of the light, also the speed was too high, but, working under such conditions, the operator has little encouragement to do high class work. At the rear of the house a loud, unmusical piano pounded away, to what must most certainly have been the intense annoyance of those seated at the rear. I know I was seated there (and I had paid my way in) and would cheerfully have heaved a brick into the works of that music murderer by the time I had sat there as much as three minutes. Not satisfied with a few incandescent lamps burning in the operating room, practically the whole rear of the room was built out, in an extension, with glass. Of course under such conditions it could not be expected the operator would deliver anything very fine in the way of screen results.

The Apollo theater, A. Anderson manager, H. H. Woodin and Bert Campbell operators, is a modern, high-class photoplay theater. The auditorium lighting is correct, except for the usual nuisance in the way of a timepiece. The operating room is of good design, but was flooded with daylight. On the walls I saw a remarakably fine kit of tools. The ports were of goodly size, the ventilation was not subject to criticism, and in general the operating room conditions, aside from the daylight, which entered through an open window, were excellent, though I don't find anything in my notes concerning running water. Possibly I overlooked that. Brother Woodin is a bit of a genius, and is ably seconded by Brother Campbell in the various things he has evolved for the improvement of the Apollo projection plant. He has two Simplex machines, driven by Power's speed controllers, the method of attachment of which is quite clever. Current is supplied by a Westinghouse motor generator set, and friends Woodin and Campbell have evolved or invented a change-over method, which is excellent.

They start the second arc of 20 amperes, making a total of 90 amperes which the motor generator is delivering. The machine will carry this load indefinitely, it being of 90 ampere capacity; when the time for change-over comes, the boys move a switch, which operates automatically to extinguish the arc on the running machine, increase the amperage of the other machine to normal, and instantly cut off the picture on one machine and open the aperature of the other. In other words, the manipulation of this switch not only changes the amperage at the arc, but it simultaneously and instantly cuts off one picture and puts on the other. It struck me as a corking good stunt. After the boys have got their invention protected, they will no doubt supply a description to the projection department, so that you may all know just how it works.

In the evening I lectured to a 100 per cent. attendance of operators and managers of Tacoma, the lecture being followed by a very nicely arranged banquet. The men listened with close attention and the audience was appreciative.

Though I landed on them pretty hard, still they accepted it philosophically, and even good-naturedly. I am told that after the lecture a number of them remained, arguing different points until 4.30 in the morning. The consensus of opinion was our efforts in Tacoma would result in good to the industry of that city. An amusing thing happened during this argument. An operator was in the city with some show. He belongs to a union of a large city in the Middle West. The boys were arguing with regard to the ratio of speed of the intermittent movement, and this good brother proceeded to explain to the assembled multitude that the Power's machine didn't have a 6—1 movement, but a "16—1," there being 16 pictures to each foot of film, at which the aforesaid assembled multitude gave three cheers and a tiger in recognition of the superior knowledge of the east.

Seattle, Washington.

From Tacoma to Seattle I played false to my first love, abandoning the rattler for watercraft. The sail on Puget Sound from Tacoma to Seattle is delightful, and although nearly frozen by the early morning crispness, I remained manfully at my post on the upper deck, absorbing it all. At the landing Brother William Ladd, financial secretary Local Union No. 154, and Brothers Bohnert and Jack J. Hyde were waiting, and soon the Butler Hotel was reached. In view of what took place in Seattle in 1913 it was peculiarly befitting that I should find awaiting me at the Butler Hotel the following letter from Local Union 110, Chicago:

"F. H. Richardson—Dear Sir and Brother: Upon receipt of your reply to our Brother Fred Havill's letter, our president appointed the entire executive board as a committee to receive you upon your arrival in Chicago, and we have notified the Exhibitors' League that you will be the guest of Local Union No. 110 while in Chicago."

The foregoing letter is quoted from memory, as I have not the original at hand at this moment, and was signed by the entire executive board and by President Armstrong. It will give me great pleasure to accept the hospitality of Local 110, under conditions which justify mutual friendship. I sincerely hope and trust that the cordial relations thus established will continue through the years to come, and that my Chicago friends and I will never again have reason to call each other any names but nice ones.

As I well remember from my previous visit to the City of the Totem Pole, it has several magnificent examples of the photoplay theater, the first one of which, the Clemmer, had just been completed at the time of my previous visit in 1913, and was described at that time, in considerable detail, in the columns of the Moving Picture World by yours truly.

The limitations of space would not permit of any kind of adequate detailed description of the several splendid photoplay theaters of which Seattle is the proud possessor, but I feel that some words of praise are certainly due the magnificent installation at the Liberty theater, owned by the Greater Theater Companies of Seattle, of which Jensen & Von Herberg are managing directors.

The Liberty theater seats approximately two thousand. Its picture is brilliantly lighted, and comes from an operating room located on the main floor, directly opposite the screen. This room is small, but well ventilated and well equipped. Aside from the size of the room, there is little to be desired in the projection plant. There is hot and cold water, the lights were out, at least at the time of my visit, and conditions were as they should be.

Projection is under the supervision of Jack High, chief operator for the Jensen & Von Herberg houses, which include their theaters in Seattle, in Portland and in Butte, Mont. Projection in the Liberty is under the direct charge of Paul Kalushe, assisted by William Hartford. The Liberty is a truly splendid example of the photoplay theater.

Beginning with the sign, the Liberty impresses one as being "different." A long curved lobby leads in to the back of the auditorium. The upper levels are reached by sloping, red-carpeted inclines, or "gradients," which curve gracefully around in the most delightful way imaginable. Half way up their slope, these inclines pass through an oval-shaped mezzanine floor, in which are, right and left, beautifully equipped lounging rooms, off which open rest rooms for women, free telephone booths and smoking and toilet rooms for men. It is truly the most charming thing of the kind I have ever viewed.

The gradients of the Liberty theater may well be copied by other high class houses. It is a thing which eastern cities will do well to investigate. The main auditorium is perhaps, while just as good, no better than many other high class houses which I have inspected. The lighting is excellent on the main floor, but in the balcony I do not like it so well. It comes from a cove in the forward curve of the ceiling. It might better be changed to the sides. Also the organ light is unshaded. Taken altogether, aside from these two minor criticisms, the Liberty theater of Seattle is, as I said in the first place, a splendid example of photoplay construction and decoration.

The Coliseum is another fine house, with not such excellent auditorium lighting as has the Liberty, but with charmingly arranged curved inclines, and very prettily decorated rest rooms. The operating room of this theatre is of goodly size, is opposite the screen, and contains a remarkably complete, inclosed switchboard, handling the entire auditorium lighting. Jack High, chief operator in charge of the Greater Theater Company's projection, is chief operator at the Coliseum, assisted by A. E. Ester.

At the New Mission theater I had the pleasure of meeting E. G. Berg, manager, a most pleasant man, and U. E. Gatchett and George Klushe, operators. The New Mission has a good operating room.

Taken by and large, the photoplay theaters in Seattle are, it seems to me, distinctly above the average. The operators are, at least for the most part, good men, who only need more careful study of the technical end of their profession to become distinctly high class men. I did not see sufficient of the screen results in Seattle to make intelligent comment, but I am told that it is good. During the afternoon we were, through the courtesy of W. H. Winters, of the Seattle Stage Lighting Company, automobubbled around over the very much wrinkled landscape. There was a serious mistake made concerning Seattle in the beginning. Before laying out the city, they should have ironed down the bumps. During the rainy season it gets well sprinkled, so that the ironing process could have been easily carried out, and then you wouldn't have to "put 'er in low and pinch 'er tail" going up, and make the brake shriek a song of protest coming down. But it is all very pretty nevertheless, and that Seattle is the real thing in an up-to-date article in a Pacific Coast city this writer will cheerfully bear witness.

During my stay Billie Ladd took friend Winters and myself to his boarding house, and we had the real goods in the way of a home cooked dinner, together with certain amber fluids which, considering the dryness of the state, looked suspicious, but, of course, were not. Home-cooked meals are rapidly becoming an event in our young and much be-deviled life.

At 11.30 we lectured to a practically 100 per cent. attendance of operators and the more enterprising of Seattle managers, together with a sprinkling of exchange men. The average exchange man isn't sufficiently interested in a matter of this kind, which has directly to do with the conservation of his property, to honor the affair with his presence. One would think, however, that an exchange manager would show the operators enough courtesy to give up a couple of hours of time at their request, whether he really wanted to or not. Following the lecture, an adjournment was had to a cafe, where we advanced upon, surrounded and captured a flower-decked table, laden with goodies. At 3 a. m. the multitude departed homeward, full to repletion, fully satisfied, and carrying with them quite some number of things to think over in the days to come.

In a previous article I spoke of Brothers A. J. Moran and H. L. Percy, who joined me at Medford, Oregon. These men are going to put in a theater in Medford. They accompanied me to Portland, Aberdeen, Tacoma and Seattle, listening to the lecture four times. Their explanation was that they desired to get all the information they possibly could, and that one could not possibly absorb a lecture of that kind at one sitting. This certainly showed commendable enterprise on the part of Brothers Percy and Moran, who are themselves operators, now blossomed forth as owner-managers.

Everett, Washington.

Months ago I wrote the Everett operators Union, asking if it desired that I include that city in my list of stops, but was not accorded the courtesy of a reply. As it was necessary that I pass through Everett, I again wrote, and this pried loose from the secretary a note (authorized by the Union, I have since learned) saying that due to lack of the union label, the union could hold no communication with me.

Inasmuch as that would debar the organization (and presumably its individual members) from corresponding with practically every one (under this rule a member of the Everett Union could not answer a letter from his mother, unless her letter bore the union label) except sister locals, I decided to drop off in Everett for a couple of hours, once-over the situation, and do a little Sherlock Holmesing on my own account.

From Seattle to Everett, thirty-four miles, I traveled by auto stage. The "stage" was a six cylinder, seven passenger touring car, driven by Mr. Speedo Getthere. Curves were nothing in his young life—nothing whatever. When we approached one I grabbed hold and hung on. A car ahead was simply something for him to pass. Get thee behind me, landscape, was evidently his favorite motto.

Arriving in Everett I found that a train for Vancouver departed in one hour—4.32 p. m. This would give me ample time to accomplish my fell design, and grab a seat therein as it passed through. So, hustling around, I located the secretary who had written the letter in question, working in a—what shall I call it? Surely not an operating room—coop-box, cubby-hole, booth, take your choice! He was running two old wooden-table, spider legged, antediluvian type projectors, propelled by home-made motor drives. Introducing myself I showed him the letter, which he admitted having written. I asked to see his plyers. With a puzzled look he handed them over. They bore no union label! nor did any of his other tools, and—this is good—while I stood talking to him his arc decided to call it a day and knock off work.

Investigation showed that the lower lamp-lead lug had either broken off through the hole, or had been clamped under the binding post that way and had fallen out. Friend Operator, while the audience patiently (were they used to it, yes-no?) waited in the darkness, stuck the broken lug under the clamp screw, tightened it up and struck his arc. But, alas! before he could start the machine it fell out again. Next time he was more successful, and the show proceeded, the spot wobbling around like a skyrocket in distress. It is to laugh! A glance into the other "operating rooms" (?) showed them to be more crowded, cramped cubby-holes, totally unfit for the projection of modern photoplays.

I set all this forth to show how utterly silly and inconsistent grown-up men can be when they try. Heaven knows if what I saw was a fair sample of conditions in Everett, and I am told it is, then that city had every need for the message I have to deliver, yet it was refused, and refused on grounds which, particularly in view of what I found, were little short of downright childish.

GAIL KANE IN "THE UNAFRAID."

"The Unafraid," an original scenario by L. Case Russell, has been chosen as the next vehicle for Gail Kane. This will be produced under the direction of Henry King, who has but recently joined the directorial forces of the American company, and will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation. Miss Kane is now working on the finishing scenes of "The Woman in Black."

Association Considers Transportation Matters

Committee Takes Up Questions Affecting Shipment of Film and Advertising Supplies.

THE transportation committee of the N. A. M. P. I. has just secured a ruling from the Bureau of Explosives providing that films may be transported on steamers carrying passengers under the same conditions as are laid down by the Interstate Commerce Commission as regards the packing and labeling of the same.

A change has been made in the war revenue bill reducing the tax from ten to six per cent. on all express shipments. This will be of interest to all exhibitors and exchange managers.

The Bureau of Explosives filed several complaints covering shipments of film which were not in accordance with the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission and requested the committee to notify the exchanges and exhibitors whose names were given that it will be necessary for them to comply with the rules in making future shipments.

The American Express Company requested suggestions from the committee regarding the return of film shipments which are not delivered within forty-eight hours. It was stated the company has not returned undelivered shipments, but has been obliged to store the films while endeavoring to locate the consignees. Lack of sufficient or incorrect addresses cause inconvenience and additional expense and the exhibitors and exchange managers should exercise greater care in addressing shipments.

Consideration was given to the adoption of a uniform shipping tag and label, and action was deferred until the next meeting. The committee has protested against the policy recently adopted by several express companies in advancing the hour from 6 to 5 o'clock for picking express shipments. It is contended that this is a most aribtrary ruling, necessitating much inconvenience, causing delayed service and reducing the maximum amount of work obtainable by cutting off of an hour at this busy time of the day. A conference will be arranged with the representatives of the express companies in an endeavor to secure modifications of this ruling.

The committee inspected a new type of shipping case for films which is an improvement in many ways over the square cases now in use, and other types of cases are to be submitted for inspection when final action will be taken. The committee has for some time been investigating improved types of cases with a view to adopting a design which would make permit of including in all shipments of paper, stills, electros, etc. Thousands of dollars in express charges could be saved to exhibitors and exchanges if this plan could be worked out.

SELIG HAS LIBERTY BOND TRAILER.

The attention of W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, has been attracted by the action of William N. Selig in lending his aid to float the Liberty Loan. At the end of every picturepiay released by the Selig Polyscope Company there appears a length of film photographed from plastic art work. First the soldiers are seen ready to charge, with a man who closely resembles former President Roosevelt leading. Then as a soldier raises a bugle to his lips the Stars and Stripes appear fluttering in the wind. Finally these words appear:

"While These Boys Protect You Do Your Bit! Buy a Liberty Bond!"

Alfred Weiss Joins Goldwyn

Film Man Has Just Returned from Country-Wide Tour in Which He Closed Leases for Nineteen Exchanges.

ALFRED WEISS, one of the best known and ablest distribution executives in the picture industry, has joined the Goldwyn organization and will become one of the vice-presidents of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation at an election to be held in a few days.

Mr. Weiss' recent resignation from Triangle was a surprise to the few persons who heard of it. Immediately he started on a tour of the United States for Goldwyn and has closed all of the realty contracts and leases for the opening of the Goldwyn exchanges in nineteen cities covering every part of America.

Alfred Weiss.

On this trip, too, he has closed the arrangements for the Goldwyn representatives in the various territories, and all of these branch managers begin active work for Goldwyn on June 11.

Installation of fixtures and equipment is under way in most of the new Goldwyn branches, and the expectation is that all of them will be in operation by the middle of June with the exception of one or two offices which are in the course of construction.

Mr. Weiss will have full supervision over the New York City and Buffalo branches in addition to his other executive duties.

Young Goes to Officers' Training Camp

HOWARD IRVING YOUNG, who has left the Astra scenario forces to go to the officers' training camp at Fort Meyer, Va., is a young man who in less than three years has won an enviable place in the motion picture field. He was graduated from New York University in 1914, and shortly after graduation he became studio manager for the Crystal Company. Mr. Young left the Crystal Company to take a place as scenario editor for Reliance. Among the pictures he wrote here was "Hearts in Exile."

Harry O. Hoyt, at that time with Kalem, brought Mr. Young to that company. When Hoyt left Kalem to go with Fox, Mr. Young became film editor and writer of sub-titles for Kalem. Later he wrote about 100 original stories for the latter company.

About a year ago, when Mr. Hoyt was scenario editor for Metro, he brought Mr. Young to that company, where he did work that included adaptations of "The Great Secret" and "A Million a Minute." Mr. Young then went to the border with the New York militia and on his return again took up his work with Metro. His next step was to the Astra company, where his work on Mrs. Vernon Castle's second picture and a Gladys Hulette picture was interrupted by the call to arms.

Goldwyn Has Been Working Six Months

What Has Been Accomplished in That Time by the New Producing Organization.

WITH the beginning of June Goldwyn Pictures Corporation concludes its first six months of active operation with a record that has rarely been paralled by a film producing organization. The first two months of the company's existence was devoted to internal organization and the selection of the men and women who were to do the work the founders of Goldwyn had in mind. Consequently but four of the first six months have been devoted to production.

During this time three of the five Goldyn stars have worked in the Fort Lee studios—Mae Marsh, Maxine Elliott and Madge Kennedy, and a fourth star, Jane Cowl, is just starting. Mary Garden, the next star to start, is expected to be at work early in July after her return from Paris.

Goldwyn's comprehensive organization, therefore, has accomplished these things in six months:

Organized and operated two studios in New Jersey.

Completed five productions with others ready to be started.

Organized the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation to operate branches and distribute Goldwyn Pictures from a score or more American cities.

Organized Goldyn Pictures, Ltd., of Canada, with offices in six cities of the Dominion to handle Goldwyn pictures there.

Lined up a chain of the biggest motion picture theaters in America for "first runs" headed by the Strand theater, New York.

Leased and equipped branch offices throughout America and will begin opening them as early as June 15.

Prepared for virtually a simultaneous release of its productions throughout English-speaking countries with similar organization almost effected for many foreign lands.

Created its own directors and technical experts from the ranks of the greatest American artists and disregarded practically all of the production traditions of the industry.

Beginning with half of a floor in the Rogers-Peet building at 16 East Forty-second street, New York, for its executive offices Goldwyn has expanded into the occupancy of an entire floor and still finds itself crowded. The facilities do not provide the necessary space for the sheltering of Goldwyn's New York exchange, which will have to find other quarters nearby.

One of the great advantages of the Goldyn organization is that it is owned in its entirety by the men and women who are its officers and operating executives. Its policies and methods are shaped entirely from within its own walls and are subject to no dictation from without. The financing of the corporation from within has been an enormous feat, especially when it is noted that twelve completed productions in advance of the first release in September involves an outlay of considerably more than $1,000,000 and the opening of a chain of exchanges in June involves an overhead till September 1 of at least half of that amount, aside from realty leases that extend over other years.

Goldwyn's method of operation was planned before the announcement of the company's formation in December. Altered conditions in the industry have caused little or no change at all in the shaping of the company's future policies for the Goldwyn owners foresaw the significant changes that were to come.

Most important of all policies from the exhibitors' standpoint is the Goldwyn adoption of the mercantile system of marketing pictures along lines followed by great merchants and manufacturers. It was felt that exhibitors should know far in advance just what pictures they were to have the chance to rent from Goldwyn and the quality of the productions was a provable thing, rather than something based on mere promises.

The important business and distribution policies adopted may be summarized briefly as follows:

To have the Goldwyn name as the only imprint ever to be used in the marketing of Goldwyn Pictures throughout the world.

To own and operate all of its own branches and maintain direct company contract with all exhibitors.

To offer all Goldwyn productions to exhibitors on the "open booking" plan.

To establish rentals that approximate the regional conditions where the Goldwyn Pictures are presented.

To place Goldwyn Pictures within the reach of the small exhibitors everywhere.

Announcement is to be made in a few days of Goldwyn's branch managers throughout the country and of the address of the new chain of Goldwyn exchanges both in the United States and Canada.

Films to Educate Congress

THE Bureau of Commercial Economics has installed a motion picture projector in the Commerce Committee room adjoining the Senate Chamber in the Capitol, at Washington, D. C., where films of the British and French War Offices are displayed daily by the bureau, as well as films showing the training camps and various activities of the Federal Government. A similar equipment has been installed by the bureau in the large caucus room of the House of Representatives, where the films are also displayed to the members of the House.

It is the intention of the bureau to display daily in both branches of the Government, all of the films showing the activities in the several States as well as the foreign films showing the ever changing conditions on the battlefields of France. The films will also deal with the movement of the American armies in France in all branches of the service.

It is the consensus of opinion that this familiarity of conditions incident to the war will be of inestimable value to the law-making branch of the Federal Government. The pictures will also deal with the making of good roads and sanitary conditions in camp life.

The bureau has been requested to provide films dealing with various subjects, but the building of good roads will be featured in a film being produced by the bureau on the recommendation of the highway commissioners of several States, in co-operation with Federal authorities.

Maugham to Write for Famous Players-Lasky

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM, the celebrated author and dramatist, has been engaged by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to write especially for its photoplay productions. The motion picture rights to Mr. Maugham's successful play, "The Land of Promise," have been obtained by the producers and will be adapted for Billie Burke by Mr. Maugham himself. This will constitute Billie Burke's second Famous Players-Paramount picture, as it is planned to have "The Land of Promise" follow the adaptation of Gelett Burgess' "The Mysterious Miss Terry," which is now being produced under the direction of J. Searle Dawley.

W. Somerset Maugham.

The acquisition of W. Somerset Maugham to the screen is indeed a notable one, as this distinguished British author and playwright has won an international reputation as a dramatist. Among the more notable of his plays are "Mlle. Zampa," "Lady Frederick," "The Explorer," "Mrs. Dot," "Smith," "Grace," "The Hero," "Mrs. Craddock," "The Land of the Blessed Virgin," "The Magician," and others which have proved equally successful. It will be remembered that "The Explorer" has already been adapted for the screen by the Lasky company with Lou-Tellegen in the stellar role.

The Famous Players-Lasky Company has been steadily adding to its list of writers and playwrights the names of those who stand highest in the world of letters, among them being Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, Gelett Burgess, George Middleton, Basil King, George Broadhurst, Edwin Milton Royle, Owen Johnson, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Robert Hichens, Charles Kenyon, Gene Stratton Porter, Booth Tarkington, and Bulelah Marie Dix. The addition of W. Somerset Maugham to this list as one who is permanently associated with the screen is therefore important as showing the intention of these foremost producers to continue in this policy.

Joseph Kaufman will direct the adaptation of "The Promised Land."

Observations

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

IT SEEMS to be a common trend of the metropolitan mind to convey the impression that the patrons of the moving picture shows are principally the poor people. They cannot see why there should be so many moving picture houses. Of course, if some man or woman has attracted their attention upon the stage they like to see them in some silent drama. But they go, nevertheless. Some will say, "Well, I like a little vaudeville once in a while, and that is why I go." But they go. And when they get together they speak of Mary Getford, Estelle Barrelmore and a lot more, but they will not concede that there is true merit in a moving picture aside from something that features a personage of the stage.

These people are really fooling themselves. There are many who go to see Billy Sunday. They go there in automobiles, trolleys and double-decked buses. Why? How many absorb his teachings? They go there to see Billy Sunday. But do they ever take the teaching from the screen? They seldom realize that the camera reflects for them something that is worth a thought. Many fail to realize that what Rex Beach and others have written for them and they have digested by reading is just as vividly visualized. It seems impossible for many to get into their minds that the eye is quicker than the ear.

In Billy Sunday's case a moving picture would be useless. There is nothing in what he says which has not already been embodied in moving pictures. The only new feature would be his physical delivery, and that would not take enough feet to pay a company in reproduction. The "Passion Play," "Life of Moses" and other biblical stories have been covered by the camera, as well as "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" and "The Boy Who Stood Upon the Burning Deck."

Ask most people about Billy Sunday and they will say, "Well, let him rave. He can do no harm, and probably will do some good." Why not give the moving pictures the same consideration? Probably some of the scenes may grate upon the nerves, but if the moral lesson is there why should not the picture get the benefit? Perhaps the star has not played his or her part according to your liking, but if the story and moral is there, why should you kick? It is only a moving picture, and it only cost you a dime—perhaps a quarter—but if you did not have the time to spare you would not be there. Many times, when you really squeezed in the time, you saw the same thing. Perhaps you had the benefit of the voice, but no better acting.

That is one thing the patrons of the moving picture theaters do not appear to realize. They see in the pictures the same people they see upon the stage, but they discount the work because the voice is missing. As a matter of fact the people in the silent drama do better work than they do upon the stage. You can cover many faults by words, but in action on the screen you must be pretty near perfect or you go bad.

Visualization is the main point in the moving picture. You may take a story and read it over and over again, but that story when handled by a good scenario writer and a competent director will bring out points the reader has never discovered. The stage has made popular what appeared to the reader a poor story. The screen has greater powers than the stage. The actor or actress may grip the attention in delivery, but the screen has an advantage over the stage in producing the keen moments of a play and modernized methods in title writing completes the score.

The main question is: Which is the greatest force—that which is given to the ear, or that produced before the eye? What goes in one ear frequently passes out of the other. What the eye sees is seldom forgotten.

The screen can do more for people than words delivered from a forum. Visuality makes the greatest impression. Let Billy Sunday tell a man he is going to hell and in nine cases out of ten that man will go into the first rum hole he finds. Show him a picture of hell upon the screen and it sets him thinking—he jumps on the first trolley that comes along.

Now don't get the idea that I am opposed to Billy Sunday. I hope he meets with the same success in preaching the gospel as he did when he played base ball. Any man who is out to save souls is on a good mission, but I do hope that while he is on the job he will save some of the bigots who are with us not only in New York, but throughout the country. What I mean by this is that Billy Sunday will make a fair play in behalf of the moving pictures. Billy Sunday has been a man of the world and has some common sense. Now, if a moving picture carries with it a lesson of morality, it should receive his sanction and, receiving it, he should hammer into the heads of the narrow-minded people that censorship of moving pictures is not to be dealt with lightly, or too high-handedly.

It must be acknowledged that some producers of moving pictures have been reckless as to the better sense. The stage is equally culpable, Shakespeare was the greatest violator, yet his works are in every library and his plays have been upon every stage. Give the moving pictures a chance. Where there is a flagrant violation of ethics there are laws to afford a remedy, but the mere fact that a picture on the screen is a "movie" does not increase the crime. I should like to have Billy Sunday invite the moving picture people to one of his meetings, and have Jew and Gentile hear what he readily thinks of the moving picture. I think he is liberal minded enough to tell the truth. If he does, I am satisfied that much of the prejudice which has been created against the industry by narrow-minded people will be removed. Let us hear from you, Billy.

Johnny Ray Making Comedies

MANY celebrities from the legitimate and vaudeville stage have entered the motion picture field in the last few years, but the announcement of the screen bow of Johnny and Emma Ray, with distribution of their comedies by General Film Company, is of unusual interest among theatrical folk. Twenty years of popularity with the American public is back of the Rays in their new venture. They are known everywhere as musical and farce comedy stars of unusual individuality and they have a great following.

With Director Tom MacEvoy, one of the original Biograph company, who was Ford Sterling's former vaudeville partner, Mr. Ray is producing his comedies at Cliffside, N. J. With him is associated Bert Ennis as general manager. Joseph T. Farrell is in charge of the special script writing for the comedies. The Rays are going into their venture with the greatest zest. They have several releases ahead which were made in Cleveland and Jacksonville, the former city being their home when they are not on the road.

Johnny Ray.

Johnny Ray was born in Cardiff, Wales. He made his first stage appearance in this country at the age of 12, since which time he has played continuously. The famous Ray team was formed on the Pacific coast, and for many years Johnny and Emma reigned successfully in the variety halls, both East and West. Following triumphs at Weber & Fields' Broadway music hall in New York they began their first extended road engagement. They were then featured in Edgar Selden's "Hot Old Time" on the musical comedy stage. It ran for many years. Since then the Rays have toured in vaudeville and have been a source of delight with their musical farce sketches, "The Janitor," "Down the Pike," "In Society" and many others.

MUTUAL BRANCH OFFICES MOVE.

The San Francisco branch of the Mutual Film Corporation has been moved from 162 Turk street to 181 Goldengate avenue. The Memphis, Tenn., branch of Mutual has also changed its address from 500 S. Main street, to 230 Union avenue.

Film Export Notes

By F. G. Ortega.

MEXICO offers at the present time a great field to enterprising film distributors. With the exception of a few isolated bands still at large in the north, order has been re-established in all the states and the Carranza government seems to have the situation well in hand. The most important factor in the rehabilitation of Mexico was the official abolishment of paper money, and there is none of it in circulation now within the territory of the Republic. All transactions are carried out in gold and silver currency, which, of course, has not depreciated and commands the same value today as before the revolution. We give below the import duty on film in Mexico:

$1.50 Mexican (75 cts. U. S. Currency) per legal kilo. Duty is also assessed on the weight of the wrapping and container. The Mexican Consul must certify all invoices and close attention should be paid to accuracy in weights.

About a year ago a Spanish actor with little capital but great aspirations obtained some copies of Cine-Mundial and read various stories on the rise of Griffith, Ince, Capellani and others. At that time he was playing to full houses night after night in the popular summer theater of Havana, the "Marti," the patrons of which are rather frank in expressing their opinions and will throw anything on the stage, from eggs to chairs, whenever the dullness of the show or the behavior of the thespians justifies this retaliatory measure. Followed by a nondescript company, made up of amateurs and unemployed actors picked up in the theatrical cafes of Havana, the actor arrived in New York, founded a moving picture company, and, with the help of several "financial backers"—most of them Mexican exiles who acted as Provisional Presidents of the concern—managed to produce a three-reel subject. As soon as the film was ready for the market, the last "financial backer" made a hasty retreat from these shores under pressure of an avalanche of creditors and the actor was left here to fight out the battle as best he could. The picture, which is as crude as the stuff turned out by our companies four or five years ago, has just been released in Mexico City and the returns for the first day amounted to $6,000 in American money—about twice as much as the capital invested in producing it. And the point is this: Would it not pay an American manufacturer to sign up a few Spanish players and screen some of the great plots found in Spanish literature, adapted in such way that they would possess broad international appeal?

Andres Cordero, President of the Exhibitors Association of Argentine and owner of "La Princesa" Theater, has inaugurated a continuous moving picture show in Buenos Aires. The performance is run on a daily change of program, which consists of from ten to twelve thousand feet of film. Whether the innovation will succeed or not, the future will decide. However, Mr. Cordero is meeting already with some competition, as several managers are trying to copy his plan.

The North American Film Service Corporation, an exporting house located in New York and handling Metro, Universal and other brands of pictures in Argentine and Uruguay has combined with the Cinematografica Sudamericana, an old-established Buenos Aires exchange with strong connections. It was stipulated in the contract that the program should be made up from the stock of both firms, on an equal basis.

According to the latest statistical report published by the Government of the Argentine Republic, the moving picture business in that country has kept up increasing in spite of the war. Thirteen million feet of film were imported during 1916 against 10,000,000 in 1915. The partial reports for the first months of the present year also show a considerable increase over the 1916 figures.

The introduction of Triangle pictures in Spain seems to have created quite a stir. Carlos Vasseur, who is handling this brand throughout the Peninsula from his Barcelona offices, has started an aggressive advertising campaign, using the daily and trade papers. Mr. Vasseur was until recently the European buyer for the Sociedad General of Argentine and has made several trips to this country during the past two years.

Roy Chandler has arrived in Rio de Janeiro with copies of "Joan the Woman," but will continue on to Buenos Aires before exhibiting the picture. Mr. Chandler is acting as representative for Jose M. Aragon and Carle E. Carlton, who bought the rights on this picture. Aragon & Carlton have also taken the agency for the Baird machine for Argentina.

Australian Notes

Sydney, March 20, 1917.

THE censorship question is still a source of great worry to Australian importers, and a solution of the problem still seems very far away. The Metro picture, "Vanity," has been banned, because it showed a police chief as a crook. The World feature, "A Hungry Heart," has been passed only on condition that children under sixteen will not be allowed to see the picture. I also understand that several other features have been banned, owing to certain scenes being objectionable. It is apparently the rule of the board that any such picture will be prohibited from exhibition, importers not being given the chance to eliminate the parts objected to. At the present time, if a production is censored, the owner is not informed of the nature of the objectionable parts, while he cannot himself see the film, as it is sent direct from bond to the censors under seal, and returned in the same manner, only members of the board being allowed at screenings.

Another drawback to the exchanges is the State board, which still intends to censor all pictures screened in New South Wales, in spite of the activities of the Federal Board. Interviewed in connection with this, the chief secretary, Mr. Fuller, said that owing to the State Board having been formed by act of Parliament, it could not be disbanded at short notice, and would therefore continue to review pictures as in the past.

The Federal Board has requested all importers here to get detailed synopses of all comedy pictures from their American buyers with future importations.

A message from Melbourne, Victoria, states that in spite of the formation recently of the Federal Board of Censors, a deputation representing several reform and religious bodies waited upon the Chief Secretary of Victoria, and obtained his promise to introduce a bill into Parliament in favor of the formation of a State Censor Board for Victoria, on lines similar to that conducted in New South Wales.

"Australia's Peril," a patriotic five-reel feature, is nearing completion, and is to be released this month. The production has been considerably delayed owing to a serious accident befalling Charles Villiers, the "heavy." Villiers was jumping from a second story window to the branch of a tree when he lost his footing and fell to the ground, seriously injuring his spine and receiving a badly cut face.

A two-part comedy entitled "Is Manly Immodest?" is causing much hilarity throughout Sydney this week. It is a hit at the many "reform" movements which have taken place recently in and around Sydney. The film gets its title from Manly, a suburb of Sydney, where surf bathing is the chief pastime. The "reformers" have been trying to convince the public for some time that surf bathing tends to immorality, indecency, and quite a lot of similar evils.

C. L. Yearsley, for several years publicity manager for Australasian Films, Ltd., leaves for the United States this mail, to start business on his own account. During the several years that Mr. Yearsley has been resident of Sydney he has made many friends, and all are sorry to lose him. He will rank as one of the best advertising experts that Australia has had.

Two serials, "The Girl and the Game" and "Liberty," are making their appearance this month, while "Judith of the Cumberlands" is announced for early release. In spite of many reports to the contrary, serials still maintain their popularity, especially in the suburban and country theaters.

THOMAS S. IMRIE.

Julian Combines Acting and Directing

RUPERT JULIAN, who combines acting and directing in his service to the Bluebird program, is now engaged on his ninth production. E. J. Clawson furnished the story. "My Mother" will be the title and in the mother role Ruby La Fayette, an actress of the old school, is gaining, at the age of seventy-four, her first experience before the camera. With Booth, Barrett and John McCullough she played various supporting roles, and was the original Joyce in "East Lynne" when Lucille Western produced that old play in America.

The selection of this veteran actress is an indication of the care Mr. Julian takes in selecting "types" for his various productions. His instinct for sensing the individual traits of his players, has made his Bluebirds conspicuous in the exactness of their "types" and the fitness each player has evidenced for the roles assigned. It might serve the purpose of others to "make up" a woman to indicate the proper character, but Mr. Julian has held back his production of "My Mother" until Ruby La Fayette one day paid a visit to Bluebird's West Coast Studio, and was then and there induced to record her art upon the screen.

Bluebirds of many styles have been contributed by Mr. Julian during his engagement with that organization, and the reviewers and critical "fans" have noted the care and attention he has ever paid to artistic details. "Naked Hearts," in which he acted and co-starred, was his first Bluebird, a release early in the program. He played a supporting role when Elsie Jane Wilson starred in "The Evil Women Do," and was co-star with Ella Hall in "The Bugler of Algiers," one of the most beautiful and effective Bluebirds he ever made.

It was Mr. Julian who made a screen version of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" released as "The Right to Be Happy"; Ruby Lafayette and Director Rupert Julian.

he was co-star with Louise Lovely in "Bettina Loved a Soldier"; acted in "The Gift Girl," with Miss Lovely, and will be co-star with Ruth Clifford in "A Kentucky Cinderella," the Bluebird set for distribution June 25.

Mr. Julian has lately renewed his contract, and for another year at least, exhibitors may depend upon an occasional Bluebird that will be sure to reflect the expertness in direction and production that have made his past contribution noteworthy factors in creating popularity for the series.

Louis Burstein.

CONSISTENCY is the keynote in the success that has followed Louis Burstein's career in motion pictures. He has always been associated with the production of comedies, and from his first appearance in the moving picture field, when he participated in the organization of the New York Motion Picture Company and the Keystone Film Company, Mr. Burstein's efforts have been concentrated in the making of films that cause laughter.

After the Keystone Company got under way, Mr. Burstein withdrew for a temporary period and devoted his time to outside interests, but the lure of the studio was strong enough to bring him back. He organized the Wizard Film Company with Burns and Stull as the leading funmakers. This company was absorbed by the Equitable Film Corporation, and Mr. Burstein proceeded to start the company which established itself as prime favorite under the brand Vim Comedies. Under his banner the company was able to make slapstick comedies on one hand and refined comedies on the other in the same studio at a production cost which was the marvel of his competitors.

Louis Burstein.

When Billy West, the noted funster, became free to make new production connections, he sought a producer and found him in Louis Burstein. The result was the formation of the King Bee Films Corporation and the signing as director of Arvid E. Gillstrom.

The combination of Louis Burstein, Billy West and Arvid E. Gillstrom, backed by a supporting company including Babe Hardy, Ethel Burton, Florence McLaughlin, Polly Van, Joe Cohan, Bud Ross and Ethlynn Gibson, makes the King Bee Films Corporation a strong company.

Developments in Color Photography

To Photograph on Film as Nature Paints and to Project the Picture by Any Machine Is Aim of Modern Inventors.

By Hanford C. Judson.

ONE of the most interesting personalities among inventive geniuses at work on the big art problem of color photography today is F. W. Hochstetter, who has his laboratory over at the Ideal studios near Fort Lee, N. J. He has no less than eight natural color processes for motion picture work and for still life photography. A World writer spent an interesting morning with this young man looking over his plant and seeing some of his work, which is truly wonderful.

The problem of color photography looks simple enough, though the solution of it has been elusive in the extreme. It must be remembered that certain things are of this or that natural color because they permit all color rays to soak through them except one particular kind of ray which they reflect. Their color is the color of that ray. White light contains all colors, that is, it contains rays of all possible wave lengths. Color depends solely on the length of the course. Get a vibration or get a series of waves passing through the ether and get them of a certain known length, measured across the crests of two waves (the length of waves of red light), and no matter how those waves are set in motion, the effect will be a red color. Now the problem was to get a kind of chemical substance that when acted on by waves of any of the colors would after the film was developed let colors pass through it except that particular color.

An ordinary photographic plate is color blind. It only shows colors by this effect, that if the red rays are perfectly exposed the blue rays will be underexposed. In photographing the spectrum, the lighter shades of colors photograph white while the darker shades come out black and lose all of nature's beauty, gradation and depth. With the ordinary photographic emulsion there is, says Mr. Hochstetter, no proper balance of exposure.

The Hochstetter-Featherstone Process.

This process of color photography was invented and patented by Mr. Featherstone, who sold it to Mr. Hochstetter and it has been by him further developed and made commercially available. By dipping the common commercial negative film in a single bath consisting of a secret formula (a five-minute operation) the photographic emulsion on the film is given what Mr. Hochstetter calls "correct color vision." He has succeeded in sensitizing the film so that it is equally sensitive to all colors. Each shade of color is now exposed properly regardless of its peculiar length of vibration or length of wave. He has new patents pending on this process.

When a positive is taken by this method it looks like any ordinary film to the eye. There is no color suggestion in it. Its darker colors, however, are not under-exposed. Now, on this positive, color screens are stamped or painted. After the process it looks like a strip of plaid. You can see through it and see the picture, but one square has been mechanically painted red and the next green, the next red, the next green, for the length of the whole film. Let light shine through it on a screen. As the film passes the aperture of any ordinary projector (any and all will act the same way, there is nothing added to help the picture), there is a red picture shown on the screen and then a green picture. These alternate, and by normal persistency of vision, the colors are normally distributed and we see a picture that looks as though painted. The normal exposure of the original film after treatment by this process has resulted in an outline which permits the red rays to pass through only where the subject photographed was red and blue only where this was blue.

Tinting Baths.

The black and white film taken by this process can be tinted by being passed through a bath with clips covering and protecting the alternate pictures which can be tinted in the next bath. A machine with two color pads has been devised to stamp the film with the right color at the tint. The pads work alternately and the result is the same as with the two baths.

With Cooper-Hewitt Lights.

Cooper-Hewitt light doesn't give color values the same as daylight. Mr. Hochstetter has invented a color screen to be used with these studio illuminants. The film taken through these color screens is affected by the light from Cooper-Hewitt lamps in the same way as sunlight affects it without the screen.

British Notes

THE London Opera House, the handsome Kingsway edifice which Oscar Hammerstein built and forsook after a few weeks' experiment with grand opera, goes over this week to a season of moving pictures. The house is still under the direction of the Stoll syndicate, but the prices of admission announced do not exceed half a dollar.

James Welch, noted comedian of the legitimate stage, died last week. He recently starred in a film adaptation of "The New Clown," produced by the Ideal Film Renting Company.

David Horsley's representative, after two years' stay in Wardour street, leaves us to return to America. D. W. Russell made a name both for himself and the Cub comedies in Europe, and having firmly established Horsley films on the market is leaving the London office under the management of J. Miller. At an informal luncheon arranged in his honor by E. H. Montagu (Selig) Mr. Russell said he hoped to be able to return to England and renew his friendship with the trade here.

Last Friday was an important day for the Vitagraph Company—the trade show of what they confidently announced as Anita Stewart's finest effort, "The Girl Phillippa." A touching tribute to the talents of this screen actress is going the rounds of the trade and press. An Australian soldier in training in England saw Miss Stewart in "The Juggernaut" and other productions. Upon being called away to Flanders he sent his watch to the artist as a lucky mascot, expressing the hope that he would some day see it on the screen.

The annual meeting of the Dramatic Committee of the Society of Authors was held a few days ago. A resolution for the formation of a deputation to the Home Secretary to urge the Government to protect English film manufacturers by setting up a preferential tariff was passed.

Butchers Film Service, an exchange specializing in home-made products, has commenced film producing on its own account. Maurice Elvey has been engaged as director, and the first subject is "The Grit of a Jew."

The new budget is expected to be declared within a few days. A material addition to the entertainment tax is expected in the trade and theatrical profession, although the Exhibition Association is working for its modification on the present scale. To this effect a deputation of the association waited at the Treasury a few days ago with statistical evidence of the unfair application of the burden—unfair in the sense that it fell more upon the exhibitor than upon the public, which, sooner than pay the tax, would transfer its patronage to the lower priced seats. The deputation pointed out that about 700 moving-picture theaters had closed down in the country since the imposition of the tax a year ago.

The Authors' Society voices another grumble in conjunction with the disposal of the film rights of members' work in the States. The root cause of the grievance appears to be due to the action of certain New York literary agencies who, the society alleges, have sold the visual rights of authors' work for much lower prices than could be obtained in England. The society further expresses its regret in the matter of foreign remittances. Reports of the American market continue to be very unsatisfactory. It is difficult to get accounts from the trade and still more difficult to get money beyond a first advance on account of royalties. The society has for a month now been considering a revision in the form of contract between its members and the producer and will doubtless utilize the revised version immediately.

Fresh from his tour in South America came Joseph R. Darling, business organizer for Fox, into London the other day. Mr. Darling has brought with him the Fox version of "A Tale of Two Cities" and he considers this production to be the finest film turned out of the Fox studios. While he is in England Mr. Darling will witness a signal honor paid to one of his company's productions. For this year's annual Shakespearean festival held at Stratford-on-Avon has been chosen a motion picture presentation of the bard's works. "Romeo and Juliet" is the selected subject.

Interesting Educationals

Three Industrial, One Zoological, One Topical, and Nine Travel Subjects.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"Hand-Made Barrels" (Mutual-Gaumont).

THE MANUFACTURE of barrels by hand by the natives of the Island of Barbados is a well-illustrated subject to be found in "Reel Life, No. 57." Here we learn of the primitive manner in which work of this kind is done by the natives of Barbados, and how deftly they carry out every detail from the making of the staves, the wood for which is imported from the United States, to the steaming of the barrel in order that the staves can be bent into shape as the iron hoops are hammered into place. The making of the top of the barrel is also of interest.

"The Abalone Industry" (Pathe-International).

Scenes showing how the abalone is gathered off the rocks on the sea coast will be found in this film. We learn from the picture that on the inside of the shell, which is mother-of-pearl, blisters are found, which are used in the capacity of precious stones in the manufacture of jewelry. We learn also that the flesh of the abalone is an edible delicacy adding to the value of this shell fish, large specimens of which are found on the coast of California.

"The Ice Harvest" (Educational Films Corporation of America).

On the same reel with another interesting subject entitled "The Hermit of Hood" will be found a fully illustrated description of how the ice industry is conducted. We see the scrapers, drawn by horses, scraping the snow off the ice, then the cutters, also drawn by horses, cutting the long strips of ice, several in a row, at the same time. The cakes into which the strips have been cut by crosscut saws are then floated to the basin in front of the storehouses, from where they are conveyed to an elevator and planed off automatically while being carried to the storehouse.

"Surgery at the Zoo" (Educational Films Corporation of America).

In the picture entitled "Surgery at the Zoo," Raymond L. Ditmars has given us something different, and something quite as interesting as previous numbers in which he has presented members of the animal kingdom. In this number we first behold a monkey's injured arm being bandaged. The monkey's expression is a mixture of trust and apprehension, and the whole situation has a strong comedy appeal. A wooden collar is placed on the monkey's neck to keep him from tearing off the bandage, and he is finally given a dose of medicine, which he takes with eagerness for the reason that it is mixed with sugar. A twenty-foot python is the next patient that we see treated. This monster is carried from his cage to the operating room by six husky men, after which his temperature is taken, his shedding coat is moistened to aid the operation, and his old suit of clothes is given a start from the head, when we discover that even the transparent skin over the eyes is removed with the old skin. A deer next gets attention, his knees having developed some trouble. He is also coaxed to take a dose of medicine after his limbs have been massaged and rubbed with a soothing lotion. This subject is of unusual interest and well illustrated.

"Dynamiting a Hillside" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Reel Life, No. 57," will be found some informational scenes showing how the work of blasting a hillside is conducted. We see the boring of deep holes into which the dynamite is afterward lowered and plugged in before setting the fuse. In the example presented 80,000 lbs. of dynamite was used in displacing 400,000 tons of rock. The actual blast, photographed at close quarters, is quite spectacular.

"The Rock of Gibraltar" (Mutual-Gaumont)

In "Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 29," will be found some excellent views photographed about the British fortress of Gibraltar. To uninitiated eyes these views of the rock stretching 2½ miles are impressive. We learn that this fortress has been occupied by the British since 1704, that it is the most strongly fortified place in the world, that its northern end rises precipitously, that a fleet can be anchored in its harbor, and that a mole closes the north end of the harbor.

"Martinique, West Indies" (Mutual-Gaumont).

The Island of Martinique in the French West Indies is nicely illustrated in the "Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 29." Views of the town of St. Pierre in days of prosperity are followed by a view of Mount Pelee, which by eruption destroyed 40,000 lives in 1902. Portions of the ruins have also been photographed, including the business section, Victor Hugo street, a statue representing the awakening of St. Pierre, a former theater, a typical side street, and a fountain.

"The Hermit of Hood" (Educational Films Corporation of America).

At an altitude of 11,225 feet lives the Hermit of Hood at a point of vantage, which enables him, by the use of powerful field glasses, to keep an eye on twelve billion feet of timber covering a tract of forest land 250 miles in diameter. His chief business is to watch for forest fires and report them, and he can signal many miles by means of a 12-inch hand mirror. His supplies he packs on his back from a point 3,000 feet below, and appears robust and happy in spite of this hardship, according to the picture. A view of the ancient crater of Mount Hood, and of a storm on the mountain top are interesting sights.

"Along the Rio Grande" (Pathe-Combitone).

That portion of the United States which lies along the border between us and Mexico is treated in this number of the Combitone series, and includes views on the Mimbres River as well as the Rio Grande. The Elephant Butte dam is shown as well as the diversion dams, and some of the results of the irrigation furnished. Some interesting views of the city of El Paso are included in the picture, which boast delightful photography and color value.

"Cadiz, Spain" (Mutual-Gaumont).

"Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 29," contains some good views in Cadiz, Spain's largest military port, situated on the Bay of Cadiz. A panoramic view of the city is followed by views photographed in some of its narrowest streets. Isabella Place, with its ornamentation of palms, and one of the large cathedrals are among the features of the picture, which, while it is interesting, might be more informational and cover more fully the points of interest about the city.

"River Life Near Paris" (Mutual-Gaumont).

This subject, contained in "Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 29," is unusually beautiful, viewed in the light of a scenic. The scenes photographed are along the banks of the River Marne, the name of which has become familiar to our ears since the opening of the European war. The banks of the river, which winds prettily through the woods, are fringed with low bushes, the water is still and peaceful in appearance, and the scenes where oarsmen ply up and down in their small boats savor of full enjoyment.

"Teneriffe, Canary Islands" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 30," will be found an interesting and well illustrated account of Teneriffe, one of Spain's Canary Islands. Santa Cruz, the capital of the group, is situated on this island, and our attention is drawn to the low, flat-roofed houses which characterize the town. It is an important coaling station, and presents many scenes of interest. We learn also in the picture that the vegetation of the Canary Islands is tropical, and we are shown, along with other interesting scenes, a dragon tree which is estimated to be 3,000 years old. A chain of mountains runs from one end to the other of the island, and reaches at its highest point a height of 12,200 feet. The town of Icod de los Vinos is also shown.

"Notre Dame, Paris" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 30," we learn that the cathedral of Notre Dame is situated on an island in the heart of Paris. It is of Gothic architecture, and in the picture glimpses are given of the arches, the clock gallery and the gargoyles. This is delightful as an architectural study. A birdseye view of the square in front of the cathedral is also shown.

"Koenigsee, Bavaria" (Mutual-Gaumont).

One of the most beautiful of the Bavarian lakes, Koenigsee, is covered in "Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 30." Unusually lovely are the views of this lake and vicinity, showing waterfalls and mountain scenes bordering the lake.

Combining Educational Pictures and Business

Ford Motor Company Issuing Over a Hundred Copies Weekly of Scenic and Industrial Subjects.

AN interesting visitor at the office of the Moving Picture World the past week was a representative of the motion picture department of the Ford Motor Company of Detroit. He told us of some of the things accomplished by the big automobile concern in the way of providing entertainment for the public, of new means of popularizing its product in such a way that it furnishes amusement without antagonizing either the public or the exhibitor, and accomplishes this without flaunting in an offensive way the name of the product of the manufacturer.

It was four or five years ago Mr. Ford conceived the idea of employing motion pictures as a medium of high-grade publicity. Also he was convinced that the camera could be most beneficially employed in furthering the efficiency of employees by showing them on the screen how different lines of work in the factories could best be accomplished. A camera and developing plant was installed. The Ford Weekly, which dealt merely with local happenings in Detroit, was established. This was shown in the local theaters and aroused interest among the houses throughout the state. Gradually the scope was extended until free lance cameramen were employed and events of nationwide interest were incorporated. At the end of a year Mr. Ford was not satisfied with showing what other weeklies were displaying and decided to take up educational subjects.

The length of these was extended gradually from 600 to a thousand feet. Among the features for example, were the life and customs of the Hawaiians, scenic wonders of the Royal Gorge and the Yellowstone, the tanning of leather, making of pottery and glass, and the story of a grain of wheat, which began with the sower and ended with the finished loaf of bread.

At the present time three cameramen are employed exclusively on this work. In the department are thirty-eight employees in the main office. The equipment is of the most up-to-date description. All of the work of the regulation studio is done by the employees, even to the perforation of the film. The weekly distribution varies from 110 to 120 reels of a thousand feet in length. Through 75 distributing points these reach between 3,500 and 4,000 theaters. It is estimated that these subjects are viewed by over 4,000,000 persons each week.

The only credit taken by the manufacturer is to be found on the initial title—"Produced by the Ford Motor Company."

"Sailors of France"

Third Installment of Series Exhibited at Rialto Shows Capture of U-Boat by the French Destroyer "Trombe."

THE THIRD installment of "Sailors of France," which was exhibited the week of May 20 at the Rialto theater, is intensely interesting because of the fact that it shows an actual capture of a U-boat by the French destroyer "Trombe." The opening scene shows several torpedo boats running abreast, followed by views of a dirigible and an aeroplane traversing the sky. We then witness the sighting of a submarine, and the submarine chasers putting into action. Torpedoes are then let loose on the submarine, which is disabled and obliged to surrender. These pictures are in the hands of the Beacon Film Company.

On this program there was also seen the second and final installment of a series of stereopticon views illustrating a talk on the daring stunts of cameramen. These stereopticons, which were obtained from Underwood and Underwood, are of special interest, giving as they do some idea of the dangers to which cameramen expose themselves in trying to obtain material of unusual character.

British Tanks in Action

Scenes Photographed at Battle of the Ancre Reveal Scientific Methods of Present Day Warfare—Exhibited at Strand.

THE PICTURES which were exhibited at the Strand theater the week of May 20, showing British tanks in action, are some of the most remarkable war pictures that have been photographed. It is a wonderful thing to see these war machines rolling relentlessly along over the barbed wire entaglements of the enemy like great live monsters. These official government pictures are being handled by the Pathe Exchange, Inc., and give a fine insight of what might be termed the practical side of the war. We see the supplies being pushed forward for the troops, and long lines of reserves making their way to the front to take the places of their fallen brothers. Batteries of howitzers turning their fire into the line of the enemy are not uncommon sights in the picture, or Red Cross workers carrying the wounded from the battlefield under shell fire.

These pictures are of intense interest. As shown at the Strand they contain no surplus material, and were photographed while the Battle of the Ancre was in progress. The proceeds of this exhibition were devoted to the American and British War Relief Fund.

MUTUAL MANAGERS TRANSFERRED.

T. W. Chatburn, formerly branch manager of the Tampa sub-branch of the Mutual Film Corporation has been transferred to Houston, Texas, to succeed F. A. Tomes, who has been granted a leave of absence to join the colors. The Tampa branch will be closed after June 2. E. J. Madsen has been appointed Florida representative in place of Mr. Chatburn.

Music for the Picture

WHAT MEMORIZING MEANS TO A CONDUCTOR.

THAT memory plays a most important part in the life of every director, organist or pianist is superfluous to mention. The tremendous growth of the moving picture business has made directors of many a mediocre violinist and pianist who, perhaps, having served many years in an orchestra is able to take over the burdens of a director. They have acquired a large enough repertoire to handle moving picture playing successfully. Understand, we speak of the small town orchestra which prior to the expansion of the photoplay was able to support only a pianist or a pianist and violinist. Since the propaganda of music with the pictures has spread throughout the country, the first and most essential attribute of a conductor is that he possess a repertoire of the best known overtures, classics, both old and new, together with the best known opera selections, and plenty of musical comedy for variety's sake. He must have at all times on the ends of his fingers, as it were, a collection of memorized compositions that he may suggest for pictures depicting various emotions and atmospheres.

To some, memorizing is a very difficult process because the mind has never been schooled along these lines, while to others it means comparatively little effort. A certain well known accompanist who invariably plays without his notes often memorizes or visualizes entire programs while en route without the assistance of any instrument. This process of making pictures on the mind is called visualization.

Visual images may be tested by trying to describe minutely the furnishings of a room visited at some former time, descriptions of people met on other occasions, their hair, faces, clothing, et cetera. Visual images are often most pronounced in women and children, while with men, especially the business man who is accustomed to think in abstract forms, the visual images are apt to be dim. People accustomed to visualizing are usually very receptive, enthusiastic and highly imaginative.

Take a bar or two of some composition you are not familiar with, observe its signature, length and location of every note, then close the music and write all the details which were left to mental images. This may seem a long, slow process, but once established will always remain and will need but a refreshing of the memory a few times a year in order that it may not be pushed into the background and grow a bit rusty. It was this art which Mozart possessed in a very marked degree and that enabled him at the age of twelve to write out completely after once hearing the Miserere, a composition which was not permitted to be taken from the Sistine Chapel of the Vatican nor to be copied.

Other points we might mention in the memorizing of a score are: Refer as seldom as possible to the composition before you; never leave a passage until it is firmly fixed in your mind; make sure you know it thoroughly before leaving, if necessary go over it four or five times. This will avoid the repeating of it the next time you review the piece. Do not practice mechanically but concentrate. Cultivate rapid thinking, for one must think as fast as the composition is to be played.

It has often struck me that a majority of the professional musicians of the present day are surprisingly ignorant of the musical literature that lies outside of their special field. With the orchestra leader, he has no special field, for it is necessary that he use selections taken from every different division of the great library of music. Hence he must be continually storing up in his memory for future use. New pictures are being released daily which create weighty problems for the conductor unless he is the possessor of an extended repertoire. Cinematography is traveling toward perfection by leaps and bounds. With her should go music, hand in hand. The question is, "Is the music in our theaters of higher grade today than it was yesterday?" In many theaters it is and in many places it neither progresses nor falls backward, but remains in the balance. This is a condition which should not be tolerated by the manager.

As we have said before, it is necessary for the director to know hundreds if not thousands of lesser selections. Everyone can think of many selections which he could not recall for the life of him, but which he would know intimately as soon as he heard them. The problem here is to convert this passing knowledge into prompt and spontaneous knowledge.

A matter upon which it is impossible to lay too much stress is accuracy. To cite an example, but yesterday I heard the charming little Barcarolle, op. 37, of Tschaikowski, played as an accompaniment to a film at a tempo which made one's blood boil. Why is it conductors so dote on "individual touches"? Is it pure ignorance? Most of the classics are generally marked with tempo markings so that there is no excuse for such mutilation.

The best memory is a careful cultivation of the faculty of accurate remembrance. Try to do something each day toward the enlarging of your repertoire and you will find yourself qualified within a short time to command a better position than that which you now hold.

VICTOR HERBERT THE COMPOSER.

Victor Herbert, the celebrated composer and conductor, is without question the greatest of American melody writers. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1859, and lived in Germany eighteen years. In 1886, he was cello solo player in the Metropolitan Orchestra, New York City, and in 1894 became bandmaster to the Twenty-second Regiment Band of New York, subsequently conducting the Pittsburgh Orchestra. In 1904 he formed his own orchestra, with which he toured the United States. He is the composer of the greatest list of successful light operas in America, besides having composed for several cinedramas. Among Mr. Herbert's light opera offerings are the following: "Prince Ananias," "Wizard of the Nile," "Gold Bug," "Singing Girl," "The Serenade," "Idol's Eye," "Fortune Teller," "Ameer," "The Vicerov" "Babes in Toyland," "Babette," "It Happened in Nordland," "Wonderland," "Miss Dolly Dollars," "The Red Mill," "Mlle. Modiste," "The Tattooed Man," "Algeria," "Prima Donna," "Little Nemo," "The Madcap Duchess," "The Enchantress," "Sweethearts," "The Only Girl," "Princess Pat" and "Eileen."

Mr. Herbert is also the composer of two grand operas—"Natoma," produced at the Metropolitan Opera House in 1911, and "Madeline," produced early in 1914.

GALAXY OF ORCHESTRA MUSIC.

Many exhibitors are of the opinion that the Schirmer Co. has entirely given up the publishing of moving picture scores. "As a matter of fact, this company has gone deeper than ever into the publishing of film accompaniments and incidental music to be used with the pictures," says Mr. Roeber of the orchestra department. "This company has on the market at the present time a serial publication, two additional numbers being issued on the first of each month. This Galaxy of Orchestra Music, as it is called, has increased in size from its beginning until there are now in this collection ninety-five numbers. Through this collection a conductor who previously has had a very limited repertoire is now enabled to make a satisfactory selection of appropriate music at a few moments' notice as well as being able to use the same numbers for concert use."

This galaxy has not been published in the piano score alone, but is now in the process of preparation. In order that an idea may be gained as to the type compositions included in this collection we are listing a few of those included on the index page, namely, Moorish Serenade, Dance of the Egyptians, Norwegian Suite, Funeral March and Selections from the Emerald Isle.

Advertising for Exhibitors

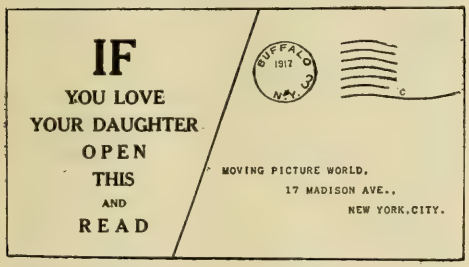
Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Reading and Studying.

PROBABLY for every hundred exhibitors who follow this department there are not more than two who study it. Most of them think they are doing well if they merely read it over. Reading may help some, but study is what counts. No knowledge is of great good unless it is fully assimilated. It is not sufficient to know that a thing should be or has been done so and thus. More is necessary. The reason why should be determined. Do not, for example, accept the statement that sometimes white space will show up an advertisement better than will larger type and narrow spacing. That is a statement of fact, but prove it to yourself. Look up advertising too closely set. Cut the lines apart and rearrange them. Get a wider space and see how each letter stands out better. It may be a little trouble, but it is worth while if you are led to a better understanding of your business. Too many exhibitors regard advertising as a side issue. The running of the house takes up their time. They give what leisure they can spare to their advertising. Some of them do not discover until it is too late that it is advertising and largely advertising that enables them to have a house to run. Advertising does not necessarily mean printer's ink, but advertising of some sort is absolutely and vitally necessary to permanence. Do not merely read this department. Study the essentials. Make the knowledge your own through application.

Printed Envelopes.

The Family theater, Buffalo, uses the stock heralds for "Enlighten Thy Daughter," but it gets attention for them by using this envelope:



The specially printed envelope works well. This is a cheap manila stock printed in red.

From the Stanley.

The Stanley theater, Philadelphia, in a recent issue carries this notice on its front page:

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Management desires to call attention to the fact that tickets are sold with the express understanding that the purchasers' behavior toward the President of these United States, the Flag and the Military Forces sworn to uphold the Constitution, be Respectful at all times. This course of conduct, together with that of rising and standing at attention when the Orchestra renders the "Star Spangled Banner" is not only the duty of very Patriot, but it should be the pleasure of everyone to show such honor in this great crisis.

This should not be necessary, but it may be required in Philadelphia. But if the Stanley wants to do its bit it can help gain respect for the national anthem by promising the leader of the orchestra discharge and a booting the first time he seeks to cheapen the "Star Spangled Banner." Patriotism—real patriotism—is not to be appealed to by bursting out with the national air every ten or fifteen minutes and all such clap-trap devices as playing the air to a slide or a picture of the President, using it as accompaniment to military features in the news weeklies and the like. Keep the air for moments of dignity and motion. Do not make it common, and it will not then be necessary to urge people to stand up when the air is played. There is a vast difference between showing respect to the flag and its music and pleasing a long-haired, small-brained orchestra leader by jumping up every time he sees a possible chance for playing the air.

Extra Special.

The American Feature Film Co., of Boston, got out a four-page fake for "The Whip," to be used instead of heralds with a space at the bottom of the first page for the house advertisement in red ink. used as a "fudge." The idea is novel and the front and back pages make a good flash, but there are a couple of columns of press matter of the usual "to be shown at the (blank space) theater on (blank space)," which were put in for the manager, but which look unfinished when sent out as herald material. The stuff should have been trimmed up to read smoothly. The main idea is a capital one, and the feature lends itself well to this form of advertising.

Gold Lettered.

Here is one of those ball programs from the carload of stuff Jay Emanuel brought. Most of the stuff is too dark to reproduce, but this is a white card with the word Programme embossed in gold, but it costs him only the price of plain white stock. Inside one day is given each of the two houses. The special designs for the house names are well done, but they should not be used in combination with type. Emanuel is doing a lot of advertising. He gets out his house program weekly and then builds up on this with other pieces for special features. There are two, for example, for "Idle Wives." He writes his advertising to fit the stock he has on hand, and gets some unusual looking stuff.

Getting an "Out."

The Third Street, Easton, Pa., got a misprint on prices lately, but stood for the jolt nicely and then guarded against a repetition. But the story they ran will do as well if you find that you have set too low an admission on some feature. It runs:

> Last week we presented Norma Talmadge in her first special picture. We charged an admission price of ten cents in the afternoon and fifteen cents in the evening. The prices should have been fifteen cents afternoon and evening, and the fault is due to a printer's mistake. It was too late to correct the mistake, so we gave you the benefit of the afternoon's reduced price. We promise to be more careful in the future, as it is impossible to present pictures of the "Panthea" class at reduced prices.

They played "Polly Redhead" lately and all red-headed girls were given free admissions. They merely had to be red-headed. No passes to bother about, just walk right in. The scheme is not new, but it always makes talk.

Patriotic Day.

Miss Dolly Spurr, of the Royal-Grand, Marion, Ind., had a patriotic day recently. There was a flag on the post card announcing the event, and the feature was "The American Consul with Keystone's Stars and Bars" for the comedy. Recruits and soldiers were admitted free. Of course the card was in red and blue on white stock.

But the Royal Grand has been sold out, much to Miss Spurr's indignation, but when it was learned that the owners of the property had sold out to the opposition, Miss Spurr received four offers of new houses, and one of these she has accepted. No quitting for her. She'll have a better house and the same old crowd, for she has always played fair with her patrons and they are loyal to the management, rather than the house. May the new house be even more prosperous and may Miss Spurr be more firmly established than ever!

Self Contained.

Here is another example of the self-contained program, the back page serving as a mailing face. The program is that of the Temple theater, Hartsville, S. C. The use of twelve-point rule, cut to let in the panels, gives a neat effect without the expense of having a design drawn. The pages are a little more than three by four inches, and inside the dates are panel-boxed. Probably the front and back pages are printed in quantities and the reverse printed up as needed from this stock. This is practical where the face of the program carries no date, the stock is stiff manila card, and carries nicely in the mails. The saving on the cost of the envelopes is no inconsiderate matter these days.

Special Envelopes.

The Elmwood, Buffalo, N. Y., now uses a special envelope for its folder programs. It is a white stock with the permit card in the corner to save the trouble of affixing stamps. It is a very neat looking job and while the type faces are not ornate, there is a trimness of effect that impresses. The present tendency is away from envelopes of any sort, and by changing the color of their stock and using light tints the Elmwood folder would work nicely as a self-contained program, but since envelopes are used they get the best possible results from these specials.

Try a Stunt Book.

Ever try a stunt book? It is worth while if you make the slightest effort to pull business with special advertising. No matter where you see a stunt, mark it down as your own. Make a note on a slip of paper and file it. A loose leaf book is good for the purpose, and loose leaf does not necessarily mean an expensive one. Look over the collection now and then to keep the ideas in mind, and use stunts to pull business on dead nights and make business better on the big things. A street stunt does not necessarily mean a large outlay for costumes, properties and floats. You can often make more talk with an inexpensive idea that is novel. Think of things to do even when you do not need stunts, and you will have them to hand when you do need them. One Western exhibitor, for example, cleaned up on a recent attraction with the help of his operator. His house was on a side street, and bill-board spaces were mostly taken by the local posting concern. The prices were high, and he wanted something that would hit harder and make a definite impression. On the main street there was a three-story building, the top floor of which was vacant. He gave the janitor some passes in return for access to the roof. He posted his operator there with a fishpole. The operator would lean over the cornice, apparently trying to dislodge something on top one of the window cornices. The manager stood in the street on the other side looking up. He did not point, nor did he say anything unless spoken to, but presently a crowd would gather, looking at the operator and asking what the matter was. Then the operator would drop over the edge a large home-made cloth banner painted with the name of the film, the house and the date of showing. The crowd would laugh at the sting and pass on, the banner would be rolled up ready to be dropped again, and the trap was once more set. Then the manager went around to the newspaper office and gave the editor points on the curiosity of crowds that made better advertising than an adjective-filled press story. At a cost of less than two dollars he got better results than would have been accrued from ten dollars' worth of conventional bill posting.

Businesslike.

Brass Tacks, the Paramount organ in Minneapolis, announced the special lobby frame in a late issue. It told the cost of the frame, f. o. b. New York, and added: "The freight on the sample we have on display in this exchange amounted to $1.31." There isn't much to that at first look, but it is going to help sell the frames, for it gives the exhibitor in that territory some idea of what the freight will stand him. It's businesslike and to the point. And here is an argument for the kid matinees from a new angle. In the course of a story the editor writes:

> Then, also, there is this: Children are usually admitted at a lower admission price, but take up just as much room as an adult. By the institution of a children's matinee this is done away with. They view the show either in the morning or during the afternoon when business is slack, and the entire house is left for the admission of adults in the evening.

And speaking of Kid Matinees, Lambdin Kay, of the Shamrock, Atlanta, says that he escapes the curse of "children's" matinee by calling them Young America Matinees.

Crisis Helped Enlistment.

This poster is being used to help enlistment and advertise The Crisis, a play that links up well with the present times. It comes from the Pittsburgh offices and is just off the press. At the Pitt theater, where this was playing, the recruiting officer on duty in the lobby declared that the picture did much to stir interest and that he averaged five recruits a day.

Writing Descriptions.

Too few exhibitors study writing descriptions. One program before us gives seven lines to "God's Country and the Woman." It tells all about the dog team used, names the owner and tells that the story was photographed 9,000 feet above sea level, but it does not say one single, solitary thing about one of the best ideas James Oliver Curwood ever put in a picture. Here is a story of a girl who takes upon herself the shame of her own mother's illegitimate child. There is the really unusual situation and all the announcement has to say of the story is that it is "A story of the great Northwest," where only red-blooded men and women can survive." It would be foolish to argue that this his the same appeal as the fact of the story. It is foolish to pay out money for printing unless you have something to say, and say the strongest and most pulling things. Read the synopsis of the story. Decide what the punch is, and then talk about that punch interestingly. It is a trick to be mastered and developed, and it is a trick that means money to a house.

Booming Max.

L. J. Scott, now of the Essanay forces, is up in Canada booming Essanays generaly and Linder in praticular. He sends in pictures of two Toronto theatres, the Strand and Midway. Both run eight and nine reel shows, but each made a spread on Linder alone during his showing. The two cuts show the general effect of the Midway lobby and the detail of the centre. The girls in the stateroom are painted on a drop showing a companionway, but the girl at the porthole is a cutout and Max's head is mechanically worked to move through the port giving about 60 kisses a minute to the personable young woman. To back this up, Mr. Kashim used cut outs of the comedian in windows distant from the theater with "Meet me at the Midway" lettered on and in the French and Jewish papers he printed cuts of the Linger puzzle with 25 prizes for the best solutions. Mr. Scott keeps hustling and to some effect.

In Fast Company.

Steve Farrar, of the Casino, Eldorado, Ill., seems to be trying to break into fast company. A recent program announces that:

> P. T. Barnum, conceded by all to be America's greatest showman, never, in all his life, provided a more complete program or a better time than has been provided for those who come to the Casino this week.

But Steve can brag a little, for he is running a good show shop in a nice way. Apparently he has dropped the throwaways in favor of a colored cover program with some back-page talk. One dissertation on vaudeville is particularly good. It runs:

> In the days gone by the Casino was the leading vaudeville House of Eldorado, and we are often asked now why we do not have vaudeville acts in connection with our pictures. We are buying the best pictures that market affords, and if we were to start vaudeville we would want the best acts that could be procured. Acts of this kind cost more than our patronage will permit us to pay, unless we cut out our feature pictures and use the CHEAP regular service pictures—most of which is just so many feet of film, with no acting, settings, story or plot. We can secure CHEAP vaudeville acts to show in connection with our present program, but you all know what they are, a lot of imitation performers playing only the small towns for as much or as little as they can get. We all like good vaudeville, but it's impossible to get it in a town like Eldorado and At the same time show good pictures. We want to please as many people as possible. Therefore we will continue showing the very best photoplays made, regardless of cost, and let the vaudeville alone unless we can occasionally book an act that we know is positively good. We solicit your patronage and will endeavor at all times to give you value received for your money.

It is not vaudeville that hurts the picture theaters, but the sort of vaudeville that picture theaters can afford. That type does not appeal to the persons who can appreciate the good pictures.

New Heralds.

The cut shows the new heralds for Triangle features devised by John W. Hanson. It is only 3½ by 5½, a sort of V. P. herald that is more apt to go home than the larger sizes, as the sheet can be folded to go into a pocket book. It is printed in rotogravure, like most of the Triangle printing, and the brown gives a decidedly good effect. One other good result is that the reduction in size permits a 25% reduction in price, as well.

Program Filler.

Here is a little piece of program filler that is timely. Run it if you run general stuff:

> The open car season is here, and the tired business man is made still more weary by his effort to turn the pages of his morning paper while the car is out to beat speed records. The man who can turn the pages of his paper on an open car without using language is either a juggler or a saint. But try this scheme: Before you leave home cut the sheets apart, and you'll have no trouble at all. It works just as well in the crowded car in winter, too.

It's a simple scheme we picked up from Mr. Thorvals Solberg, the Register of Copyrights.

Suggestion.

We could use some airdome pictures if we had some of the 1917 models.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

There It Goes Again.

ACCORDING to an English correspondent, David W. Griffith is telling the Londoners that it is the production and not the story that counts in photoplay, and the Londoners seem to agree with him because he produced two big spectacles, and ought to know. He should know, but he does not; at least, if he does know, he is not admitting it; but Mr. Griffith seems to be getting into the class with Miss Anita Loos, who appears to believe that the Fairbanks comedies are rather clever illustrations for her decidedly clever leaders. Miss Loos is one of the best title writers in the game. Therefore, to her, the title is the thing. To Mr. Griffith the spectacle rises superior to the story because he is a producer of spectacle. And yet Mr. Fairbanks has scored his successes in the precise degree in which the acrobatic antics and clever sub titles are governed by story, and he will be among the first to admit that the "Matrimaniacs" is not as good as "Manhattan Madness" of "The Americana," simply and solely because the story is not as good. And Mr. Griffith may find food for reflection in the fact that "The Birth of a Nation" made more money than "Intolerance" simply and solely because in one case he had a story for a foundation, and in the other he was merely trying to get some assorted thoughts off his chest.

A spectacle is an appeal to the eye. It may be impressive, but the impression is fleeting if it is not backed by story, and the impression lasts in proportion to the strength of idea. Mr. Griffith may not realize this in the heyday of his success, but some day he will look back and find that the ride of the Klu-Klux was impressive, not because there was a large number of men employed, not because of the beauty of the settings, not because the camera covered wide areas, but simply and solely because those men were riding somewhere to do something that had an intimate and necessary bearing on the story. When he makes this illuminative discovery he will probably do more to advance the art of photoplay than he ever will do so long as he remains purely the director of large crowds in huge sets. Some of his early Biograph productions were vastly better than his more recent work, and will do more to give him permanent fame. Other people will make larger productions than The Birth of a Nation and Intolerance, and they will put stories into them, and they will last, but among the dispassionate critics Mr. Griffith's fame will rest upon the earlier Biographs unless he himself sees the light and proceeds to correct his own false theories.

We do not particularly care about Mr. Griffith, but because he has made big productions he is hailed as a teacher, and his teachings are helping to retard the advance of pictures, for the motion picture will never come into its own until the value of the story is realized and no play is allowed to be made until the production manager is assured that the action tells properly and fully a real story.

William Lord Wright, in Selig's Paste Pot and Shears, recently epitomized the bulk of the present feature productions in a humorous report of a fictitious film largely consisting of close-ups and fades. "There was no story," he adds, "the subject consisting of a series of tense and gripping episodes." And we are willing to wager that there are a lot of directors who cannot appreciate the delicious satire of the fact that there can be no tense and gripping episodes without story.

The Newest Art.

Even while it irritates, it is amusing to read some of the attacks upon photoplay by such writers as Walter Prichard Eaton. Mr. Eaton writes as though he had had all his photoplays rejected, but we do not believe that he ever wrote any or even tried to, for he was one of the first to attack the pictures, and he has at least been consistent if not always intelligent, but then intelligence is not always the hallmark of his writings on the drama. Others write in his vein and strafe the pictures whole-heartedly, and they do not seem to realize that the art is still very young and yet finds its highest exposition in the purely spectacular side. It has suffered enormously from overproduction and wrong development. That there is any photoplay at all after the things done to it in the past seven years in itself seems to prove the permanency of pictures and to point to better things to come. The men who really can do new things in a new way have been handicapped by short-sighted manufacturers, and we have not yet even begun to pass from the formative stage, in spite of all that has been said about wonderful advances. The first real advance in photoplay was the presentation of "The Great Train Robbery," yet five or six years after its initial production, it was revived and given a run at a New York house and was almost laughed at. The plays of today will be laughed at five years from now in the light of greater development. There is nothing the matter with the photoplay save some of the men who are making them. No further advance can be made until the fakers are discovered and replaced by artists. There are men who today are qualified to make artistic pictures, but they cannot compete with the commercial atmosphere. In time a way will be found to let them throw their influence on the art, and advance will come.

Copyrighted Plays.

A correspondent wants to know where he may obtain a list of plays copyrighted, and if it is possible to get the full synopsis. The synopsis should be watched for in this paper in the stories of the films and the criticisms. To obtain a list of photoplays entered for copyright send one dollar in money-order to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for a year's subscription to the Catalogue of Copyright Entries, Part I, Groups 1 and 2. Group 2 is a monthly issue listing all photoplays and other motion pictures, but only the title, author, producer and copyright claimant are named. There is no description. An entry reads: JOHN OSBORNE'S TRIUMPH; story by Burton S. Wilson, scenario by H. G. Stafford, directed by Murdock McQuarrie. Two reels. (3359.)

C. Feb. 5, 1917; 2 c. and description Feb. 7, 1917. L.10136: Universal Film Mfg., New York.

The number in the first paragraph is the serial index number, and the number preceded by the letter L is the number of the copyright. The same group contains plays and lesser publications, Group 1 being the books newly copyrighted or which have had their copyrights extended. At the end of the year a complete index is issued, as a whole. In the last index, for example, Universal gets about seven pages for its titles under the corporate title, each title being repeated in its proper alphabetical position. It is a handy list for reference, but it offers no synopsis, if that is what is desired.

Stunts On the Chute.

The day of the stunt picture seems to be passing. To begin with, it would seem that about all the stunts possible have been worked and all that remains is new combinations of old stunts, but a greater reason for waning interest rises from saiety and a still greater reason is found in the gradual education of the public in trick work, including the use of dummies and doubles. If you know that Bertha the Brave is standing on the side lines while a man in a duplicate costume climbs up the baloon and slits the gas bag, you are less interested in the stunt, not alone because you expect a man to be able to do such things, but because your interest is or has been engrossed by the heroine, and you resent the substitution. The stunts have just begun to slide down the incline, but they are gaining momentum, and when it is no longer possible to thrill with a leap for life it will be more than ever necessary to have story to hold the interest.

Features.

In a recent issue of a literary magazine, the publication gives its annual list of new authors of books. One noticeable point is the number of writers who have had their first long novel published, though their names may be well known as authors of shorter forms of fiction. Several of the writers are so well known that you are almost surprised to find them making their debut in a new field. They have written so much short stuff you suppose that they must have had longer stories. Some of them have been writing the shorter lengths for years. A feature is no more than a book-length story. If it takes successful authors some years to master the longer lengths, it is absurd for the novice to suppose that he can gain immediate success as a feature writer. Go more slowly and you'll last longer.

Work for It.

You can write better stories if you are familiar with the studios, but you are not likely to see the inside of a studio until you write good stories.

Work.

Lots of people think they are working hard when in reality they are just loafing around, waiting for someone to help them.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Optics of the Operating Room.

By Nicholas Sabo.

UNTIL Mr. Richardson, editor of the projection department of the Moving Picture World, added to his many merits a new one by pointing out the importance of optics in projection, the enormous waste of light, and many troubles caused by optical errors, there was no such thing as "optics of the operating room." When he started his battlecry, "There is a waste of $10,000 every day due to optical errors in the lens system designed twenty years ago and never improved," he not only made ambitious operators, who are desirous to learn and to earn and deserve higher salaries, his debtors, but also the exhibitors, who are paying for the aforesaid waste.

The result was that men like Messrs. Griffiths, Martin and Solar entered the lists by giving the result of their very interesting and instructive studies and experiments, and, while I do not in all points agree with them, they most certainly do deserve full credit for encouraging and inducing others to study the subject.

In fact since that time almost everyone in and around the operating room is talking about optics, but the ideas of the great majority of operators are still what I would call just a little bit hazy when it comes to a real discussion of the various points involved. Also there are many who do not even attempt to discuss the question, because it seems to them to be too technical and involved. For this reason I think it is quite a good idea for the editor to devote space in the projection department (which ought to be at least five times its present size) to a popular "free-lecture" on optics. I agree with the editor that every operator should know something about the fundamental laws of optics, as applied to projection. He should know, if not more, at least not less than he needs to enable him to locate and remove any ordinary trouble in his lens system.

The optical system of the projector consists of a source of light, two condensers, the object (film photograph in the aperture of the machine) to be magnified, a projection lens, and a screen upon which the picture is projected. The optical elements are the two condenser lenses and the projection lens. Lenses are, as we know, made of glass. Glass has, among other properties, REFRACTING POWER AND DISPERSIVE POWER.

REFRACTING POWER OF THE GLASS. Light, heat, or sound consists of waves. When such a wave passes from one medium into another of different density at an angle, it changes its direction, or "refracts." When a light ray passes from air into a plate of glass having parallel sides (except from a direction exactly at right angles to the plate), it will change direction (refract), but the emerging ray will have the same direction it originally had. It merely has been displaced laterally by a distance dependent upon the angle at which it enters and leaves the glass and the thickness of the glass.

In case the two glass surfaces are not parallel, however, as, for instance, a prism, the emerging rays will not continue parallel to the former line of motion, but will be refracted as shown in Figure 2, but the amount of refractance will be greater or less according to the density of the glass, which means that if we take two lenses of the same radii of curvature, but of different density (refracting index), they will have different focal lengths. See Figures 3 and 4.

For this reason, in making projection lenses, lens manufacturers always use two kinds of glass, viz: crown and flint. For lenses of greater precision they use Jena glass.

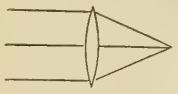

Fig. 3.

DISPERSIVE POWER OF THE GLASS. White light consists of a combination of all colors. The dispersive power of glass is the power it possesses of splitting up the white rays into their primary colors. (Chromatic aberration.) Different glasses have different powers of dispersion, and in order to correct chromatic aberration opticians use combinations of two or more glasses with different dispersive power.

SPHERICAL ABERRATION. Due to the use of spherical (globe-like) surfaces, an uncorrected lens is not able to converge the rays passing through its margin to a focus at the same distance from the lens as the central rays, and this defect is what is known as spherical aberration.

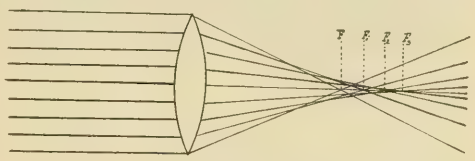

Fig. 5.

In Figure 5 the rays from the center of the lens are at focus at F3. There are other rays which will focus at F2 and F1, and the rays nearest to the edge of the lens will focus at F. We thus see that a single lens has no point of absolute focus, and if we would use a single, uncorrected lens for a projection lens we would find that the edges of the picture on the screen would not be sharp. Spherical aberration may be corrected by using combinations of lenses of different curvatures.

In the foregoing we have seen that the refracting power of glass is corrected by using a combination of lenses having different refracting indexes (density). Chromatic aberration can be corrected by using a combination of lenses having different dispersive power, and spherical aberration can be corrected by combining two or more lenses, so that the positive error of one may correct the negative error of the other. At least two lenses are necessary in order to correct the defective properties of the glass or lens, but in projection we use two condensers which are uncorrected, single lenses, and on account of these uncorrected condensers millions of dollars' worth of electric current is wasted yearly.

CONDENSERS. The mostly used condenser systems are two plano-convex, meniscus-plano-convex and meniscus-bi-convex. As to the back (arc) condenser, the meniscus will collect more rays than will a plano-convex of the same focal length, as Figure 6 plainly shows. As to the front condenser, a combination of meniscus-bi-convex will give a shorter combined focal length for the condenser system than will a meniscus-plano-convex, but in the end there is not much difference between the combinations of meniscus-plano-convex and meniscus-bi-convex. The purpose of the condenser system is to collect as many as possible of the rays of light coming from the source of light (at present electric arc), and to bring those rays to a point into the center of the projection lens, i. e., to bring the image of the crater to a focal point.

But, as we know, the single lens has no absolute focus, and right here we get into trouble. One man will say that the focus is near the aperture, another that it is in the lens, and still another that it is outside the lens, and everyone is right, because of spherical aberration.

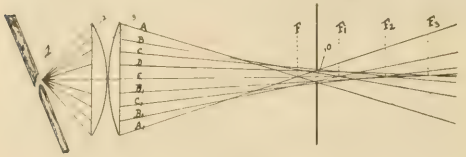

Fig. 7.

C, C1, D, D1, pencils of rays, and F, F1, F2, F3, their respective focus, E the optical center, and 10 aperture.

VERY IMPORTANT. THE RIGHT DISTANCE FROM FRONT CONDENSER TO AFERTURE IS THE MIDWAY BETWEEN F and F1.

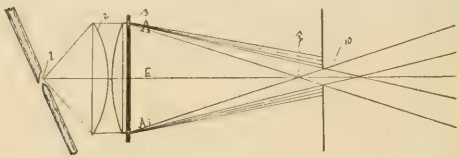

Fig. 8.

Figure 8 shows the action of chromatic aberration. If we cover the whole condenser, leaving only two pinholes for rays A and A1, then we get not only two pencils of rays which will cross before reaching the aperture (10), but we get a light spot. Certainly we will have all the colors from red to violet impinging upon the frame of the aperture, and only a very weak light passes the aperture. Now let us follow the rays after they pass the aperture. The rays coming from the center of the condenser and having their focal point farthest away from the condenser (F3) are utilized by the projection lens in forming the image of the film on the screen.

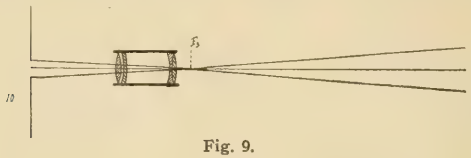

Fig. 9.

F3 is the right place for the revolving shutter.

The rays coming to a focus before they would meet the projection lens are only utilized to increase the illumination. But the rays which have not reached the back elements of the projection lens on account of their greater angle are wasted.

The loss of light varies, according to the different focal lengths of projection lenses, from 20 to 40 per cent. There are only two ways to remedy this, viz: either by using condensers which are corrected for spherical and chromatic aberration, or by using projection lenses which will have shorter back focus. The first is not very likely to be practical, because corrected lenses are expensive, and expensive lenses cannot be exposed to great heat, else the bills for broken condensers will be larger than the cost of the wasted light. As to short back focus lenses, the writer last year placed about fifty lenses of this kind on the market, with best results in focal lengths of 4 inches or longer. These lenses consist of three combinations, instead of two, as used with the present Petzwall system, the rear one placed as close to the film as possible, so as to collect practically all rays passing the aperture. By this arrangement there could be saved, according to the focal length of the two projection lenses, from 20 to 40 per cent of light, formerly wasted, but the extra glass surface absorbs 8 per cent of it, therefore the actual saving amounts to only from 12 to 32 per cent. With focal lengths below 4 inches these lenses will not be of any considerable advantage as against the two-combination lenses, which are so close to the aperture that the loss of light is almost immaterial.

No Operating Room.

E. F. Anderson, Hampton, Va., writes:

I noticed in the February 3rd issue of the Scientific American an article which interested me very much. It describes a new type of projector having no upper magazine and several other interesting features. But what I am writing about now is a portion of an article quoted below.

"In connection with this machine it is interesting to record the progressive action recently taken by Fire Marshal P. W. Nicholson of the Washington, D. C., fire department, and Captain Lester L. Kingsbury, chief electrical inspector of Baltimore, in requiring that all temporary installations of motion picture machine apparatus shall be operated in the open, thus insuring the safe handling of the film when not in actual use in the projection machine. It is such an obviously logical and sensible action, this putting a public watch on the operator to see that he complies with the regulations prohibiting smoking and requiring that the film when not in use shall be kept in an approved metal container, that it is surprising the action was not taken long ago. Concealing the operator in an operating chamber, where he can disregard the regulations, is an unnecessary increase in fire hazard. To make the operator work in the open is analogous to putting 'a watch to watch a watchman.' However, neither the Baltimore or Washington regulations have been changed in so far as they apply to theatrical installations, for the reason that the psychology of the theater audience must be given due consideration and the possibility of panic recognized."

Thus the article ran. What I want to know is what you think of the "progressive action"; also if you have read the article, what do you think of the machine itself? Personally, I believe the possibilities of panic would be greater by having the machine out in the open than it would be in an operating room, because the film might catch fire in the machine, and most assuredly this will instantly be seen by the people in the vicinity of the machine.

The machine referred to has no upper magazine, but both reels of film are in magazines just the same, the upper one being located below. This particular projector was described and illustrated on page 1319, December 2nd issue. It is of the right-angle type, meaning that the lens is on the left hand side of the machine, the light ray being diverted to the left by a prism. I would not care to express an authoritative opinion for or against any projection machine in the department, for reasons which you can very well understand.

With regard to the matter of the elimination of the operating room in temporary installations in Baltimore and Washington, I would simply say there is no earthly difference in the psychological effect on an audience in a theater, a church, a hall, or anywhere else. As I have time and again pointed out, with a properly constructed, properly equipped operating room there is absolutely no danger of any kind whatsoever to life or property from a fire, as such, nor is there any particular danger from panic.

So long, however, as there is the concentration of a powerful, extremely hot ray of light upon celluloid, there is and will continue to be at least some degree of danger of at least a blaze at the machine aperture. And this is just exactly as true of the type of machine named as it is with any other type. Now if the machine stands out in the open audience, and a bit of film track, for instance, breaks off, curls into the aperture and catches fire, it does not necessarily mean there is going to be anything happen except a little puff of smoke, but Mr. Cheerful Idiot, seated ten feet away from the machine, sees that puff of smoke, leaps to his feet and yells fire. Good night! There really is no fire, but that little fact cuts not the least figure. Some one has raised the alarm and the audience makes a concerted rush for the exit. Result——. Well, you know what the result is as well as I do.

Personally, I don't agree with the wisdom of the change inaugurated by the Washington and Baltimore authorities, nor do I see where they have any moral right to differentiate as between a theater audience and any other audience. I will, however, concede this: If the machine is not installed in a fireproof operating room, having a properly arranged port, and a vent flue of sufficient size to carry away all smoke and gases, then it might almost as well be out in the open.

So far as the value of the audience checking up the work of the operator in keeping his films in metal containers, why that is very largely bunk. In the first place, the room is dark and the audience is busily engaged in watching the show. The probability is it does not know the films ought to be kept in metal containers, nor does it care sufficiently to interfere whether the regulation is complied with or not, so long as there is a good picture on the screen. To my way of thinking the statement that you have to set the audience watching the operator is a direct insult to every operator in Baltimore and Washington. By inference it may be presumed that the sponsors for this action believe that operators are habitual violators of law and regulations. Well, they are not. I think they come as close to being law abiding as are the officials and individuals who insinuate otherwise.

However, there really is one point of difference between the ordinary temporary installation and the ordinary theatrical installation, but this, of course, the officials and individuals responsible for this action, as usual, do not know, or overlooked. That difference is that in the ordinary temporary installation comparatively weak projection current is used, seldom running over 45 amperes and usually not above 40, whereas in many of the theaters 50, 60, and even 80 and 90 amperes are used, which, of course, to some extent, operates to increase the fire danger. The placing of the feed magazine below the mechanism of course reduces the liability of fire to enter it, but with modern machines of the other type this danger amounts to but little.

Extremely Bad Advice.

J. Lewis Arnold, manager Star Theater, Bellingham, Washington, says:

> Englosed find marked letter received from a party in Seattle, Washington. In a personal conversation he brought up the matter of some operators wasting an inch of his film every time they made a splice. His suggestion was that the film be loosely spliced so that it could be pulled apart without cutting, and then re-spliced to the next reel also without cutting. He even said that if part of the splice stuck to the film it would not hurt to splice right over this, and that three or four thicknesses of film at a splice was all right. I informed him that when I spliced any of his advertising film onto a reel it would be firmly spliced and would not come apart; also that I would not risk my life, the theater equipment, and the lives of the audience for anybody's film. He came right back at me by saying that he had been running films for several months, and that the Seattle operators spliced films loosely and seldom ever had to cut them. Don't you think those Seattle operators are in the wrong?

No, I don't, Friend Anderson, because you can take it from me that operators, Seattle or otherwide, don't do such things. If this man made a statement of that kind, I venture the assertion that he told something that was not true and uttered a slander on the operators of Seattle. You are perfectly correct in saying that splices made that way would endanger your equipment, and the lives of your audience. This man seems to be an advertising man. Well, he may be a good advertising man, but I would not recommend him as being competent to give advice concerning the running of film if the above is a sample of the goods he gives out in that line. No competent operator would consider splicing a film that way, and they don't have "three or four layers" at a splice either, because if they do when that particular splice goes through the picture will perform a war dance on the screen, and the operator will be very likely to lose his lower and possibly his upper loop.

Should All Join Together.

Mr. S. S. Holt, Superior, Wisconsin, bats a home-run as follows:

> With regard to the Superior operators and managers going over to Duluth to meet you and hear your lecture while you are there, the Duluth local replied to a communication from the Superior local saying that they would take the matter up with you upon your arrival. But that, we feel, would be too late, or at least, it would be very hard to secure a full turnout on such short notice. I have talked to some of the managers here in Superior, and they would very much like to hear the lecture. Cannot you help us with the Duluth local?
> And now just a word about condensers: While in Fort Dodge, Iowa, working at the Magic theatre, I matched up my lens system as nearly as I could with the tables published in the department. I was unable to get my lamphouse back far enough, as I had a small-diameter objective. When I came to the Broadway, this city, I also matched up my lenses with the tables, and could get 20 inches between the condenser and aperture. There was a blue ghost when I came, there is none now. I have a 98-foot throw and a 15-foot picture, with a Bausch and Lomb projection lens only 1⅝ inches in diameter. The tables may not be perfect, but they certainly are a good long step in the correct direction.

I don't, for one moment, imagine it is necessary that I "help you" with the Duluth local, except to say that I shall be delighted to have both the managers and operators of Superior present. I could not, of course, presume to tell the Duluth local what to do, but I would suggest that if it is practical it would be nice to have the two bodies join forces in this particular matter. I have been told by a traveling operator that there is just a little bit of hard feeling between the Duluth and Superior locals. If this is true, FORGET IT. Remember that you are brothers, and there should be no unkindness in the family. Get together, gentlemen. Duluth and Superior are quite close and the men in both cities should forget any differences they may have and join forces in real brotherhood. Remember this: "United we stand, divided we fall" applies equally to individual men and to individual unions. When I come up there I trust I will find you all good friends, standing shoulder to shoulder for RIGHT.

As for the lens matter, why yes, operators very generally concede that the lens tables are a hop, step and a jump in the right direction. Glad they have helped you.

Flaming Arc.

Mr. Emile Bengle, of Three Rivers, Mass., has trouble, as follows:

> I have been having considerable difficulty with my light. The machine is a Power's 6-A, taking A. C. through a Little Giant. The supply is 110 volts, and I use 60 amperes at the arc. The trouble is a flaming arc. I have three wire connections, 50, 55 and 60. By using 50 amperes my light is weakened, but it does not stop the flaming. I use ¾ Bio carbon. What remedy have you for a flaming arc?

You must expect some flame when you are using 60 amperes. You are using two-cored carbons, and the cores of the carbons produce a large quantity of gas. There is no way of avoiding this, but if the flame is excessive, I would suggest that you try some other make of carbon, because the excessive flame would indicate carbon fault. Before trying anything, however, be sure that the ventilation of your lamp house is ample. Five-eighths carbons are plenty large enough for sixty amperes A. C.

Something New.

In the Lyric Theater, Santa Ana, Cal., I not only found an excellent installation and a good operating room, but also a very clever arrangement for switching over from compensarcs, used for heating up the carbons, to rectifiers, the invention of Operator J. E. Coe.

The room itself is large, has dead black walls and ceiling, linoleum on the floor, and neatly racked tools. Two simplex projectors, two compensarcs and two G. E. mercury arc rectifiers constitute the principal items of equipment.

Note the machine switch. The lower half of it is light in color, you will observe. This is a casing Brother Coe has added to the original machine switch cover, and it contains a second switch, so attached to this upper, regular machine switch, that when the operator steps on the treadle seen on the floor below, the cord attached thereto operates these switches and closes the lower switch, controlling the rectifier switch, at practically the same instant it opens the upper switch, controlling the compensarc circuit, thus effecting a change from A. C. to D. C. with scarcely a wink of the light on the screen, and with no trouble at all. The rectifier is already working, carrying the arc of the other machine, which arc is instantly and automatically broken when the second switch is closed, since the compensarc arc is shorter, hence has less resistance.

Friend Coe has applied for a patent, as I understand it. He has an invention which works perfectly, and seems to have considerable value.

Difficulties Commonly Met With in Negative Film Development.

EXPOSURE. With negative film the latitude of exposure is considerable. That is to say, if f-11 were normal exposure, the film would stand an exposure at f-8 or f-16 without being too much over or under exposed.

Light varies in intensity from hour to hour during the day and from month to month during the year. In winter, exposure during the middle of the day should be from two to four times longer than at the same hour of the day in midsummer. Exposures made near sunset at any season of the year would be from five to ten times longer than at noon of the same day.

Correct exposure gives a well balanced image in which the detail of the shadows is fully brought out before the highlights are over developed.

Over exposure produces lack of contrast. If development is carried too far, negatives will have too much density and shadows and half tones will be clogged. Such negatives will be dense printers and the resulting prints will lack brilliancy.

In an under exposed film there is no detail in the shadows and if development is carried too far, highlights will become chalky, resulting in a black and white print having no graduation or middle tones.

The best remedy for too much over or under exposure is to make new negatives, timing same correctly. Where this is not possible, intensification or reduction will help to a certain extent, but the best results cannot be expected unless exposures are approximately correct.

Where there is any doubt as regards safety of developing light, same can be easily tested. Take a piece of film, cover half of it, expose to the developing light for two minutes and develop. If the exposed half is perfectly clear and shows no fog, the dark room light may be considered safe. If, however, exposed section develops fog, the dark room light should be covered with one or two thicknesses of postoffice paper or orange glass.

A uniform blackening of the film when developed is due to fog. There are various kinds of fog and many different ways in which it may be produced. If film is exposed to an unsuitable dark room light during process of development, or when loading into magazines or winding on the racks, it will become fogged. Actinic light in the dark room is a most frequent cause of trouble and photographers sometimes blame the film when the difficulty is due to dark room not being light tight, or developing light not being safe. Too much alkali or too warm developer will also cause fog. A leaky camera or magazine is a frequent cause of fog.

Fog is sometimes caused by oil, dust or a hazy atmospheric deposit on the lens. This would give a flat hazy image, which on forced development would produce fog.

The reversal of values whereby a negative is changed to a partial positive is not very generally understood. The most frequent cause for reversal of the photographic image is the exposure of the film to an unsafe dark room light during the process of development. The amount of reversal varies with the relation between the preliminary and subsequent development and length of exposure to actinic light after development has begun. Reversal occurs only when negative is fogged after being partially developed. Fog previous to development merely blackens the film all over.

Other causes for reversal are extreme over exposure or a trace of Hypo in the developer. These latter causes are, however, infrequent. Reversal due to an unsafe dark room light is quite common and photographers not understanding the true cause, are usually inclined to blame the film.

Halation occurs when strong lights are brought opposite dense shadows. It is frequently seen in the case of white draperies on a dark background. It also occurs when dark objects are photographed against a bright sky. When photographing interiors, halation shows as a spreading of the light from the windows. Another cause is reflection of light from the lens by some bright metal part of the mechanism or of the lens mount. All the interior metal parts of the camera, especially those near the lens and the aperture plate, should have a dull black finish.

Thin and weak negatives, lacking density, may be due to under exposure, developer used at too low a temperature, or on account of developer not acting with sufficient energy. Thin, flat negatives are also due to insufficient development. Too much diffusion of light on the subject will also produce flat negatives.

The remedy would be to light with more contrast, giving more roundness and relief, give correct exposure and keep temperature of developer and dark room at the proper point. If, after having taken every precaution, negatives are still weak and lacking in brilliancy, it is possible that better negatives can be obtained by increasing the proportion of carbonate of soda in the developer. Impure sodas are responsible for many thin negatives.

Frilling and softening of the film is due to using developer or other solutions at too high a temperature. This causes the emulsion to soften and sometimes to lift from the support. Violent changes in temperature in the various solutions are also liable to cause frilling. Frilling is, however, most frequently encountered in the summer time or in warm climates. The use of ice to keep temperature at the proper point is recommended. Use fresh Hypo or an Acid Hypo Bath. Do not wash for too long a time and when drying, place negatives where there is a free circulation of air, so as to dry rapidly.

Negatives dried in warm, close atmosphere will increase in density and clog up in the halftones. The best way to dry negatives is before an electric fan, but under no circumstances should drying be hastened by the application of heat. Drying negatives in too warm a place will melt the emulsion, causing same to run, giving a grotesque appearance to the image.

Granular indentations in the emulsion is due to slow drying. If negatives are dried too slowly the gelatine will swell and separate, causing transparent blotches and spots and a pitted appearance all over the surface of the film.

Mottled and wrinkled film is another kind of frilling. This is due to prolonged development, causing film to become soft, and then washing in water that is too warm. Wrinkling or reticulation of the film is most frequently due to being left for a long time in solutions of too high a temperature.

A very common cause of blisters is not thoroughly rinsing film after removing from the developer and before placing in the Acid Fixing Bath. The developer being alkaline, transferring the film to an Acid Fixing Bath without sufficiently washing same, causes effervescence, and the gas forming under the emulsion, lifts the film and produces innumerable small blisters all over the surface of the film. The remedy would be to remove the alkali by rinsing before placing it in the fixing bath.

Negatives may be stained from a variety of causes. Brown or yellow stains, causing film to become discolored either entire or in sections, are usually due to imperfect fixing or incomplete washing after fixing. The use of decomposed Hypo or oxidized Pyro Developer will also cause stains.

Yellow edge or discoloration is most frequently due to insufficient fixing and sometimes to insufficient washing.

The subject of spots is an endless one, and when this difficulty occurs it is usually necessary to consider each case individually. Some of the most frequent causes for spots are, however, as follows:

Transparent spots may be due to an oily substance on the surface of the film which would repel the developer and prevent its action.

Round transparent spots with sharply defined edges are due to air bells in the developer which adhere to the surface of the film. This may occur either in tank or drum development.

Small semi-transparent spots occurring in tank development are usually due to effervescence in the water on account of high pressure. This causes minute air bells to adhere to the surface of the film during the preliminary stages of development, giving what some consider a mildewed appearance, but if spots are examined under a microscope, it can readily be seen that same are due to minute air bells, as above stated. The remedy would be to draw off sufficient water for developing bath, allowing same to stand long enough for the air to escape. The racks should be moved up and down during development to dislodge any bubbles that may form, and the top of the rack gone over with a large camel's hair brush saturated with developer.

Irregular shaped transparent spots may be produced by scum on the surface of the developer. This occurs when using developer which has been allowed to stand and become oxidized. Irregular transparent spots are sometimes due to film having been injured on account of rough handling. In this case the emulsion will be found broken and dug through to the celluloid.

Transparent spots and pitted emulsion is due to decomposition of the film, the result of slow drying in a close, heated atmosphere.

Harry A. Sherman Enters Producing Ranks

Resigns as President of the Two Minneapolis Firms and John Elliott Buys His Interest in Elliott & Sherman Film Corporation.

HARRY A. SHERMAN, president of the Elliott & Sherman Fim Corporation and of the Sherman-Elliott Company, both of Minneapolis, has resigned and retired from these firms.

The firm first mentioned was established about two years ago by John Elliott and Harry A. Sherman for the purpose of buying the rights to "The Birth of a Nation" for seventeen western states, and the second was formed later to take over the United States and Canada rights for "The Crisis."

Mr. Elliott has purchasd the interests of Mr. Sherman in the Elliott & Sherman Film Corporation, and will continue under this firm name to operate "The Birth of a Nation" and conduct a general film business in the present offices at 507-8 Produce Exchange building, Minneapolis.

In the case of the Sherman-Elliott Company, Messrs. Elliott and Sherman have resigned and the firm has been reorganized. Edward Nelson, the former treasurer of the firm, has become president to succeed Mr. Sherman, and F. H. Peterson has been appointed secretary-treasurer, in the place of Mr. Elliott. The firm's offices have been removed to 854 McKnight building, Minneapolis, where "The Crisis" will be handled.

It is said that Mr. Sherman will henceforth devote himself to the production of features, and that he has already under way two eight-reel features, which will be released sometime in September. His operations will be conducted somewhere in the east.

Jack Brehany will continue as general manager of the Elliott & Sherman Film Corporation. Mr. Brehany was successful recently in overcoming the censorship difficulties that prevented "The Birth of a Nation" from being shown in Kansas, and several "Birth" shows will tour the state this summer.

Mr. Elliott also announces that five shows of the famous Griffith masterpiece will be sent out this summer to tour the other states in his territory. A complete orchestra will be carried by each show, and only the larger cities and towns will be visited.

William S. Hart Captures Chicago.

William S. Hart, Triangle's big, popular favorite, spent three of the most arduous days ever spent in his life in the Windy City last week. He came in from Detroit Monday morning, May 28, and pulled out for St. Paul and Minneapolis Wednesday evening, after a whirwind experience.

Numerous screen favorites have visited Chicago; but, with the single exception of Mary Pickford, none created such intense popular excitement among moving picture fans as did this brawny hero of western pictures. His visits to various picture theaters during his stay created ovations which few popular candidates for president have outdone on their most famous tours.

At the Covent Garden, on North Clark street, fully 5,000 people were waiting outside to greet him. And they waited outside, because the house can only hold 3,000, and it was packed. Street car traffic was stopped for nearly half an hour, and then it required the efforts of three policemen to make a way for the visitor through the dense throng. And this was only one of his Chicago experiences.

His speeches—a medley of recitative effort, personal reminiscences and heart-to-heart talks always took well, because of their honest, sympathetic ring. They conveyed his own pleasing personality, which has been largely wrought on wide plains, under skies of varying aspects.

In the Louis XVI room, in the Hotel Sherman, Mr. Hart was the guest of honor in an assembly of nearly 150 people Tuesday afternoon. Cowboy waiters served at table and several of them were of the "real kind," as Mr. Hart did not fail to state in his speech, when expressing his warm appreciation of the honor they had done him.

The trade was well represented. As the time given Mr. Hart was short only a few addresses were made, and they were highly complimentary to the guest of the occasion. Mr. Hart's speech was greatly enjoyed by all.

After St. Paul and Minneapolis, Mr. Hart will visit Butte City, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Oakland—and then back to work at Inceville.

The Edmund M. Allen Film Corporation Organized for State Rights and Exhibition Purposes.

The Edmund M. Allen Film Corporation of Chicago, recently organized, announces that an option for a long term ground lease on property very desirably located has been obtained, and that plans and specifications for a moving picture theater that will seat 2,800 people have been prepared. The site has not been disclosed, but it is understood that it is conveniently situated near Chicago's "White Way."

Edmund M. Allen, former warden of the Illinois state penitentiary and well known in business circles, is president of the new company. Among his associates in the enterprise are several prominent Chicago business men who for some time past have decided to become identified with the moving picture industry. Others interested are Harry J. Ridings, manager of Cohan's Grand Opera House and Chicago manager for Cohan & Harris; F. C. Aiken, long connected with the General Film Company in important official capacities, and J. M. Harris, widely acquainted in New York and Chicago theatrical circles.

The corporation was formed for the purpose of engaging in the state rights feature business as well as in the exhibition of pictures, and the rights to Illinois and Michigan for "The Garden of Allah," Selig's super-film, have already been secured. It is the purpose to release this production in the near future.

The offices of the company are temporarily located at 121 North Clark street.

"The Spirit of '76."

After deleting about 2,000 feet from the fourteen reels of this picture, Major Funkhouser, of the Chicago censor board, gave the necessary permission for its showing at Orchestra Hall. Fully twenty days had been occupied in legal and wordy strife, and now that the picture is being seen by the public one wonders what it was all about.

Robert Goldstein cannot be given any considerable credit for the production, judging from the following extracts from criticisms in the Chicago dailies:

Kitty Kelly in the Examiner:

After twenty days of troubles, "The Spirit of '76," which succeeded in opening at Orchestra Hall last night, is deserving of the poulticing of kindness. And it is difficult to discover adequate cause for these troubles, unless it has been so censorially annotated as to pass international muster. Anyhow, the reaction it raises, other than soporific that is, is patriotic. Its spirit is not anti-British, but anti-tyrannish; it breathes freedom, just as does the press of today, and one doesn't cringe at a nationality in particular, but at the type of tyranny at present being Teutonically manifested. So, don't anyone be afraid of having his loyalties upset by the picture. Rather it will heighten them.

As to matter it is complicated, historical facts being mosaiced in with a weird species of so-called historical facts as to keep one dazily jumping back and forth. Being revolutionary in time, it offers a wide field for costuming which has been filled very thoroughly. Never before have more clothes or more comprehensive clothes, complete even to the last button and frill, been mustered. It is a costume triumph.

Mae Tinee in the Tribune:

The costumes alone are worth going to see. Neither thought nor expense have been spared in regard to them.

To sum it all up, acting, costumes, sets and direction are excellent. The music is a joy. It is rather too complicated for daily use, but if you have an entire evening or an entire afternoon to spend you will. I Imagine (now "The Spirit of '76." Two reels have been eliminated, so that now there are only twelve. I must insist, however, that five reels is long enough for most pictures and eight reels long enough for any picture.

Louella O. Parsons in the Herald:

There are some good points in "The Spirit of '76," though, in my opinion. Mr. Goldfish has overlooked a lot in bringing in too much detail and too much unnecessary action. Were he further to eliminate scenes and cut down some of the action he would have a better picture.

W. K. Hollander in the News:

If the Major (Major Funkhouser of the censor board) injured the film—and he undoubtedly did harm, its continuity with deletions and suggested subtitles to remove a possible sting to the British—the sponsors themselves must shoulder the blame for the poor casting and bad construction. There are flaws in photography which could have been averted. Some scenes are gloomy and others too bright. Once in an elaborate event the camera was out of focus, and the incident is blurred. Frequently the reflection of a mirror can be seen dancing in the vicinity of some character the director desired to bring out conspicuously.

And in the cast there is an insipid looking fellow resembling the caricatured modern pacifist, who represents the famous scholarly statesman of old, Benjamin Franklin. That characterization almost borders on sacrilege, for at intervals it provokes laughter. Then there is a puny Lafayette and an unimpressive person, typifying with stick and boisterousness, England's learned counselor, Lord Chatham (William Pitt). In one respect, and then only in spots, is there intelligent acting. Adda Gleason as Catherine Montour shows this occasional burst of artistry.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Essanay's seven-reel feature, "On Trial," completed about a month ago, was purchased by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit during the week of Monday, May 21. The transaction included the American and Canadian sole rights. The Jones, Linick & Schaefer Co., which is a member of this circuit, secured the rights for the state of Illinois, and the feature will be handled by the Central Film Co. "On Trial" will succeed "The Barrier" at the Colonial theater about June 10 or 11.

The open meeting and buffet lunch given by the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago in honor of the Sunshine Film Corporation, of this city, Friday evening, May 25, was largely attended and everybody present had a most enjoyable time. A number of entertainers were present from "The Show of Wonders," now playing at the Palace theater, and from other shows and the State's restaurant. At this meeting the club indorsed Richard C. Travers' proposition to furnish a hull for his boat which will be presented to the government for use as a submarine chaser. Other interests in the trade will also support the measure.

Thursday evening, May 31, was Ladies' Night at the clubrooms, in honor of "The Bird of Paradise" company now playing at the Olympic theater. All members were invited to bring their wives, sisters or women friends.

"The Barrier," Rex Beach's fine super-feature, entered its third week at the Colonial Sunday, June 3. Jones, Linick & Schaefer report excellent business. A special feature of the presentations is the accompanying music, which was composed by Fred O. Hanks and Sol Levy.

"Unce Sam Afloat and Ashore," in two reels, released through the General Film Co., has been received with popular acclaim, and Wm. N. Selig is receiving numerous complimentary letters concerning it. These reels show life as it is in Uncle Sam's Army and Navy, and from all reports is furnishing strong aid in gaining recruits.

"The Garden of Allah" was recently shown in Keith's Hippodrome, Cleveland, O., this being its first presentation in the state. Reports state that the large theater is being crowded to the doors at every presentation. The prices run from 25 to 75 cents. Plans are now under way for premier presentations of this fine super-feature in New York City and Chicago.

Mr. Selig announces the engagement of Lew Fields, the well-known popular American actor. Mr. Fields will appear in the leading part in "The Barker," a photoplay of strong heart interest, soon to be produced by the Selig Polyscope Co.

"Uncle Sam Awake," a five-reel patriotic film produced by Lawrence Rubel for the Junior Patriots of America, entered on a short run at the Auditorium Wednesday afternoon, May 30. This film shows soldiers in the making, cadets at West Point, jackies at the Great Lakes Training Station near Chicago, the rifle ranges at Fort Sheridan, etc., etc. Burr McIntosh delivered a patriotic lecture during the run of the picture. The Junior Patriots are raising by this means funds for a farm enterprise, which wll give both agricultural and military training to boys from 15 to 21 years of age. A similar farm has been successfully operated for some time on Long Island, N. Y., and a plot of land has already been donated for the same purpose near Chicago. The proceeds of the presentations at the Auditorium will be given exclusively to the Chicago camp.

I received last week a card from Mr. and Mrs. Zalik Alexander, announcing the marriage of their daughter, Magdalen June, to Dr. Emanuel Friend, on Saturday, May 26. Dr. Friend is well known to many in the film business. He is chief surgeon at the Michael Reese Hospital, and one of the best known surgeons in America. In common with his numerous friends, I wish Dr. Friend and his bride long life and happiness.

Edward Nelson, president of the Sherman-Elliott Company, Minneapolis, which controls the rights for America and Canada to "The Crisis," spent a day in the city last week. Mr. Nelson made a pleasant call at our office.

The Roll of Honor.

George C. Johnston of the Lochren exchange, of Minneapolis, has resigned to become a first lieutenant in the One Hundredth Canadian Grenadier Guards forming in his city.

Wright Schank, head shipper, and Slater O'Hara, second booker of Universal's Des Moines exchange, have enlisted in the service of Uncle Sam and are awaiting their call to arms. Malloy McKeekin, also an employee of the same office, has returned to his home in Georgia to enlist with his home company. Dan Lederman, manager of the Laemmle service, announces that he will return the boys their positions upon their return.

Bert Moisant, who for some time has represented "Reel Life" and the Mutual Weekly in San Francisco, has enlisted in the Eighth Engineers.

KYNE STORY FOR KERRIGAN.

Peter B. Kyne is best known as a short story writer. Several of his tales have been translated to the screen. His first book-length novel, "A Man's Man," will be J. Warren Kerrigan's first Paralta play and his first effort as an independent producer. Mr. Kyne lives in Berkely, Cal. He has written Robert T. Kane, vice-president of Paralta Plays, Inc., who is in Los Angeles, that he wants to be present at the Kerrigan studios when "A Man's Man" is filmed. He believes there is great "camera stuff" in his story, as he puts it, and wants to get it all in.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. HARLEMAN

At Universal City

Positions Will Be Held for Employes Called to Colors—Ben Wilson to Make a Tour—Madame Schumann-Heink Pays a Visit.

AT UNIVERSAL CITY twenty-two companies are at work at present time and several more contemplated. There will no doubt be many vacancies in stock, as well as in directing forces, when the government issues a call to the colors.

Every employe of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company who enters the service of the government, we are told, carries away with him an assurance from President Carl Laemmle that his position will be ready for him after the government releases him from further duty.

The following letter signed by the head of the Universal Company has been handed this week to at least half a dozen Universalites who departed from the plant to join either the army or the navy:

> This is to confirm the understanding between the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and any of its employes who are called to the colors, namely, that their positions will be open to them when they are discharged from the service of the Government.
> I am glad of this opportunity to express my deep appreciation of your loyalty to the flag, and assure you we will be only too glad to reinstate you in your present position and at the same salary when you are at liberty to return to resume your present duties.

Ben Wilson, one of the most popular of the Universal actors, started this week for New York whence he will make a sixty-day tour of the country. He will visit the Universal exchanges and appear at several hundred theaters.

Alice Hegan Rice's story, "Mr. Opp," is being made at Universal City under the direction of Lynn F. Reynolds, who also filmed Mrs. Rice's story, "A Romance of Billy Goat Hill," a few months ago. Arthur Hoyt plays the title role with a supporting cast including Neva Gerber, who played opposite Ben Wilson in "The Voice on the Wire" serial, George Hernandez, Jack Curtis and George Chesbro.

The first episode of "The Silent Terror," the latest Universal serial, is under production by Director Jacques Jaccard. Marie Walcamp, heroine of "Liberty," plays the featured role in this serial, which will be made in fifteen episodes of two reels each. Larry Peyton plays opposite the star. This story deals largely with the Canadian mounted police.

Marshall Stedman is directing his first Universal picture, which features Lena Baskette. It is entitled "A Romany Rose," and will be filmed in two reels. Claire McDowell, Edwin Brown and Walter Belasco are in the cast.

W. B. Pearson, formerly one of the film editors at Universal City, took over Henry McRae's company after McRae became production manager and he has completed a two reel animal drama, "Into East Africa." He is preparing next to film "Jungle Trails," by Earl Hewitt. Eileen Sedgwick and Fred Church are his principal players.

Madame Schumann-Heink, the grand opera star, who recently paid her annual visit to Universal City, brought with her Miss Ruth Chatterton, the charming actress who is at present playing an engagement in "Come Out of the Kitchen," now appearing in Los Angeles. Mrs. Henry Schuman-Heink, her daughter-in-law, made the third member of the party. The singer and her friends were personally conducted around the plant by President Carl Laemmle and Director-General Henry McRae.

David Horsley Engages Mary MacLaren

Young Film Star to Appear in Feature Productions Under Direction of Thomas Ricketts—Pictures to Be Released on State Rights Plan.

DAVID HORSLEY has signed a contract with Mary MacDonald, known as Mary MacLaren, the contract being for three years. Miss MacDonald is now at work at the Horsley Studios in Los Angeles under the direction of Thomas Ricketts.

Miss MacDonald has had considerable litigation with the Universal Film Company over a contract with that company.

Miss MacDonald is well remembered for her splendid work in a number of prominent Universal feature productions, under direction of Lois Weber, including "Where Are My Children," "Shoes," "Wanted a Home," "Saving the Family Name," "Idle Wives," "The Mysterious Mrs. M.," etc. It was her remarkable work in "Shoes" which first claimed the attention of the public. Her peculiar gift of arousing the sympathies of the audience in this purely human interest, sociological photodrama was the means of making her entry into stardom.

The story on which Miss MacDonald is now engaged was adapted by Frederick B. Bennett from the novel, "A Daughter of the Well Dressed Poor," by Henry Warren, and is a strong preachment on the dangers that beset the path of the young who comes to the city and propounds the problem of who is to blame for the downfall of so many girls.

This production is being elaborately staged at the Horsley studios with a strong cast including Carmen Phillips, Frank Newberg, Ida Lewis, Al Ernest Garcia and Frederick Vroom, and is being directed by Thomas Ricketts, assisted by Joseph Van Meter.

Alfred Gandolfi has been engaged as the photographer for the MacLaren productions.

When seen at his studio this week Mr. Horsley said that no effort would be made to put out pictures with Miss MacDonald to meet any particular release date; that the pictures would be made only as fast as suitable vehicles for her were found.

He also stated that the elaborate sets, special attention to choice of locations and the aim for absolute perfection of detail would in all probability hold the production down to about six pictures a year which will be released on the state right plan.

Henry Otto with New Company

Will Produce Another Water Picture—Frances Burnham to Be the Star.

HENRY OTTO, who produced "Undine" for Universal and more recently director at the Yorke-Metro Studios, will shortly begin production on another elaborate water picture. Mr. Otto has been appointed managing director of a new film company recently organized in Los Angeles and of which Philip Hansen is the president and general manager. The name of this new film-producing concern has not as yet been announced and a studio site has not as yet been acquired. Director Henry Otto is at present busily engaged in preparing the manuscript of his story for the screen and selecting a cast for the picture.

Frances Burnham, a young screen actress, has been selected as leading woman. Miss Burnham is a native daughter and was born in Los Angeles and, apart from an engagement at San Rafael, she has done all her screen work in her native city. Her most recent engagement was with the California company, for which she appeared in three features which will be released in the near future. She appeared in "The Daughter of a Don" and acted with the Fine Arts company for some time. Probably the best acting she ever did was with Richard Stanton in the Fox feature, "The Love Thief," in which she made quite a hit.

Miss Burnham is a fine rider and a good swimmer, and the latter accomplishment will be called on heavily in the present big feature.

Doings at the Fox Studios.

Two new productions, representing new combinations of director and star, were started at the William Fox Hollywood studio last week. On May 15 Paul Powell opened his camera lens for the first time on the Fox grounds and began the direction of George Walsh in a photoplay to be called "The Adventurer." In the cast supporting "Smiling" George are Doris Pawn, Marie Pavis, Ralph Lewis and A. Burt Wesner.

Miss Pawn is well known as the dainty lady who steals George's heart on the average of once every six weeks. Miss Pavis is new to the Fox company. She has been writing scenarios with the western organizations, though her first dramatic work was as a player, not author. The other male members of the cast have all worked in many former Fox productions. John Leezer is cameraman of the company.

Gladys Brockwell began a new picture under the direction of Otis Turner, the first this director has made with any Fox star other than George Walsh. Miss Brockwell's leading man is Bert Grassby, who distinguished himself opposite the girl of a thousand expressions in "Her Temptation," and who just completed a piece of portraiture in "The Scarlet Pimpernel." Jewel Carmen, whose work in William Farnum productions has gained her great success and popularity will play with Miss Brockwell, and Charles Clary, Willard Louis and Josef Swickard, all favorites of Fox fans, complete the cast. Charles Kaufman, who has photographed many of the Turner pictures, has charge of the camera.

Stage number 3 at the William Fox studios in Hollywood looks more like an interned barnyard than a motion picture factory at present. In the next Fox film comedy which Hank Mann will make, he will have need of 3 ducks, 2 geese, 7 hens, 5 pigs, 1 calf and 2 roosters.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Carol Halloway had the honor of turning up the first clod of earth on the site of what is to be the new administration building at the Vitagraph Hollywood Studio. The old office building has been moved into an out-of-the-way corner of the studio plot and a number of plows are making a Sahara-like waste out of the Vitagraph lot. By the end of the summer an entirely new film plant will be ready to receive the additional companies which, according to the plans of President Albert E. Smith, are to come west.

The Helen Holmes company has completed the production of the thirteenth episode of the serial, "The Railroad Raiders," which is to be released under the chapter title, "The Road Wreckers."

They have already begun the production of the fourteenth installment, "The Trap," which leaves them practically at the end of the serial. The fourteenth is still to be finished and the fifteenth to be made. Producer McGowan, however, has until June fifteenth to complete them, which means that the production will be finished on schedule time regardless of weather conditions.

We are informed that Christie Comedies will henceforth be distributed in the Minneapolis territory, comprising Minnesota, Wisconsin and the two Dakotas, by the Film Library and Exchange, 731 Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis. The Zenith Feature Film Co. has held the agency for the Christie weekly one-reelers, but the Film Library and Exchange is now the only concern authorized to market this brand in this territory. The moving spirit in the new exchange is S. N. Robinson, an alert and progressive exchangeman of the Northwest.

Director Lambert Hillyer has commenced work on Olive Thomas' second starring vehicle under the Ince-Triangle banner. Hillyer is the author of the story, as well as the director. Charles Gunn has been selected as the leading male character.

Fannie Ward, the Lasky-Paramount star, will shortly begin work under the direction of George Melford on a story written for her by Charles Kenyon, author of "Kindling," and who recently wrote Margaret Illington's first photodrama, "The Sacrifice." Many of the scenes in Miss Ward's production are laid in Mexican border towns.

Word from William S. Hart states that he has completed the first half of his double transcontinental "vacation" on schedule time, and is already well started on the last lap, having left New York on May 22. He also announces the ovations accorded him in each city are stripping him of his last shreds of modesty. He will return to the Ince-Triangle studios early in June, and begin, immediately, production of the first picture under his new contract.

In "Loyalty," the second of the Bernstein "Seven Cardinal Virtues" series, the leading character, Betty Brice, is the star of a light opera company and a good part of the action is played behind the scenes and on the stage during the play.

The direction is in the hands of Jack Pratt, himself an erstwhile singer and stage manager.

A chorus of over thirty pretty girls in costume worked at the studio this week, practicing dances and special features, and a typical musical comedy cast of character men, comedians, and "show men" were employed. The scenery and costumes were designed by Lee Lawson.

Ruth McCord, the Ince-Triangle Girl, who is traveling to the four corners of the United States on a motorcycle, is well started on the first lap of her long journey, having left San Diego on May 15. Her route includes, for the first three months, Bakersfield, Fresno, San Jose, San Francisco, Stockton, Sacramento, Cal.; Portland, Oregon; Seattle, Bellingham, Everett, Spokane, Washington; Butte, Montana; Pocatello, Idaho; Ogden, Salt Lake, Utah; Denver, Colorado.

Balboa's current serial, "The Twisted Thread," calls for considerable submarine activity. Knowing that the government has put a ban on the screen showing of many things conected with war, Horkheimer Brothers addressed the War Departmet to ascertain just how far they would be justified in going. They received word from George Creel, of the newly created Intelligence Bureau, advising that nothing bearing on the construction of government war material could be shown. Accordingly, Balboa has evolved a new type of submarine. It is practical.

William Duncan took his company of Vitagraph players up to the San Marcus Pass, twenty-five miles north of Santa Barbara, last week, for the purpose of throwing an auto off the cliff into the ocean, eighty feet below. The company was gone two days, and though their difficulties were many in getting the thrill stuff they wanted, yet, when secured, it more than made up to them for the early location starts, the late returns, and the two lunchless days spent up on the dangerous San Marcus trail. The eleventh episode of the Vitagraph "Hearts of Flame" serial will record the result of their trip.

Aggie Herring, the popular character woman of the Ince-Triangle players, was taken seriously ill this week while Director Charles Miller and company were in San Diego filming scenes for the forthcoming play starring Bessie Love. Miss Herring was taken to a San Diego hospital, and later removed to her home in Santa Monica, where she is convalescing.

In the cast supporting Louise Huff and Jack Pickford in their forthcoming production now being directed by William C. de Mille, at the Lasky studio, are Olga Gray, Eugene Pallette, James Neill, Horace B. Carpenter, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Edythe Chapman and Lillian Leighton. Immediately upon the completion of this production, Miss Huff and Mr. Pickford will do a production at the Morosco studio.

One of the most beautiful scenes ever filmed at the Ince-Triangle studio in Culver City was enacted this week, we are told, when Enid Bennett and a company of two hundred players under the direction of William Neill, reproduced the Parisian Mardi Gras as seen yearly in the Latin Quarter of that pleasure loving city.

Frank Reicher, the Lasky director, having returned from his vacation, will shortly begin work on a production starring Vivian Martin; the production will be done at the Morosco studio.

Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid, who are shortly to appear in their second co-starring vehicle, are at present out of town on location with director Lou-Tellegen and their company.

Camille Ankowich, the clever Russian actress who has distinguished herself in several Lasky productions, has been made a regular member of the Lasky stock company.

The Signal Film Corporation this week secured the services of Andrew Waldron, a veteran actor and producer of the legitimate stage for many years.

Mr. Waldron is at present in Signal stock, where he is held for character roles in "The Railroad Raiders."

Director Victor Schertzinger, with Charles Ray, and Sylvia Bremer, with a company of twenty people, returned, this week, from Falton, Cal., where they have filmed the principal scenes of "Sudden Jim," by Clarence Buddington Kelland, in which Thomas H. Ince will present Ray as star. A trestle nine hundred feet long and eighty feet high, in places, which had been abandoned by a lumber camp, was turned over to the Ince-Triangle players for destruction. Three hundred pounds of dynamite and black powder was used in blowing it up.

If the sun would shine, Al E. Christie says he would finish the picture featuring Betty Compson, on which he has been engaged since the beginning of the "big dark." It is by Epes W. Sargent and is called "Down by the Sea," which locale has been a favorite one with the Christies for several weeks past.

Robert Ensminger, Balboa's new director, has come up from the ranks. After years of stage experience, he broke into the movies at Long Beach. He assisted Henry King in putting on all of the "Little Mary Sunshine Pictureplays." When King resigned, Ensminger was the logical successor to continue producing the now famous Horkheimer baby pictures. He has just completed his first production with Gloria Joy, the new child wonder discovered in Long Beach.

Charles Rush, assistant to William S. Hart, has returned from Globe, Arizona, where he has spent the past two weeks, with a cameraman, filming scenes of the big round-up which takes place in this town each year. Hundreds of thousands of cattle in the vicinity made several unique "shots," which are to be used in a forthcoming Ince-Triangle drama of the West, starring "Bill" Hart.

George Beban is now working on the last of his Italian characterizations under the direction of Donald Crisp, until September first. The famous star has a long camping trip planned with which he refuses to let trifles like work interfere. Consequently he will shortly depart for somewhere in the mountains and will not "don the garlic" again until fall.

William Dummer, head of Balboa's art department, is a graduate of the Drury Lane theater in London. There he helped to make all sorts of props for the melodramas that were produced for many years. Give Dummer an idea and he will work it out some way. Right now he is constructing a man-size turtle which can be worked like a live one in the water. It is a mechanical marvel. Dummer's assistant is his sixteen-year-old daughter, Bessie.

Monday this week a little man who claims the distinction of being one of the greatest comedians of the speaking stage, arrived in Los Angeles to try his fortunes in the silent drama. His name is Arnold Nobello and he acts under the name of "Toto." For two years he has been the star of the New York Hippodrome.

The little Frenchman, we are told, refused all offers from the moving pictures until H. E. Roach, president and director-general of the Rolin Film Company, won his confidence and with it a long-time contract. On Monday this week Roach arrived in Los Angeles, bringing Toto, the clown, with him and Toto's family, for Los Angeles will be their home for some time to come.

A special company has been organized to support the new star. Nina Speight, the little Australian beauty, will be included in the cast.

NEWMAN EQUIPS THE STRAND OF LOUISVILLE.

The Newman Manufacturing Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, recently installed the specially designed poster frames to fit the columns and around the corners for the Strand theater, Louisville. These frames were made to fasten permanently to the columns and building with the front glass doors to open on hinges.

Mr. Goldberg, manager of the theater, also had these frames installed at the Mary Anderson theater, Louisville.

Maine Exhibitors Organize

Meeting at Portland Successful—Belief Is That This Effort Will Have Lasting Effect.

FOR the third time in four years, Maine moving picture men formed a state league at Portland. The last meeting was held on Thursday, May 24. Twice before have the exhibitors of the Pine Tree State met and formed organizations that were to have been of great mutual assistance to the members. No wonder some of the men who attended this meeting were frankly and openly pessimistic as to the length of time the Maine Exhibitors League, which is the name of the new organization, would last. Yet there were others who had all the old time enthusiasm for a league of exhibitors and even those who were inclined to point to the experience of the past paid over their little $5 as charter members of the new organization.

Just why leagues have failed to flourish in Maine is a question that any dozen Maine exhibitors will answer in as many different ways. All seem to appreciate and realize the advantages of organization, the benefits, the absolute necessity, but after attending an initial meeting and a few after that, enthusiasm and interest seems to wane. It is only because it happened to be the kind fate of some beneficent deity who is watching over the destinies of the picture men of this state that the Maine legislature has not passed a law against the interests of the moving picture industry, such as censorship or the like, for there has not been a united organization to oppose any such legislation. Single exhibitors, such as John J. Hone, of Aroostook county, have had bills passed helping the exhibitors, but it has been a case of one man making the fight himself with no co-operative assistance.

However, there must be some spirit of organization in the film men of this state if they are willing to make a third attempt to organize. It looks as if they will succeed this time. One exhibitor, John Goodwin, of Halowell, proprietor of the Acme Amusement Co., with houses all over Maine, made a desperate appeal to the exhibitors in which he said: "We want an organization but I am doubtful of the success of the way we are going about it now. I propose to make the Maine Exhibitors' League a substantial organization, one that will last, will have prestige and a solid financial backing. I will be one of ten men to advance $100 each to this new organization, and put it on a good financial basis at the start; make it a live force. Let's be earnest about this thing."

John's enthusiasm was appreciated, but the other nine men necessary to make up the $1,000 were not forthcoming, and his motion fell through. Another suggestion, that the exhibitors should not outbid each other in Maine to obtain features died a natural and sudden death.

President E. H. Horstmann, of the Massachusetts branch of the National League, addressed the meeting, which opened at 3 o'clock in the Congress Square Hotel, and called their attention to the benefits that every Maine exhibitor will obtain by becoming a member of the Maine Exhibitors' League. Co-operation is the watchword in every modern business and industry and in none is it more necessary than in the moving picture business. Though two attempts to form a league have failed, the exhibitors of Maine believe in the principles of the National League, and the speaker expressed his conviction that they would loyally support a Maine league.

The deposit system is a burning question among Maine exhibitors at the present time and one of the exhibitors asked Mr. Horstmann what has been accomplished in that direction. The president stated that the national league is against the deposit system and that already one big producing company, the Triangle, has abolished the plan. President Horstmann explained the system substituted by the Triangle company now familiar to most World readers.

Temporary officers were elected as follows: Alfred S. Black of Rockland, president; Lysander Richmond of Sanford, secretary and treasurer. The objects of the league are twofold, to better conditions in Maine, and to secure more harmonious co-operation with the national organization. The next meeting will be held at the Penobscot Exchange Hotel, Exchange street, Bangor, on Thursday afternoon, June 7, at 2.30 o'clock. It is expected that a much larger number of exhibitors will be present at that time.

Among the exhibitors present were Harry Webber, proprietor of the Bath Opera House; William Reeves, Strand theater, Portland; Paul P. Peakes, Chic theater, Milo; Fred Eugley, Star theaters; A. L. Bibber, Portsmouth, N. H.; S. Hanson Comique theater, Camden; P. Carey, Odd Fellows hall, Newport; C. A. Trafton and Lysander Richmond of the Colonial theater, Sanford; H. Goodside, Empire theater, Portland; James Greeley, Cape theater, Portland, W. H. Stithan, Pittsfield.

Telegrams were received from Joseph Emery, proprietor of the Star theater, Bar Harbor, and from P. J. Powers, of the Powers theater, Caribou, extending best wishes and advising the infant organization to count them in as members and workers, even though they were unable to be present.

The initiation fee was fixed at $5 and the dues at $2 a year.

There were quite a few exchangemen present from all over the state and Boston, including Charles M. Stern, of the Universal, Bangor; L. A. McCracken, of the Federal Film Co., Boston; Arthur Allen, Mutual Film, Bangor; Samuel Haas, America Is Ready Feature Film Co., Boston; S. Penn, Pathe office, Boston; Harry Campbell and Mr. Levine, of the Fox Film Co., Boston; Samuel Grant, of the Battle Cry of Peace, Boston; Sam Schultz, Metro; George Roberts, Daughter of the Gods, Boston; William Green, Pine Tree State Amusement Co., Portland.

Maryland League Interest Wanes

Lack of Attendance at Important Meetings Is Marked—Leaders Working Hard.

MAINLY through the activities of a selective and enthusiastic few, including most of the officers of the Maryland Exhibitor's League, and other staunch exhibitors, not included in that organization, all the theaters in Baltimore have been aiding in a very material way the sale of Liberty Loan Bonds. Slides are being shown and speakers, connected with the movement, have been appearing at the houses throughout the city, making an especial appeal to the patrons to buy the bonds.

A meeting of the league was called for Wednesday night after 11 p. m., May 23, in the interest of this loan and while this fact was given wide publicity only a few were present. This may have been caused by a misunderstanding in the date. However, those who did come included: L. A. DeHoff, New theater; Bernard Depkin, Jr., Parkway; Guy L. Wonders, Wilson; T. J. Bohannan, Wizard, and Paul Emmart, of Schanze's, besides several others. Three of those mentioned are not members of the league and only about twelve were present.

When Mr. DeHoff was seen on Friday night, May 25, he was busily engaged in getting out the following letters:

Dear Brother Exhibitor:

At a meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Maryland held May 23, to discuss the war tax, President F. A. Hornig deemed it imperative that every exhibitor in the State wire Senators Jos. I. France, John Walter Smith and Senator Simons, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, to support brief submitted on behalf of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North America and other allied theater interests (see page 1257 May 26th Moving Picture World).

This is of the most vital importance, in view of the fact that the bill now before the Senate involves a ten per cent. tax on gross receipts. A ten per cent. tax on gross receipts, in our opinion, would compel a large percentage of theaters to close, and thereby defeat the purpose for which the bill is intended.

Wire without fail.

EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF MARYLAND.
(Signed) L. A. DeHoff,
Acting Secretary.

LETTER NO. 2.

Dear Sir: It was your patriotic duty to attend the meeting held May 23 by the Exhibitors' League of Maryland to meet and co-operate with the Liberty Loan Committee of Maryland. Can you not realize that if this Liberty Loan is not floated, the motion picture industry will be further burdened by increased tax?

Never was the Exhibitors' League of Maryland so poorly represented, never did we have such lack of action, such absence of co-operation and united effort. Never before have we felt more urgent need of getting together than now.

Sunday, May 27, at 2.30 P. M., the Exhibitors' League of Maryland will hold a meeting at the New theater. Subjects for discussion will be those which we consider detrimental to the existence of the motion picture industry.

I sincerely hope you will see the necessity of attending this very important meeting.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) L. A. DeHoff,
Acting Secretary

Now this is what happened. The meeting was held on Sunday, May 27, at 2.30 p. m., and for some unknown reason there were only in attendance about twelve persons. Whether there is beginning to be a lack of interest due to the newness having worn off is a question. But surely the exhibitors cannot expect the League to flourish when only twelve of the membership of nearly 80 attend the gatherings. Those stalwart members who are endeavoring with all their might to carry on the affairs of this organization, who attended, were; E. B. McCurdy, F. A. Hornig, L. A. DeHoff, W. Leicht, W. Albers, L. Schlichter, R. L. Rubenstein, W. C. Pacey, B. F. Seligman, B. Rosenbauer and Joseph Brodie.

On Monday, May 28, however, E. C. Sandell and W. Albers, visited every motion picture theater in Baltimore with the idea of getting them all to send three telegrams to Washington to the three Maryland Senators, stating that they are in favor of brief submitted, and asking them to vote for it. The only cost was 75 cents and the telegrams were sent by Messrs. Sandell and Albers.

Iowa Exhibitors Defy Blue Laws

Indications Point to a Victory Over Attorney General, Who Sought to Enforce Statute Seventy Years Old.

ON the eve of the third Sunday after the enforcement of the famous Iowa blue laws, the exhibitors of the state feel that they have every right to congratulate themselves on the present state of affairs. Attorney General Havner has undertaken to enforce every law on the statute books of the state of Iowa and the most objectionable of these laws was seventy years old, known as Statute No. 5040. This law reads as follows:

Section 5040. Breach of the Sabbath. If any person be found on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, engaged in carrying firearms, dancing, hunting, shooting, horse-racing or in any manner disturbing a worshipping assembly or private family, or in buying or selling property of any kind, or in any labor save that of necessity or charity, he shall be fined not more than five or less than one dollar, and shall be imprisoned in the county jail until the fine with costs of prosecution, shall be paid; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to those who conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, or to prevent people traveling or families emigrating, from pursuing their journey, or keepers of toll bridges, toll gates or ferrymen from attending same.

On the first Sunday, May 13, Attorney General Havner had his way in the city of Des Moines to the extent that every picture house in the city was closed but five, attempts to arrest these five serving as test cases, the decisions on which the other theaters of the state would abide. Accordingly on Monday, C. C. Knapp of the Majestic theater, J. Milowslowskie of the Palace and Family, Eller Metzgar of the Casino and Dan C. Burgman of the Garden, appeared in court, arrested for operating their houses on Sunday. By Saturday night no decision had been rendered and on Sunday, May 20, all the theaters in the city opened pending the decision of Judge Myers.

The theaters over the state, however, received their first touch of enforcement of the blue laws on the 20th, and the statute was put into active operation with various degrees of efficiency, generally depending upon the attitude of the local officials. The Mississippi River counties for the most part paid no attention to the edict. Dubuque put on the lid. At Sioux City arrests were made technically, but business proceeded about as usual. In Mason City the authorities announced they would make arrests when complaints were made, but took no initiative in starting things. In Ottumwa arrests were made and also at Council Bluffs. The theaters in Webster City have never operated on Sunday and the some condition has always existed in Ida Grove, What Cheer, Charles City, Ames, Le Mars, Algona, and all of the other small towns in the state.

Council Bluff's theaters were nearly all open and nearly all of the managers were arrested. Their cases are pending. The people of Council Bluffs are grumbling at the state of affairs. In Keokuk the theaters were wide open as usual and the owners were not arrested because the county attorney announced he had no orders. No action was taken on the blue laws in Clinton and all business waas conducted as usual. Marshalltown's blue Sunday passed off without excitement, although all theaters had been ordered to close. No arrests were made. In Dubuque no arrests were made on Sunday, but information was filed on Monday and in the trials before a jury that followed the offenders were acquitted.

In Sioux City the theater men united to make a test case, which case was tried by jury and the theater men were acquitted.

On May 23 Judge Myers, of the Criminal Court in Des Moines, held that Sunday baseball and motion pictures are clean, wholesome amusements and do not come under the head of labor forbidden under the statutes; that collecting tickets, ushering and other labor of which there can be no doubt as to the definition is in fact incidental and necessary and therefore exempt under the law. For the sake of getting a decision from a higher court, Judge Myers, when he had finished reading his decision, asked that one moving picture house manager plead guilty. J. Miloslowskie of the Family volunteered. If Havner continues the fight and there are any arrests over Judge Myers' decision the theater men will appeal their case to the District Court. Following are some of Judge Myers' opinions on the blue laws:

The statute nowhere deals with what might be termed amusements except such as are specifically named.

The court might content itself with holding that since some amusements are specifically named all others are excluded.

If it once be held that the entertainment itself is innocent and proper to be played on Sunday, then it follows that all who wish to attend have a right to do so.

Whatever may be properly required for their admission, safety and comfort, may be lawfully furnished, even though it may seem labor to supply these things. Hence the selling of tickets, caring for the theater, furnishing the seats, ushers, etc., come within this term.

Innocent recreation and entertainment available to all people, at least one day during the week, is even more important to the peace and order of the community than the operation even of street cars and railroad trains.

The growing boy and girl must have entertainment and diversion in order to develop and grow.

If on Sunday the people are deprived of innocent amusement, how can we hope for a peaceful and orderly community? Such a rule as the blue laws instead of teaching respect for the law and its officers would have a tendency to cause disrespect for both.

What can be more restful and helpful than to sit quietly among friends, with music, and witness a picture show?

The theater men of the state feel reasonably safe in assuming that the battle against Sunday closing is practically over. It is doubtful if Havner will venture further when it is plain to be seen that practically the whole state is arrayed against him. If he persists the theater men will no doubt carry the case to the Supreme Court of the United States. All theaters in the state that have been in the habit of opening will open as usual.

A great deal of the credit for the persistent fight of the theater men must be given to Dan Lederman, manager of the Laemmle Film Service, of Des Moines, who has given all his time since the beginning of the fight to the releasing of the theater men from the objectionable laws.

NORTH CAROLINA CONVENTION JUNE 14-16

President Percy W. Wells, of the North Carolina M. P. E. L., announces that the convention of the Tar Heel League to be held at Wrightsville Beach, June 14 to 16, inclusive, has developed into a Tri-State affair and indications point to the largest gathering of exhibitors ever held in the South.

President Wells recently attended the first annual meeting of the South Carolina League, held in Columbia, and upon invitation the Palmetto exhibitors will join the North Carolina League in convention here: Last week Mr. Wells attended a meeting of Virginia exhibitors at Richmond, National Organizer Herrington having been present to organize a State branch. The Virginia League made arrangements to send over a large delegation to meet with the Carolinians at Wrightsville Beach.

Plans are being promulgated by Mr. Wells for chartering a special Pullman car which will carry a large delegation from the three states in a body to the national convention in Chicago, and these plans will be perfected at the North Carolina convention.

WILL RITCHEY, SERIAL WRITER.

Will M. Ritchey, who recently joined the Astra forces, graduated into film writing from newspaper editorial work, and is one of the best known photoplaywrights of the day.

"Who Pays?" established him as a writer of sustained continuity. Next came "The Red Circle." Since then Mr. Ritchey has done "Who Wins" and "The Neglected Wife." He has also turned out many other feature plays.

Herrington Winds Up Long Tour

Organizer of National League Finds Encouragement in His Work in Middle West.

FRED J. HERRINGTON, organizer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, made a flying visit to New York on the last day of May, leaving for his home in Pittsburgh on the day following. His immediate object was to further the interests of the Pennsylvania State Convention, which will be held June 25, 26 and 27. For nearly six weeks Mr. Herrington has been on the go in the Middle West, and in that time has accomplished much in the way of arousing enthusiasm among exhibitors and getting them started on the way for a more militant organization.

The first stop of the organizer was at Indianapolis on April 18. President Frank J. Rembusch, of the Indiana League, called a meeting of the officers of his association for the purpose of taking up the question of returning to membership in the National League. By unanimous vote that action was taken and the per capita fee was paid in.

Mr. Herrington's next stop was at Cleveland. Here the enthusiasm manifested more than offset the small attendance. It was decided to throw the efforts of the local to the State and National bodies.

In Chicago Mr. Herrington found nothing but "strife, turmoil and division." The regrettable condition did not extend to other portions of the state, but was confined to the city. In Des Moines Mr. Herrington arrived on the evening of the day of the meeting and missed a chance for greeting the assembled picture men. He did, however, have opportunity for meeting them individually the next day. Among these was Mr. Brown, formerly vice-president of the State League, who pledged himself to get back into the harness and do his utmost to put the state in the front ranks of the league. Mr. Herrington said that as a result of the attitude of Mr. Brown and his associates the outlook in Iowa is bright.

The Moving Picture World has told at length of the convention at Minneapolis, where Mr. Herrington made his next stop. The organizer referred to the open and above-board manner in which the delegates to the national convention were chosen, and declared that this action was in the best interests of the league as well as of the state.

At the suggestion of Treasurer Sweeney, Mr. Herrington next went to St. Louis to take up matters in reference to the National League. With such men as Joe Mogler and Hector Pazmezoglu, declared Mr. Herrington, "we can expect the best from Missouri."

Kansas City, in an organization way, yielded what Mr. Herrington declared were the best results of the trip. "Recognizing the fact that there was not even a semblance of an organization here," said the organizer, "I wired Mr. Goodwin, of the Royal theater, of my intention of visiting the city. On my arrival I was surprised to find everything arranged for a meeting. It was a most enthusiastic one, too. A local was formed, officers elected, and application was made to the state branch at St. Louis for a charter. A resolution was passed asking for a state meeting in St. Louis May 31 and June 1 for the purpose of electing state officers and delegates to the national convention."

In Memphis Mr. Herrington found much the same conditions as prevailed at Kansas City, and much the same result was obtained. A state organization was formed and a call issued for a convention on June 19 and 20. While the Memphis exhibitors had named the date of the convention they had left to the exhibitors of other cities the question of a place. It is reported that very likely Nashville will be chosen.

In Louisville Mr. Herrington encountered the racing season and discovered there little interest in matters that do not pertain to horses. He did, however, receive pledges from many of the live wires that a start would be made to put Kentucky on the organization map in the near future.

There was a hearty reception for Mr. Herrington in Cincinnati. There was every reason to believe after the meeting that all lines would be wiped out and that Ohio in the near future would have one of the finest state organizations in the country.

In talking with a World man Mr. Herrington deplored the practice of a few exhibitors in failing to make prompt returns of their "show." The perpetrator of the inconvenience might think he was putting something over on the exchange, but really he was seriously disarranging the plans of a fellow exhibitor when he held his film for a day beyond the proper time.

"In a right form of organization such conditions as well as many other subjects of complaint would be eliminated," said Mr. Herrington, "because we could protect the exhibitor entitled to the film as well as the distributor."

Ho! for Grand Rapids

Strong Effort Being Made to Get Michigan Exhibitors Out For the Convention.

As time draws nearer to June 12 and 13, the Moving Picture World desires to impress upon Michigan exhibitors the great importance of attending the convention scheduled for Hotel Pantlind, Grand Rapids. A letter from Secretary Moeller says that among those who will talk are A. J. Gilligham of Detroit, W. S. Butterfield of Battle Creek, E. M. Simons of Adrian, Jacob Smith of the Moving Picture World, and others.

Every state during the past two years has organized a live association, and we trust that this meeting will be the means of bringing to Michigan for the first time a real organization. If Michigan exhibitors do not attend this meeting, they will clearly go on record as disapproving a state association in which case—woe be to you. Let matters of vital importance come up that are directly opposed to your business, and who will fight your battle?

The writer wants to plead with Michigan exhibitors to come to Grand Rapids, and if not a member of the state association, to be one. Bring the dues with you—don't say you'll send a check. The association requires cash to carry on its work. The World correspondent will attend the convention and will be more than pleased to meet Michigan exhibitors, and if any are not subscribers, the convention would be a good time to sign up. Au revoir until June 12 and 13, Hotel Pantlind, Grand Rapids.

NEW YORK LOCAL EXECUTIVE MEETING.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of New York Local No. 1 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was held Tuesday, May 29, at their headquarters at 218 West 42d street, President Samuel H. Trigger in the chair. A full membership was present.

The meeting was called for the purpose of getting the different views of the exhibitors on the proposed war tax of the motion picture theaters. After a thorough discussion of the matter in all its various phases, a motion was made by Sidney Cohen to indorse the brief submitted to the Senate Finance Committee by our representatives in Washington. Sidney Ascher moved as an amendment that this local go on record indorsing the report of the Senate Finance Committee, eliminating the tax on film footage, and exempting from the admission ticket tax the twenty-five-cent theaters. The original motion was thereupon withdrawn and Mr. Ascher's amendment was unanimously carried.

A notice to this effect was mailed to every senator and congressman in Washington with a request to support that portion of the bill reported by the Senate Finance Committee relating to the tax on the motion picture industry.

The regular monthly meeting of the local will be held at 1 P. M. on Wednesday, June 6.

PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION PROSPECTS GOOD.

A special meeting of the Exhibitors' League of Philadelphia, held on June 1 in the Parkway Building, resulted in defining plan and progress affecting the forthcoming state convention of the league, which will be held on June 25, 26 and 27.

Already a large part of the auditorium in the Parkway Building, where the convention will be held, has been allotted to various film exchanges and others who will erect booths and stage displays. Reservations are being made, it is reported, almost daily. Secretary Charles H. Goodwin took a flying trip to Atlantic City last week to round up the seaside exhibitors, and obtained excellent results. Intensive work by all the members of the committee is continually going on, and prospects for the success of the convention are rosy.

FRED SLITER IN ALBANY HOSPITAL.

Fred G. Sliter, Mutual Star representative of the Mutual Film Corporation, Albany Branch, is confined at the Albany Homeopathic Hospital recovering from the effects of a serious operation. "Slit" would be glad to have his fellow-representatives pay him a visit during their stay in Albany.

ART DIRECTOR PAUL WITH PARALTA.

Richard Holmes Paul, the English architectural expert, has severed his connections with Triangle and is now supervising the construction of the settings for Miss Barriscale's first production, "Rose o' Paradise," for Paralta.

Julian Eltinge Comes to the Screen

To the list of Famous Players-Lasky stars there has been added the name of Julian Eltinge, the celebrated impersonator of feminine roles. Mr. Eltinge has just completed his second season in the successful comedy, "Cousin Lucy," in which he has toured the country. The name of Julian Eltinge is known in every part of the world, for he has traveled from one end of this country to the other and all over Europe in his various plays.

Mr. Eltinge is the one man who has been able to appear in feminine characterizations upon the stage without losing a certain measure of respect either from members of his own or of the opposite sex. The fact that he is just "Bill" Eltinge to his legion of friends and that he refuses to discuss feminine fashions even for much-coveted publicity are indicative of the calibre of the man. He weighs 175 pounds and is as accomplished with his fists as he is with his ankles. He is forced to keep continually in training because any lapse would render it impossible for him to wear the complicated and distinctly confining gear which is part of the feminine that he must present upon the stage.

Julian Eltinge.

After six months on Broadway in his first real play Mr. Eltinge heard the call of vaudeville managers. The next turn of the wheel found Mr. Eltinge at the head of his own company—he has been there ever since. "The Fascinating Widow" was the immediate predecessor of "Cousin Lucy," which has just completed its second successful year.

The title of Mr. Eltinge's first photoplay has not yet been announced, though it is understood that the story is one which will give an opportunity to display his "dual personality" by assuming both a male and female role on the screen.

CHESTER BEECROFT GOES ABROAD.

Chester Beecroft sailed from New York this week in the interests of his film export business. He expects to visit England, France, Scandinavia and Russia, placing productions he is now handling and cementing relations to further strengthen his outlet on the European film market for the future. He will be gone about ten weeks. The productions Mr. Beecroft has been commissioned to sell include the cream of the American market and number among them the product of the biggest manufacturers in the business.

ANTONIO MORENO A GOLD ROOSTER STAR.

Antonio Moreno, or to use his full name, Antonio Gorrido Monteagudo Moreno, who since 1914 has been one of filmland's best known leading men, has been signed by Astra and will soon be at work in Pathe Gold Rooster Plays. Mr. Moreno comes from a long engagement with the Vitagraph, where he had leading parts in many of that company's best known pictures, among them "The Island of Regeneration" and "Kennedy Square."

MRS. GEORGE E. WYRE, CASTING DIRECTOR FOR METRO.

Mrs. George E. Wyre has been named successor to Louis Hooper as casting director of the Metro studio. Mr. Hooper severs his connection with the studio so that he can go to Canada and enlist under the British flag. His successor is the widow of George A. Wyre, a brilliant lawyer, and at one time assistant district attorney of Rockland county.

Frances Burnham

LITTLE Frances Burnham, a nineteen year old striking blonde with the darkest of eyes, is the latest recruit to stardom. When M. Philip Hansen, who leads a big syndicate pledged to make "occasional" pictures, looked around for a girl to play the leading part in the sea story which is to be produced by Henry Otto, of "Undine" fame, he saw dozens of actresses and curiously enough Miss Burnham was the first one he interviewed. He decided she fitted the part perfectly and Mr. Otto backed up his judgment.

Frances Burnham.

Exhaustive tests have proven their judgment to be correct and that is the reason that little Miss Burnham will receive an opportunity which many girls envy and will fill a part which should enroll her among the favorite actresses of the screen.

Frances Burnham is a native daughter and was born in Los Angeles and, apart from an engagement at San Rafael, she has done all her screen work in her native city. Her most recent engagement was with the California company, for which she appeard in three features which will be released in the near future. She was prominent in "The Daughter of a Don" and acted with the Fine Arts company for some time. Probably the best acting she ever did was with Richard Stanton in the Fox feature, "The Love Thief," in which she made quite a hit.

Miss Burnham is a fine rider and a good swimmer, and the latter accomplishment will be called on heavily in the present big feature. Director Otto predicts a bright future for his little star.

Apart from her ability Frances Burnham is a very beautiful girl and she is entirely unspoiled. Like so many screen actresses she lives with her mother, who is her best friend and constant companion.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of June 3 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"Freckles" at the Strand.

LOUISE HUFF and Jack Pickford were seen at the Strand theater the week of June 3 in Marian Fairfax's photo-dramatization of Gene Stratton Porter's celebrated novel, "Freckles." The story is probably one of the most familiar in the English language. As a novel it had a great circulation, and later was dramatized and played on the stage. The story is exceptionally well suited to these clever young people. The scenes were filmed in California. Prominent in the cast are: Hobart Bosworth, Lillian Leighton, Billy Elmer and Guy Oliver. O. Henry's story "Vanity and Some Sables" was also shown in film form. Wallace McDonald was Kid Brady, the reformed plumber, and Mildred Manning the Molly McKeever. Others in the cast are: Robert Gaillard and Nellie Anderson. Victor Moore in a new comedy, "Bungalowing," was also on the progrem.

The soloists are: Mary Zentay, Arthur Depew, and Ralph H. Brigham.

"The Jaguar's Claws" at the Rialto.

Sessue Hayakawa, the Japanese photodramatic star, made his first appearance on the Rialto screen in a Paramount picture called "The Jaguar's Claws," in which Hayakawa plays the part of a Mexican. The story develops a number of genuinely startling moments, and in his role of the merciless bandit who holds northern Mexico in terror, Hayakawa makes an ideal screen villain. The supporting cast includes Tom Moore, Tom Forman, Marjorie Daw, and Mabel Van Buren. The picture was directed by Marshall Neilan.

"The Thirteenth Labor of Hercules," a Panama Canal subject; the second installment of "The Land of the Rising Sun," the Animated Magazine and a comedy were also shown.

Signor Marion Rodolfo and Julia Hill were the soloists.

Eighty-first Street Theater Bill.

At the Eighty-first Street theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Bessie Barriscale in "The Snarl," and Claire Anderson in a Triangle Komedy, "The Girl and the Ring," were the picture features.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Enid Bennett, in "Happiness" and Ford Sterling in "Her Torpedoed Love" were on the program.

"The Bar Sinister" at the Broadway.

The Edgar Lewis powerful photoplay, "The Bar Sinister," is still being shown at the Broadway theater.

HOWELLS SAILS FOR ORIENT.

Traveler and Motion Picture Exporter Takes a Line of American Subjects for Eastern Market.

DAVID P. HOWELLS, globe trotter and motion picture exporter, left New York on Friday, June 1 for Vancouver, B. C., from whence he will sail a week later for an extended tour of the Orient. Mr. Howells takes with him an extensive line of American pictures, including a number of Selznick productions, Metro, including Drew comedies, Christie comedies and Billy West comedies.

Mr. Howells' itinerary will include Japan, China, the Philippines, the Dutch Indies, India, the Straits Settlements, and will probably return by way of Australia. He is familiar with the trade in the localities he will visit and expects to do an excellent business.

In the absence of Mr. Howells his offices in the Candler building, New York, will be in charge of his brother, Ben S. Howells.

Selig's Hoyt Comedy Team

JAMES HARRIS and William Fables are the new comedy team which is starring in the Hoyt comedies released by the Selig Company in K-E-S-E. Both are receiving praises from the reviewers for their originality and versatility. They will appear in ten or more of the Hoyt comedies including "A Hole in the Ground," "A Brass Monkey," "A Day and a Night," "A Rag Baby," and others.

James Harris.

Harris, born in San Francisco, has starred in the John Robinson and the London circuses, played in "Eight Bells" and created the role of "Rollo" in vaudeville for two seasons. For five years he starred in vaudeville. He appeared in "From Broadway to Paris" with Gertrude Hoffman, and was in the Drury Lane production of "Hop-O-My-Thumb."

William Fables.

William Fables, who stars in the Selig comedies, scored successes in Rice's "The Silver Slipper," in "1492," with John Cort in "The Alaskan," and in other well known stage productions. He starred in vaudeville and has also appeared with leading burlesque companies. He has had long experience in motion picture work. He is said to enter the comedy spirit of the Hoyt plays.

PATHE TO MAKE "THE HIDDEN HAND."

Pathe announces that it has bought a new serial written by Arthur B. Reeve and Charles Logue entitled "The Hidden Hand."

Superlative Company Launched

New Producing Organization Announces Plans and Players at Astor Luncheon—Lois Meredith and Irving Cummings Engaged.

At a luncheon in the College Room of the Hotel Astor on Friday, June 1, the promoters of the Superlative Pictures Corporation officially announced the formation of that organization and its objects. The officers of the company are Morris F. Tobias, president; Irving Cummings, vice-president; Arthur Blumenkrohn, secretary and treasurer. It is capitalized at $200,000. Milton R. Lowenthal is press representative.

Subsidiary to this are two producing organizations, the Irving Cummings Pictures, Inc., and the Lois Meredith Pictures, Inc., each having the same officers with the exception that Lois Meredith is vice-president of the company bearing her name. The two producing companies will work independently of each other, making only high class feature subjects.

Mr. Cummings is a most capable actor as numerous pictures in which he has appeared will attest. Miss Meredith has also appeared in a number of excellent productions and is a decidedly vivacious and interesting young player, who is certain to make her mark in pictures. Miss Meredith says that she proposes to strive for all star stories instead of all star casts and that all stories will have her approval before they may be accepted.

The Superlative Corporation have an interesting proposition to make to distributing exchanges in the way of a stock bonus which will make them participants in the profits of the company. It was also announced that large salaries to officers would be taboo from the start.

Those present at the luncheon were Maurice F. Tobias, Arthur Blumenkrohn, Lois Meredith, Irving Cummings, A. J. Danziger, Milton R. Lowenthal, Fred Schader, Wid Gunning, T. E. Oliphant, James Beecroft, James L. Hoff, Laura Hostetter, Lynde Denig, Geo. F. Worts, Chas. B. Condon, Sam Freedman, Bide Dudley, Lloyd Whiteside, Fred B. Beecroft, H. A. Hallett, H. F. Randall, J. W. Gold.

Kutler Returns to Metro

BENJAMIN S. KUTLER, a writer who was associated with the Popular Plays and Players studio at its inception, has returned to Metro, and is now on the scenario staff of the Metro-Rolfe studio. Mr. Kutler, is a New Yorker born and bred; he has had valuable experience as a scenario writer and editor, among the features for which he is responsible include "Michael Strogoff," "Pierre of the Plains," "Winning the Futurity," and "The Jungle." He has been identified with Pathe Freres, Universal, the Augustus Thomas All-Star Feature Corporation and Art Dramas.

Benjamin S. Kutler.

Mr. Kutler has also been a prolific writer of short stories for the magazines, his work having appeared in the American Magazine, Overland Monthly, Puck, Judge, Out West Magazine and the 10-Story Book. He is the author of two plays for the legitimate stage.

Mr. Kutler is devoted to his motion picture work, but says his zeal for the pictures caused him the most uncomfortable weeks he has ever spent. He was with Andrew Mack in Europe when the great war broke out. Wishing to be in the thick of the excitement he went to Carlsbad, going then in succession to Vienna, Munich, Lucerne and Paris. There he lost his baggage, had his passport stolen, was suspected as a spy, and had to take an automobile to Havre, since trains were not running.

Pretty Soft for Farnum

Fox Lets Him Make Latest Picture at His Country Home Near Sag Harbor, N. Y.—William "Some Dog" in Home Town.

WILLIAM FARNUM is said to be working on the latest super de luxe du Fox production to be assigned to him amid scenes historic and romantic which surround his country home near the ancient Long Island town of Sag Harbor in great profusion and are averred to be especially adaptable to the big story which Mr. Farnum is to translate in screen language.

Mr. Farnum's home fronts the waters of Shelter Island Sound and, quite naturally, he finds uses for it other than "on the side." In fact, the old shellbacks and clamdiggers in his immediate vicinity, in passing the "merry persiflage," are wont to speak of him as "some sea dog."

Be that as it may, William is a member of Shelter Island Yacht Club and has a racing yacht, the Oliver M., so named after an ancient and much respected postmaster of Bucksport, Me., now deceased, peace be to his soul. He also owns the speedy cruiser, the Numad, named after a new brand of Turkish cigarettes. This boat he has offered to the Government as a submarine chaser, so he will make use of the Mogul, said to be a more comfortable cigarette—we mean cruiser. Farnum proposes to erect a "pulpit" on the Mogul, which device, be it known, is not for the purpose of doing a "Billy Sunday" to the clamdiggers, but from which the doughty William proposes to harpoon swordfish which frequent the waters adjacent to Sag Harbor.

When not spearing the gentle swordfish, or sitting cross-legged on the poop deck of the Mogul weaving a "turk's head," or under the shade of the awning "splicing the main brace," William will do a few scenes in the aforesaid super de luxe du Fox.

Pretty soft for Willie.

MOVIES FOR MINERS.

The Ringwood Co., Ringwood, N. J., which employs thousands of miners, have solved the problem of holding miners in these times of scarcity of labor. A social center has been formed and Rev. A. D. Jennings placed at the head of this organization. Rev. Jennings is an up-to-the-minute man in both preaching the Gospel as well as furnishing entertainment for the workmen. Recognizing the advantages of the motion picture, he suggested to the board that they purchase a projection machine complete with special lenses, motor driven, and of the latest model.

SIMPLEX MEN TAKE LIBERTY BONDS.

Inspired by the liberal manner in which the Executive Directors have contributed to the Liberty Loan, a special meeting of the twelve department heads of this concern was held last week, when a committee was formed to solicit subscriptions to the Liberty Loan.

Including the amounts subscribed by the directors, the total already exceeds four hundred thousand dollars, and the manner in which the employes are responding indicates that a large majority of the makers of Simplex Projectors will be the proud possessors of Liberty bonds.

BARRATT O'HARA IN TOWN.

Barratt O'Hara, president of the Arizona Film Co., Chicago, Ill., arrived in New York, May 29, to look after the interests of the new picture, "Should She Obey," the latest production of this company and shortly to be released. Mr. O'Hara has many friends both in the picture industry and without, having for some time held the position of Lieutenant-Governor of Illinois.

LASKY EMPLOYES SUBSCRIBE TO BONDS.

Following closely the announcement that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has subscribed $100,000 to the Liberty Loan, there comes the news from Hollywood that the employes of the Lasky Studio have already purchased $75,000 worth of bonds.

KARSHAN JOINS BUD FISHER.

William Karshan has joined the Bud Fisher Films Corporation in the capacity of publicity and sales representative. Mr. Karshan has had much experience in the film business, at various times having been connected with Universal, Fox, and Thos. H. Ince.

"A Naked Soul"

Foreign-Made Photoplay Featuring Susan Grandaise a Remarkable Artistic Achievement from Every Point—On Brady International Service Program.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE French chef has long been famous for his unequaled skill in taking the most ordinary of ingredients and fashioning them into a culinary triumph. In "A Naked Soul," Louis Mercanton and Rene Hervil, the directors of a five-reel "Made in France" photoplay, have utilized a threadbare plot of small literary worth, but have chosen their cast and their photographer so adroitly and shown such remarkable artistic sense in transferring the story to the screen that it is well nigh impossible to mention another moving picture of equal pictorial beauty and perfection of acting. The quality of the production never drops in the slightest degree, as scene follows scene. Glorious exteriors on the shores of the Mediterranean, interiors of stately chateaus that bear the stamp of perfect taste and refinement, glimpses of peasant life—all serve as the harmonious settings for the efforts of a cast whose acting is without a flaw.

"A Naked Soul" is the story of a young girl who loves a Prince and trusts him completely. The young man intends to make her his wife, but, for state reasons, each is led to think that the other has proved false. After the birth of her child the girl's mind is affected and, although the Prince returns to her, it is too late. She wanders away to a deep pool and is drowned, her body, arrayed in a bridal costume, being found in the water by the broken-hearted Prince.

In watching the unfolding of this tale on the screen everything is forgotten except the effect which the directors aimed to produce, the dominant quality of which is beauty. The line by Keats, "Beauty is truth, truth beauty," is exemplified in this picture—the beauty that is born of a thorough understanding of the artistic, and the truth that is the outcome of a profound sincerity.

Too much credit cannot be given to Louis Mercanton and Rene Hervil for accomplishing so fine a result in directing the picture. The person, however, whose imprint is strongest and who stands out on the screen most prominently is Susan Grandaise, the actress intrusted with the part of the unhappy heroine. The exquisite grace of this young woman, her comprehension of her art, her skill in its use, the depth and power of her ability to portray feeling in all its phases, and the loveliness of her wonderfully expressive face, place her in a class by herself. To the few who still remember Modjeska and Adelaide Neilson, the statement that in Susan Grandaise are united the artistic perception of the one and the physical and mental qualities of the other is to best convey the merits of this brilliant young actress of the silent drama, who also possesses a spirituality all her own. It is understood that William A. Brady has Mlle. Grandaise under contract and she will shortly be brought to this country for the purpose of heading a motion picture company. A vote of thanks is due Mr. Brady. The three most important parts in the supporting company are taken by Brenton Marchville as Prince Michael, George Treville as Duke Valdimere, and Grace Derval as Princess Sonia. It has already been stated that the personnel of the entire cast could not be improved upon. A notable feature of its work is the polish and ease with which persons of rank and of good breeding are counterfeited. This holds true with the extra people in the ballroom scenes.

More than a word of praise is due the cameraman. Nothing is out of focus in any of the shots, and the artistic balance of the pictures is never at fault. The tinting is beautifully clear, and the director has never permitted the action to become blurred from rehearsing the scenes at too rapid a pace.

The story is told without flashbacks.

"The Night Workers"

Marguerite Clayton and Jack Gardner Make a Strong Appeal in This Worthy Essanay Subject Under the Direction of J. Charles Haydon.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

J. BRADLEY SMOLLEN must have had hard practical experience in newspaper work, in the editorial department, to evolve the story of "The Night Workers," which J. Charles Haydon has so realistically directed for Essanay. The hum-drum work on a country weekly contrasts strongly, as it should, with the high pressure and the almost limitless demands exacted from the newsgatherer on the great morning dailies in the big cities, where night is turned into day and where the artificial life produces, in many cases, premature age and its toll of human derelicts.

I understand that Essanay is indebted to Wm. R. Hearst for the realism of the interior scenes, which show how work on a metropolitan daily is conducted, as the great publisher placed at the disposal of Geo. K. Spoor the various departments required, while work was going on. The privilege has been well utilized by Director Haydon, and the informed spectator has been spared the pangs which, otherwise, would have been inflicted.

The story shows the struggles of a boy who escapes from an orphanage, and who finds his first job in a country printing office. Then he goes to the city and is engaged as office boy on a big newspaper. In ten years he has become a reporter of fine promise; but the night work and its associations bring a liking for strong drink.

Once he is saved from being discharged by the singular loyalty of a girl reporter on the same paper, who covers his assignment while he is carousing with his companions. He is credited with the scoop and wins promotion, while the girl, glad at heart, is proud of his success. Again he falls through the influence of boon associates and loses his position.

At this critical time in the youth's career, the girl falls heir to a country newspaper and she asks him to help her in editing it. He cannot refuse, and we see the brilliant city newspaper man sticking type for his own copy and feeding the paper to the printing press with his own hands, in the little country office, which serves as editorial room, reporter's room, printing room and all the others combined. But he is happy; and the crowning happiness comes to him when his boss—who learns accidentally that he loves her, but has decided not to ask her to marry him, tells him in a very delightful, roundabout way that she hopes he will not abandon his original intentions.

Clyde Manning, the boy who has grown to man's estate, is cleverly impersonated by Jack Gardner. This is Mr. Gardner's first appearance in an Essanay picture, and his success will create the desire among picture fans to see him often in the future.

As the girl reporter, Ethel Carver, we find in Miss Marguerite Clayton a most pleasing type of marriageable young women. The demure Ethel always contrives to do the right thing at the right time, in the most successful manner.

The release date was Monday, May 21, through K-E-S-E service.

"The Silent Master"

Fine Adaptation of Oppenheim's Novel, "The Court of St. Simon," Presented By Selznick, Featuring Robert Warwick.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE six-part adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel "The Court of St. Simon" makes an especially attractive moving picture melodrama—the kind that leaves no question in the spectator's mind as to purity of type. It is melodrama, pure and simple, and was well made for Selznick by the noted French director, Leonce Perret. It also marks Mr. Perret's first effort on this side of the Atlantic, and is particularly remarkable for the illusive studio representations of Paris and vicinity.

The cast of "The Silent Master," as the screen version of the novel is called, is an exceptionally good one and includes Olive Tell and Anna Little on the feminine side, and Robert Warwick, Donald Galahar and Henri Valbel on the masculine side. Nor should the clever child actress figuring in the play be forgotten; her name is Juliette Moore.

The story of the picture centers about the life and fortunes of Valentin, Marquis de Sombreuil, alias Monsieur Simon, who formed an alliance with the Apaches of Paris for philanthropic reasons. The court of St. Simon was a secret tribunal where offending individuals such as cruel and unscrupulous landlords or employers were tried and punished, frequently by flogging. In attempting to cure a young American of his longing for excitement, he became indirectly the cause of his downfall by throwing him in the way of the Apache chief. Later the Marquis de Sombreuil, leaving his ward, a young woman he has lifted from the mire, in the home he had made for her, he comes to America and marries an heiress, who turns out to be the sister of the young American who sank in the mire of the Apaches.

The tragic moment of the story arrives, when obliged to return to Paris with his wife in search of her brother, the Marquis' calculations miscarry and he is identified by the half-crazed young man and denounced as his betrayer. The wife, horrified and unforgiving, leaves him, taking with her her child. In a moment of repentance a couple of years later she sends the child to him, and upon learning the truth with regard to her brother's downfall she decides to resume family relations.

This picture makes good entertainment for adults, but is of too exciting a quality to be exhibited before children. The sets of the picture deserve particular mention and also the artistic quality of its direction.

"The False Friend"

Robert Warwick and Gail Kane Featured in Five-Reel Peerless-World Photoplay of Melodramatic Type.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

MELODRAMA of the obvious but vital type that commands attention by force of its numerous complications and physical action is found in "The False Friend," a five-reel Peerless-World photoplay, featuring Robert Warwick and Gail Kane. By making Robert Farrell and his daughter Virginia believe that his rival, William Ramsdell, is a slave to the drug habit, De Witt Clinton wins Virginia and she becomes Mrs. Clinton. tween whiles. One death from starvation, two murders and a suicide are among the major incidents; also for a brief spell the hero tries to drown his troubles in drink and sinks to the level of a barroom loafer. He suddenly recovers his common sense, however, dashes his glass of whisky to the floor and becomes a man again; and is rewarded by being led straight to the woman he has never ceased to love, and having events remove Clinton from his path.

The story, written by Florence Bolles, has the merit of never pretending to be anything but middle grade drama. It might have been sharper in spots and the two deaths at the finish is rather piling up the agony—even death scenes lose their impressiveness by quick repetition—but Director Harry Davenport has kept his acting forces well in hand. The production contains several elaborate interiors and a number of picturesque scenes in and around a summer camp.

Robert Warwick and Gail Kane have little difficuly in meeting the requirements of the two most important parts, and Jack Drumier, Earl Schenck, E. J. Bollow, Louis Edgard and Pinna Nesbit maintain the quality of the support at the proper level.

Three Pathe Releases

"Fires of Youth," Five-Reel Thanhouser; Fourteenth Episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross," and No. 6 of "The Neglected Wife."

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"Fires of Youth."

THE opening scenes of "Fires of Youth," a five-reel Thanhouser production, featuring Frederick Warde, and written by Agnes C. Johnson, are impressive and give promise of a truthful and well sustained tale of life among the workers. During the action of the drama, however, it undergoes several lapses from a logical development of character drawing and narrative in order that iron-hearted Pemberton, a steel king noted for his utter disregard for the welfare and safety of his employees, may learn how to play and, incidentally, learn the greater lesson of his duty to his kind. Pemberton is led by the little son of one of his employees to disguise himself as a workman and obtain a position in his own works. In this way he is made to realize that the lives of his workers are being sacrificed by his neglect and, the state being without factory laws, apparently, he proceeds to do his duty in the matter.

The motive of the play is excellent and it has many of the natural touches its author does so well. The theme, however, is worthy a more consistent handling.

Frederick Warde's efforts as Pemberton do much to make the part acceptable, and he enters into the spirit of both the comedy and the serious scenes with equal ardor and skill. Jeanne Eagels is natural and pleasing as a pretty and wholesome young factory girl, and Helen Badgley, who used to be one of the cute Thanhouser kids, shows marked ability as a ragged but quick witted small boy. Ernest Howard and Robert Vaughn are well cast.

"The Hidden Brand."

The determination on the part of Philippa to paint out the double cross on her arm, that she may escape further annoyance, is the means of getting her into deeper difficulty. She and Peter Hale are lured to a roadhouse by Bentely, after he has been assured by a confederate that Philippa has no cross on her arm, and locked in a room. A snap shot of the lovers in a close embrace, which is secured by the confederate, reveals the fact that the cross is there, after all, and the characters in the story are as badly puzzled as the spectators until the end of the number, when it is shown that Philippa has a double who is the exact counterpart of herself, even to the mark on her arm.

"On the Precipice."

A thrilling fire scene and rescue is the main feature of "On the Precipice," the sixth episode of "The Neglected Wife." Edgar Doyle sets fire to the house-boat and Mary and Margaret have a narrow escape from death. Margaret risks her life to save Mrs. Kennedy and her husband, as well, and is herself rescued by Norwood. Kennedy is brought ashore unconscious and, during a fit of delirium, betrays to his wife that he is thinking only of another woman. On his recovery she tries to keep him with her, and he promises to remain at home. A phone call from Margaret sends him hurrying to her, however, and the neglected wife is again left to ponder over the identity of her rival for her husband's affections.

"The Call of Her People"

Ethel Barrymore Featured in Splendid Adaptation of Edward Sheldon's Play "Egypt" for Metro Program.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

AS EXHIBITED at the Rialto theater, with all the advantages of an effective musical setting, "The Call of Her People," an adaptation of Edward Sheldon's play, "Egypt," made good. It owes its excellence to the Columbia Pictures Corporation and its presentation to the public to Metro. Ethel Barrymore in the stellar role gives an inimitable portrayal of the character of the gypsy girl Egypt, and is well supported by Robert Whittier, William B. Davidson, Frank Montgomery, William Mandeville, Mrs. Allan Walker, Helen Arnold and Hugh Jeffery.

The story of "Egypt" has been admirably adapted to the screen, and has no doubt gained considerably over the stage version by way of exterior sets, and the many facilities which the screen affords for the promotion of atmosphere. The screen version upholds the splendid dramatic quality of the play, with its well-outlined characterization, and we must refer again to the splendid work of the feminine star in her definition of the character of the gypsy maid who loved a gypsy lover, and who met the tragic moments of her life with a stoicism seldom seen in woman. The character of Egypt, as interpreted by Ethel Barrymore, is decidedly individual, and she has probably never been cast in a role which better suited her rugged personality.

For those who are unacquainted with the story of "Egypt" we will give a brief outline of the plot. It deals with the career of a gypsy girl whose foster father sells her to a wealthy white man who has years before stolen his wife from him, making him believe that the girl is his daughter. At the very hour when she is being wedded to her gypsy lover, her supposed father comes for her, and she is forced to relinquish the joy of her life and enter the confines of a rich man's home. A couple of years later when she is about to marry a man of her father's choice the gypsy returns to claim her as his bride, and to tell her that the man in whose home she is living is not her father. On his way he gets into a brawl and stabs a man, and in his flight from his pursuers he enters Egypt's room where she is dressed in her wedding gown awaiting the hour of her marriage. She shields him, and afterward steals out of the house, follows him on horseback, and rescues him from the hands of would-be lynchers. The scene then shifts to five or six years hence, and we are introduced to the gypsy lovers married and living happily in their native haunts.

"Ultus"

New Gaumont Serial in Three-Part Episodes Gives Promise of Large Popularity.. Two Episodes Unusually Thrilling.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE usual amount of French vivacity is evident in the new Gaumont serial entitled "Ultus," which means "the man from the dead." The first episode, "The Townsend Mystery," opens in the diamond fields of Australia, from whence we follow two lucky prospectors across the desert and witness the dastardly deed of the stronger of the two, who steals the valuables from his partner and leaves him to die, parching with thirst. The scene then jumps to London, several years later, where Townsend, become wealthy on the stolen diamonds, is entertaining his friends in royal style. On the evening of one of his grand receptions Ultus with his confederates enters the throng unnoticed and in spite of the fact that Mrs. Townsend's valuable necklace has been given into the keeping of a friend the close of the evening finds it missing. Some thrilling scenes occur in this episode.

The second episode, entitled "The Ambassador's Diamond," is even snappier than the first. In it we see Ultus impersonate an aged ambassador who is visiting at the Townsend home and become the possessor of a wonderful diamond that is being presented to the ambassador by Townsend. The close of the episode, where Ultus, betrayed by a confederate, is pursued into the hills, is intensely thrilling. Here Townsend meets his fate when he attempts to open the box containing the diamond, which has been protected by Ultus with a bomb.

This serial, which appears on the Mutual program, should have a good run. It repesents the most exciting kind of melodrama, well made.

"A Doll's House"

Five-Reel Bluebird Screen Version of Henrik Ibsen's Drama, with Dorothy Phillips as Nora, Only Partly Successful.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

AS a means of popular entertainment it is doubtful that the screen version of "A Doll's House," made by Bluebird, will become much of a success. Performances of this play upon the spoken stage have demonstrated that Ibsen is an acquired taste, and a careful study of his works is necessary to a full understanding of his meaning and a just appreciation of his psychologic skill.

The screen version by Joseph De Grasse has been prepared with intelligence, and the screen is able to tell the story clearly and concisely. The absence of the theatrical in the Ibsen method and the difficulty of conveying the fine shades of meaning in the dialogue without the aid of speech render the task of the actors in the cast doubly hard.

Dorothy Phillips, as Nora, supplies much of the requisite tem-the Heimer of William Stowell, the Krogstad of Lon Chaney, the Dr. Rank of Sydney Deane, the Christina of Miriam Shelby and the Anna of Helen Wright are all worthy of praise.

Frances Nelson in Five-Reel Rolfe Screendrama Suggested by Ella Wheeler Wilcox Poem—Released by Metro.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE struggles of an orphan girl for a livelihood, her betrayal by her wealthy employer, and the way she at last finds happiness, is set forth in a rational and entertaining manner throughout the greater portion of "The Beautiful Lie," a five-reel photoplay suggested by Ella Wheeler Wilcox's poem, "A Reverie in a Station House." Produced by Rolfe and released on the Metro program, the scenario is the work of June Mathis.

The heroine is married to her employer, after a brief courtship, but her husband soon tires of her and spends most of his evenings with another woman. One night he comes home drunk and informs the heroine that the marriage ceremony was not legal, and deserts her for good. After an experience as an artists' model that hardens her mentally, but leaves her physically unsullied, she meets a young artist, a protege of the man she thought her husband, and the two fall in love. The elder man finds this out, tells the boy the heroine was his mistress, is shot by the woman who succeeded his supposed wife, and a rascally nephew turns up with the news that his uncle's marriage was legal after all.

The influence of the Wilcox poem on the picture takes place when the heroine is locked up in a station house and meets an unfortunate creature, who advises her to use all mankind for her own profit and to grant them nothing in return. This episode is in the usual highly emotional Wilcox manner. Several incidents connected with it are a severe strain even upon plausibility. The way in which the husband of the heroine orders her arrest and the manner of her trial the next morning are not worth serious consideration. A New York policeman has some slight knowledge of human nature and would never have arrested a woman of her appearance in front of her own home, even if the heroine hadn't wits enough to call her servant and prove the falseness of her husband's charge.

Frances Nelson is an excellent type for the sorely tried orphan and acts with earnestness and feeling. She is well supported by the rest of the cast. John W. Noble directed the picture.

"The Magnificent Meddler"

Five-Reel Vitagraph Photoplay with Mary Anderson and Antonio Moreno Well Acted and Decidedly Entertaining Release.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THANKS to the joyous and ingratiating personality of Antonio Moreno and the spirit and winning ways of Mary Anderson and her ability to stick to the saddle of a fleet-footed bronco, "The Magnificent Meddler," a five-reel Vitagraph photoplay, in addition to being an entertaining story to commence with, is acted with an amount of dash and skill that makes it doubly worth while.

The young man with the ever present desire to take a hand in other people's affairs is, it is hardly necessary to explain, a newspaper reporter. His aunt leaves him three thousand dollars and he yearns to own a paper of which he is the sole editor. Part of the money is spent in buying a tumbled down outfit in a small town out West. The first issue by the new owner starts everyone to sitting up and taking notice. Before the end of the week the young editor discovers that telling the truth, as he sees it, is dangerous business in this locality. But he stick to his task and ends by having his place of business burnt to the ground. He succeeds in putting through the reforms advocated in his paper, however, in spite of all opposition; also, in marrying the daughter of his fiercest opponent. There is a lot of spirited action in the picture, and a goodly share of humorous situations. A running fight between cowboys and Mexicans is one of the features of the last reel.

"The Magnificent Meddler" is well acted and equally well produced.

"Shackles of Truth"

William Russell, Featured in Five-Part Mutual Production, Sustains His Reputation for Boxing.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IN THE five-part production, "Shackles of Truth," made for the Mutual program at the American studios, William Russell gives a pleasing impersonation of the story's hero and adds to his laurels as a boxer. Playing opposite him is pretty Francelia Billington, with Alfred Vosburgh, Adda Gleason, George Ahern, Lucile Ward and Frederick Vroon supporting.

The production is based on a good story by Julius Grinnell Furthmann, which has suffered considerably through unskillful presentation; but the fact remains that it gets over in spite of this. As the story runs two young lawyer members of the same firm are in love with the daughter of the governor of the state, and both are under consideration for the filling of a vacancy in the senate caused by the death of one of its members. An incident in the life of the father of Gerald Hale (William Russell), now deceased, in which he had been faithless to his wife, and left a young girl with whom he had fallen in love alone in New York with a baby on her hands, causes an unhappy mixup for his son, Gerald. Gerard, mistaken by the girl's vengeance-seeking brother for his father, is about to be stabbed in his sleep when he suddenly awakes and pounces on the would-be murderer. A fine moving picture fight is staged at this point of the picture with the hero victorious. One of the big situations of the play occurs where Gerard, to save his invalid mother, allows himself to appear as the girl's betrayer through the machinations of his deceitful law partner. The mother dies believing in her husband's integrity and her son's promise to marry the girl whom she believes him to have betrayed. The death of the mother and the discovery of the truth of the matter by the governor's daughter gives the story a happy ending. It is a pity that more careful construction and more skillful direction had not been accorded this story.

"The Daughter of the Don"

Moe Streimer Feature Films Presents Ten-Reel Production Bearing on Early Days in California.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE DAUGHTER OF THE DON," a ten-reel production made in California after having its theme and reason for existence nicely explained in sub-title, proceeds to disappoint. It is a big production on which the producers have spent considerable hard cash, but unfortunately it is made after the fashion of seven or eight years ago.

Its story deals with that period of the history of California just previous to its becoming a part of the United States, and centers principally about the brave deeds of the beautiful daughter of one of the Mexican dons. A young American officer figures largely in the story, and the girl's chief ambition after discovering the attitude of his people toward her people is to corner him at every move. She becomes somewhat of a Joan of Arc to her people, puts on male attire, and leads the Mexicans in an attack.

Neither the cast nor the director were equal to their task in interpreting the story, and we must admit that "The Daughter of the Don" is a sad disappointment.

Triangle Program

"The Girl, Glory," Ince-Kay Bee With Enid Bennett; "American—That's All," Eastern, Both Five Reels, and "Cactus Nell," Two-Reel Keystone.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE Girl, Glory, illustrates again the charms of fine balance in a screen presentation. Here is a real screen story, by an author who knows what he is doing, who has contributed heavily to the best examples of motion-picturedom, C. Gardner Sullivan, in the hands of a capable director, with a fine cast straight through, including a lead who is coming along very fast, Miss Enid Bennett. Mr. Sullivan's story is worth while for many reasons, first because it is a pure screen drama, next because it has a strong motif, next because there is exceptional opportunity for the interpreter in his clean cut characterizations—it is nicely balanced in all its details and without theatricalism. Mr. Sullivan is happily gifted with both creative and constructive imagination. The story is one of effort, not of mere chance, of simple, direct and effective effort, on the part of a young American girl to cure her grandfather, a Civil War veteran, of a disgusting drink habit.

Miss Enid Bennett's interpretation of the title role is delightful straight through, largely because of her interesting personality, but also because of her own quick intelligence in vivid character portrayal—her soul is in her work. Only once does she lapse from consistency, but it is not worth mentioning. Straight through, as a rule, she is Miss Sweet Simplicity on the surface, with a native cunning and courage peering through. She is admirably supported by Walt Whitman as the grandfather, by others of the cast and by all who contribute to making a high-class release a delight to the spectator.

"America—That's All" is in many respects a creditable attempt, but it is too attenuated, dragging wearily at times, at others so tamely theatrical that one tires of it both ways at the same time. The interiors are wretched affairs for such a program, mere accumulations of studio props, without artistry of arrangement or charm of illusion. The wealthy man's reception room, with an old rug and dilapidated sofa is unworthy of place in high class products. There is some bright humor—it comes in spots—and a sincere attempt on the part of Jack Devereaux to carry the story up to true screen comedy, but the material is old, stuff that audiences have seen over and over again in one-reel, two-reel, and the rest. The release may get over in some houses, even in some where the Triangle Program is shown, but without adding much to the credit of that program.

"Cactus Nell" is a gem of a Keystone, full of dash, ingenuity and fun from beginning to end. Sennett has caught his breath in this picture and taken a new start. A large amount of the amusement is contributed by a female sheriff in the person of Polly Moran. She is a veritable Keystone star, an athlete, even an acrobat, full of vim and zip every moment. The other roles are well typed and the movement is very fast, too fast at times for the average spectator, but that is to be excused in this era of scant material. "Cactus Nell" wins.

"The Circus of Life"

Five-Reel Butterfly Feature, Enacted By a Well-Balanced Cast, Tells Entertaining Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel number, written by E. J. Clawson and produced by Rupert Julian, follows the fortunes of a group of people in a rooming house, and extends over a period of years. Love and jealousy are the motives of first interest, although a child interest crops up strongly in the part of Daisy May, played by Zoe Rae.

Pomeroy Cannon, a strapping driver of a brewery wagon known as Danny, marries a girl named Mamie. She is admired by an artist in the house, named Bouvais, who subsequently betrays her. The child is born, a little girl. Danny learns the truth at the hospital, and this sends him back to drinking and carousing. Nevertheless, he loves Daisy May and she goes with him on the wagon when she grows older. On one of these trips he drinks a great deal and an exciting runaway follows, in which Daisy May is injured.

Bouvais in the meantime has induced Mamie to run away with him, but after the child is injured she refuses to go. Daisy May recovers and happiness is restored when Danny changes from the brewery wagon to a milk wagon and Bouvais marries a strong woman who boxes his ears when he bothers her with his high-sounding philosophy.

The story is one of common, everyday life, full of natural scenes and abounding in swift action when things get started. The child interest gives it added appeal. Others in the cast are Elsie Jane Wilson, Harry Carter, Mignon Anderson and Emory Johnson.

"A Small Town Girl."

IF THE saying still holds good, "It's the finish that counts," then "A Small Town Girl" comes under the wire an easy winner. This five-reel photoplay, produced by William Fox and starring June Caprice, gets off at a slow rate, and drags along in a most unpromising fashion for the first two reels. In other words, it has small town speed. With the arrival of the heroine in New York City matters begin to liven up, and before very long the spectator finds himself watching the unfolding of an ingenious bit of melodrama in which a valuable diamond, thieves, detectives, the heroine, a bulldog, a slipper, and a small child are mixed up most entertainingly. John G. Adolfi and Adrian Johnson are the authors of the story, the first named gentleman being also the producer of the picture. They may readily be forgiven for the somnolent quality of the early part of "A Small Town Girl" in view of the rapid pace at which their drama moves once it starts to put on speed.

June Caprice makes the most of her limited stock of acting ability, the part of the heroine having been cunningly contrived to show her to the best advantage. Jane Lee is an important personage in the proceedings, and carries off a share of the acting honors all out of proportion to her size. This small child, in spite of the efforts that are being made to teach her to act, is precociously amusing, and seldom fails to score her points. The remaining parts are played by Bernard Delaney, Ethyle Cooke, Tom Brooke, Lucia Moore, Inez Marcel, Howard D. Southard, and John Burkell. They are all up to the requisite mark.

"The Book Agent."

The designation given "The Book Agent" on the program is fun drama. Dramatic farce would answer quite as well. Walter Woods is responsible for the story, and has furnished George Walsh a varied assortment of quick moving incidents that enable the star to leap fences, hurdle tables and chairs, climb up the sides of buildings, knock out half a dozen men, defeat a band of crooks, rescue the grandfather of his sweetheart, and perform a long string of valiant deeds with that engaging nonchalance so essential to heroes of this sort. However, remote from reality, there is no denying the entertaining qualities of "The Book Agent," when dominated by the athletic Mr. Walsh. The cast, production and direction by Otis Turner are distinct aids to the success of the picture.

"The Submarine Eye"

Williamson Brothers Again Win Admiration for Their Remarkable Submarine Photographic Feats.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Submarine Eye," which is at the present time being exhibited at the Liberty theater, New York City, presents a subsea romance written and arranged by J. Ernest Williamson. It has a prologue the scene of which is laid about one hundred years ago, and a main theme laid in the present. "Treasure Island" and the floor of the ocean somewhere in the West Indies is the location chosen.

The prologue is enacted by Fred Radcliffe, Lillian Cook and E. Hudson, and explains in brief the history of the treasure found on the island, introducing the love story of a certain pair who were treated cruelly by the father of the young woman because of a trivial incident having to do with the honor of the family name. The man is taken aboard a yacht and left to die on the desert island with the strong box containing the treasure won at gambling lying across him, crushing him to death. His sweetheart escapes from the yacht and rescues him only to die in his arms. The man before his death writes their story in his diary.

The story is preluded by some scenes on the bottom of the sea showing a diver locating a box of treasure by which lies a skeleton. Later, after the presentation of the main theme which has to do with the trying out of an invention for locating treasure at the bottom of the sea, we learn the story of the competing divers who try to become the possessors of the treasure after it has taken its place on the floor of the ocean, one of them dying in the attempt.

The story of "The Submarine Eye" is necessarily much broken. In fact we have to deal with three stories instead of one, and we find ourselves more attracted by the submarine photography than by the chain of incidents linking these underwater scenes together. The photographing, for instance, of West Indian negroes diving for pennies, and the rescue of the young inventor who is trying to make good on his invention gets entangled at the bottom of the sea and is saved by a huge negro diver who slides down the tube, performing a truly daring feat. The negro, with a knife in his mouth to use if necessary on the sharks that can be seen gliding through the water, swims about the bottom of the sea, performs his duty and rises again as easily as if he were a mere fish.

Members of the cast in addition to those mentioned are Chester Barnett, Lindsey Hall, Charles Hartley, Edith Conway, Barbara Tennant, Charles Slattery, Nell Slattery, Eric Mayne Edward Butler and Gustave Fischer.

"A Song of Sixpence"

Robert Conness and Marie Wayne Featured in Five-Reel Drama Produced By Van Dyke for Art Dramas Program.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

FROM Frederick Arnold Kummer's novel of the same title the Van Dyke Film Corporation has produced, for release on the Art Dramas program, "A Song of Sixpence," a five-reel drama that can be relied upon to entertain the average audience. Robert Conness and Marie Wayne are the featured players. The picture perhaps can best be classified in a broad way as a "vampire" picture; but in this case the "vampire" only uses her wiles legitimately. There is absolutely no suggestiveness in the film. At all times the "vampire" "vamps" more mentally than materially; more psychologically than physically. The picture is a highly-colored film expression of the workings of a mercenary young woman's mind, whose calculations and machinations finally bring her to the goal of wealth, but which at the same time leave her at the post as far as having obtained any of the things that really count is concerned.

Into the comparatively short period of the character's lives covered in his story, Mr. Kummer has caused to happen to them almost everything that possibly could. The oft-spoken-of gamut of human emotions is surely run by his leading female character. But he has brought his situations about plausibly, and the result is a story that contains much that will hold the interest of those who see the film. The story is strong enough to dim into insignificance some of the minor faults of the players.

Robert Conness does his usual work. Marie Wayne, while for the most part satisfactory, falls a trifle below the emotional level required for a deeply forceful interpretation of a situation or two. The support is adequate.

Mr. Kummer's book has received fitting filming at the hands of Director Ralph Dean. The picture, too, shows a greater attention to sets, lighting, and other productions than have several earlier Art Dramas.

"The 13th Labor of Hercules"

Series of Twelve One-Reel Releases a Pictorial Record of Panama-Pacific Exposition—For State Rights Sale By Cinema Distributing Company.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

PROBABLY no more comprehensive a pictorial record of the Panama-Pacific Exposition of 1915 was filmed than is contained in "The 13th Labor of Hercules," a series of twelve one-reel releases to be distributed on the state rights plan by the Cinema Distributing Company, Candler Building, New York. Judging by a view of five reels of the series selected at random and shown for review, the series covers the Exposition that held forth at San Francisco from the time work was first begun on the fair grounds until the time the pretentious buildings were torn down.

Virtually everything of interest that was a part of the Exposition, or that occurred during the Exposition, came under the eye of the camera. The photography throughout is good, the film is tinted, and everything that could make the picture more pleasing has been done. In several of the reels considerable footage is devoted to scenes showing fireworks displays. Exteriors and interiors of almost every State building are shown, as are also scenes in and about every other beautiful structure. On the screen we see architecturally beautiful buildings which cost millions of dollars to erect, and which since have been destroyed. We are given to see practically everything we read about before and during the Exposition.

"The 13th Labor of Hercules" perpetuates in film a fairy city that was built in commemoration of the completion of the Panama Canal—a city that has since been laid waste. The historical value of the series cannot be estimated.

"Jaguar's Claws," Five-Reel Lasky Melodrama, and "Giving Becky a Chance," Five-Reel Morosco Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"Jaguar's Claws."

THE scenario of "Jaguar's Claws" was made by Beatrice C. De Mille and Leighton Osmun from Roswell Dague's adaptation of a story by William M. McCoy. This five-reel Lasky production is good, honest melodrama from start to finish, with the always thrilling ride to the rescue at the wind-up. In this case it is performed by a band of Americans, hastily summoned from a border town, to prevent a Mexican bandit from revenging himself upon the manager of an oil company whose wife and sister are in the Mexican's power.

Scene from "The Jaguar's Claws" (Paramount).

The situation where the American is forced to choose between sacrificing his sister or his wife to the bandit is of intense dramatic interest, and is led up to with deft constructive skill. The rescue is foreshadowed too early in the action and the incidents in the last reel are unnecessarily numerous. Another improvement would be the elimination of the character of Nancy; she is superfluous and weakens the interest that centers around the stolen bride, who avenges her wrongs by thrusting a dagger into the bandit's heart at the proper dramatic moment.

These defects, however, do not prevent the picture from being a vastly entertaining melodrama with a strong, healthy kick in it, and its direction by Marshall Neilan serves to emphasize all of its possibilities. The acting is excellent. Sessue Hayakawa, as the Mexican bandit, known as El Jaguar, is a bit theatric, but makes the character a picturesque blackguard and acts with earnestness and consistency. Tom Moore is a fine foil to the Japanese actor in his impersonation of the American manager, and Tom Forman upholds the honor of American courage in valiant style. Fritzi Brunette, Marjorie Daw and Mabel Van Buren are worthy members of the cast.

"Giving Becky a Chance."

Lois Bellner, the author of "Giving Becky a Chance," a five-reel Morosco photoplay, has written an appealing little story of a fond father and mother and their struggle to educate their only daughter at an expensive boarding school. The young girl allows her companions to think that her parents are wealthy and is invited to spend Christmas at the home of the richest pupil. While there her schoolmate's brother falls in love with her. Returning home she discovers that her mother is ill from overwork in her behalf and her father has overtaxed his resources and must raise five hundred dollars or lose his store. The way in which the girl earns the money and straightens out her love affair is told in a natural and entertaining manner.

Vivian Martin embodies the character of Becky with the youth and attractiveness it demands and acts with sincerity. She also executes a graceful dance during the action of the story. Jack Holt, Jack Richardson, P. H. Sosso and Alice Knowlan furnish admirable support. Howard Estabrook has directed the picture with taste and skill.

Two Kalems

"Sage Brush Law," an Episode of "The American Girl" Series, and "A Day Out of Jail," a "Ham" Comedy.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

KALEM'S "The American Girl" series seems to be getting better with each succeeding episode. The latest two-reel release, "Sage Brush Law," is a Western that is unqualifiedly recommended to exhibitors whose audiences care particularly for that sort of stuff. The number teems with both story action and physical action. It is an interesting and at times exciting release. The old melodramatic situations have been given new "pep" by James W. Horne and his company of players. Some good night scenes are seen, as is also much good and strenuous riding.

Marin Sais, as usual, heads the cast. She is supported by Frank Jonasson, Edward Hearn, R. E. Bradbury, Knute Rahm and Edward Clisbee.

Frederick R. Bechdolt's story tells of a band of citizens of a Western town who have taken the law into their own hands. King's superintendent is suspected by the band of having killed the postmaster, who was one of the six. It finally develops that the leader of the six is the real leader of the band of lawbreakers.

"A Day Out of Jail."

A one-reel comedy with Ham and Bud making most of the fun. Ham and Bud escape jail and Ham gets a job as a policeman. In the park he sees the keeper and the warden's daughter. The little romance is finally broken up by the warden and the reel closes with the two jailbirds in the air as the result of a bomb. Henry Murdoch helps with the fun. The reel is a fairly good comedy.

Fox Features Virginia Pearson

Week's Work at the Studios Turns Over "Wrath of Love"—Comedy Releases.

VIRGINIA PEARSON occupies a leading place in the news of the William Fox players for the week. Miss Pearson's newest production, "Wrath of Love," her ninth Fox feature, will be released on June 17.

The next comedy release from the Foxfilm makers will be "Six Cylinder Love," a high-power laughbringer in which Tom Mix, the world's champion cowboy, is featured. Mr. Mix also had charge of the direction of this two-reeler. It was he who produced "Hearts and Saddles," a recent Foxfilm comedy. In Mix's supporting cast are Sid Jordan, Rena Rogers, Pat Chrisman and Violet Eddy, all experienced funsters.

Theda Bara is still on her way to the Fox studios in California, which have been put in gala dress in anticipation of her arrival. Miss Bara will probably reach Los Angeles by the middle of the week. She is expected to lead a great military ball which will be given in her honor on the night of June 9.

Incidentally, Miss Bara's splendid super de luxe picture, "Heart and Soul," was selected as the unique medium for entertaining the "Four Hundred" of Los Angeles a short time ago. Miss Wilhemina May Rector, one of the social leaders of Los Angeles, wished to provide some novel diversion for five hundred guests. She hit upon the motion picture and chose "Heart and Soul" as the feature. The affair was staged in Miller's theater, the home of Fox pictures in the California metropolis.

Major Charles W. Gordon, of the British Army, who has become famous in literature under the pen name of Ralph Connor, is the author of the story for William Farnum's next super de luxe producition. Mr. Farnum's last release was "American Methods." Jewel Carmen, who played opposite Farnum in that film, is now in Gladys Brockwell's company.

FAIRBANKS PICTURE IS ARTCRAFT'S NEXT.

From the explosive country village of New Jersey, where munition plants are blown skyward by diligent "pacifists," to the rolling plains of Arizona, with their bucking bronchos and bowlegged citizens, was the theatrically termed "jump" taken by Douglas Fairbanks recently. Upon completion of "In Again—Out Again," his initial picture for Artcraft, the energetic Douglas set out for the West to appear in "Wild and Woolly" in accordance with his rule of screening a picture in whatever locality the story calls for. This production will be the next Artcraft release on June 24.

The story has to do with a city youth whose wild fancies of the great West eventually get the better of him. Clad in an immaculate cowboy attire such as one might wear at a masque ball, he travels to the land of his dreams only to find that his outfit is as unique as it appeared to be to habitants of New York's Fifth avenue on the morning he set out on his journey.

Many incidents of typical Fairbanks variety are promised in this picture, together with thrilling situations such as confront the young man from the East who encounters even greater surprises than he dreamed of. New York, California and Arizona are the locals in which the picture was staged.

John Emerson directed the picture, the story of which was adapted by Anita Loos from the original script by H. B. Carpenter.

Variety in Butterfly Releases

New Universal Brand Offers Many Pleasing Subjects and Players.

THAT Butterfly features are to maintain the standard set for this new brand is evidenced by Universal's schedule of coming releases for "the newest in the field."

June 11 is the date set for the premier of "The Field of Honor," a drama of civil war days, featuring Allen Holubar and Louise Lovely. The story, by Brand Whitlock, is very timely, dealing as it does with recruiting just prior to that historic struggle through which the union was preserved. Under the direction of Holubar the story is very convincing and replete with thrills. Louise Lovely as the Belle of '61 is very charming in her hoop skirts and pantallettes.

"Fire of Youth," featuring Jack Mulhall, has its initial showing June 18. Elmer Clifton's direction of this young star enables Mulhall to do excellent work, having a role suited admirably to his type and style. Commissioned by his father to clean up a bunch of crooks who are looting his open mine, the youngster attacks the situation with much vigor and pep. After a hair-raising and blood-quickening battle his purpose is accomplished—and "the girl" is won. The supporting cast is well balanced and the story is excellently told.

The wilds of Africa supplies the locale for "Man and Beast," to be released June 25. Kingsley Benedict and Eileen Sedgwick portray the leading roles in which they compete with elephants, orang-outangs, lions and leopards for honors. Henry McRae is responsible for the very thrilling story and production.

Mary MacLaren is again starred in "The Plow Woman," adopted from the novel of Eleanor Gates by J. Grubb Alexander and directed by Charles Swickard. In her role of the sacrificing sister, Mary has one of her most tear-compelling roles and her work in this production is considered as one of the greatest efforts in her entire camera career. Release date on "The Plow Woman" July 2.

In "The Adirondack Affair," Allen Holubar is seen at his best as the brilliant young detective, who solves the mystery of the missing heiress, portrayed by Louise Lovely. The story and direction are also Holubar's. This Butterfly will have its first public showing on July 9.

Jack Mulhall has another opportunity to show his ability as a speed demon in "Speed," directed by Lee Sargent and scheduled for release on July 16. The story deals with newly-acquired wealth, a mother who would be a climber, an ambitious but impoverished count, "the girl" and a young stock broker who would know nothing of social ambitions, if they stand between him and "the girl." "Speed," as its title implies, is fast and furious, intertwined with a beautiful love story, ably acted and well directed.

Bushman and Bayne Re-sign

Popular Co-Stars to Remain with Metro—Hold Longest Team Record in Pictures.

PRESIDENT Richard A. Rowland of Metro Pictures Corporation announces that Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne have been re-signed by Metro to a long-term contract at a large salary. For the present William Christy Cabanne will direct these Metro favorites.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne have appeared together in more than 300 photoplays. They have been co-stars longer than any other artists on the screen and their consistently finished portrayals of the characters they have been called upon to assume in their long careers has made their names universally known.

Mr. Bushman tried thirty-seven vocations before he established himself in his life's work. Following stage appearances in New York and other large cities in "At Yale," "The Red Mill," "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" and other successes, he was persuaded by a director of the Essanay company to accept an engagement on the screen. His success was instantaneous and he has appeared continuously in the silent drama since 1911. Mr. Bushman's biggest and greatest work has been done under the Metro banner.

Like her co-star, Miss Bayne began her screen career with the Essanay company. She had just completed her first term at a Philadelphia finishing school when she was induced to sign a contract with Essanay. Miss Bayne has never been on the stage and has never appeared on the screen except as a star. Her first picture, "The Loan Shark," featured her as its lead. Like Mr. Bushman, Miss Bayne has done her best work since joining the Metro family of stars.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne have been starred in many notable Metro productions. "Pennington's Choice," "Man and His Soul," "A Diplomatic Romance," "A Million a Minute," "A Virginia Romance" and "The Great Secret" are among the more recent successes of these popular co-stars, whose attractive personalities and wonderful art will delight the patrons of Metro pictures for some time to come.

Director William Worthington is making rapid progress at Universal City filming "The Clean-Up," a five-act comedy-drama written and scenarioized by Waldemar Young of the Universal staff. It features Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon with a large cast of stock players in their support.

JERRY'S MASTER STROKE (Cub), May 31.—A comedy with very little plot and an abrupt ending. There is nothing objectionable about the comedy excepting its lack of entertainment quality. Jerry is pictured as bringing a crook to justice, but because he tries to impersonate a prince for the purpose of eloping with his lady love, he too is arrested.

HIS CANNIBAL WIFE (La Salle), June 12.—This is a one-reel comedy in which the lazy husband of a moving picture star tells a wonderful story to a friend about where he got his wife. He tells him of a ship wreck where he and his pal are left stranded on a cannibal island, of how they believe they are to be killed and eaten and are surprised to find that instead of being devoured by the cannibals they had been married to a couple of cannibal maidens. His wife overhearing the story proceeds to cause him trouble. The comedy is only fair and is hardly suitable for a first class audience.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS NO. 9 (Signal), June 4.—"A Leap for Life" is the title of this number in which Helen makes an astonishing leap from an embankment onto a ferryboat in an automobile. This is true to all appearances, and if the dummy is there it will not be discovered by an audience. The reason for the desperate deed is the necessity of rescuing a young man who has been shot and left near an infernal machine which a moment after Helen lands on the boat blows it to pieces. She escape, however, with the wounded man.

SHACKLES OF TRUTH (American), June 4.—This five-part production has an interesting story which was written by Julius Grinnell Furthmann. Sufficient skill has not been put in the handling of it, however, and the big situation of the play does not get over as forcefully as it might. The story hinges around a mistaken identity in rather an unusual way. A full review will be found elsewhere.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS NO. 10 (Signal), June 11.—"A Watery Grave" is the title of this episode of the serial in which two men fight out their grievances in the water. One of them sinks, needless to add. The episode is thrilling as usual and full of good entertainment.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THROES OF YOUTH (Thanhouser), June 10.—Frederick Warde plays the leading character in this five-reel picture. It deals with the labor question and shows how one wealthy mill owner is brought to a sense of his duty. Well acted and produced. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

MAX PLAYS DETECTIVE (Pathe), June 10.—This two-reel foreign-made Max Linder comedy is not a reissue. It is full of beautiful scenic views and has an amusing story. Max is as lively as ever.

THE FORBIDDEN CITY (International), June 17.—On the same reel with a funny Happy Hooligan cartoon comedy, "Around the World in Half an Hour," this educational shows the palaces and private grounds that once belonged to the rulers of China.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 70 (Universal), May 30.—Naval recruiting, war relief work, visit of Italian commission to United States, Red Cross activities and other features of current interest are pictured in this number.

MONEY MADNESS (Butterfly), May 28.—A five-reel number, based on a story by Frank H. Spearman. This begins with a run on a bank and is filled with tense moments throughout. It is full of high dramatic scenes, which almost approach melodrama, but are well handled and keep a close hold on the interest. Charles H. Mailes appears as "Whispering" Smith, Mr. Spearman's well known character, Mary MacLaren as the girl, Alfred Vosburg as the hero, M. Everett as the villain, and Eddie Polo and Rex de Roselli in interesting subsidiary parts. The subject is a strong one of the type.

THE LIGHT AT DAWN (Universal Special), June 11.—No. 14 of "The Voice on the Wire" series. Another wierd and baffling instalment, which brings the mystery near its denouement. Shirley and Polly are again warned of approaching death and muffled figures are seen about the house. A shooting occurs in which Red Warren is fatally wounded. Attempts to get a confession from him fail and he dies leaving still unsolved the problem of the disembodied hand. The number is absorbing throughout.

"THE LIVING DEATH" (Universal Special), June 18.—No. 15, the final instalment of "The Voice on the Wire" serial. This brings to a successful conclusion a well-protected story of mystery and the denouement is put on in a highly satisfactory way. The disembodied hand is seen writing its confession before the wondering gaze of Shirley and Polly. At the close of the confession the man who has committed all the "heart punch" murders appears before them in a dramatic manner. This serial is very successful in its way and has been characterized by a fascinating story, consistent acting and careful development.

THE THIEF MAKER (Imp), wk. of June 11.—A two-reel story of the underworld, by George Suprenant, featuring Daniel Leighton, Jack Nelson and Mollie Malone. The young man's father is a dual character. He holds a respectable position in the business world and at the same time operates a "fence," where he purchases stolen jewels. His own son turns thief and sells a valuable stone to the father, which the latter had presented to the boy's mother. There is the usual love story. The story is handled fairly well and makes an average offering.

THE BLACK MANTILLA (Gold Seal), Wk. of June 11.—A three-reel number, written by Ruth Ann Baldwin, featuring Claire McDowell, George Pearce, Richard Ryan, Harry Mann and Gypsy Hart. This tells a colorful tale of old Mission life in California. It is slow-moving and has a proper somnolent atmosphere, but is interesting all the way through. The love of two women for a dashing caballero, who brings a present first to one and then the other, precipitates the trouble. The love of the servant for the woman who holds herself above him makes a pathetic feature. This is above the average in general development.

ONE DAMP DAY (Joker), Wk. of June 11.—A rainy day story, written by Jack Cunningham, and featuring Gale Henry, William Franey, Lillian Peacock and Milbourne Moranti. Gale's husband threatens to leave her until he thinks she has inherited money and numerous troubles occur. The rain storm scenes are good, but there is not enough plot in this to hold the attention strongly. It is below this company's average.

HEART OF GOLD (Gold Seal), Wk. of June 11.—A two-reel subject, by Chas. J. Wilson and Karl Coolidge. Walter Belasco gives a pleasing presentation of an old Jewish pawnbroker, who takes in an orphaned child. Joe Rae is very attractive in the latter role. There is a pleasant intermingling of comedy and sentiment and considerable pathos at the close when the child leaves her pawnbroker friend to go to a better home. A nice offering of the heart interest type.

Selznick Pictures.

THE SILENT MASTER, May. A six-part adaptation of the novel, "The Court of St. Simon," by E. Phillips Oppenheim. The production is well made and is of a distinctly melodramatic type, dealing with the story of a wealthy young man who allied himself with the Paris Apaches for philanthropic purposes. A full review of the picture will be found elsewhere.

Triangle Film Corporation.

THE GIRL GLORY (Ince-Kay Bee).—A fine story in every respect, nicely balanced in all details, interesting, timely and so well interpreted by Enid Bennett in the title role that she adds a new laurel to her wreath.

AMERICA—THAT'S ALL (Triangle Eastern).—About two reels of motion-picture material spun out into five, with some humor now and then, but dragging as a rule.

CACTUS NELL (Keystone).—Has all the life and go of the old Keystones, and some added at that. Polly Moran in the title role is a revelation. A winner.

ORIENTAL LOVE (Keystone).—A new idea, and one to be developed later, some fine picture effects, and some live movement all the way through, but a lack of continuity. Generally satisfactory and a novelty.

World Picture Corporation.

THE FALSE FRIEND (Peerless), June 11.—Robert Warwick and Gail Kane are the stars of this five-reel melodrama. There is plenty of action in the story, and it is excellently acted and produced. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

A NAKED SOUL (Brady Int. Service), June 11.—This five-reel drama is a remarkable example of moving picture making. It is of French origin, and for beauty of production and the highest type of screen acting is in a class by itself. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Miscellaneous

THE CALL OF HER PEOPLE (Columbia), May 6.—A seven-part production of fine quality featuring Ethel Barrymore. The picture is an adaptation of the play "Egypt," by Edward Sheldon, and tells of a gypsy girl whose foster father sells her to a wealthy white man who believes the girl to be his daughter by gypsy wife who ran away from him and returned to her people. The girl is taken to the rich man's home, and on the eve of her marriage to a white man her gypsy lover returns to her. A full review of the production will be found elsewhere.

THE DAUGHTER OF THE DON (Moe Streimer Feature Films), June.—A ten-reel production based on that period of the history of California just before it became a part of the United States. The production is very crudely made and has been interpreted by an incompetent cast. A review of the picture will be found elsewhere.

THE SUEMARINE EYE (Williamson), May.—A multiple-reel production in which three stories have been combined in one, making a chain of incidents on which to link the remarkable underwater photography which the picture presents. A full review of the picture will be found elsewhere.

THANHOUSER SUMMER PLANS.

Contains Plays Replete in Patriotism and Cheer—To Be Released on Pathe Program.

"TWO words sum up our summer releasing policy," says Edwin Thanhouser, "Americanism and Sunshine. We have sounded the public taste for the warm months at hand, and correctly, we think. Our writers and directors have worked in accordance with those soundings, and the result is a patriotic element in our summer productions and thick streaks of sunshine. We have not gone to extremes, however. We shall not wave the flag too hard, nor shall our fun run to slap-stick."

The first Pathe-Thanhouser releases under this policy will be "Under False Colors," "My Country," "Romance and Rubbers" and "Fires of Youth." Russia and an American loan are the timely features of the first Gold Rooster in the list. Frederick Warde and Jeanne Eagles head the cast, and Emile Chautard produced the picture from Lloyd Lonergan's scenario.

"My Country" is a secret service story that is also a love story. An American girl is regarded by Washington as an enemy spy, but in the end it is proved that sinister interests used her as a decoy. Florence LaBadie is the star, Ernest C. Warde, the director, and Philip Lonergan, the scenario author.

"Romance and Rubbers" is another "smile story" written for Gladys Leslie by Agnes C. Johnston. Van Dyke Brooke produced it. The picture relates the amusing ups and downs of an aspirant for stage honors, and is human and cheery clear through.

"Fires of Youth" is also from Agnes Johnston's pen, produced by Emile Chautard. Prominent in the cast are Frederick Warde and Jeanne Eagles.

Excels in Catalogued Subjects.

In the list of subjects of a single-reel character worthy of consideration by "better films" committees released during the first three months of the year the Gaumont Company had 100 subjects.

"Fires of Youth" Head Pathe June 17

Frederick Warde Is Featured in Gold Rooster—Serials, Comedies, and Topicals Complete the Program.

FREDERICK WARDE, with Jeanne Eagles in a strong Gold Rooster play, two interesting serial episodes, and a Lonesome Luke two-reel comedy are features of the Pathe program for the week of June 17. Frederick Warde is seen with Jeanne Eagles in "Fires of Youth," a five-reel Gold Rooster play produced by Thanhouser under the direction of Emile Chautard and written by Agnes C. Johnston. The story tells of a steel king, who has given his boyhood and youth in exchange for his massive fortune and the manner in which he finally finds happiness. The cast includes, in addition to Frederick Warde and Jeanne Eagles, Helen Badgley and Robert Vaughn.

Ruth Roland appears as star in the sixth episode of "The Neglected Wife" entitled "On the Precipice." Thrilling scenes on a burning boat are features of this episode.

Mollie King stars in the fourteenth episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross." This chapter is called "The Hidden Brand." It was produced by Astra under the direction of William Parke, with scenarios by Bertram Milhauser. This is a tense chapter of continued mystery well sustained.

"Lonesome Luke, Plumber," is the title of the Lonesome Luke comedy, produced in two reels. Lonesome Luke is supported by Bud Jamison, Bebe Daniels and Harry Pollard.

In addition to the two-reel Luke comedy there is also a one-reel Myers-Theby comedy.

The twelfth release of the "Know America" combitone scenics is entitled "Southwestern Texas," and shows splendid views of the wonders of our largest state.

An International split-reel cartoon and scenic release and Hearst-Pathe News No. 50 and No. 51 complete the program.

Stingaree Back Again

E. W. Hornung's Famous Character to Be Seen on the Screen in Two-Part Subjects.

UNDER the title of "The Further Adventures of Stingaree," a series of fifteen two-part episodes will be released in regular service through the General Film Company. These stories have been written especially for Kalem's production by the famous English writer, E. W. Hornung, who is the author of "Raffles" and "Stingaree." After the production of the original "Stingaree" series, the demands from enthusiastic exhibitors for more of "Stingaree" became insistent. After repeated cable communications with the English writer, Mr. Hornung finally consented to write fifteen new "Stingaree" stories for the Kalem Company.

True Boardman, who created the role of "Stingaree" in the original series, will again be the featured player. Paul C. Hurst, the creator of the role of the black-whiskered, irrepressible Howie, will also be seen in the series.

The Kalem Company will not release the first episode of the series until it has completed the production of the entire fifteen. This policy has been adopted that the slightest detail may not be overlooked in preparing each episode to perfection. When the first episode, "The Fugitive Passenger," is released there will be fourteen others, fully edited, ready to follow it.

Conquest Pictures Through K-E-S-E

Edison Productions Will Not Be Materially Delayed in Release by Suspension of Forum Films.

REGARDING the announcement of Forum Films that it would suspend operations until fall, the Edison Company says that the suspension will have but slight effect upon the distribution of Edison Conquest Pictures, which as previously advertised were to be distributed by Forum Films. Arrangements have been made with the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service to handle all Conquest releases through the twenty-two exchanges of that corporation.

It is expected that there will be a slight delay—possibly a few weeks—in completing the arrangements before the K-E-S-E managers will be in position to talk of terms and bookings, but the producers wish it to be understood that Conquest Pictures do not depend upon Forum Films for a market.

Gaumont Shows Pictures of French Tanks.

Curiosity regarding the "tanks" which the French are putting in the field is satisfied for all those who see Gaumont's Mutual Weekly No. 127. This current issue of the popular news reel contains excellent views of the bulky land cruisers which splinter trees in their path and creep over trenches. The pictures were secured by a Gaumont operator in the zone of fire. The tanks are seen on their way to attack German positions.

Every Gaumont Single on Rialto Program.

A well-deserved compliment to the excellence of Gaumont pictures is paid by the management of the New York's Rialto in its current program. Every Gaumont single-reel is represented. "Tours Around the World" offers the wonderful palace at Versailles, France. "Reel Life" contributes "A Tilting Match on the Water" and Gaumont's Mutual Weekly entertains with late news.

Big Circuits Book "One Law for Both"

United Booking Offices and Newly-Organized Exhibitors' Board of Trade to Show Ivan Film in All Their Theaters.

FOLLOWING the run of "One Law For Both," the Ivan Film Productions' latest release, which is now being shown at the Lyric Theater, New York City, the picture will be shown in all of the theaters controlled by the United Booking Offices and the newly organized Exhibitors' Board of Trade, according to an announcement made by the Merit Film Corporation, of 130 West 46th street, New York City, the distributors of the production in New York and New Jersey.

The booking of "One Law For Both" in the entire chain of theaters controlled by the United Booking Offices is said to be one of the most important bookings obtainable in the East. The circuit comprises over twenty theaters in and about the Metropolitan district. Speaking of booking the attraction in his theaters, J. J. Murdock, one of the executives of the United Booking Offices, said:

"'One Law For Both' is the first attraction that we have booked for our entire circuit, since the adaptation of our new policy of showing only those motion pictures that could be considered first-class attractions, even when in direct competition with the first companies of legitimate productions. We have had submitted for our consideration most of the pictures released since the formation of the rule of booking only those motion pictures that we considered to be worth advanced admission prices. 'One Law For Both' is the first that has measured up to our requirements. It has a cast that includes such stars as Rita Jolivet, Vincent Serrano, Pedro de Cordoba, Leah Baird, James Morrison and Paul Capellani. It has a theme of universal interest, in the discussion of the single standard of morality for the two sexes, and, in my opinion, Mr. Abramson, the author-director, has handled the subject with the greatest tact and delicacy, without, however, sacrificing any of the dramatic strength of his story. In addition to this, the locating of the story in Russia, and the showing of the activities of the Revolutionary societies, at a time when news from Russia occupies the most important position in the daily press, gives the production a remarkable added interest."

One of the officials of the Exhibitors' Board of Trade, which controls ninety-nine theaters in and about New York, expressed similar views with regard to the production.

HOFFMAN PLANS SELLING STATIONS.

Crystallization of plans for reducing selling costs through the substitution, in various centers, of one selling station to take the place of several exchanges, is announced by M. H. Hoffman, Inc. The announcement comes as one of the results of Mr. Hoffman's recent trip to the Coast, during which he annexed Bernstein Productions and M. H. Hoffman, Inc. The idea is not entirely new. As outlined by W. A. Bach, the plans consists of establishing a selling station on the floor of which will be sold products of all film companies desiring to do business in that territory.

M. H. Hoffman, Inc., it is stated, will conduct such selling stations, and each participating company will supply a representative. Exhibitors going to the selling stations will be able to purchase whatever they wish on the one floor, whether it be a full program, a feature, a one-reel comedy, or anything else. No traveling salesmen will be employed, and the overhead expenses of the one establishment will be shared proportionately by the firms represented. All sales promotion work by mail, etc., will be supervised by an individual from the head office.

Working along these lines, Mr. Hoffman announces that he will utilize the idea in as many centers as he believes necessary.

SOUTHERN RIGHTS TO "WOMAN AND BEAST" SOLD.

The United Film Service, of Atlanta and New Orleans, has purchased rights to Graphic Features' "The Woman and the Beast" for the entire block of Southern States. The deal was negotiated by W. Ray Johnston, sales manager for Graphic Features, and R. M. Savini, general manager of the United Film Service.

Showing of "Parentage" June 6

Picture Produced by Hobart Henley and Presented by Frank Seng To Be Shown at Rialto.

PARENTAGE, the big feature produced by Hobart Henley and presented for state rights purchase by Frank N. Seng, will be given a trade showing at the Rialto theater, New York, on Wednesday, June 6, at 10 o'clock A. M. Indications are that the picture will meet with the big success it deserves, according to its sponsors.

The story is said to be interesting, without a dull moment, and teaching a lesson of world-wide importance—the lesson of parentage. It is claimed to be a picture that will reach the heart of every viewer, especially in view of the fact that the sympathies of the most hardened are most easily aroused by appeal to the "parent-feeling" in all of us. The picture deals in a large and broad way with the "Great Unwanted," whose inherited tendencies often are responsible for much of the sadness in life. In pleasing contrast the picture is said to dwell on the happy lot of children reared and nurtured in the light of dutiful affection.

Infinite pains have been taken in the production of "Parentage," the producers say, and the story is well-conceived and filmed under the best possible conditions.

Samuel Rothapfel, of the Rialto theater, says: "It is the greatest exposition of types ever shown in one film and is most entertaining."

Mr. Seng already has been inundated with inquiries from exhibitors and prospective buyers of state rights; but his resolution not to consider any such offers until after the private view will be kept.

WORKING ON FIRST MAYFAIR SUBJECT.

M. A. Schlesinger, President of the Mayfair Film Corporation, and his company of Mayfair artists, are at present in the country, where a majority of the exterior scenes for Mayfair's first production are being taken. The beautiful country, with its true loveliness, is most commensurate with the charming and exquisite "Persuasive Peggy."

Nothing is being left undone by Mr. Schlesinger in his determination that "Persuasive Peggy" shall be heralded as one of the "First Line" productions of the season, and one that will reap substantial profits for both state rights buyers and exhibitors as well.

Charles J. Brabin is in charge of the direction of the inimitable Peggy Hyland, while 'Bill" Davidson is playing opposite her.

The story, by Maravene Thompson, has appeared serially in McClure's Magazine, and is now running in the foremost newspapers throughout the United States and Canada. It is a winsome, charming tale of married life and there are six wonderful adventures that will be screened in the most fascinating and original way.

McMILLAN SELLING "REAL LIFE IN CHINA."

Territorial rights to "Real Life in China," an eight-reel subject, are announced for sale by F. H. McMillan, of Chicago, who recently established an office in the Consumers' Building. Thomas Kri, a cameraman of international reputation, is responsible for the filming of the subject. In his travels Mr. Kri visited a good many of the small inland towns, as well as nearly all of the large principal cities, and some of the most interesting spots of the country were photogaphed by him.

The Ming Tombs, forts along the Great Wall of China, the Temple of Heaven, the throne room in the Imperial Palace, South Lake, Marble Bridge, Hongkong and many other places of equal importance have been filmed.

The picture also shows many interesting phases of Chinese life, and it can be recommended for its educational value. It is said that Mr. Kri spent five years in China and devoted considerable time to these pictures. From a negative that originally ran high into five figures he has pruned it to 8,000 feet.

"GOD'S MAN" PASSES CENSOR BOARDS.

The Frohman Amusement Corporation announces that "God's Man," the seven-reel feature starring H. B. Warner, has been passed by the National Board of Review and has also passed censor boards wherever shown. It is reported that commendation for the picture and its moral lessons were forthcoming from everybody to which the picture was shown.

EDGAR LEWIS WORKING ON NEW PICTURE.

While "The Bar Sinister" is running at the Broadway theater, New York, its producer, Edgar Lewis, is completing preparations for his next special production which is now well along toward the camera grinding stage. It will be another story by Anthony P. Kelly, whose creative genius is responsible for "The Bar Sinister," and like its predecessor, will depend upon its human interest rather than spectacular effects.

Many of its most important scenes will be made in the beautiful country surrounding Ticonderoga, New York, where Mr. Lewis recently spent several weeks. Besides carefully selecting the locations for the picture he superintended the laying of plans for the building of a village street which is now rapidly nearing completion and which plays an important part in the working out of the drama's novel plot.

The cast of Edgar Lewis' new production will include practically the whole company used by him in "The Barrier." Besides Mitchell Lewis, Hedda Nova, Victor Sutherland and other well known members of both "The Barrier" and "The Bar Sinister" casts, Mabel Julienne Scott will also be a prominent member of the company appearing in his coming production.

ALICE HOWELL'S FOURTH CENTURY COMEDY.

General Director J. G. Blystone has nearly finished his fourth comedy with Alice Howell starring under the Century brand. "Alice of the Sawdust" is the title, and scenes with a circus will be featured. Miss Howell is finding plenty of opportunity to exercise her willingness to undertake reckless "stunts" and the circus scenes afford unusual chances for laughable situations.

Century Comedies are being distributed on state rights lines by Julius Stern from his headquarters in the Mecca Building, New York. "Balloonatics," with Miss Howell up in the air; "Automaniacs," in which motor cars form the comedy basis, and "Neptune's Naughty Daughter," with Miss Howell going under water to bring up the laughs, are three Centurys that have been made ready for the market by Mr. Blystone.

"WHO KNOWS?" READY FOR SCREENING.

"Who Knows?" the first Bernstein production to be handled through M. H. Hoffman, Inc., will be given a trade showing within the near future. Prints have arrived in New York from the West, and W. A. Bach, sales manager, is already preparing the exploitation.

"Humility," the first of the "Seven Cardinal Virtues," has been completed, and work is progressing on the six pictures to follow—"Loyalty," "Charity," "Justice," "Truth," "Courage" and "Chastity."

It is said that each of the "Seven Cardinal Virtues" contains a dramatic story that gets away entirely from preachment, but through the story is pointed out the virtue which it represents.

TAKES "GOD'S MAN" FOR NORTHERN JERSEY.

Announcement is made that the Mammoth Film Corporation will handle the Frohman Amusement Corporation's feature, "God's Man," in the territory of Northern New Jersey. The announcement comes from the Frohman Corporation, who agreed to the plan with Dreadnaught Pictures, Inc.

General Manager Forster Moore, of the Mammoth Corporation, acting in co-operation with the Frohman service department, has designed several innovations in the matter of exploitation of "God's Man."

BARNETT CORPORATION, DETROIT, BUYS "JOAN".

The Barnett Film Corporation, of Detroit, has purchased "Joan the Woman" for Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota. An exchange will immediately be opened in Minneapolis. The territory bought for the picture by the Barnett corporation is the same in which they previously controlled Paramount pictures. B. Barnett has arrived in Detroit and will spend a few weeks there arranging for the opening of "Joan the Woman" at the Detroit opera house. Advertising, publicity, and general exploitation will be in charge of Will M. Elliott.

KUNSKY BUYS "ON TRIAL" FOR MICHIGAN.

"On Trial," the Essanay feature which was recently purchased by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, will be distributed in Michigan by the Madison Film Exchange, Detroit. The picture was bought for Michigan by John H. Kunsky. Mr. Kunsky also announces that "Idle Wives" soon will open a week's run at the Madison theater, Detroit.

SEPIA-TONED PAPER FOR "GREAT WHITE TRAIL."

The premiere of "The Great White Trail," the first superfeature produced by the Whartons for state rights release, has brought forth a new system of photo-lithography. The new system brings a photograph in sepia up to billing size, and enhances every good feature of the picture. The method is a secret process just invented by the Morgan Lithograph Company, and is being used for the first time in the billing of "The Great White Trail."

RENOWNED DISTRIBUTING "SHOULD SHE OBEY?"

"Should She Obey?" the Arizona Film Company's seven-reel feature which is being distributed by the Renowned Features Corporation, 1600 Broadway, New York, is reported to be playing to capacity business at the La Salle theater, Chicago, where it has been running for the past few weeks. Into the film, it is said, has been injected much anti-divorce propaganda based on the professional experiences of Lieutenant-Governor Barret O'Hara, of Illinois, whose work with the Illinois Vice Commission is widely known.

"Should She Obey?" brings to the screen an array of public men and women; governors, judges, clergymen, lawyers, senators, etc., in addition to a cast of good players.

"Don't think this picture is simply and only an expose of the evils of divorce," said Mr. O'Hara. "Truth told on the screen is sometimes, as in this photoplay, more dramatic and more absorbing than the product of many writers."

KING-BEE BOOKING SERVICE.

With a desire to assist exhibitors in obtaining information as to where King-Bee Comedies may be booked in any part of the United States, the King-Bee Films Corporation, Longacre Building, New York, is circulating a coupon for exhibitors to fill and return to the company. In return for the names and addresses of exhibitors, the King-Bee corporation undertakes to state where these comedies may be booked, the nearest state rights buyers being indicated.

A rumor to the effect that King-Bees are to be released once a week is denied by Louis Burstein, president and general manager of the company. The present policy of two a month, according to Mr. Burstein, will be adhered to. He says that the comedies are too good to be worked to death, and that later on the policy of the company may even involve a reduction in the number of pictures released.

SUPREME BUYS "GOD'S MAN" FOR NEW ENGLAND.

The Froman Amusement Company's big state rights picture, "God's Man," has just been purchased for New England by the Supreme Photoplays Corporation, 20 Winchester street, Boston. General Manager Harry Segal closed the deal on this picture Tuesday of last week and expects to launch it in the same fashion that he is handling "Enlighten Thy Daughter," which opens at the Modern theater, Boston, on June 4, for a two weeks run.

"A BIT O' HEAVEN" (Frieder).

"A Bit o' Heaven," featuring tiny Mary Louise, and founded on Kate Douglas Wiggin's internationally celebrated story, "The Bird's Christmas Carol," is announced by the Frieder Film Corporation, of Chicago, as its initial offering to state rights buyers. The big film, which was completed recently at the Lankershim, Cal., studios of the company, is said to be a genuine novelty in plot and handling, and one of the first of its kind.

The entire film bristles with wholesome laughs, which blend delightfully with the sublime pathos and gentle tragedy of the crippled Carol. All the quaint humor of the Ruggles' feast has been retained along with a judicious use for subtitles of the exquisitely droll text of the book. Throughout, the film version faithfully follows the original story, a happy fact made possible by the ready adaptibility of the script itself.

The stellar role of Carol Bird is ably handled by dainty five-year-old Mary Louise, whose charming artistry has already made her one of the most popular child actresses on the screen.

Altogether, "A Bit o' Heaven" is claimed to be a delightful diversion from the present run of state rights features. Its cleanly humor, spontaneous and natural, and its steady appeal to the best and cleanest of human instincts is decidedly refreshing.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"Heroic France"

Thrilling War Pictures Released By the Mutual Film Corporation—"Taken Under the Guns."

"HEROIC FRANCE"—said to be the most thrilling "war pictures" that have ever been made in the history of the world, taken by War Photographer Merl La Voy during twenty-two months on the battle fronts in France—is to be available June 4 under Mutual Film Corporation contracts with Mr. La Voy.

These pictures were made under the muzzles of the guns.

Scene from "Heroic France" (Mutual).

Here are the French artillery batteries swinging into line for one of the big "punches" on the Verdun front, there the ambulance corps men tending wounded under fire, a few steps further on the grim-visaged poilu escorting a company of German captives to the rear.

There is nothing uncertain about these war pictures. Mr. La Voy made them under the authority of the American Relief Clearing house, and he took the same chances in filming them that a combatant takes. Verdun was still under bombardment when the pictures of that ruined citadel were taken. Shells were bursting within less than a quarter of a mile of the photographer when he made the pictures.

La Voy's life wasn't worth a picayune to the First Aid corps, because La Voy was a mere adventurer, making pictures. He had a "green pass," which means "let him alone." The young American was let alone, and he got the pictures. They are marvelous pictures too.

As an introductory to the eight reels the spectator is first taken to Paris, where closeups of celebrities in the war are shown. Among the famous men registered on the film are ex-Premier Briand, ex-Premier Georges Clemenceau, President Poincaire, and Lord Herbert Kitchener, the latter being "shot" a few weeks before his death in the sinking of the British cruiser on which he was a passenger.

Other famous men shown in the film are Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight pugilistic champion, now a star of the aviation corps; and many American members of the same corps who have won fame and accepted death in the fighting on the French front, including Raoul Lufberry, of Wallingford, Conn.; Kissin Rockwell, of Asheville, N. C., who was killed last September while fighting with a German aviator 10,000 feet in the air; James McConnell, of Chicago, who was killed in an air fight last March; Bombardier Wells, English heavyweight pugilistic champion, also a member of the aviation corps, and other celebrities of the fighting front.

There are some spendid closeups of General Joffre and other distinguished officers of the French army.

There are some splendid pictures of British Cavalry waiting behind the lines for a chance to get into action, every regiment equipped to the last strap, and men and horses alike displaying their impatience for marching orders.

There are many fine views of the reserve encampments behind Verdum taken through the flooring of an aeroplane.

The great merit of Mr. La Voy's pictures is that they are all events taking place under actual service conditions at the front, with heavy artillery roaring and the thousands of little guns barking all about. No more remarkable collection of pictures illustrating way has ever been made.

"Land of Long Shadows" Essanay's Next

Jack Gardner Will Make His Bow on June 18—Taylor Holmes Coming in July.

THE next feature on Essanay's program of K-E-S-E releases will be "Land of Long Shadows." This production, which is the first of Essanay's series of westerns, presents Jack Gardner, the musical comedy star, in his screen debut. It will be released June 18.

The latest release on this program was "Filling His Own Shoes," featuring Bryant Washburn, released June 11. Mr. Washburn was immediately launched into the production of another feature, "The Man Who Was Afraid." It will be released July 2.

Taylor Holmes, the stage star recently signed up by Essanay, is now being filmed in the preliminary scenes of his first production. This will be "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," an adaptation from Clarence Buddington Kelland's story of that title in the Saturday Evening Post. It will be comedy-drama ideally fitted to the subtle style of humor of which Mr. Holmes is a past-master. The picture will be released sometime in July.

Aside from these features, Essanay is releasing through the K-E-S-E its series of child problem plays under the general title, "Do Children Count?" This series, which features little Mary McAlister, was inaugurated June 6, and is being released at the rate of one unit a week. While all of these pictures hinge on vital problems concerning the rearing of children, each one presents a separate story, complete in itself and bears an individual title. The screen time for each is approximately 25 minutes.

"The Guiding Hand" was the first of the "Do Children Count?" series. This was followed by "The Wonderful Event," then "Steps to Somewhere." The next three of these productions just announced, will be "The Yellow Umbrella," "A Place in the Sun," and "Where Is My Mother?" There will be twelve in the series.

"Mr. Pringle and Success," the latest of the Black Cat features, was released June 9.

L-KO MAKES WILD WEST COMEDY.

Director Vin Moore has created an L-Ko along different lines than are usually followed in the speedy comedies that firm has been turning out. While there is plenty of dash and "ginger" in the two reels the laughs are arrived at through unexpected methods. There are several sensations that would fit well into melodrama, indeed one of the incidents, where the men span a chasm by forming a "human bridge," recalls one of the big effects of an old time "thriller" of the stage. "Her Daring, Caring Ways" is the title, and Myrtle Sterling is the featured one, together with Lucille Hutton. It's a "wild west" subject, full of dash and chase, and requires, in one of its principal scenes, a numerous company of girls costumed in approved fashion, as shown herewith. Miss Sterling is the leader of the band. This picture was produced under the supervision of J. G. Blystone, director general of the L-Ko studios.

Mutual Program

Mary Miles Minter Leads It in "Periwinkle" for the Week of June 11.

MARY MILES MINTER in "Periwinkle" is the Mutual star production for the week of June 11. As "Periwinkle", deals with the life at a coast guard station and Mary Miles Minter appears throughout a greater part of the story dressed in oilskins, an unusual and attractive lobby display could be arranged with a boat, life preservers, compasses, etc., and having a little girl dressed in a complete suit of oilskins and big rubber boots walking up and down in front of the theater.

"A Watery Grave," the tenth chapter of "The Railroad Raiders" is scheduled for release June 11. The spectacular scenes are a fight between Helen Holmes and one of the raiders while riding the brake beams of a fast freight, which ends in Miss Holmes being thrown under the car, but by holding herself perfectly rigid, flat on the ground, she escapes injury. Later she is placed in a freight car while unconscious. The car is pushed off the ferry into the bay and a tug runs into the car, cutting it in two.

"His Cannibal Wife," the La Salle comedy for June 11, is a story of a motion picture "extra" man who is the husband of the star of the company and pictures the many rebuffs he has to take because of his wife's exalted position.

The Cub comedy for the week, featuring George Ovey, is "Jerry's Getaway," ready June 14. Louis FitzRoy, Goldie Colwell and Janet Sully assist in the comedy.

In the thirteenth story of the "Jimmie Dale Alias the Grey Seal" series scheduled for June 15, Jimmie Dale at last meets the Tocsin face to face, but at the time he is partly unconscious from a blow and has only a dim remembrance of her face.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," for June 12, pictures two islands, Capri, the celebrated island south of Naples, Italy, containing the famous Blue Grotto and the Rocks of the Sirens; and Antiqua, a British possession in the West Indies. The third section of the reel is devoted to Versailles, a royal residence of France just outside of Paris, showing the Gallery of Mirrors, the Royal Room where Louis XIV died and the balcony from which Marie Antoinette and Louis XVI were forced to salute the rioting populace.

"Mutual Weekly," reaching the screen June 13, will contain the usual assortment of patriotic news pictures as well as other events of importance.

"Reel Life," released June 14, devotes its longest section to showing how a large publishing house is equipped to turn out 12,000,000 copies each month. "How Big Guns Are Moved" is a section that makes a most timely picture. A third section is devoted to the hemp industry of rural Roumania. The reel concludes with a picture of the koala, or eucalyptus bear.

"HER ANNIVERSARIES" (Metro-Drew).

Metro's June 4 comedy release is the Metro-Drew one-act screen farce, "Her Anniversaries," written by Miss Helen Duey. In this clever playlet Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew appear as Mr. and Mrs. Mason.

"THE CAR OF CHANCE" (Bluebird).

Frankiyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon will be stars of the Bluebird release for week starting July 9. The feature was directed by William Worthington, from Eugene B. Lewis' scenario, based on Waldemar Young's story. In support of Mr. Farnum and Miss Vernon there will appear Molly Malone, Harry De More, Walter Belasco, H. J. Bennett, Marc Fenton and Helen Wright.

Scene from "The Car of Chance" (Bluebird).

"The Car of Chance" will give a comedy-drama reflection of a jitney bus romance, in which a traction strike furnished enlivening incidents. In this feature Mr. Farnum is provided with a role similar to those he recently played in "Bringing Home Father," "The Clock" and "The Man Who Took a Chance," recent Bluebirds, in which the leading character "laughed" himself out of many embarrassing and exciting situations.

Violet Mersereau Renews Contract

Popular Player a Fixture on the Bluebird Program for Another Twelvemonth.

FOR another year, at least, Violet Mersereau will remain a star of Bluebirds. Last week she affixed her signature to a contract that assurs her services to that series for an additional twelvemonth. Miss Mersereau was one of the first stars to appear after the Bluebird program was projected, considerably more than a year ago, and has been frequently presented as an attraction of value to exhbitors and a player of increasing popularity.

During her service to Bluebird, three directors have supervised her appearances. Rex Ingram brought her to the series in "The Great Problem" and followed that with "Broken Fetters"; Edwin Stevens directed "The Honor of Mary Blake," "The Boy Girl" and "Susan's Gentleman," and Harry Millard supervised the recent presentation of "Little Miss Nobody." Because of the difficulty of securing scripts suitable to Miss Mersereau's use, her appearances have been less frequent than would be wished by exhibitors and their public.

Miss Mersereau is the only star who has continued, uninterrupted, work in Bluebird's Leonia (N. J.) studio, and she is now engaged there in a modernized version of "La Cigale," with Rex Ingram again her director.

COMING SELIGS IN GENERAL FILM.

"Knights of the Saddle" is the title of a Selig production in two reels released Monday, June 4, in General Film Service. This film presents Tom Mix and other cowboys and girls at a rodeo. Among the interesting scenes can be enumerated fancy rope throwing, broncho busting, bulldogging, a derby, stage coach driving and other feats of skill and daring in the West. This film promises to equal in popularity the production "movie stunts," featuring Tom Mix in hazardous exploits. "The Font of Courage" is an exceedingly worthy pictureplay featuring Robyn Adair, E. J. Brady and Virginia Kirtley.

On Monday, June 11, the Selig Company announces for release "The Friendship of Beaupere," a two-reel drama of the North, written by Maibelle Heikes Justice. This is not a "snow picture," but an original and heart-touching drama of the Northwest in the days of summer. An exceptional cast is announced, including George Fawcett, Vivian Reed, Will Machin and Eugenie Besserer. Al Green directed the production.

On Saturday, June 16, "The Heart of Jules Carson" is announced for release in General Film service. It is an exciting drama of plot and counter plot and of a woman's sacrifice and a man's redemption.

TOTO AT ROLLIN STUDIO IN LOS ANGELES.

Toto, the famous clown who was for two years featured at the New York Hippodrome, has arrived in Los Angeles ready to begin work immediately at the Rolin Studio on comedies for Pathe.

Toto is looked upon as one of the best comedy propositions as yet discovered, and Hal Roach of Rolin expects to make pictures featuring the famous clown that will make film history. It is stated in this connection that Pathe has enough confidence in his ability to do so to offer more than twice as much money for the Toto Comedies as they have ever paid for this class of picture in the past.

The Rolin Company is the producer of the celebrated "Lonesome Luke" comedies which have been so successful. Speedy action and an alert mental attitude on the part of all characters are the features in the Rolin comedies which it is believed have made them such hits. The same policy will be followed with Toto, but, of course, because of the great difference between the comedy methods and personalities of this star and "Lonesome Luke," the pictures will be different in nature.

BALSLY WILL HELP EXHIBITORS.

A fresh evidence of the earnestness with which the avowed policy of the Standard Film Corporation to furnish a "Perfect Service to the Exhibitor" is being followed up is to be had in the announcement made this week by the Standard Film Corporation that it has secured the services of Lee D. Balsly as manager of a new department at the home offices in Kansas City, to be known as "The Exhibitors' Aid Department."

The purpose of this department, as outlined by Mr. Balsly, is to get on a more intimate relationship with Art Dramas exhibitors and to offer suggestions and ideas for the purpose of stimulating business; to assist in the creation of new business-getting plans and to establish an interchange of ideas between the exhibitor and the distributor of Art Dramas. Mr. Balsly will assist exhibitors in moulding public opinion in each of the different communities for a larger and regular clientele that will pack the theaters, and especially on the days when Art Dramas are shown.

Change in Triangle Schedule

Jack Devereaux, Bessie Barriscale, Enid Bennett, Louise Glaum, Wilfred Lucas, Elda Millar and William Desmond to Be Starred in Strong Plays.

THERE has been a rearrangement of the Triangle release schedule for June. "Wolf Lowry," the William S. Hart production which was originally announced for release June 10 was put forward on the program two weeks and shown in first-run houses May 27, together with "The Millionaire Vagrant," in which Charles Ray is being starred.

The releases for June 3 remain unchanged, Jack Devereaux appearing in "American—That's All " under the supervision of Allan Dwan, and Bessie Barriscale appearing in "Bawbs o' the Blue Ridge," under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

Enid Bennett and Louise Glaum are the stars of the Ince-Kay Bee production for June 10. Miss Bennett will appear in a play by C. Gardner Sullivan, entitled "The Girl, Glory," while Louise Glaum will be headlined in a silent drama of life among society's misfits, called "Love or Justice?"

A comedy with a strong and interesting dramatic structure, "The Girl, Glory" deals with the troubles that were encountered by Glory Wharton, the pet of the village, in trying to reform her grandfather whose capacity for strong drink seemed at times greater than his prestige as a Civil War hero. How the girl accomplishes this laudable purpose by closing up the local fire-water bazaar is shown with many realistic and amusing touches.

"Love or Justice?" is the title of Louise Glaum's starring vehicle, which is said to give her opportunity for the most forceful and vivid characterization that she has yet contributed to the Triangle program.

Wilfred Lucas, Elda Millar and William Desmond will be starred in the Triangle Eastern and Kay Bee productions released June 17. "Her Excellency, the Governor" is the name of the play in which Wilfred Lucas and Elda Millar are to be jointly featured under the supervision of Allan Dwan. Thomas H. Ince will present William Desmond on the same date in a Kay Bee drama from the pen of J. G. Hawks, entitled "Paws of the Bear."

"Her Excellency, the Governor" tells the story of an intelligent American girl who is elected lieutenant-governor of her state. An unusual crisis develops when an appropriation bill designed to furnish war funds to the national government is about to be vetoed by Barclay, the governor, who has fallen under the influence of the hyphenated interests. The pretty and resourceful lieutenant-governor invents a scheme that not only brings the governor to his senses in time to save himself from permanent disgrace, but awakens him to the fact that his assistant executive is also the arbiter of his personal destiny. Wilfred Lucas takes the part of Barclay, while Elda Millar is seen as Sylvia Marlowe, his lieutenant and good genius.

"Paws of the Bear," William Desmond's starring vehicle, is a story of plot and counterplot, in which the black art of Russia's diplomatic service is pitted against the shrewd Yankee wiles of our own secret service. The scenes of the story rapidly shift from Belgium to Russia, from Russia to Paris and through France to the United States, where the final chapters in this exciting drama are worked out to a satisfying conclusion.

"A BRASS MONKEY" (Selig).

"A Brass Monkey" will be released by the Selig company through K-E-S-E on June 11. "A Brass Monkey" is the second of the series of Hoyt comedies prepared by the Selig company.

Scene from "A Brass Monkey" (Selig).

Charles Hoyt put much of his best work into the story of "A Brass Monkey." The Selig company is said to have retained all the original Hoyt flavor, and to have introduced a succession of comic situations that will cause joyousness to any audience.

A cast of clever comedians appear in "A Brass Monkey." The players include William Fables and James Harris. J. A. Richmond is the director. Amy Leah Dennis enacts leading roles in all the Selig-Hoyt comedies.

"HOW STOCKINGS ARE MADE" (Gaumont's "Reel Life" No. 60).

An exhibitor who follows closely the list of subjects released in Gaumont single reels will understand how one hundred Gaumont subjects are listed in the catalog which gives the releases for the first three months of the year, while all other producers have only 105 subjects combined. Take, for example, the pictures shown in Gaumont's "Reel Life," No. 60. These are particularly entertaining, and at the same time of sufficient merit to make a lasting record of them. "Knitting Hosiery" is a leading section of this issue. It ought to be a truism that every one wears hosiery, and it is perhaps equally a truism that few people know how these are knit. Hence, an exhibitor who shows this issue of "Reel Life" is sure that he is showing a picture that holds the interest of all his spectators.

It is just such a picture as "Knitting Hosiery" that builds up a steady patronage for an exhibitor. His patrons may not enjoy the photodrama which is offered, but that is forgotten when the program is topped off with a sparkling single reel. The Gaumont company makes a specialty of these, and full information can be had from any exhibitor who has run them. It has been found advantageous to run a Gaumont single reel for several days, since it gets talked about, and others wish to see it.

FOUR ASTRA COMPANIES AT WORK.

With the largely increased force of stars now under contract and two large studios in full operation, Astra, producing for Pathe, is exceedingly busy. Director George Fitzmaurice has just finished Mrs. Vernon Castle's first Gold Rooster Play, "Sylvia of the Secret Service." Dexter Elliot, J. H. Gilmour and Suzanne Willa are also in the cast.

William Parke has just finished another Gold Rooster Play in which Gladys Hulette stars. The working title of this play is "The Streets of Illusion."

George B. Seitz is working upon "The Fatal Ring," a new serial starring Pearl White.

Burton King, the fourth of the Astra directors, is directing Mollie King and Creighton Hale in another Pathe serial known at present by the title "Seven Pearls."

With four big companies thus busy the Astra can point with pride to its expansion during the past twelve months.

SAFEGUARDING THE SEA SHOWN IN HEARST-PATHE NEWS.

In thorough keeping with the reputation for timeliness which the Hearst-Pathe News has earned, issue No. 44, released Memorial Day, shows the methods being employed in safeguarding the sea against submarines and mines. The various scenes are very interesting and give a new conception of a new and extremely hazardous occupation.

First are shown American mine sweepers. They draw apart with a heavy cable extended between them, to comb the deep. A huge triangular "kite" is dragged beneath the surface. Contact with a submarine or a mine is quickly indicated. Then is shown the way in which mines are planted to protect a harbor, the method of holding up the cable from which the mines are suspended, etc., etc. .

NEW WAGNER MANAGER AT MILWAUKEE.

The Wagner Electric Manufacturing Company, of St. Louis, announces the appointment of F. T. Coup, formerly connected with its Chicago office, to take charge of its Milwaukee office, in its new location, the First National Bank Building. The telephone number is Main 2340.

Universal Features a "Butterfly"

"The Field of Honor," Written By Brand Whitlock, Heads Program for Week of June 12.

THE Field of Honor, a five-act Butterfly picture, with Louise Lovely and Allen Holubar in the leading roles, is the chief offering on the Universal program for the week of June 11. The story was written by Brand Whitlock, former Mayor of Toledo, and more recently United States Minister to Belgium. Mr. Whitlock, besides being a celebrated statesman, has also achieved high honors in the literary world. He is the author of several novels and a score of short stories which have appeared in the leading magazines of the country. This is his first photoplay and ranks among the best five-reel features ever produced.

The story is laid in Civil War times and the atmosphere of the early Sixties is maintained faithfully throughout the entire film. The battle scenes are particularly stirring. A note of true patriotism runs through the story and its presentation is fully up to the high standard demanded in Butterfly pictures.

The production was made under the direction of Allen Holubar, who also plays the leading role opposite Louise Lovely, who gives a splendid performance in the role of the heroine. Another important member of the cast is Millard K. Wilson, who portrays an exceedingly difficult role with dramatic fervor. Others in the cast are Sidney Dean, Frankie Lee, Helen Wright and Frank MacQuarrie.

"The Field of Honor" will be released Monday, June 11. On the same day will appear the Nestor comedy, "To Be or Not To Be," with Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts in the principal roles.

The feature for Tuesday, June 12, is a Gold Seal three-part drama, "The Black Mantilla," with Claire McDowell in the leading role. It was written and directed by Ruth Ann Baldwin, and is a much stronger photodrama than many five-reel features. In the supporting cast are Gypsy Hart, Richard Ryan, Harry Mann and George Pearce. With "The Black Mantilla" will be released a short scenic, "Beyond the War Zone in France." The other Tuesday offering is the Victor comedy, "Making Monkey Business," starring Eileen Sedgwick. "Chicken Chased and Henpecked," a two-part L-KO comedy featuring Phil Dunham, Lucille Hutton and Merta Sterling is the leading offering for Wednesday, June 13. The regular issue of the Universal Animated Weekly will also appear on this date.

Neal Hart in the Bison two-reel Western drama, "The Honor of Men," will be presented under the Bison brand on Thursday, June 14. This is a Western picture with a punch and a charming romance interwoven in the plot. The Victor comedy, "The Flopping Uplifter," with Ernie Shields, is another Thursday release.

An unusual two-part comedy drama, "A Blissful Calamity," in which Fred Church and Fritzie Ridgeway have appealing roles, will be prescented Friday, June 15. On the same day Issue No. 23 of the Universal Screen Magazine will be released.

Four reels will be released Saturday, June 16. The fifth issue of the new one-reel feature, Universal Current Events, will make its weekly appearance on that date. The other offerings are the Imp two-part crook drama, "The Thief Maker," featuring Molloy Malone and Jack Nelson, and the Joker comedy, "One Damp Day," with Gale Henry and William Franey.

Sunday, June 17, the Big U one-act drama, "The Mysterious Outlaw," with Harry Carey as the star, will be released. Other releases of this date are the Imp drama, "Her Strange Experience," with Louise Lovely, and the Powers split reel, "A Pesky Pup," a comedy cartoon, and "China at Work and at Play," a Dorsey educational.

"The Light of Dawn," the fourteenth episode of the mystery serial, "The Voice on the Wire," in which Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber are the stars, will be released during the week.

PARAMOUNT NOW OPENS 104 PICTURES.

Following the success resulting in every section of the country from placing the first fifty-two Paramount pictures upon the open market, Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, has directed all Paramount exchanges throughout the country to place the first 104 pictures on the market for release to all exhibitors, irrespective of the restrictive feature clause in the Paramount contract which formerly made this impossible.

New prints have been supplied all exchanges, and a marked success has been made from this latest move of Paramount. New paper, additional advertising and publicity material of a much higher standard than was originally issued with the pictures are being furnished exhibitors in connection with these Preferred Pictures.

"WHEN MY SHIP COMES IN" COMPLETED.

Gouverneur Morris did the best work of his career when he wrote "When My Ship Comes In." The story ran in Hearst's Magazine and created widespread interest. It is now announced that the International Film Service has made from this story a seven-reel feature. Undoubtedly the popularity which "When My Ship Comes In" attained as a novel will be eclipsed by its motion picture version. Jane Grey is the star of the new production.

LOCKWOOD COMPANY IN CATTLE COUNTRY.

With four dozen real cowboys before the camera, several thousand head of cattle in an annual round-up for atmosphere, and a chuck-wagon outfit as a base of supplies, the Harold Lockwood company has settled down on the largest cattle ranch in Arizona for three weeks for the filming of "Under Handicap," the next Metro-Yorke production, which is being picturized from the novel by Jackson Gregory.

In the company of Metro players which arrived here this week from Los Angeles were Harold Lockwood, Fred J. Balshofer, Richard V. Spencer, Lester Cuneo, William Clifford, James Youngdeer, Charles P. Stallings, Paul H. Dowling, Antonio Gaudio, Ben Pierpaolo, Burt Nottleman and Jack Christensen.

The members of the company journeyed from Prescott to the ranch, forty miles distant, by horseback, taking their own chuck-wagon and outfits, and camping on the ranch where most of the scenes occur. The company is roughing it in earnest and getting the typical Arizona atmosphere at all hours, both in the picture and out.

"THE IMMIGRANT" LATEST CHAPLIN COMEDY.

Charlie Chaplin's next picture will be called "The Immigrant." After weeks of work the film has been completed at the Lone Star studio near Los Angeles. With its completion it has been christened by Chaplin himself, and the suspense of some millions of Chaplin fans has been relieved.

Many of the scenes in "The Immigrant" are taken in the steerage of an ocean liner. Charlie plays the role of an immigrant, bound for the land of liberty. Arriving in America without funds, he discovers that money is not picked up on the street as he supposed, and he begins the game of bluff to beat the high cost of living.

Charlie, penniless, attempts to get a meal for himself and the hungry Edna in a cheap "hash house," and his efforts to stall off the check provide Chaplin with opportunities for the sort of comedy which convulses the American audience. He drinks cup after cup of coffee and finally manages to secure a generous tip for the waiter, whereupon he is ushered out by the effusive waiter and smiling proprietor.

JACKIE SAUNDERS IN "BAB, THE FIXER."

In "Bab, the Fixer," the feature production on which Jackie Saunders is now working for distribution through Mutual, the star will be seen once more in the midst of farm life. Half of the scenes picture life on a ranch and the other half show the stock exchange with its frenzy of financial strife.

Jackie Saunders is the child of a broker who has lost his money and takes his family to a ranch to start life over again. Bab falls in love with Sterling, the owner of the adjoining ranch, and is sent away to school to break up the affair.

Meanwhile, oil discovered on the ranch, brings a fortune to Bab's family, but separates Mr. and Mrs. Porter. Bab starts in to fix everything up, and does so to the extent of nursing her father back to health, effecting a reconciliation between her father and mother and getting her own way in regard to Sterling. Supporting Jackie Saunders are Arthur Shirley, Leslie T. Peacocke, Mollie McConnell, Ruth Lackaye and R. Henry Grey.

BASIL KING STORY FOR JANE COWL.

Jane Cowl's first Goldwyn Picture is being directed by Arthur Hopkins, chief of the Goldwyn producing organization. Among those in the cast supporting this ablest of American emotional stars are some of the best known players of the screen and stage.

Miss Cowl has chosen for her first story in Goldwyn Pictures one of the works of Basil King, whose novels, "The Inner Shrine," "The Spreading Dawn" and "Wild Olive," have been tremendously successful both in this country and in England. Unusual situations and a number of rather novel problems are encountered in the course of the photoplay version of this story.

McCLURE PICTURES PREPARES SCENARIOS FOR NEW SERIES STARRING SHIRLEY MASON.

McClure pictures is rapidly completing its plans for producing the series of five-reel features that will follow "Seven Deadly Sins." The scenarios for the first three five-reelers, in which Shirley Mason will be starred, are being whipped into shape and production will begin within a few days.

A nation-wide advertising campaign, such as that behind "Seven Deadly Sins," will be prepared as an aid to the exhibitor who shows the new McClure series.

POWELL FINISHES "MARY MORELAND."

Frank Powell has finished the filming of "Mary Moreland," a picturization of Marie Van Vorst's novel of that name and the sixth of a series of feature pictures starring Marjorie Rambeau, which will be distributed through Mutual. Mr. Powell has surrounded Miss Rambeau with an unusual cast. This includes Robert Elliott, who has appeared opposite her in several other Powell productions, Augusta Burmester, Agnes Eyre, Aubrey Beattie, Gene LaMotte, Frank Ford and Fraser Tarbutt.

Six Dramas in the Making at the Peerless

Several Players New to the Screen Soon to Be Seen in World-Brady Pictures.

WILLIAM A. BRADY, director general of World Pictures Brady-Made, has planned a particularly lively summer for the Peerless studio, where no less than six picture dramas are simultaneously in the making at the present time. The new campaign, which is already under way, calls for the participation of several stars who are as yet strangers to the screen, and a considerable number of leading actors and actresses who have not appeared heretofore in World Pictures.

"First of all," said Mr. Brady to a reporter, "Mary Nash will begin shortly upon the three pictures for which she was engaged some time ago. These will keep her going at high speed for the entire summer, as, in addition to studio work in the day time, she will continue in the leading feminine role of 'The Man Who Came Back' at the Playhouse. I expect that Florence Nash, the other member of the gifted pair of Nash girls, will attach her signature to one of our contracts before long. She is considering such a step.

"Alexandra Carlisle, who scored a great success in George C. Tyler's recent stage production, 'The Country Cousin,' will make at least one photoplay for us during the Summer. Miss Carlisle certainly should be well liked upon the screen, for in the first place she is a beautiful woman, and in the second she is a remarkably intelligent and effective player. I recall that when she acted the title role in Mr. Savage's London production of 'Everywoman' she was acclaimed the best actress in England, and she has improved considerably since then. We have a very strong play for this artiste based upon a tremendously popular novel.

"We have engaged Milton Sills as leading man for Ethel Clayton, and he will make his first appearance in this capacity in 'Chasms,' which is about completed. The company spent three weeks in Georgia in securing exteriors. Miss Clayton has an exceptionally vivid role in this picture drama, with a fine chance to register a distinct sensation.

"The principal male character in Kitty Gordon's 'The Divine Sacrifice,' upon which we are now at work, is being interpreted by Jean Angelo, whose engagement as leading man with Sarah Bernhardt was interrupted by the illness of the star. M. Angelo is in America on furlough while recovering from the most recent of his wounds sustained in action. In acting with Miss Gordon in 'The Divine Sacrifice' the French leading man experiences none of the usual difficulties of a stranger in a strange land, since Miss Gordon speaks his language fluently, and George Archainbaud, the director, is his fellow countryman.

"In addition to all this we are starting upon a new play of Revolutionary times called 'Betsy Ross,' in which Alice Brady plays the title role. This will be a realistic production, and many of the scenes will be photographed in and around the original Betsy Ross home. George Washington and other outstanding personages of the period appear in the course of this story, and it will be interesting to see how their pictured counterparts live up to the ideals handed down by history. Travers Vale is the director."

ARBUCKLE'S THIRD COMEDY "A ROUGH HOUSE."

"A Rough House" is the third of the series of Paramount Arbuckle Comedies that Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle will appear in. Such was the success of the first two comedies, "The Butcher Boy" and "A Reckless Romeo," that it has been necessary for Paramount to increase the number of prints for the third picture. In this subject Fatty has left nothing undone or untouched to make it the most hilarious production he has ever appeared in. He hired the largest cabaret in New York City to act in a number of the scenes. Then, too, he has succeeded in getting a story that is wonderfully fitted for his inimitable characteristics, and one in which he has been able to pull more of his wonderful trick stunts than he ever did before in a two-reeler.

Scene from "A Rough House" (Paramount).

These Arbuckle comedies are released by Paramount to all exhibitors. The story of the next production has to do with Mr. and Mrs. Rough, who are living quite happily in their little Rough house by the sea, when Mrs. Rough's mother arrives on the scene to spend a few weeks, and she immediately begins to disturb the tranquillity of the Rough household.

"HER STRANGE WEDDING" (Lasky).

That handsome and persuasive young wretch Tom Forman has turned heart-breaker again, and this time Fannie Ward is the victim of his wiles. She is portrayed as in love with Jack Dean, who is Mr. Forman's temporary older brother, but foolishly permits the more patent charms of the former to win her good graces, and she marries in haste. It all happens in "Her Strange Wedding," in which Miss Ward stars as Coralie Grayson. It is a Lasky-Paramount picture staged under the direction of George H. Melford, and adapted from the story of George Middleton by Charles Maigne.

Scene from "Her Strange Wedding" (Lasky).

Tom Forman's wickedness is not confined to stealing his brother's lady-love from under his nose, however. There are added to his long list of crimes in this picture the stealing of money, the theft of a bracelet and a deliberate attempt to kill his own brother. From all of which it may be judged that Mr. Forman is the villain of the story, which is quite true.

The action of the photoplay shifts from a typical American suburb to the deck of an ocean liner, and thence to picturesque Bermuda, where some of the thrilling episodes in the drama took place. The settings are especially splendid, and the tremendous amount of action which is crammed into the story makes it absorbing from beginning to end.

ONE WEEK OF GAUMONT.

The first contribution to Mutual for the week of June 17 is the entertaining travel reel "Tours Around the World," No. 32, released June 19. Three sections show widely differing places in Europe. First comes Nantes, France, a seaport on the western coast. Pozzuoli, a town near Naples, Italy, provides many pictures of architectural remains of the classical Roman period. The third section of the reel shows a Russian village in winter. It makes plain as no description possibly could the beauties and miseries of the long cold season.

The second release of the week is Mutual Weekly No. 129. As this is issued just at the close of the whirlwind Liberty Loan campaign, it is certain that it will contain the highly interesting pictures of the last days of the "big push" for money to carry on the war. The release date is June 20.

The third "featurette" from Gaumont studios this week is "Reel Life" No. 60, released June 21. "Knitting Hosiery" takes spectators for a visit to a large mill where every process is carried on before the camera. "Reclaiming the Everglades" is a picture of America's richest farmland in the making. "The Most Perfect Child" shows the little girl who won the Panama-Pacific Exposition contest. "An Auto-Drawn Train" is a picture of the latest transportation method at summer amusement parks.

SELZNICK HAS HOUSE ORGAN.

With a challenge in its title, "The Open Door" has made its appearance among the numerous special purpose publications of the picture industry. This little weekly is the product of the Lewis J. Selznick publicity department, and is designed to deal exclusively with the Selznick interests in New York State. The publication gets its name from the recent announcement made by Mr. Selznick that henceforth both doors of his organization were open to all comers.

Nine Paramounts for July

Outline of Month's Releases of the Three Contributing Producing Companies.

IN the four Lasky pictures announced by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for releases in Paramount during July there are no less than eight stars, with such authors as George Broadhurst and Edwin Milton Royle representing the literary work. Fannie Ward, Vivian Martin, Louise Huff, Sessue Hayakawa, Jack Pickford, Wallace Reid, Theodore Roberts and Anita King are among the well known names which appear in this announcement.

Vivian Martin and Sessue Hayakawa co-star for the first time in "Forbidden Paths," which was written by Eve Unsell, and adapted for the screen by Beatrice De Mille and Leighton Osmun. The production was staged under the direction of Robert S. Thornby, and is scheduled for release by Paramount on July 12.

The second Lasky picture in the month is "What Money Can't Buy," starring Louise Huff, Jack Pickford and Theodore Roberts, released July 16. This is an adaptation of George Broadhurst's play made by Beulah Marie Dix. It is the first production to be directed by Lou-Tellegen. Louise Huff is the Princess Irena, Jack Pickford is Dick Hale and Theodore Roberts is Madison Hale, his millionaire father. Other important roles are taken by Hobart Bosworth, Raymond Hatton, James Cruze and James Neil.

"The Squaw Man's Son," an adaptation of Edwin Milton Royle's novel, will be released July 26, with Wallace Reid and Anita King in the principal roles. This drama is in reality a sequel to "The Squaw Man," which was the first picture produced by the Lasky company. The cast is a strong one, and includes Dorothy Davenport, Mabel Van Buren, Raymond Hatton, C. H. Geldert and Donald Bowles.

"The Crystal Gazer," starring Fannie Ward, is the fourth Lasky picture for the month, released July 30. It was written by Eve Unsell and Edna Riley, and adapted as a photoplay by Marian Fairfax. The supporting cast includes Jack Dean, Raymond Hatton, Harrison Ford, Edythe Chapman, Winnifred Greenwood and Jane Wolff. George H. Melford directed.

Famous Players.

The Famous Players has completed three productions to be released by Paramount during July. Pauline Frederick, Mae Murray and Lou-Tellegen and the respective stars.

"At First Sight," which will be released on July 2, is a comedy starring Mae Murray and written by George Middleton. Sam Hardy, one of the best known comedians on the stage, plays opposite Miss Murray. Harry Lee is a station agent who foments considerable trouble during the course of the story. "At First Sight" was directed by Robert Leonard.

"The Love That Lives," Pauline Frederick's starring vehicle for release July 9, was written by Scudder Middleton. Robert G. Vignola directed.

The third Famous Players for July is "The Long Trail," starring Lou-Tellegen, with Mary Fuller in support. It will be released July 23. "The Long Trail" was written by Eve Unsell, and is a tale of the Canadian lumber camps. Others in the cast are Winnifred Allen, Franklin Woodruff, Frank Farrington, Mrs. Brundidge, F. Tidmarsh, Sidney Bracy and Walter Gifford.

Two Moroscos for July.

George Beban, Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid are to be the Morosco stars appearing in Paramount Pictures in July. Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid co-star for the first time, and Mr. Beban replaces his customary Italian characterizations by the impersonation of a French Canadian lumber camp chef.

"Big Timber," in which Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid co-star, is an adaptation by Gardner Hunting of Bertrand Sinclair's story of the same name. It is the story of the great outdoors and of the forests. William H. Taylor directed. "The Cook of Canyon Camp," released July 19, will serve to introduce a new star to the world in the person of George Beban, Jr. The story was written by Donald Crisp and Julia Crawford Ivers in collaboration, and the production was directed by Mr. Crisp. Among those in support of the Bebans—pere and fils—are Helen Jerome Eddy, Florence Vidor and John Burton. As the title of the production indicates, Mr. Beban assumes the role of a French Canadian chef in a big lumber camp.

JOHNS-MANVILLE IN NEW PITTSBURGH OFFICES.

The splendid increase in business and the need for greater floor space and facilities for displaying Johns-Manville products, necessitated a change in location of the H. W. Johns-Manville Company at Pittsburgh on May 20. On this date new and larger Johns-Manville showrooms and sales offices were opened on the ground floor of the Westinghouse building, corner of Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue.

These new quarters provide ample space to accommodate the increasing business, and are located in the heart of Pittsburgh's business district, within a few minutes' walk from the Union Station.

"CHRISTUS" IN SIXTH WEEK AT CRITERION.

It is evident from the size and quality of the audiences at "Christus," at the Criterion, that the great biblical photodrama has found a real play among motion picture patrons in New York. The plans for the distribution of this picture will be announced through the trade papers very shortly.

"THE FLIGHT THAT FAILED" THIRD LA SALLE.

The last of a series of three two-reel comedies, with which the Mutual opened its La Salle releases, is announced for June 4 at all Mutual Film exchanges. The two previous offerings featured Carol Holloway and Madge Kirby. In this one is Jean Otto, who for a number of years appeared in the "legitimate" and also in opera companies of his own. His jovial rotundity has merited for him the appellation, so descriptive and yet so unexpected, of "Chubby." In "The Flight That Failed" he has an opportunity to show his versatility to some degree, and does not fail to take advantage of it.

The story of "The Flight That Failed" is interesting, entertaining, clean and wholesome. Mr. De La Parelle, the director and author of the picture, has produced an attractive little playlet.

Mr. Otto will be seen in the near future in several single reel releases of a rather unique character. "His Cannibal Wife" is offered for June 12, and will be followed by "Tillie of the Nine Lives" June 19; "Discords in a Flat," June 26; and "The Girl in the Frame," July 3. These are but the first of a series of fifty-two "featurettes" which La Salle will produce, and which Mutual will release.

"OTTO LUCK" A NEW CARTOON SUBJECT.

The 70th release of Paramount-Bray Pictographs introduces a cartoon character new to Paramount audiences called "Otto Luck," the creation of Wallace A. Carlson, who has recently joined the art staff of the Bray studios. Mr. Carlson found "Otto Luck" in the person of one of his acquaintances in Chicago, his former home. This chap furnished no end of fun to him because of his invariable failing to do the wrong thing at every opportunity.

The cartoon in which "Otto Luck" makes his initial bow depicts his attempt to break into the movies. There is plenty of funny action in this cartoon and unquestionably Wallace Carlson and "Otto Luck" are going to be welcomed by laugh seekers.

"THE WONDERFUL EVENT" (Essanay).

This short production is the second of Essanay's "Do Children Count?" series, and features little Mary McAlister, aged six years. Following the aim of the entire series this unit presents a vital problem arising in the rearing and training of children. The little girl wants a baby brother, and, failing by other means, steals an infant from a park bench. The consequences of this childish act precipitate a rapid-fire sequence of events which at first threatens a dire fate for its little perpetrator. The story, however, is brought to a happy ending by a visit of the Stork to the child's home. It was written by Charles Mortimer Peck, author of Essanay's successful "Is Marriage Sacred?" series, and runs on the screen twenty-five minutes. The series is being released through the K-E-S-E.

MARY PICKFORD DONATES AMBULANCE.

Mary Pickford last week donated an ambulance of the latest type to the local Red Cross at Los Angeles. The vehicle of mercy plays an important part in Miss Pickford's new Artcraft production, "The Little American," a picture of patriotic appeal, and upon the completion of the scenes in which it was used the ambulance was turned over to the local organization, which expects to see service in France shortly. The ambulance was specially built for the Pickford picture, and was designed by a surgeon connected with the American ambulance corps. It has twice the capacity for wounded cases of the former type.

"LONESOME LUKE, PLUMBER," RELEASED JUNE 17

The next two-reel "Lonesome Luke" comedy, produced by Rolin, will be released by Pathe the week of June 17. The title of this picture is "Lonesome Luke, Plumber," and it was produced under the personal direction of Hal Roach. In the photoplay, Lonesome Luke is a struggling young plumber and there is a laugh in every blow of his hammer. He is supported by Bud Jamison, Bebe Daniels and Harry Pollard.

Also, prominent in the cast are two black bears from the Los Angeles Zoo, who, in search of better fare than their keepers give them, enter the house where Lonesome Luke is engaged in first aid to bath-tubs.

THE HOUR OF THE COMEDY DRAMA.

The fact that every release of the Black Cat stories filmed from the magazine by Essanay has been a comedy drama is given credit by General Film Company for the popularity of this series of two-reel subjects.

Out of the great list of clever short stories from the Black Cat magazine those were chosen that had merriment in them as well as dramatic action. Good comedy drama plots are difficult to secure, but in these stories Essanay found a wealth of them available.

FARRAR PREPARING FOR INITIAL ARTCRAFT.

Geraldine Farrar is now busy in the hands of artists and designers preparing costumes for her forthcoming Artcraft production on which she will shortly begin work under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille. Miss Jeanie Macpherson, the scenario writer, Miss Farrar and Mr. De Mille have been spending several evenings each week in talking over the story.

Chapin's "Lincoln" Goes to Globe

Arrangements Now Under Way for Showings in Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago.

NO doubt of the success of Chapin's "Lincoln Cycle" as a nation-wide proposition can be entertained after the huge success which the film scored during the entire week of May 27 at the Strand theater, where, for the first time in three years, the regular program was set aside to play an independent production. Much interest was naturally felt by the trade prior to the New York opening regarding the financial possibilities of the picture, and there were many speculations concerning its actual drawing power to the public. All these were set at rest by the capacity houses which were the rule during the week and which brought on the early decision to play the film for an indefinite New York run, starting June 3 at the Globe theater. Performances will be continuous from 1:30 to 11:30 o'clock.

The Charter Features Corporation, of which Benjamin Chapin is president, has decided not to release the film on a state rights basis until it has presented it in the leading cities of America as a legitimate attraction. Arrangements are now under way for the Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago openings, and an elaborate publicity campaign covering the entire country is in the hands of Edwin Bower Hesser.

Raver Gets "The Warrior"

New Production By Same Company That Made "Cabiria" Has Modern War Scenes for Background.

HARRY RAVER announces the safe arrival in this country of a new and important production by the makers of "Cabiria." Mr. Raver asserts that the new production should prove a greater success than its predecessor because of its great novelty and topical value ,for it deals with the thrilling adventures of "Maciste," the famous character created by D'Annunzio, with the great war as a pictorial background.

Produced by the permission and co-operation of the Italian government, many phases of modern warfare are used in the story of "The Warrior," the title of the new production. It is told in seven parts and was produced almost entirely in the Alps, a greater portion of the time under the actual fire of the enemy's artillery. Cable advices to Mr. Raver indicated enthusiastic reception of "The Warrior" in Allied European capitals, Theatre Vaudeville in Paris presenting the picture under the patronage of the Italian Ambassador to tremendous receipts.

No definite announcement has been made as to the distribution plans for "The Warrior."

"JACK AND THE BEANSTALK" (Fox).

William Fox announces the completion of "Jack and the Beanstalk," which should prove an epic of the screen. The film was directed by C. M. and S. A. Franklin, the greatest of child directors. The production is elaborate in the extreme, and was months in the making in the Fox studios at Hollywood, Cal., and in California valleys. This version of the greatest story of really universal appeal for young and old is in ten reels.

A large part of the cast was spent in the erection of some of the most pretentious and complicated settings ever given to any feature. The salary list was also tremendous, as hundreds of children were needed for the "extra" parts alone, while the principals include the most talented juvenile players in filmdom.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" will be released as a special offering in September by Fox Film Corporation. The production will be the first of the Fox Kiddie Features to be issued by Mr. Fox each month. These subjects will be of interest not only to children, but to adults, because of the remarkable way in which they will be screened.

KUNSKY EXTENDS O. HENRY RUN.

Citing it as an unexampled triumph for short length motion pictures, General Film reports for the two-reel O. Henry subjects a rare testimonial from Detroit. As has already been announced the J. H. Kunsky houses are running the O. Henry pictures. Upon the management of this chain of theaters such an impression has been made by the quality of the O. Henry films that one of them, "The Cop and the Anthem" was billed for a second week at the Washington theater after already having been shown for a whole week. This is not the only O. Henry subject that made this record, however. "Past One at Rooney's" was also repeated for a second week at the same house.

The Detroit branch manager, D. Prince, of General Film, has already thirty-nine contracts per week for the O. Henrys booked in the Detroit district, the principal theaters being represented.

"THE ROAD BETWEEN" IS NEXT ERBOGRAPH.

The Erbograph Company announced this week that its next picture for release through Art Dramas is to be entitled "The Road Between." Marian Swayne is featured in this. It was directed by Joseph Levering. Adequate support has been provided in Armand Cortez, Bradley Barker, Frank Andrews, Gladys Fairbanks, Kirk Brown and Sallie Tysher.

"HATE" (Fairmount).

Responding to the ever-increasing demand of exhibitors for photoplays involving vital problems of immediate interest, the Fairmount Film Corporation announces that it is preparing for release through its New York offices a powerful seven-reel feature called "Hate." Pre-natal influence is the theme of the story, and the seven reels are said to be crowded with human interest, and an intense heart appeal to mothers. Walter R. Stahl, who directed the filming of the picture, is in Scene from "Hate" (Fairmount).

New York making arrangements for the distribution of the feature on the state rights basis. Director Stahl has plunged into an extensive advertising campaign, and the indications are that "Hate" will be given wider publicity in New York than any other feature put out recently. In all likelihood, "Hate" will have its New York premiere early in June.

"Hate" is crowded with punch incidents. From the beginning to the final denouement, the action is brisk and the suspense unbroken. The scenario was written by J. Walter Meade, a Southern newspaperman and magazine writer, and is based on an actual life tragedy which stirred Boston and the North and East several years ago. The subject is carefully handled, and the plot development is directed in a manner which makes the story stand out prominently from an artistic standpoint.

In the cast are Morgan Jones, Addie Holland, T. Henderson Murray, Norman Acker, and a score of others, not including the small army required in the filming of the big scenes. The photography was executed by George Coudert.

JOE WELSH TO PLAY IN ART DRAMAS.

Joe Welsh, one of the most famous Jewish comedians the stage has ever known, has been signed by Herbert Blaché, president of the U. S. Amusement Corporation, to appear in his most successful play, "The Peddler." The U. S. Amusement Corporation is one of the four producing organizations constituting Art Dramas, Inc.

Mr. Welsh traveled all over the world with this play, which toured constantly for over twenty years. It became almost as famous as "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It was the model from which dozens of similar plays were built, some of which are running even to-day in the best theaters.

Before Mr. Welsh's time the stage representation of the Jew was extremely offensive, untrue to life, and merely a caricature intended to make the thoughtless laugh. Consequently it was a wide departure which the star made when he portrayed the old clothes man as a lovable, human, honest old chap, with a keen sense of humor and a deep capacity for feeling.

The picture is being made under the personal direction of Mr. Blaché. "The Peddler" will be released early in July.

A NEW EDGAR LEWIS PRODUCTION.

Edgar Lewis has commenced work on a new photoplay which in technical demands exceeds all previous Lewis productions. This construction work is proceeding rapidly under the able supervision of J. R. Chamberlin. The cast assembled is one worthy of the caliber of the production, including such sterling players as Mitchell Lewis, Victor Sutherland, Hedda Vova, and Wm. A. Williams, all of the "Bar Sinister" company; also Mabel Juline Scott and Edward F. Roseman of "The Barrier" company.

STUART PAYTON REMAINS WITH UNIVERSAL.

Stuart Paton, who is making great strides as a director for Universal, has just signed a two-years' contract to continue his work under the Universal banner.

Carrigan and Graves Add to Holdings

New England Firm Fast Becoming Leading Theater Owners—Have Just Added Two Houses in Brunswick, Maine—Other Houses They Control.

By J. J. Phillips Photoplay Editor, Boston Journal.

BOSTON, MASS.—Since the advent of William F. Carrigan, former manager of the World's Champions Red Sox team, into the film world of New England, who in company with William Graves has annexed many moving picture theaters in this territory, and with the present ownership of nearly thirty houses it bids fair that in time Carrigan will repeat his success in the sport world and become one of the largest theatrical magnates of this territory.

Recently Mr. Graves and Mr. Carrigan purchased the Pastime theater in Brunswick Maine, also the Cumberland theater, which came into their control a short time ago, and gives them the control of this town from an exhibitor's standpoint. Carrigan and Graves now control the Colonial, Portsmouth, and the Premier-Scenic theaters in Portsmouth, N. H.; Lewiston, Empire, Mystic and Music Hall in Lewiston, Maine; the Star and Premier theaters in Littleton, N. H.; Cheney opera house in Rumford Falls, Maine; Princess, Gem and Alberts theaters in Berlin, N. H.; and one other house in Lisbon, N. H. In addition to this large chain of houses these men operate a dozen theaters at various summer resorts in Maine and New Hampshire.

New Empire Theater Begun.

Fall River, Mass.—Work has begun on the construction of the new Empire theater, Fall River, Mass., which is being built by A. A. Spitz, of Providence, R. I., and will open about the first week in September.

Local World Film to Move.

Boston, Mass.—The World Film, New England branch, will make a change in location in the near future. The World exchange, located on Winchester street, is becoming too small. Many sites are being looked over, and it is expected that the new World exchange will be located in the vicinity of Park Square, which is in the Boston film district.

Viola Dana Appears Personally.

Boston, Mass.—Viola Dana, the dainty Metro star, made a personal appearance at Loew's St. James and Orpheum theaters, as well as Gordon's Olympia theater, on Monday evening, May 28. In each instance she was greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience of film fans that cheered and applauded her to the echo. Miss Dana, at present, is working on a five-reel feature scenes, which are being made at Marblehead, Mass.

An Appeal for Liberty Bond Sales.

The Exhibitors of New England.

Gentlemen:

The biggest thing in the United States at the present time, and until June 15, is the sale of the Liberty Loan bonds. The volume is so large it is absolutely essential that these be subscribed for by every man, woman and child in New England.

There is no Government appropriation for advertising, and we are calling upon public spirited and patriotic men to give us as much publicity as possible in unpaid channels.

We are having sent you by the Boston Photoplay Company a series of slides advertising these bonds in short, pungent paragraphs, and we earnestly request that you display these in your theater between reels until the bonds are all subscribed, which will be June 15.

Your co-operation in displaying this advertising matter before your audiences will be greatly appreciated.

Yours very truly,
LIBERTY LOAN COMMITTEE OF NEW ENGLAND,
Frank A. Black,
For Publicity Committee.

Address Clarence E. Perkins, Secretary, 50 State St., Boston. Telephone 1341.

Bill Hart Stirs New England.

Boston, Mass.—William S. Hart was a visitor to Boston on May 21, being present in person at the Loew's Orpheum and St. James theaters. He was received with much enthusiasm at both houses. He made speeches on both occasions, describing his work on the screen, and closed his remarks with a brief but earnest appreciation of the applause accorded him.

At the Strand theater, Providence, R. I., Bill Hart received a tremendous ovation. He was met at the train by W. H. Bradley, the New England exchange manager of the Triangle, together with Charles Williams, the manager and president of the Strand Amusement Company. The party was then conducted to the theater, where they found the way to the entrance almost impassable owing to the crowd. Once inside the theater, that was filled to capacity, Mr. Hart found it almost impossible to reach the stage.

New Selznick Exchange to Be Opened.

Boston, Mass.—Silas M. Haas, traveling representative of the L. J. Selznick enterprises, has been in Boston for the past week, where he is interesting exhibitors and film men of this territory in "The Barrier," which was shown to a private audience at the Globe Feature Film projection rooms on Winchester street last Wednesday. Mr. Haas has also been looking over the field with a view to the new Selznick exchange, which is to be opened here shortly.

M. H. Hoffman to Open Exchange in Boston.

Boston, Mass.—M. H. Hoffman, Inc., have completed arrangements to open a distributing office for the Backer feature production, "The Sin Woman," which will take care of the New England territory for this picture. W. A. Bach, former Canadian exchange manager for the Universal Film, is to be the sales manager.

Goldwyn's Boston Branch to Open July 1.

Boston, Mass.—The Goldwyn Film Corporation will open their Boston branch exchange about July 1, and will be located on Piedmont street, opposite the Boston Metro exchange.

Local Business Notes.

Boston, Mass.—There was a private showing of "Enlighten Thy Daugher" at the Tremont Temple, Boston, for clergymen, school teachers, social workers, and special representatives of women's clubs, on Saturday, June 2, at 10 a. m. This picture is to be shown at the Modern theater for a run of two weeks, beginning Monday, June 4.

Manager Harry Campbell, of the Boston branch of the Fox Film Corp., reports a record week for business in the New England territory. Among the houses that are taking the Fox service beginning last week are: The Home theater, Everett, Mass; Regent theater, Arlington, Mass.; Star theater, Bar Harbor, Me.; Pastime theater, North East Harbor, Me.; Pavilion Hass, Boothbay Harbor, Me.; Gay White Way, York Beach, Me., four feature weekly; Strand theater, Hampden Beach, N. H.; and Nipmuck Park theater, Mendum, Mass., the last mentioned house has subscribed for the entire Fox service of comedies, features and specials, with two features weekly for sixteen weeks.

J. Frank Shay, well known film man throughout the country, and especially popular in New England, has been made a representative of the Fox interests in London, England, and will leave for Great Britain shortly.

PINE TREE STATE NOTES.

From J. P. Flanagan, 151 Park View Ave., Bangor, Me.

Palace Theater to Open Under Local Management.

BANGOR, ME.—It is again reported that the Palace theater on Exchange street is to reopen under the management of four Bangor men who have agreed to take another chance with this house, which has seen numerous ups and downs during the past three or four years. It will reopen about June 1, according to report, and will use straight Universal service.

"Primrose Ring" Wins Praise.

"The Primrose Ring," starring Mae Murray, was declared by many patrons who saw it at the Park theater in Bangor this week to be one of the finest moving pictures they had ever seen, and the management may be requested to run the play again. Mae Murray brought out in capitivating style the delicious humanness of the little nurse who declared her little folks in the incurable ward of the big hospital were just children, not cases, or incurables. There was a delicious humanness through the whole picture.

Molly King is drawing crowds to the Nickel theater, Bangor, in "The Mystery of the Double Cross."

STRAY MARYLAND ITEMS.

Another "Intolerance" Red Cross Benefit.

Baltimore, Md.—Another benefit was given at Ford's opera house on Monday night, May 21, through the courtesy of Charles E. and John T. Ford. This benefit was held under the auspices of the Comfort Kit Section of the Arundell Club Circle of the American Red Cross. The huge screen spectacle "Intolerance" was the subject.

Manager McDermitt Aids Recruiting.

Baltimore, Md.—George A. McDermitt, manager of Loew's Hippodrome theater, Eutaw street at Baltimore, very gladly aided the recruiting drive of the Fourth Regiment on Friday night, May 18.

Gainsborg Now With Metro.

Newark, N. J.—Lee Gainsborg, who until recently was the manager of the local Universal Film, at 286 Market street, and still more recently in the state rights field, has now become representative of the New Jersey Metro.

Meeting at Centreville Opera House.

Centreville, Md.—On Wednesday, May 16, through the courtesy of Manager Cahill of the Opera House in this city, a large meeting in the interests of agricultural preparedness was held at which Governor Harrington of Maryland and several other prominent men spoke.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

National Anthem Restricted in Pa.

Harrisburg, Pa.—On Tuesday, May 15, a resolution was adopted by the lower branch of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, declaring that the Star Spangled Banner and other national airs should at no time be incorporated in a fantasy, but should be sung only at opportune times.

Notable Films Here Last Week.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Prominent among first run productions of the week was "The Easiest Way," featuring Clara Kimball Young, which was shown at the Stanley. Newspaper comment indicated that leading critics considered the picture helped rather than hindered by the eliminations ordered by the State Board of Censorship. The censor's decision was appealed to Court of Common Pleas No. 1, and after a stiff legal battle the court permitted the picture to be shown under its original title, but with certain eliminations. These were promptly made by the producers.

At the Arcadia "Within the Law," starring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey, stayed throughout the week.

The Victoria showed Robert Warwick in "The Silent Master," dividing honors with Miriam Cooper, who made her debut as a star in "The Lie."

At the Strand Robert Warwick and Gail Kane were seen in "The False Friend," and Earle Williams in "The Soul Master" completed the week.

Philadelphia Mutual Moves to Vine Street

Takes Space in Newly Constructed Fire-Proof Building—Over Paramount Exchange—Plan that Shows Lay-Out of Space.

From F. V. Armato, 144 N. Salford St., West Phila., Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Mutual's local film exchange will shortly move into new and handsome quarters on the second floor of a newly constructed fireproof-building at 1219-21 Vine street. Paramount already occupies the first floor with its new offices, and Mutual has leased a space of eight thousand square feet directly above.

G. B. Stevenson, of the construction department of Mutual, has planned a suite that will combine every convenience for office force and patrons. A spacious and elaborately appointed reception room done in mahogany, calculated to make every exhibitor feel that he is an honored guest, will be the first thing to greet the eye. All private offices are finished in mahogany and colonial glass. Ample space has been provided for a display room for the exhibition of posters. There are film and poster storerooms, with ample facilities; a projection room with a thirty foot throw, salesmen's offices, and two big vaults, which will easily take care of the large output on Mutual's program. A messengers' waiting room located near the elevator is another feature. It adjoins the bookkeeping and accounting departments, thus facilitating quick service. Elevators are provided at the rear to take care of film and poster shipments.

Manager Tolmas, of the exchange, is supplied with a particularly handsome office, and Assistant Manager H. Heidelberg will also have a separate office, as will the bookers, and there will be a salesmen's office, where exhibitors will be enabled to transact their business without interruption. Manager Tolmas has had wide experience in the film business, and believes thoroughly in it and its possibilities. Asked concerning the advisability of such lavish facilities he said:

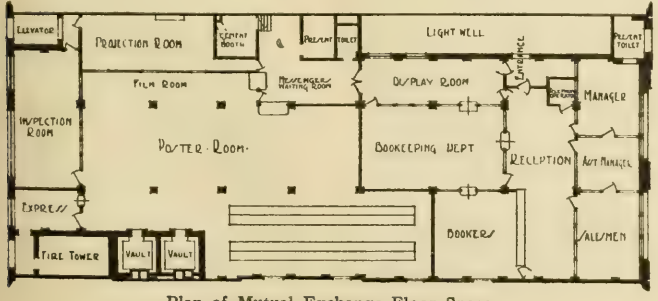
"The reason we have spent so large an amount on the new exchange is because we recognize that the moving picture business is at last coming into its own. It is here, and it is here to stay, and we are building solidly to meet its needs. The future holds great prospects for us, for our program and for exhibitors who use it."

These plans have been formulated on a line with the present policy adapted by the Mutual home office who have a separate department to handle and equip all of their branches throughout the country. J. Sauer & Co., of Philadelphia, superintended the construction of the new exchange.

Waste Paper Collection Ceases.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Three of the four moving picture houses managed by Cornelius Stamper have helped the Red Cross by offering free admission tickets to all children bringing bundles of paper to the theater. At the Coliseum, in west Philadelphia, nearly a ton of paper was delivered by children eager to obtain one of the coveted pasteboards. The paper at this house was collected by the Philadelphia Garford Company, the local organization handling the Garford Truck, which donated one of its big vehicles for the purpose.

At the Frankford theater, Frankford avenue and Margaretta street, nearly a half-ton of paper was collected in the same manner. The Cedar, the third of the houses, had a successful collection last Saturday. This was announced as the final collection, as there has been a sharp drop in the price of waste paper. The price has gone so low that it is impossible to consider the collections justified even where the hauling is done gratis.



Plan of Mutual Exchange Floor Space.

Won't Use Association Music.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Albert Brown, of the Overbrook, is one of several exhibitors who have decided not to use music controlled by the Authors' and Music Publishers' Association. Mr. Brown takes the ground that $10 per month is too high a fee, especially as the performance of the music is in a sense advertising it. Mr. Brown is a great believer in operatic music, and points out that there is an almost limitless assortment of dramatic and appropriate themes and melodies to be found in the works of operatic composers, which in his judgment far surpass the efforts of modern "popular" composers.

William Heenan Speaks His Mind.

Philadelphia, Pa.—William Heenan, booker in chief and film reviewer of the Stanley Booking Corporation, is reported as not surprised at the decision of the State Board of Censors refusing to pass "The Serpent's Tooth," featuring Gail Kane. He is quoted as saying in this instance that the censors were justified in withholding from the public a picture whose depravity and licentiousness would be a blow to the movement for clean pictures.

Joseph A. Murphy on the Job at Family Theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Joseph A. Murphy, formerly manager of the Ruby theater, is now manager of the Family theater, having commenced his new duties on May 28. He has had distinct success in the picture business, and one of his greatest assets is a cheerful disposition. The Family has had many notable improvements made to it lately, which are reported to have enhanced its value fifty per cent.

Business Doings—Personal Mention.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Herbert Effinger, manager of the Strand theater, announces the engagement of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" for the entire week of June 4. The picture has been booked directly following its sensational run at the Forrest, where it played at regular theatrical rates.

Philadelphia, Pa.—B. F. Seligman, manager of the Crescent theater, Baltimore, was a visitor last Thursday at the offices of the Stanley Booking Corporation here. Mr. Seligman was one of the early Philadelphia managers, his first houses being the Savoy and the Auditorium.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The West Allegheny theaters, having temporarily discontinued their vaudeville policy for the summer, announce that super-feature productions will be shown instead, beginning with "The Deemster," adapted from Hall Caine's novel, and featuring the author's son, Derwent Hall Caine. Manager Cohen has already arranged to book "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," commencing June 4.

Washington Paramount and Artcraft Joined

R. S. Barron of Philadelphia is Manager of the New Company—Office Is 525 Thirteenth, Northwest—Vivian Whitaker Is Sales Manager.

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The consolidation of the Paramount and Artcraft exchanges in this city and the announcement that R. E. Barron of Philadelphia, succeeds George M. Mann, are the principal topics of discussion at this time. This news came as quite a surprise to the exhibitors in this territory, although there have been faint rumors breaking loose from time to time, but it was not until William E. Smith came to town that the realization came that there was actually something doing.

Mr. Smith is president and general manager of the Famous Players' exchange in Philadelphia and as such, under the terms of the consolidation, controls both the Paramount and Artcraft progrems in the Philadelphia territory, and also in the territory served from Washington, which includes a part of North Carolina, in addition to Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

The Famous Players exchange is located at 525 Thirteenth street, northwest, and it is to this address that the Artcraft exchange has been removed, the lease to the offices at 1320 F street, northwest, having been surrendered. Vivian Whitaker, who has been managing this office, becomes sales manager for this territory under the consolidation.

Mr. Barron, while new to this territory, has had long experience in the film business and has been the manager of the Philadelphia office. He was transferred to that city from Boston, where he made quite a record as an up-to-the-minute film man. He comes to Washington well recommended both as a good film man and as a fine chap with whom to do business.

All of the readers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD in this territory are well acquainted with Vivian Whitaker, who has been manager of the Artcraft exchange since its opening here last fall. Before that time, dating back to its opening also, he was connected with the Famous Players' exchange in this city as assistant to Mr. Mann. He, too, has had considerable experience in the moving picture business, and before he came to Washington he was in the game handling state rights propositions in Atlanta, Ga., and New Orleans, La. Before that he was in the show business. He started in as an office boy with Lawrence Weber, of Weber & Rush, later going to New England on the Poli circuit and then, after four years of that work, becoming connected with the Shubert interests, managing for two seasons, vaudeville houses in Utica and Syracuse and then going out with the road shows when the vaudeville business was discontinued.

Under the consolidation a great deal larger business is expected for with the open booking system to be followed, this office can reach out after business it could not heretofore touch under the old system of program booking. Under this plan the exhibitor also benefits for he can go ahead, as explained to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD correspondent by Mr. Smith, and make a record on some one or more particular stars and hammer on these. The exhibitor can contract for the stars he desires for a long period. He then knows what he is going to get.

Upon the open-booking plan, the exhibitor can contract for pictures starring Miss Pickford, Miss Clarke, Mme. Petrova, Miss Burke, or Miss Frederick; the Griffith or DeMille series of super pictures, etc.—he can select his pictures, in advance, and build up his lines accordingly. Under the new plan several salesmen will be selected to get into and work up this territory in a way not heretofore attempted. These men will be under the direction of Mr. Whitaker, who will be the sales manager for this territory. Mr. Barron is the office manager and in direct charge of all of the activities of the local office.

Don't Be Too Economical.

Washington, D. C.—Unfortunate publicity given to matters pertaining to the usual commercial activity of the Nation, from which many people have gained the idea that to purchase luxuries or invest in frivolties is unpatriotic, has had a marked ill effect on many lines of industry. It has been declared that the United States has been a spendthrift nation and that now there is need for retrenchment to the end that the greatest possible amount of money may be available for the use of the Government in carrying on the war.

There are those of the people who advocate great savings and economies all along the line and the investment of such savings in Government Liberty bonds. This has made difficult the slogan of the commercial interests of "business as usual." These latter have the support of the Washington Evening Star which has printed the following in its news columns:

BUSINESS IS GOOD IN WASHINGTON

Go to the Theater as Much as Ever.

IF the playhouses, the movies and the summer parks were closed, where would the workingman find diversion?

His efficiency probably would be impaired by continuous daily work and his working powers reduced unless he had recreation and relaxation.

Closing up amusement places would not only disappoint many, but it would also cripple the vast amount of capital invested in these branches of business and also affect other investments in the mercantile world.

It is reported that conditions do not differ greatly here from those that prevail in other cities and that exhibitors, in common with all business men, are greatly perturbed over the effect of this great economy wave. To them its continuance means a considerable loss of business and damage to their investments. They do not preach extravagance, and, in fact, one can hardly look upon a dime expended upon an evening's entertainment, recreation and education, as going for a morally-prohibited luxury.

Warned Not to Refuse to Let Uniformed Men Buy Seats.

Washington, D. C.—With the city full of soldiers and sailors in uniform the warning is again being sent forth to proprietors of motion picture and other theaters and public places of amusement to be careful not to refuse admission of these men to their respective establishments. It has come to the attention of the authorities that the men in uniform are unwelcome in certain of these places. There is a penalty for discriminating against the wearers of the uniform of $500. It has been recommended to the soldiers and sailors that if such discrimination is practiced against them, they should at once report, with evidence, such cases to their immediate commanding officers. The Department of Justice would then take up the matter of prosecuting the cases.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

Baltimore News Letter.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mount Royal Ter., Baltimore, Maryland.

A. B. Price to Represent Paramount.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Arthur B. Price, the wide awake manager of the Rialto and Mt. Royal theaters on North avenue, the former at Linden and the latter at Park avenue, has been appointed as Baltimore representative for the Paramount Film Corporation. Mr. Price has had many years' experience in the film and amusement business, which makes him particularly fitted to act in the capacity of representative for this large company. His Baltimore friends are all glad to hear of his appointment, and this writer heartily congratulates him.

Idle Hour Changes Policy.

Baltimore, Md.—Manager Waskey, of the Idle Hour theater, 223 North Howard street, made an entire change of policy beginning with last week. On Thursdays and Fridays, hereafter, special multiple reel features will be shown.

S. Pelsweig Leaves Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—S. Pelsweig, who for sometime has been handling the output of the Electric Theater Supply Company in Baltimore and the surrounding territory, has now said good bye to his many friends in this city to go to Philadelphia, where he will become connected with the Mutual Film, handling the Eastern Pennsylvania territory for that company. Mr. Pelsweig has many friends in Baltimore, and all regret to see him go, but they wish him "Bon voyage."

W. C. Karras in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—W. C. Karras, representative for the Philadelphia Film exchange, has been in Baltimore for the past four weeks attending to the booking of this company's output in this territory. When we met Mr. Karras he was extremely on the job with some live wire talk.

H. C. Wales with General Film.

Baltimore, Md.—There has been a regular shake up in film circles in this city lately, and the melee has now virtually been adjusted. H. C. Wales has returned to Baltimore, understood to be his native soil, as manager of the General Film exchange in this city. Mr. Wales was formerly connected with the World Film exchange in Washington, D. C., as manager and then as special representative. His host of Baltimore friends will be glad to welcome him home again.

Buys Bijou Dream Theater.

Havre de Grace, Md.—The Bijou Dream theater in this city, which was formerly owned and managed by M. E. Lindsay, has now been bought by R. R. Thompson, who, it is understood, will manage the house himself.

G. Kingston Howard Returns.

Baltimore, Md.—It is with a great deal of pleasure that we are able to announce the return of G. Kingston Howard, president of the Operators' Union, Local 181, to his office in the Gayety Theater building on Monday, May 28, after having gone through a long fight to regain his health due to an operation for appendicitis having been performed on him several weeks ago. All his colleagues and friends gave him the glad hand at the Levee, which was held on his return to headquarters.

Pathe Gaining Headway.

Baltimore, Md.—For the first time in the history of the Pathe exchange in this city, so far as can be learned, this company last week obtained four first run bookings for its output in four of the largest theaters in Baltimore. Frank B. Spurrier is the man on the job, and the theaters landed are: Nixon's Victoria, the Great Wizard, the Picture Garden and the Academy of Music, which is now screening "Civilization" with Pathe's Coast Defenders.

Baltimore Business Notes.

Baltimore, Md.—When "War's Women" was screened recently at the Red Moon theater, 20 West Baltimore street, by Manager Benjamin, his daily schedule was delayed owing to a mandate from the censor board to have this film re-censored. In this second examination the whole fifth reel was condemned.

Baltimore, Md.—J. Louis Rome, manager of the Broadway theater, 509 S. Broadway, states that he is making great headway with the Mutual star series in his house, and that the public likes the stories.

Baltimore, Md.—The Comedy theater, 412 East Baltimore street, under the management of J. Rabinowitz, has taken on a new appearance due to a new covering of light green paint.

Baltimore, Md.—Frank M. Ford, son of John T. Ford, co-proprietor of Ford's opera house, enlisted in the army on Monday night, May 28, and has been appointed a mounted orderly on Brigadier General Gaither's staff.

Baltimore, Md.—M. Basin, manager of the Blue Mouse theater, 28 West Lexington street, played a return engagement of "Ignorance" during the latter part of last week.

Baltimore, Md.—Gwyn Oak and Bay Shore parks, popular summer resorts of this city, were opened Monday, May 26.

Censors Arrest "Race Suicide" Booker.

Baltimore, Md.—On Friday, May 18, an interesting case came up before Justice Packard in the Central Police Court, regarding the showing of "Race Suicide" at the Clover theater, 414 East Baltimore street. Marcus Notes, of Washington, D. C., who is handling this film, was brought up by the Maryland Censor Board for allowing this picture to come into this state with the censored parts still in the picture and exhibit it here.

The defense showed that Mr. Notes had ordered his shipping clerk to make the eliminations and in turn the shipping clerk had ordered a girl employe to do the clipping. The finality was that the eliminating was eventually entirely forgotten by the girl. Hence, the showing of the unexpurgated edition of the film caused all the trouble.

Mrs. Thomas B. Harrison, William F. Stone, members of the Censor Board, and Attorney General Albert C. Ritchie were present at the trial. Mrs. Harrison testified that she ordered the eliminations made last October.

In fining Mr. Notes, Justice Packard stated that he is determined to uphold the Maryland Censor Law and gave warning to all exhibitors that this law must be strictly abided by.

STEEL CITY JOTTINGS.

Verne Film at the Majestic.

Erie, Pa.—The beautiful Majestic theater, Erie, Pa., on June 4 opens a week's engagement of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," which will be staged in an elaborate manner. This subject will be followed by a week's run of "Civilization." The Majestic's new policy of big feature productions exclusively is reported as meeting with brilliant success.

Local Trade Notes.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A successful and largely attended trade showing of the latest nine-part Vitagraph production, "Within the Law," featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey, was given Sunday afternoon.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Manager Charles F. Schwerin, of the Pittsburgh Selznick exchange, states that contracts have been closed with two leading houses, the Liberty, of the Rowland & Clark chain, and the Columbia theater, Fifth avenue, for the big Rex Beach film drama "The Barrier." These houses will run the picture simultaneously for a full week beginning June 11.

New Managers at Mutual and Fox Offices

Two of Pittsburgh Exchange Managers Change—C. W. Eckhardt Succeeded by G. P. Ainsworth—W. P. Kinson by W. H. Rippard.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6104 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Local Fox Managers Promoted.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The announcement has been made that C. W. Eckhardt, for the past two years manager of the local branch of the Fox Film, has been promoted to a higher position at the home office in New York City and will leave this city to take up his new duties on June 2.

Mr. Eckhardt will be succeeded by G. R. Ainstworth, until about six months ago assistant manager of the Fox exchange here, but who has been recently manager of the Boston branch of Essanay. Mr. Ainsworth came here several days ago and took charge immediately, so that he will be thoroughly familiar with all details of the work by the time Mr. Eckhardt leaves.

The promotion of Mr. Eckhardt is in recognition of his marked success as manager and is considered a tribtue to his ability and untiring energy. He came to this city about three years ago and was first connected with the Hudson exchange. Later, in September, 1915, he became assistant to Manager Day, of the Fox exchange, and when the latter was transferred to Philadelphia he became manager of this office. In entering upon his new field of endeavor, Mr. Eckhardt is followed by the good wishes of a host of his Pittsburgh friends and associates, who express much regret at his departure.

Mr. Ainsworth, the new Fox manager, is also well-known and popular in this section, and his previous experience here makes him especially well fitted to take up the work laid down by Mr. Eckhardt. Besides his previous connection with the local Fox office, he was also asociated for some time with the Mutual exchange, where he had charge of serial releases, and was later with the General Film, where he looked after Essanay interests in the Pittsburgh section. His appointment to head the Pittsburgh Fox office meets with the approval of the exhibitors and the entire trade in this territory, and his complete success seems assured.

A Change of Managers at the Mutual.

The second managerial change of unusual interest is the resignation of Walter T. Kinson, as head of the Pittsburgh Mutual exchange, to become associated with the Supreme Photoplay Productions, where he will handle the Masterpiece subjects recently taken over by that concern. Mr. Kinson's successor at the Mutual is W. H. Ripard, formerly assistant manager of the Philadelphia Mutual exchange.

Mr. Kinson is a well-known figure in the trade here and, while rather young in years, is one of the oldest film men in point of service in the city. He has been manager of the Mutual for the past two years. For eight years he was manager of the General Film here, prior to which time he was connected with the Pittsburgh Film & Calcium Light Co.

His affiliation with the Supreme Photoplay Productions is regarded as a valuable asset to that concern in its new undertaking, brought about by the merger of the Supreme and the Masterpiece Film, announced two weeks ago. This concern is now one of the largest independent film distributors in the country, and with H. F. Greele continuing as general manager and Mr. Kinson in charge of the Masterpiece productions, a brilliant future for the Supreme is assured.

F. I. L. M. Club to Hold Social Gatherings.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Pitsburgh F. I. L. M. Club has enlarged its scope of activity from that of purely trade interests and is meeting with much success from a social standpoint. The Club is holding a regular weekly luncheon every Tuesday at the Fort Pitt hotel, beginning May 29, with the exception of the first Tuesday of each month, when a dinner will be held. The initial affair was largely attended and was marked by much enthusiasm and good cheer. President Burhans states that the affairs promise to be quite successful as an occasion for exchanging views and otherwise bringing the film trade together on a basis of goodfellowship.

Local Express Companies to Expedite Film Shipments.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A successful protest has just been carried out by the local film trade to secure important changes for the improvement of the transportation of moving picture films by express. According to the new rules secured, express messengers are to see that films are handled the same as valuables, not with other merchandise. Agents have been notified that all films must be shipped on the first train after their receipt, and assurances are given of cooperation in relieving the present delays and uncertainties of delivery. The traffic committee of the F. I. L. M. Club which is in charge of this movement is composed of the following: George Calahan, chairman; John McAleer, Al. Cross, John Davis and Harry Miller.

Repertoire in Films at Liberty Theater.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Repertoire in films is a new and interesting departure introduced here by James B. Clark, managing director of the Rowland & Clark theaters. It has been announced that begining with the week of June 18 the plan will be inaugurated at the Liberty theater, which will present Margurite Clark in a different picture each day. If the arrangement proves successful it will be continued, with stock weeks taking place at regular intervals and introducing the six best productions of leading players in the films.

For the first week the following Margurite Clark subjects have been booked: Monday, "Seven Sisters"; Tuesday, "Pretty Sister of Jose"; Wednesday, "Still Waters"; Thursday, "Mice and Men"; Friday, "Silks and Satins"; and Saturday, "Mollie Make Believe."

Other weeks of film stock will bring six Douglas Fairbanks subjects, also Mary Pickford, Clara Kimball Young and Pauline Frederick productions.

United Equipment Takes Over Ludwig Hommel Supplies.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The United Theater Equipment Corporation, successors here to the Feature Film & Calcium Light Co., Film Exchange building, has taken over the moving picture supply department of the Ludwig Hommel Co., 947 Penn avenue, one of the leading supply houses of this city. The stock has been removed to the quarters of the United, where the various well-known makes of projection machines and other accessories featured by the Hommel Co. will be continued.

F. C. Bonstall Transfered to Erie Office of Pathe.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—F. C. Bonstall, formerly in charge of the Altoona, Pa., territory of the Pittsburgh Pathe office, has been transfered to the Erie, Pa., section, succeeding T. P. Kelly, resigned. E. M. Struv, an experienced salesman, has been appointed to the Altoona territory.

Manager Fuller, of the Pathe exchange, is arranging to give an elaborate private showing of the latest special Pathe feature "The Vicar of Wakefield," featuring Frederick Warde.

War Rules Aid and Hinder Picture Shows

Buffalo and Niagara Falls Picture Theaters Are Benefited as a Whole by Martial Activities on Both Sides of the Border.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 152 N. Elmwood Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Moving picture theaters of Niagara Falls have been hit hard by the new Canadian immigration regulation, forbidding men eligible for military service to cross to the American side of Niagara River. Before the new law became effective hundreds of young men, accompanied by young women, went from the Ontario towns to the Cataract city and Buffalo to attend the shows and other places of amusement. The new regulation was recently passed at Ottawa to prevent Canadians of miltary age from leaving Canada to avoid conscription. Permits, which are accompanied by considerable delay and red tape, are necessary before any male persons can board a train or vessel in Canada for the United States. To offset the loss of the Canadian patronage the Niagara Falls exhibitors are making a successful bid for the attendance of thousands of soldiers. Some are on guard duty there and many are attending the officers' training camp at Fort Niagara. These young men, when off duty, seek amusement at the Falls or Buffalo.

The patronage of the soldiers at the moving picture theaters at Niagara Falls and Buffalo is worth while. They do not frequent drinking places, and in their spare time have plenty of opportunity to attend the theaters. The law imposes no special penalty on the soldier or sailor who buys a drink in a hotel or a saloon, but the seller is liable to a fine of $1,000 or a sentence of one year in prison, or both. As the liquor men therefore are not catering to the trade of the boys who have joined the colors, the theatrical managers have an extra good reason for making a special effort to enliven their shows so they will appeal to the recruits and their companions.

Charles Bowe at Lyric's Helm.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Charles Bowe, an experienced showman, has been appointed manager of the Lyric theater, Buffalo. The Lyric has dropped vaudeville for the summer and is playing stock and moving pictures. Mr. Bowe was associated with Dr. P. C. Cornell at the Academy theater, Buffalo, for a long time, and later managed various moving picture houses in this city.

Films—Advertising Stunts—Business Notes.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Harry Marsey, general manager of the Family theater, Buffalo, used the services of men and women, mysteriously garbed in white, and with their faces masked, to advertise "The Mormon Maid," a recent attraction at the Family. The strange figures rode horses through the principal streets and attracted wide attention. Mr. Marsey advertised the show as "Buffalo's opportunity to see Mormon marriage ceremonies of olden days." "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," very appropriate for these stirring times, was a later offering at the Family. Theatrically speaking, Mr. Marsey put up a great front for this show, using new signs and flags in abundance.

Two interesting films, "The Man He Might Have Been," and "The Crimes of Carelessness," were shown at a recent meeting of the Buffalo branch of the national safety council.

"The Press and the Spoilsman," the film produced by the Buffalo Evening News, was recently shown at the Peerless theater, Cuba, N. Y., for the benefit of the Cuba public library. In addition to this attraction there were several Pathe war pictures and the Lasky-Paramount five-reel production of "Oliver Twist," with Marie Doro. Pathe war pictures were also shown at the Buffalo News staff club rooms. A De Vry projector, operated by E. C. Winegar for A. A. Schmidt, local representative of the De Vry Co., furnished the pictures.

Ruth McCord Expected in Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Buffalo will be visited shortly by Ruth McCord, a moving picture actress, representing the Ince-Triangle Film Co. Miss McCord is taking an unusual motorcycle tour. She left San Diego some time ago and will visit all the large cities of the country. She will cover 25,000 miles.

Taking Note of Home Defense Patriots.

Rochester, N. Y.—Rochester exhibitors will aid in a campaign to encourage patriotic gardening. The home defense subcommittee on foods and markets of that city has completed arrangements by which several of the larger downtown theaters will show on their screens pictures of Rochesterians who are doing their bits by cultivating back-yard gardens.

Out-of-Door Parks Open.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Crystal Beach, Erie Beach and Carnival Court, summer resorts at which Buffalonians seek amusements, have opened for the season. Moving pictures will be among the features at the three places.

Open air moving pictures are shown at Ontario Beach Park, which opened for the season May 28.

Bonds on Installment Plan at Eastman Works.

Rochester, N. Y.—The employes of the Eastman Kodak Co., of Rochester, recently assembled to hear James H. Haste, general manager, explain the plan under which they can obtain one or more Liberty bonds by paying on the installment plan. For each $100 bond the company will put up $90 is to be paid by the employee at the rate of $2 a week.

Bill Hart's Visit Delights Cleveland

Bill Says He Can Remember the Old Second Rate Hotels of Barnstorming Days —Would Rather Ride a Horse than Sleep in a Pullman.

CLEVELAND, O.—Cleveland got its first look at a real big "drawing-card" movie star last Friday, when William S. Hart blew into town on the 7:15.

"Bill" was up and dressed and had partaken of his morning "chuck" by the time the train pulled into the union shanty. He looked tired, and he ought to have been, for he was riding on sleepers for twenty days.

"I can't sleep much on trains, boys," he volunteered, "but I can ride my horse all night and feel fine when the sun comes over the hills. Gee, I wish I had that horse with me now."

After the customary greetings and introductions, he was hurried out of the shanty to the Statler hotel, where H. A. Brady of the Triangle had engaged a $15 bed. "Bill" laid down until elven o'clock and then went to the lobby in his western costume, where for an hour he shook hands with a thousand and one fair young women and a thousand more men admirers.

At 12:30 he attended the luncheon given at the hotel by the Cleveland Screen club. Besides club members there were present exhibitors from all over northern Ohio and many movie fans. Mr. Hart made a speech in which he recounted his experiences as a stage actor and a movie star.

"I want to tell you boys that this elaborate affair dazzles me," he said. "Out at the studio we don't have anything like this and before I went into photoplays, I was satisfied to stop at second rate hotels. Why, I can remember every hotel I ever stayed in during my barnstorming days. Who could forget them?"

At 2 p. m. Mr. Hart's cameraman made a picture of the star and the crowd and then most of them went out to the baseball yard, where the Triangle actor was the guest of honor of Mayor Davis, occupying a seat in his box. Cleveland played New York and a big bunch of film folks occupied section of seats behind the mayor's box.

In the evening "Bill" appeared at the Metropolitan theater to a "turn 'em away" crowd and at midnight he was back in the old sleeper trying to coax himself into slumberland.

Cleveland Shows Close Registration Day.

Cleveland, O.—At a meeting of exhibitors of Cleveland, recently it was decided to close up the shows on "Registration Day" June 5 all day, but open after 6 p. m.

The exhibitors appointed a committee to confer with the mayor and to cooperate with him in this regard. Governor Cox had issued a proclamation calling on all places of amusement and saloons to close up that day and make it a big holiday.

Local Express Companies Issue New Order.

Cleveland, O.—Express companies of Cleveland have issued an order that express packages would have to be picked up or in the offices by 5 p. m. daily or lay over till the following day. This order went into effect May 28, but arrangements were made whereby the necessary night film shipments may be taken as usual.

However most of the exchanges of Cleveland, because of bad service lately, have been allowing plenty of time between bookings so that the exhibitors will not be disappointed.

H. A. Bandy Goes to Goldwyn.

Cleveland, O.—H. A. Bandy, manager for the Cleveland Triangle office ever since it was opened, has resigned to take charge of the new Goldwin office, which will be located in the Sincrere building. Mr. Bandy had made many friends in Cleveland since coming to that city from Indianapolis, and they are glad to see that he will remain in the Forest City.

Irving Hirsch, formerly with the World exchange in Cleveland, succeeds Mr. Bandy.

NOTES FROM TORONTO.

New Montreal Theater Opens.

Montreal Que.—The City of Montreal has a fine new theater on St. Catherine street west, known as the Holman theater. It has a seating capacity of 1,032. The new house has an attractive white stone front and is favorably located in the heart of the department store section of Montreal. A unique constructional feature is that the entrances for both the orchestra floor and the balcony have been placed side by side in the street lobby. Manager George Rotsky is showing Paramount and Universal pictures and is charging 10 and 20 cents.

Switched "Patria" to the Hippodrome.

Toronto, Ont.—The big Pathe serial, "Patria," had not completed its showing when the season at Shea's theater, Toronto, came to its scheduled close on Saturday, May 26, but Manager Jerry Shea merely switched the photo attraction to his second house here, the Shea's Hippodrome. It was found that many regular patrons of the former house went over to the Hippodrome to see the closing episodes.

Expect a Good Summer for Shows.

Toronto, Ont.—Many Toronto exhibitors are predicting a short hot season this year and, on this account, they are anticipating good business straight through to next fall. A great number of local houses did exceptional business all through May, many theaters being packed every night in the week. The attendance record at the Strand theater, for instance, was broken during the week when the attraction was "Mothers of France." Great crowds also turned out during the last week in May for "The Deemster," which, incidentally, is being released in Canada by Regal Films, Limited.

Two Fires Reported Last Week.

Toronto, Ont.—The moving picture interests of Windsor, Ontario, suffered from two different fires during the past few days. The premises of the Acme Gold Fibre Screen Company at 52 Sandwich street were destroyed by fire soon after the company had opened for business. The Windsor theater was also badly gutted by flames. In both instances announcements were made that business would be resumed as soon as the buildings could be reconstructed.

Ontario May Start Film Exchange

Establishes a Moving Picture Bureau to Educate People on Agriculture and Like Topics—Publicity for Province Also Aimed At.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard Ave., East Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO, Ont.—The Ontario Government has established a Moving Picture Bureau for the purpose of carrying on educational work for farmers, school children, facotory workers and other classes. The director in charge of the new department is S. C. Johnson, B.S.A., a noted agricultural expert, who is the author of several books on farming, gardening, etc., which have been published by the Government.

The interesting fact is contained in the announcement by Hon. Mr. McGarry, the provincial treasurer, that the Government may establish a moving picture exchange to handle the large number of films which will be made under official auspices or will be purchased from outside sources. It is intended to advertise the Province of Ontario far and wide with various pictures and it is hoped also to encourage the building of highways and other public works within the Province by the use of special films. In the industrial sections of the Province various educational and Safety First subjects will be released from the Government Bureau. Lectures on fruit-growing, grain-growing, horticulture, gardening and other subjects by government experts in rural communites will be supplemented by moving pictures.

The plan of the Government is to purchase a number of portable projection machines, made by the Pathescope of Canada, Limited, which are already finding general use in churches, schools and other institutions. These machines can be operated in any room or hall where an electrical connection can be made. A great part of the Government releases will be screened with these small machines but a portion will also be exhibited in various theaters before the usual audiences. The Ontario authorities already have a considerable quantity of film, a number of pictures of natural objects having been taken during the past year or two under government direction. Many views have been taken for the Government at the various government farms and ranches. A supply of mining, lumbering and other subjects has also been acquired while a number of industrial pictures have been taken.

The whole scheme is very unusual and considerable interest has been taken by members of the local film business in the Government's venture.

Mrs. Clair Hague Dies.

Toronto, Ont.—Hundreds of exchange men and exhibitors in Canada were deeply grieved to hear of the death, at the family residence, 322 Beech avenue, Toronto, of Mrs. Mildred Adelaide Hague, wife of Clair Hague, president of the Canadian Universal. Mr. Hague has a host of good friends throughout the Dominion and their sympathy with him in his bereavement is truly sincere.

As a mark of respect, the general offices of the Canadian Universal and the Toronto branch were closed on Tuesday, May 29, when the funeral was held to St. John's Cemetary.

The deceased was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bassett. The late Mrs. Hague was well-known in Hamilton and Brantford as well as Toronto.

Vancouver Theater Ticket Tax Made Law

War Tax Measure Accepted by Provincial Legislature After Amendments—Charges Are 1 Cent on 5 Cent Tickets, 2 Cents on 10 Cent and 3 Cents on 25 Cent Tickets.

By Chas. S. Thomson, 645 Burrard St., Vancouver, B. C.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—The War Tax measure has now passed its final reading in the provincial legislature and became a law. It is a matter of great satisfaction to all concerned that the measure has been considerably amended since its first introduction. As a result of representations by exhibitors individually and collectively the tax has been reduced to one cent on five-cent tickets, two cents on ten and fifteen-cent tickets, three cents on twenty and twenty-five-cent tickets, and higher priced tickets in proportion. Every possible attempt was made to get the figures even lower, which the majority of exhibitors still consider excessive, but in spite of all persuasion the act was passed in its present form. Nevertheless, the exhibitors have not yet given up the fight. They feel that the cheaper houses are being taxed in unfair proportion to the higher priced theaters.

It is really curious to note what extraordinary ideas some public men have in regard to the supposedly enormous profits made by the owners of moving picture theaters. One statement made by a member of parliament when the measure was before the house was that "No matter when you go into a picture theater, the majority of them are always full." The right honorable gentleman probably pays his visits to the theaters between the hours of eight and ten p. m., when as a rule most houses are full, and from that he imagines that the same condition prevails from the time of opening until the final flicker at 11 p. m. Would that it really were so! Another public man, in conversation with the writer, made some calculations to the approximate revenue of certain picture houses in Vancouver. He based his figures on the assumption that the houses in question were filled on an average of five times daily. When the gentleman was informed that the managers of those theaters would consider themselves very fortunate if they could get even two full houses per day, he stared as if wondering what particular brand of bull was being handed to him.

Going back to the war tax, the provincial parliament has adjourned until August, as that the next two months will give the exhibitors an opportunity to find out just how the act will work out. If it has the effect that some fear it will have, then strenuous measures will be adopted to bring about a readjustment to the satisfaction of those concerned.

Some Remarkable War Films.

Vancouver, B. C.—Lieutenant Dwyer, the soldier-photographer who has secured some remarkable pictures of the activities of the flying squadrons on active service in Europe, has just completed a successful week's run in New Westminster of some of his best war pictures. Lieut. Dwyer has several reels of really exciting stuff, perhaps the best of which is a reel showing a fight with a Zeppelin over London, photographed only a few months ago. At first nothing is seen but the single ray of searchlight pointing through the sky. Other searchlights join in, moving hither and thither in the blackness. At last the wandering lights strike the nose of a Zeppelin, and in a moment the whole machine is in full view, being mercilessly followed by the light rays as it moves along. Anti-aircraft guns immediately start to work, and the shells can be seen bursting all around the doomed monster. Presently the front of the giant craft, which in the picture looks about twice the size of a cigar, takes fire. Soon the whole structure is a mass of flame. It begins to fall, gaining in speed and increasing in size as it descends. Finally it disappears, a mass of flames, behind some distant buildings. Were this the only good feature in Lieut. Dwyer's collection, it would still be worth a visit. These pictures will be shown in Vancouver shortly.

Protective Assn. Refuses to Take President's Resignation.

Toronto, Ont.—President Cohen of the Ontario Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association has threatened to resign from the executive leadership of the association but his resignation has been refused absolutely. Mr. Cohen has been supervising manager of both the Globe and Rialto theaters, Toronto, but a short time ago he broadened out as the manager of a film exchange, the Peerless Film Company, 56 King Street West. On that occasion he offered his resignation from the association but the officers and members would not hear of it, although Mr. Cohen pointed out that his exchange enterprise should disqualify him.

President Cohen and his lieutenants are now engaged in investigating the proposals of the city councils in Toronto, London, and other Ontario cities to increase greatly the municipal fees for theaters. The suggested increases are out of all proportion to equity and the association hopes to be able to block the measures.

"Some of the city councellors in Toronto and London do not even know that the exhibitors pay a big Provincial tax and they want to place a heavy levy on the theaters for the sake of civic revenue," says President Cohen.

Toronto, Ont.—The Canadian Universal has introduced into the Dominion a new cartoon series known as the "Dog Cartoon Pictures."

Durham, Ont.—Manager George Willoughby of the Star theater, Durham, has closed his house for an indefinite period.

New Theater on Vine Street, Cincinnati

McMahan & Jackson Preparing to Build a 1,200 Seat House on Site of Old "Gifts" Engine Station—Other Theaters of the Firm.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 1st Nat. Bk., Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O.—According to I. W. McMahan, of McMahan & Jackson, president of a company which has been organized for that purpose, the construction of another large moving-picture theater in the downtown section is to begin shortly, on the site of the old "Gifts'" engine-house on Sixth street just west of Vine. Ever since the city decided to dispose of the property it has been rumored that it would be used for a new photoplay house, but nothing definite was known until Mr. McMahan made his announcement.

The house will cost not less than $75,000, will probably seat about 1,200 persons, and while it will front on Sixth street, with a width of fifty feet, it will have its main entrance on Vine street, the second door from the Grand opera house, giving it in this respect a location second to no theater in the city.

Architects Rapp, Zettel & Rapp, of Cincinnati, have been commissioned to prepare plans, and work will begin as soon as the old buildings on the site can be torn down. Mr. McMahan states that no name has been selected for the theater, as it has been decided to select a name through a public contest.

The house will be operated by the Greater Cincinnati Amusement Co., which was recently incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000. This amount will be increased to not less than $100,000 in order to cover the cost of the theater and its equipment. As stated above, Mr. McMahan is president, while Jerome Jackson, the other member of the firm, is treasurer, and Frank W. Huss, of Huss Bros., who control the Colonial and the Avenue, is secretary. McMahan & Jackson will manage the house.

The film has for many years been prominent in Cincinnati theatrical ventures, and has been a leader in the ownership and management of photoplay theaters ever since moving pictures became popular. The Forest theater, in Avondale and the Plaza, in Norwood, are among the principal houses now controlled by McMahan & Jackson, and the new theater will give them a splendid representation in the rich field in the central business district of the city.

League Asks to Have Proposed War Tax Reduced.

Cincinnati, O.—The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce has indorsed a petition, which has been sent to the Ohio congressional delegation, asking that the tax of a cent a foot on moving-picture film, provided for in a bill which has passed the House, be either eliminated or considerably reduced. It is pointed out in the petition that so heavy a tax on films will necessarily mean increased charges to exhibitors, which, with the proposed taxation of tickets or of gross receipts, or both, will constitute a burden too heavy to bear.

High Prices Asked for Leases of Theaters.

Cincinnati, O.—Theater rentals in the downtown district, as revealed by the leases of the Strand and Walnut, recorded last week, are at figures which explain why exhibitors are not cheerful about coming taxes, and, on the other hand, indicate the volume of business which must be handled. The Strand lease, made by the Cincinnati Theater Co., is at $25,000 a year for ten years, while the Walnut Theater Amusement Co. has leased the Walnut to the Cincinnati Walnut Theater Amusement Co., the operating company, at a monthly rental of $1,350, with a privilege of purchasing the house for $250,000. Both houses are operated under the management of I. Libson.

Corcorans Give Benefit for Regiment Band.

Cincinnati, O.—Edward and William Corcoran, owners of the Casino theater, the handsome house at Clark and Linn streets, gave a benefit performance recently for the Third Regiment band, turning over all receipts to the band boys of the up-state regiment band which is quarterd in Cincinnati. A big attendance turned out for the occasion.

Lincoln Theater Manager Trains House Staff of Girls.

Massallon, O.—Fred A. Kelly, manager of the Lincoln theater, sees a way to run things just as efficiently and at the same time get a little desirable publicity for his theater, in case his ushers and other male employes are taken for the Army. He announces that he is already listing and training girls for the various positions on his staff, including ushers, ticket sellers, door tenders and operators, and that he can at a day's notice place a complete staff of girls on duty. The plan is one which may be widely adopted when the conscription act beings to operate in earnest.

Business Notes of Local Film Trade.

Cincinnati, O.—P. C. Mooney, of the Fox Film, visited the Cincinnati office a few days ago, talking things over with Manager Joe Kaliski and going over the local situation.

Cincinnati, O. — "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," running with conspicuous success at the Grand opera house, has taken high rank as an educational picture, and the crowds which have seen it have contained hundreds of school children. At one performance several hundred orphans from the various institutions in the city witnessed the exhibition as guests of the Women's City Club, under the supervision of the members of the Motion Picture Committee, which has done excellent work on behalf of clean pictures.

Cincinnati, O.—Manager W. S. Wessling, of the Pathe exchange in Cincinnati, entertained a large number of local and out-of-town exhibitors, as well as exchange men and members of the press, at a private showing of the new Pathe feature, "The Vicar of Wakefield," a film dramatization of the Goldsmith classic featuring Frederick Warde, the famous Shakespearian actor. The picture was shown at the Orpheum, Saturday morning, and the exhibitors who saw it were enthusiastic over its merit, seeing readily its value in appealing to those who care for the best in pictures.

Reels Tagged with Liberty Bond Trailers.

Cincinnati, O.—Without waiting for assistance from the Washington or New York headquarters of the publicity committee working for the success of the Liberty Loan, Cincinnati exhibitors are already running with all pictures a trailer bearing this message: "Help Win the War—By a Liberty Bond." The Motion Picture and Projecting Machines Operators' Local Union of Cincinnati has assured the exhibitors and the financiers pushing the loan that these trailers will be kept running by all union operators until July 5.

Will Build Handsome Chattanooga Theater

Mutual Amusement Co. Has Plans for New 1,000 Seat Theater—Will Be Ready Early in September—Cost Estimated at $35,000.

By J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN. — The Mutual Amusement Company, Inc., of this city, operators of the Grand, Lincoln and Queen theaters, have under process of construction a magnificent new 1,000 capacity theater, which will be ready for operation about September 1. Everything in connection with its construction will be of the latest type, and the building will comprise the latest equipment and furnishings, coupled with the most modern ventilating and heating systems, which will insure the complete comfort of its patrons the year round. Plans were drawn by Lambert & Parks, local architects, and work on the new structure is progressing nicely.

The building is located on a tract of ground 55x150 feet, owned by the company. Both moving pictures and vaudeville will be shown at the new house, which will be known as the Bijou theater. Among the architectural details are included a stage 33x28 feet, an improved heating system, typhoon cooling system of ventilation, ladies' and gentlemens' dressing rooms, smoking rooms, etc. A balcony will be installed, as well as upper and lower boxes, and the estimated cost of the project, covering both building and property, is placed at $35,000. Admission prices will be balcony 10 cents, orchestra 15 cents and boxes 25 cents.

The personnel of the Mutual Amusement Company is as follows: Sam E. Reevin, president; M. H. Silverman, secretary and treasurer; Abe Slabosky, vice-president.

Chattanooga Film Business Improves.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—In line with the general sentiment expressed by moving picture men over the state of Tennessee comes advice from Arthur S. Dickinson, manager of the Chattanooga office of Southern Metro, to the effect that business conditions are steadily picking up in that section. Mr. Dickinson recently had the following to say:

"Things have been rather quiet down here lately, due to the fact that a good many of our exhibitors are holding back on improvements and special bookings waiting to see what effect the war will have on the public. There have been a good many exhibitors in our office this week, and it seems as though they now realize that their business is going to continue in much the same way as before, so they are all feeling better and taking more heart in their business. The amusement business in this city is improving right along, and will get even better as the soldiers arrive. There will be at least 85,000 here for training, and this will be a big thing for the moving picture interests."

Bushman and Bayne Please Nashville.

Nashville, Tenn.—Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne appeared in person for the first time in Nashville on Tuesday, May 29, at the Ryman Auditorium, under auspices of the local chapter of the American Red Cross. Many thousand people attended the two performances, and shook hands with the popular stars, who were accompanied to Nashville by Miss Helen Dunbar, also of the same company.

Through the efforts of Carson Bradford, manager of the Strand theater, they were persuaded to visit this city. Mr. Bushman and Mr. Bradford are close friends, having previously been allied in theatricals some years ago. In a farewell handshake with the Moving Picture World man Bushman said, "The World is without doubt the best paper we have in the field."

Knickerbocker Putting on Good Shows.

Nashville, Tenn.—Manager W. H. Wassman has been offering local patrons some exceptionally strong features in the recent past, including "Broadway Jones," with Geo. M. Cohan; "Panthea," starring Norma Talmadge; "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," etc. Some of the new bookings will include Lois Weber's "Idle Wives," the new Douglas Fairbanks Artcraft releases, and many other equally high class productions. Mr. Wassman is sparing no expense in bringing the best features to the Knickerbocker, and is being daily rewarded with good crowds.

"Womanhood" Endorsed by D. A. R.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—"Womanhood" received the hearty endorsement of the local chapter D. A. R. during its recent run at the Lyric theater, through the president-general Mrs. William Cummings Storey, who issued many letters to members of the organization over which she presides, urging them by all means to see this picture. The picture shows woman's part in the war, and has been endorsed by the United States Government.

Summer Pictures at Chilhowie Park.

Knoxville, Tenn. — Effective Monday, May 21, the summer moving picture and vaudeville performances were begun at Chilhowie Park, Knoxville's chief summer amusement center. This feature of the summer park amusements is under the direction of Messrs. Will and John Vick, who promise that the public will see some high-class films this summer.

Tennessee Film News Topics.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Majestic No. 2 ran the feature, "Enlighten Thy Daughter," for four days at advanced prices, admission being 25 cents during the engagement.

Nashville, Tenn.—A corps of painters and decorators have been busy at the Fifth Avenue theater putting on fresh touches of interior painting.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Karl D. Hawk, traveling representative of the Southern Metro, is spending a few days at his beautiful home on Signal mountain, and is busy putting in a few rows of potatoes and other valuable gems in the ground. He will hit the road again shortly.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—A. J. Simms, manager of the Princess theater at Lawrenceburg, recently stopped over in Chattanooga on his honeymoon, where he received many congratulations at the hands of fellow exhibitors and exchangemen.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Geo. N. Shorey, leading exhibitor of Knoxville, put in last Sunday in this city.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Strand has booked "Womanhood" for an extended engagement. This film has proved a big drawing card in other Tennessee cities.

FROM NEW ORLEANS.

Herman Fichtenberg Finishes Transfer of His Local Theaters.

New Orleans, La.—Herman Fichtenberg, chairman of the board of directors of the Paralta Plays corporation, came to New Orleans on May 14 and has been having a busy time since his arrival. Perhaps the chief reason for Mr. Fichtenberg's visit at this time was the transfer of the Fichtenberg Amusement Syndicate's theaters to the Saenger Amusement Company, which was accomplished a few weeks ago. The Saengers take over all of the Fichtenberg houses in the South, chief among which are the ones at Memphis, Tenn., Jacksonville, Fla., and Houston, Texas, and, of course, the Globe, the Plaza, Dreamworld, Picto and Alamo in New Orleans.

Since the transfer, the Globe has been used as the home of the first run Triangle pictures and the Plaza has been showing the Greater Vitagraph productions. This arrangement is subject to change, however.

Insurance Rates in Kentucky Revised

Exhibitors in Small Towns Have to Pay Higher Rates than Formerly—Managers Are Beginning to Count Tornado Insurance a Necessity.

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Kentucky exhibitors are getting a good many lessons in insurance matters this spring. For one thing, what had been a long deadlock between the state authorities and the insurance companies operating in the state, has been settled and the members of the moving picture fraternity are both benefitting and suffering as a result, along with all of the other business houses of the state. Especially in the smaller towns and communities have the rates been advanced, while the fire insurance forces are now so organized that inspections are becoming more careful and hazards of any kind invariably mean that the assured is going to submit to an increase in his rate.

In the small towns, of the sixth class, which are without fire protection, rates have been advanced as much as 20 per cent. on a flat schedule, while in the larger towns the exhibitor is penalized for things that make the danger of fire greater. An instance of how the proposition is being handled so as to reduce the danger of fire, however, is reported from Providence, Ky. Here the property owners in the central part of the city, which went to considerable expense to install fire fighting apparatus, complained that their rates had not been reduced. The State Insurance Board sent engineers to the place to receive the complaints with the result that the hazards responsible for individual high rates were reduced. The motion picture theater exhibitor, for instance, obtained a lower rate when he had his electric light wiring overhauled and when he discarded a gasoline fed pop corn machine which he had been using.

In addition to the fire hazard the moving picture exhibitors, like all owners of property, are taking a greater and greater interest in tornado insurance. This is not costly and, with object lessons like a recent tornado in Southern Indiana and more recent tornadoes in Western Kentucky and along the Mississippi Valley, tornado insurance is coming to be regarded as a very desirable thing to have.

Exhibitors Wire Congressmen Against New Tax.

Louisville, Ky.—In an effort to block the ten per cent. war tax on moving picture theater receipts, L. J. Dittmar, of the Majestic Amusement Co., of Louisville, who is president of the Kentucky Moving Picture Exhibitors' League, sent out telegrams to members and other exhibitors all over the state, asking these exhibitors to at once wire all Kentucky members of congress , and ask them to use their best efforts in defeating the proposed tax. The Louisville exhibitors all wired at once, and reports show that a large number of exhibitors throughout the state have sent in their protests. If anything is to be done in this connection it must be done at once as there is not time to loose. Mr. Dittmar was at Jacksonville when the matter first came to his attention, but got busy the moment he returned to Louisville.

Slides Will Help Liberty Loan Sales.

Louisville, Ky.—The Louisville Committee on the Liberty Loan has made arrangements with the moving picture theaters whereby slides are being shown in all the theaters in an effort to increase sales of such bonds. In addition the local committee is furnishing speakers, who appear on the stage betwen films and deliver strong talks on the subject. So far the local sales have been extremely gratifying, but a large portion of the $5,000,000 issue, arranged for Louisville to handle, is yet to be sold. The steady hammering of the theaters and newspapers should aid considerably in selling the allotment.

Higher Prices for Seats in Louisvillle.

Louisville, Ky.—The Strand theater reported excellent business in connection with its showing of "Broadway Jones," starring George M. Cohan, who has always been a big stage favorite in Louisville. Arrangements were made whereby Hugo Taustine, a local speaker, delivered Cohan's famous theme "Life's A Funny Proposition After All." The theater held its first floor at twenty cents for this show, and incidentally has been getting twenty cents for several months. In fact most of the leading downtown theaters are now getting fifteen cents or more right along. Following "Broadway Jones," the Strand showed "Joan The Woman," and arranged with Gerald Gardiner, basso of Louisville, to sing in a French Costume of the fifteenth century. Mr. Gardner sang at the theater a few weeks ago during the showing of "The Garden of Allah," and made a big hit.

Airdome's Season Opens With Rain.

Louisville, Ky.—The airdome season has been considerably delayed this season by bad weather, and such open air theaters as have opened have been operating spasmodically. The Baxter theater on May 24 transferred its shows from the closed house to the open air lot directly across the street. However, after about two days of fair weather heavy rains and cold weather drove the management back to shelter. The Preston theater has also been jumping from the open air back to its closed house.

Business Items and Personal Notes.

Louisville, Ky.—A. C. Farrell, manager of the Central Film Service, Louisville branch of the Universal Co., has been fairly busy for the past two weeks in making short jumps to a number of the cities in Central Kentucky, taking Lexington, Frankfort, Versailles and other points.

Louisville, Ky.—Paul Lewis, formerly with the New York Mutual office; the Indianapolis Universal; and Cincinnati Fox; is now permanently located in Louisville with the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Louisville, Ky.—Rowland Clark manager of the Aristo theater, Lebanon, Ky., was a recent visitor in Louisville. Mr. Clark has been managing the Aristo for a number of years, and is one of the pioneer exhibitors of the state. He reports a good outlook in the Lebanon district, crops and stock being in fine shape, and bringing good prices.

Louisville, Ky.—C. F. Van Wart, manager of the Louisville, Ky., Mutual office, is back from a very successful booki trip through the state.

Louisville, Ky.—The film "Civilization," handled by Coons & Davis, composed of C. D. Coons and D. P. Davis, has been tied up in Magistrate Ben Schulman's court. About $200 is due for advertising, musicians' services, sign writing, etc., and box office receipts were attached in one of the local theaters. Henry W. Sanders will represent the defendants.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the paper you need.

Manslaughter Charges Follow Colfax Fire

Indianapolis Tragedy Results in Serious Charges Against Men Supposed to Be Responsible for Careless Storage of Film in Tenement.

By Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Five indictments charging four persons and two corporations with various offenses, including the charge of manslaughter, were returned by the Marion County Grand Jury this week following its investigation of the Colfax building fire—believed to have resulted from a quantity of motion picture films stored in the basement—in which six persons were burned to death on April 19. The investigation was in charge of Alvah J. Rucker, prosecuting attorney.

The names of the persons indicted for manslaughter are: Louis Sereinsky, president of the Oxon Chemical Company; William Churchman, secretary and treasurer of the company; Virley Rudd, treasurer of the Indiana Life Insurance Co.

Indicted for violation of the housing law: Indiana National Life Insurance Company, Oxon Chemical Company, Virley R. Rudd, Louis R. Sereinsky, William Churchman.

Indicted for neglect and misfeasance in office: John Monoghan, city cellar inspector.

Indicted for failure to obtain a permit for conversion of the building into a tenement house: Indiana National Life Insurance Company. There were other indictments.

Louis Sereinsky, William F. Churchman and Virley R. Rudd are charged with having caused the death of Dr. Martha E. Keller, one of the victims of the fire, through their violation of the housing law, in that the building in which she lived and was burned to death was used and permitted to be used as a place for the storage of articles detrimental to the life and health of the occupants, namely, quantities of old motion picture films and the like.

The indictment of the three men is contained in four counts. The first has to do with the alleged violation of the building code, with reference to the storage of inflammable materials; the second with such alleged storage with reference to the safety of the occupants; the third with the alleged nuisance of the storage, and the fourth regards the storing of a nitro explosive in excess of 100 pounds within the limits of municipality.

Fire, which broke out in the storage and cleansing rooms of the chemical company in the basement, cost six lives on the night of April 19. One entire family was wiped out and a number of persons, including a fireman, were injured. It was a spectacular fire and attracted thousands of onlookers, as it occurred early in the evening.

Provisions of the New Ordinance.

The fatal fire led to immediate preparation of a city ordinance providing for more stringent regulations governing the storage and handling of motion picture films. Jacob H. Hilkene, city building commissioner, has completed a tentative draft of the ordinance and will submit it before the council soon. The ordinance, it is understood, will be submitted as an amendment to the present building code.

It contains recommendation that were made by W. I. Stone, engineer for the Indiana Inspection Bureau; Paul T. Sullivan, assistant state fire marshall, and Charles M. Biscay, of New York, chairman of the executive committee of the Fire Prevention Regulation and Insurance Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. Local film men also were consulted regarding the measure.

Among the provisions of the new ordinance is one stating that every room in which film is manufactured, kept, handled or stored shall be of fireproof construction, and it says plainly that no films shall be handled in any building used as a tenement house, residence, lodge hall, hotel or any other public or semi-public purpose. The ordinance, as it now stands, would also prohibit picture theaters from having more than four reels of film in the operating booth at one time.

Another provision, pertaining to exchanges, would provide for the installation of a sprinkler system in the fire vaults. Each studio, laboratory or exchange would be required to appoint a safety inspector, who must be familiar with the rules and requirements and with all other laws and ordinances. It would be the duty of the inspector to instruct employees as to the handling of films and to see to it that the rules and laws are observed. These and other provisions which the ordinance will contain will, in the long run, it is believed by officials, lead to a reduction in prevailing fire insurance rates.

Alhambra and Lyric Are Keeping Manager Booth Busy.

Indianapolis, Ind.—One of the busiest men in Indianapolis these days is Edwin Booth, genial manager of the Alhambra theater.

Messrs. Barton and Olsen, owners of a whole string of theaters in this city, plan to close down the Alhambra on June 3 for the summer while they enlarge it and make it, as they say, one of the best equipped and most comfortable motion picture houses in this part of the country. Now Mr. Booth is ordinarily manager of that one house, and that keeps him pretty busy, but since the Lyric theater opened last Sunday with motion pictures he has also had the care of that house on his shoulders.

Now he spends his time trotting back and forth between the two places seeing that all goes well and helping to count the nickels and dimes as they roll in.

Indianapolis Postpones Raising License Fee

Attorney C. C. Pettijohn and Exhibitors of Indiana League Win Delay in the Matter of Proposed High License for Ten Cents Shows.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Action on the proposed city ordinance, that would compel all motion picture theaters charging more than 10 cents admission to pay an annual license tax of $100, has been postponed for two weeks. This action was taken after a number of exhibitors, with Charles C. Pettijohn, attorney for the Indiana Exhibitors' League, as their spokesman, appeared at a public hearing in the council chamber and protested against the passage of the measure.

Action also was postponed on an ordinance providing that all theaters equipped with stages would be compelled to employ a fire guard and stage firemen as a safeguard to the public. The theater men, it is understood, will suggest that some system similar to the one in vogue in Philadelphia be installed. By the Philadelphia system two employees of each theater are designated by the fire chief to make out daily reports as to the number of water barrels, hose, water buckets and other conditions. The majority of the council, it is said, would be willing to permit two stage hands in each theater to act as fireguards and firemen to work under the direction of the chief of the fire department.

The motion picture men made a decided impression with their arguments against the license ordinance at the public hearing, and it appears now that the measure will no doubt be defeated. Mayor Bell, it is said, is opposed to the ordinance, and some of the councilmen who at first were in favor of it are also said to have joined the opposition. However, it is likely that the motion picture men, if they believe the measure will be passed, will submit a schedule of license charges they would be willing to pay, in an effort to effect a compromise.

Indianapolis Shows Feel No War Slump

Plenty of Patrons for Downtown Theaters—Presence of Officers' Training Camp at Nearby Fort Adds to Week-End Show Crowds.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Conditions resulting from the war have so far had no bad effect on the motion picture business in this city. In fact, if the week-end crowds that swarm into the downtown photoplay houses may be taken as a criterion, the war has had just the opposite effect, and theater managers do not look for any financial slump in the near future.

Everybody seems to have plenty of money to spend for amusements, and as soon as Indianapolis receives its share of the government's dollars to be spent for munitions and other war requirements, it is probable that the local public will have additional pin money.

Just now 5,000 embryo soldiers are in training at the United States army officers reserve camp at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, a few miles northeast of Indianapolis, and the majority of these men are ardent motion picture fans. At least that is the way it appears to the casual observer, judging from the amount of khaki-clad patrons filing in and out of the downtown motion picture houses during the week ends. For the last few weeks—in fact, ever since the training camp has opened—the downtown theaters on Saturdays and Sundays have hardly been able to accommodate the crowds.

The reason for this is probably explained by the fact that the commanding officers at the camp have put the ban on the use of intoxicating liquor while the men are on leave. Now instead of lounging around saloons, poolrooms and the like, the men are spending their time in the city taking in the motion picture shows and indulging in other kinds of wholesome amusement. Within the next few weeks about 25,000 additional men will be brought to the camp, all of which probably will mean another increase in attendance records at the local picture houses.

"Family Night" Pleases Omaha.

OMAHA, NEB.—"Family Night" at local photoplay houses were received with delight. These were under the direction of the educational department of the Omaha Woman's club. The Lathrop, Appollo and Boulevard theaters have been selected for the initial Friday night performances.

Nebraska Theater Changes.

Omaha, Neb.—Oscar Rohlff re-opened on May 30 the Rohlff theater which had been closed for several weeks. He plans to use a program consisting of a feature, educational film and a comedy. Children's matinees are contemplated for this summer.

Beatrice, Neb.—The two moving picture theaters here are now under the control of W. H. Petersen.

North Dakota Women Protest Missuse of National Music.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Protest was made to the city council by the Women's Relief Corps against theaters here playing the national music as exit numbers. The ordinance committee of the council got busy with the theater managers who announced they would refrain from using the music in this manner.

Theaters and Managers in the Dakotas.

Fargo, N. D.—The Strand theater has been re-opened under the management of Jean McCarthy of McCarthy Brothers who has been in charge of the Isis theater Brookings, S. D.—F. M. Whitmore has taken over the Pleasant Hour theater from Murphy & Johnson.

Valley City, N. D.—The Rex theater is now under the management of C. A. Robinson.

Marion, S. D.—Staley & Behrendt, have sold their lease on the Marion Opera House and their moving picture equipment to Cosy Cremer and W. F. Jammer.

Wisconsin Theater Items

La Crosse Managers Make Price Increase.

LA CROSSE, WIS.—Local exhibitors have made announcements that in order to continue operation it has been necessary to increase prices to moving picture theaters to fifteen cents for adults and ten cents for children. The houses cooperating in this action were the American Amusement company operating the Casino and Strand, Frank H. Koppelberger of the Majestic and Harry H. Burford of the Bijou.

Madison Wants Restriction Lifted.

Madison, Wis.—Madison may have an ordinance which would permit the operation of moving pictures in residence districts. This step may be taken as the result of a fight started by officers of the First Christian church against a theater building proposed on East Mifflin street.

Theater Notes from Wisconsin.

Jefferson, Wis.—Mrs. Lizette Fischer has sold the Lyric theater to M. G. Dillenbach who for seven years was an exhibitor at Reedsburg.

Plymouth, Wis.—"Davy Crocket" was shown at the Princess theater for the benefit of Company C.

Hudson, Wis.—Desmond & Nickleby have sold the theater Delight to C. Michelson.

IN DETROIT.

Duplex Closed by Sheriff.

Detroit, Mich.—The Duplex theater, Detroit, was closed by sheriffs and constables on May 26th, and it is not likely to reopen for sometime owing to the legal entanglement over the $37,000 worth of creditors claims. The Duplex was the first two-auditorium playhouse in the country. Its location is good, but its management from the start has not been of the best.

W. S. Hart Stops Over.

Detroit, Mich.—W. S. Hart, the Triangle "Bad Man" visited Detroit, Saturday May 26th for a few hours. His train did not arrive until 10:30 p. m. He went direct to the Orpheum theater (which controls the first run Triangle franchise here) and he was applauded for three minutes according to watch count. He gave a short address, and was then hustled to the Hotel Statler where a reception and dinner ensued.

Ben Wilson Expected in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich.—Detroit will soon get a visit from another movie star—Ben Wilson, who is expected to be here sometime within the next sixty days.

Jackson Bill Passes Lower Illinois House

New Race Prejudice Measure Is Approved by State Assembly—Would Prohibit Such Motion Pictures as "The Birth of a Nation."

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The Jackson bill, which would bar such pictures as the "Birth of a Nation," has been passed by the lower house of the Illinois State Legislature. It is still to be approved by the senate. This bill differs from the one vetoed by Governor Lowden in that the line "tending to race hatred" has been eliminated.

Free Films in East St. Louis Parks.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Proposals to give free moving pictures in parks in East St. Louis this summer have been favorably considered by the Park Board. Ed. Batts, a professional promoter, proposes to show educational and comic films at Jones Park, Emerson Park, Franklin Park, Virginia Park and Edgemont from one to three times a week. These shows will be given free, the project to be financed by advertising slides.

New Incorporations in Illinois.

Springfield, Ill.—Secretary of State Louis I. Emmerson has issued certificates of incorporation to the following:

The Elmhurst Amusement Company, Elmhurst, capital $2,500; incorporators, Frank Meyer, H. H. Johnson, W. A. Robbins.

Roseville Amusement Club, Roseville; incorporators, F. M. Watson, F. C. Johnson, M. C. Sparr.

MICHIGAN NEWS NOTES.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

Vogel Theater Will Commemorate Dead Exhibitor.

CALUMET, MICH.—A tribute to the memory of the late John C. Vogel, who lost his life in the fire which destroyed the Crown theater, will take the form of a new moving picture house to be known as the Vogel theater. It will be owned by M. A. Vogel and will be under the management of Delbert Laity, who for years was associated with the late Mr. Vogel. The new house is expected to be opened about the middle of July. Announcement is made that it is one of the purposes to adhere to the high standard maintained by John C. Vogel.

A Beautiful New Theater for Hancock.

Hancock, Mich.—A purpose to provide Hancock with one of the handsomest moving picture theaters in the Upper Peninsula is revealed with the plans drawn for the new Savoy theater, which is to be erected by Napoleon and Frank Ongie. Specifications call for a pressed brick with terra cotta trimmings, structure 45 x 120 feet, seating 900 persons and costing about $30,000. The front and 20 feet of both sides will be trimmed with a dark-colored pressed brick and green terra cotta. Tile and marble will be used extensively in the lobby. A distinctive feature will be that on the sides of the auditorium there will be eight imitation fire places for the purpose of concealing radiators. The interior woodwork is to be of birch with a mahogany finish. The musical part of the program will be provided for by the installation of a costly pipe organ.

Artcraft Moves to Paramount Building.

DETROIT, MICH.—James Steele, who is now looking after the exchanges in the middle west for Paramount, spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Detroit conferring with Howard A. Bauer, Artcraft manager, and H. A. Ross, manager for Paramount.

On May 26th the Artcraft exchange in Detroit moved to the Paramount building, 278 East Jefferson avenue. Both Artcraft and Paramount exchanges in Detroit are now under one roof. In addition to Michigan, these exchanges are handling about 16 counties in Northern Ohio and about six in Indiana.

World Film Sticks to Program System.

Detroit, Mich.—Every male employee of the Detroit office of the World Film has taken out a Liberty Bond, the largest being for one thousand dollars by Harry Angell, traveling representative.

Robert A. Cotton, Detroit manager for the World, has become a member of the Detroit Board of Commerce.

Regardless of what other companies may be doing on the open booking policy, Mr. Cotton says his instructions from Mr. Brady have been to stick ironclad to the program system, which seems to be giving splendid satisfaction to exhibitors.

Manager Weeks Begins Business Drive.

Detroit, Mich.—George W. Weeks, who bought the Bluebird franchise in Michigan and Northern Ohio, is now settled at his new exchange offices, 75 Broadway, Detroit. George is very much elated over the new deal and will make a tremendous drive for business after the first of the month.

Maxine Theater for Sale.

Detroit, Mich.—Harry Goseline, of the Maxine theater, Port Huron, writes the World office that he is going to retire from the business "having made his stake after two years." He is asking $8,000 for his theater, which is making, it is claimed, a weekly profit of from $150 to $200.

Nathan Linder Takes Duchess Theater.

Detroit, Mich.—Nathan Linder is the new proprietor of the Duchess theater, 343 Grand River avenue, Detroit, R. V. Moulton, well-known Detroit operator, is manager. The house has been redecorated and improved and two new Simplex projectors installed.

D. H. Mitchell Joins State Film Co.

At the Twin City Releasing Exchanges.

Minneapolis, Minn.—And the changes are still rolling in. Here's the latest. C. E. Davies, formerly of the American Maid, Triangle and Lochren exchanges, has resigned as assistant manager of the Saxe Bros. exchange and joined the sales force of the Minnesota Metro service.

And here's another. Charles John Ver Halen (born Jefferson, Wis.) has resigned as asistant manager and publicity manager and informer extraordinary of the Paramount exchange and Monday, May 21, became advertising manager of "Motography."

Jess Fred Cubberly, former Universal and Zenith exchange manager, has succeeded Mr. Ver Halen. Mr. Cubberly is well known in the Northwest and Mr. Ver Halen, being somewhat acquainted around Chicago, both men seem in line for good futures.

Manager William K. Howard of the Greater Vitagraph exchange has left on a short business trip through South Dakota. C. L. Booth is utilizing Mr. Howard's desk during his sojourn through the Black Hills.

Manager C. L. Peavey of the Paramount exchange was forced to refuse a contract for features from the St. Paul Cozy theater last week because he did not possess enough prints to supply one more theater than had already contracted. The arrival of eleven Paramount feature prints last week may relieve Mr. Peavey of the worry that some print might be burned up accidentally. You can't convince Mr. Peavey that the film business is going to the dogs.

Charles Stombaugh has been made manager of the Standard Film exchange here. The Standard will release Art Drama productions in this territory and will have its headquarters at 406 Film Exchange building, Minneapolis.

Interesting Notes from the Exchanges.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Manager Stombaugh of the Art Dramas exchange has received the first print to be released from the new office entitled "Whoso Taketh a Wife."

William A. Lochren of the Lochren Film Service has returned from a business trip to Chicago and also a short fishing trip to several lakes around Minneapolis. Mr. Lochren says he saw some bass that must have weighed about 45 pounds but he was afraid to try and land any of 'em with the skinney line he was fishing with. He bought two bull heads to make a showing at the office and he did catch a cold.

Malcom William formerly connected with the World exchange here but recently with the Bluebird office at Cincinnati has joined the Minneapolis Bluebird exchange and he is now flying around Southern Minnesota.

Louis Maas, Pathe roadman, is traveling through the Dakotas in his Ford Gold Rooster chariot. Last reports are to the effect that Maas is going some.

T. K. Olson, Mutual roadman, has gone out on a tour through Southern Minnesota.

Manager Sam D. Freedman of the Premier exchange has announced that the statement that Harry Heirsteiner of Des Moines was distributing "The Whirl of Life" through Iowa is incorrect. The rights for Iowa as well as Nebraska, Minnesota and the Dakotas are controlled only by the local Premier exchange according to Mr. Freedman.

Manager Mannie Gottlieb of the Favorite exchange will make his first trip into the Dakotas in four years May 28 returning in time to register on June 5.

Manager Howard of the Greater Vitagraph exchange has returned from a visit to Dakota exhibitors and reports that after a short lull in the latters' business, things are brightening up and indications are that the summer's business will exceed expectations.

Lee Chandler has been added to the road staff of the American Maid exchange. Mr. Chandler, recently married (huh-huh) was formerly connected with the Universal and Bluebird exchanges, Minneapolis.

Twin City Theaters Feel Pinch of Times

Several Local Houses Are Beginning to Look to Their Overhead—Dropping Employes—Old Films and Open Booking—Fear Hot Summer.

By John L. Johnston, 704 Film Exchange Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—With the summer season coming on and business beginning to feel some effects of the war declaration exhibitors of the Twin Cities are beginning to give their "overhead" considerable more consideration. In some theaters employees have been dropped to cut down expenses, other managers have cut down their advertising and some have resorted to running films a second time or booking old releases.

Although but few have really investigated, the fact remains that there are not a dozen large theaters in the Twin Cities that have found very much on the profit sheet at the end of the last few months and despite the fact that one finds almost all of the downtown houses in Minneapolis and St. Paul crowded of an evening the ever increasing overhead has made capacity houses a necessity in order to keep "above water."

Some exhibitors claim that by running one or two programs only they can make a little money, but a majority of the Twin Cities' largest houses are operating on the open booking plan. In the past few months the Strand, in Minneapolis, has given up its program policy. The Lyric has apparently also passed up its program and the New Garrick for sometime has run Artcraft, Selznick and Vitagraph productions occasionally. The Strand in St. Paul gave up the program it was using to the Starland recently and has been booking state rights features and Selznick and Artcraft productions for week runs.

There are not half as many "program" houses in the Twin Cities today as there were last year and yet it is not apparent that the "open booking" houses are any more successful. Although the film business appears as permanent as electric lights a "hot" summer will bring about the closing of a good number of theaters hereabouts and exhibitors are beginning to wonder if some of the larger theaters will not be among them.

Ralph E. Bradford Merely Smiled.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Rumors have been going the rounds of film circles here to the effect that Ralph E. Bradford of the Saxe exchange is soon to be made manager of the Goldwyn exchange to be opened here shortly. Mr. Bradford has refused to confirm or deny the report but he has smiled. If only the meaning of a smile could be determined The World might be able at this time to enlighten a few exhibitors but Mr. Bradford's smile is a little too difficult for us.

Strand's First Children's Matinee Fills House.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Manager James A. Keough of the Strand has begun a series of weekly children's matinees on Saturday mornings. A capacity house of kiddies turned out to see the initial special show on Saturday, May 26, when Mary Pickford's "Romance of the Redwoods" was the offering.

Local Picture and Program Notes.

St. Paul, Minn.—Due to lavish advertising campaign begun three weeks in advance "Her Condoned Sin" a Biograph-Griffith production went over big at the Strand here the week of May 20. The feature is controlled by the Friedman Film Corp., Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Ruben & Finkelstein have contracted for Universal pictures for their New Palace theaters of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The New Garrick theater here has booked Greater Vitagraph productions in addition to its Paramount features, for the near future.

A Bear Story.

Minneapolis, Minn.—This may sound something of a bear story, but Walter S. Baldwin, the serious-looking g. m. for James V. Bryson's "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" department, says it's positively correct. While automobiling about Duluth, Minn., recently, previous to a showing of the sub-sea film at the Lyceum theater, Mr. Baldwin came near running over two bear cubs on a country road. With some difficulty Mr. Baldwin got both bruins into the car (name deleted by censor) and gave them a joy ride to the Lyceum where they were used as lobby displays. Bear this in mind—bears make good lobby advertising.

Sprague Green Goes Back to Chicago.

St. Paul, Minn.—Sprague Green has resigned as manager of Gilosky's Rex theater here and returned to Chicago, from whence he came last July. Mr. Green made no announcement of his future plans, but it is thought probably he will enter the exchange arm of the industry.

Theater Hits in the Twin Cities.

St. Paul, Minn.—Manager Granstrom of the Strand began a week's showing of "Her Condoned Sin," a Biograph-Griffith production which was lavishly advertised hereabouts for three weeks in advance to capacity business.

Mineapolis, Minn.—"The Easiest Way" proved an easy way to draw crowds to the Strand here the week of May 13. Capacity crowds witnessed every evening showing of Clara Kimball Young's latest Selznick release. Mary Pickford in "Romance of the Redwoods" preceded "The Easiest Way."

St. Paul, Minn.—"The Submarine Eye," a Williamson feature, opened a week's run at the Metropolitan theater here May 20 to a fair business. The feature showed at the Metropolitan, Minneapolis, previous to opening here.

Louis Blumberg Takes Rialto Managership.

St. Paul, Minn.—Louis J. Blumberg, Jr., former manager of the Princess and Crown theaters, Minneapolis, has taken over the management of the Rialto theater, Selby avenue, here. The first day on the new job put Mr. Blumberg in a hot box, for a fire next door caused him to use real strategy in getting his house cleared without a panic.

Geo. R. Comer Traveling on Progress Features.

Duluth, Minn.—George R. Comer, former Zenith and Elliott-Sherman exchange roadman, has gone out on the road with "Are Pasions Inherited?" a feature controlled throughout the Northwest by the Progress Feature Film Co. here. Mr. Comer is now travelling through Wisconsin.

Pretty Good for E. C. Coffin.

Manson, Iowa.—E. C. Coffin, proprietor of the Cee Bee theater, has an unusual record for an exhibitor. Besides developing his house into one of the best small theaters in Iowa, Mr. Coffin has written every Ham and Bud scenario for the Kalem Co. and thirty-two Keystone comedies.

New 1,600 Seat House at La Crosse.

La Crosse, Wis.—J. A. Koppelberger of this city is erecting a new 1,600 seat theater here and expects to open it to the public about November 1.

Pearce Interests Take Lafayette Theater

Big Motion Picture House on Uptown Side of Canal Street Will Have Shows at Ten Cents—Program Is to Include Artcraft.

By N. E. Thatcher, 3801 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—A deal which was put through without any fuss and feathers on Saturday, May 19, will, without a doubt, have a great influence on the motion picture map of New Orleans. On Saturday the Josiah Pearce & Sons Company secured control of the Lafayette theater for a long term, and it is the intention to inaugurate in the new acquisition a program of the best pictures on the market at popular prices—which in New Orleans are 10 cents. The Lafayette has been operated by the Saenger company, and has been giving motion pictures that are far above the ordinary. In addition, an orchestra of twenty-five expert musicians under the direction of Don Philippini, the noted leader, "played the picture" and rendered appropriate selections during the intermissions. The admission price was twenty cents.

The acquisition of the Lafayette theater by Pearce gives each one of the big exhibiting interests in this city a leading house off of Canal street and each one of these houses is modern in every particular. The Lafayette is a cosy theater with a seating capacity of about 2,000. Among the attractions to be shown there are the Artcraft pictures. The Strand will be another house off Canal street, under the control of the aggressive Saenger Amusement Company. These two houses are on the "uptown" side of the city and have a large population from which to draw.

Then there is the Triangle theater on the "downtown" side of the city that has been made exceedingly popular under the management of Ernst Boehringer. Now it is liberally patronized by the best citizens of the city. It is located on Iberville street, one block from Canal. Just a block away is the new Diamond theater, which has sprung into instant popularity, and the strange thing about it, it has not affected the business of the Triangle. The best class of people have learned to patronize these theaters, about which there were dire predictions of failure when they were opened. On Canal street only the antiquated "store theaters" remain. They will always attract a large transient patronage, but as factors in the motion picture game of the day, their glories have departed.

New Orleans F. I. L. M. Club's New Head

President Allan S. Moritz, as Executive of Local Exchange Organization, Has Respect of Both the Exhibitors and the Distributors.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Since the formation of the New Orleans F. I. L. M. club the various exchange managers who compose the membership have been doing some effective work. So far it appears that the club is living up to the purposes for which it was organized, strictly. It has suffered in a measure by the frequent changes of exchange managers by the home offices. First T. O. Tuttle, the aggressive president of the club, was compelled to resign because of a contemplated removal to another city, and his successor, H. Owens, was transferred to Dallas, Texas, necessitating another election. Allan S. Moritz, of the Fox Film exchange, was elected to take his place.

Allan S. Moritz.

President Moritz came to the Fox exchange directly from New York and has taken good care of the Fox interests since his arrival. He makes a good presiding officer and has the loyal support of the members of the club. That the administration of the affairs of the club are strictly impartial is evidenced by two recent cases. In one of them an exhibitor was accused of "kiting" films. He had two theaters and rushed films from one to the other on a bicycle while only paying rental for use of the service in one theater. He was glad to settle before the club got through with him. In another instance a member of the club complained that an exhibitor had repudiated his contract without the usual thirty days' notice. It developed that the contract had not been approved by the home office, and notwithstanding the fact that the exhibitor had made a deposit, the club sustained the exhibitor despite the tearful protestations of the complaining member.

These actions have given both the members and the exhibitors confidence in the club and its usefulness cannot be approximated.

Starts Boycott to Squelch Sunday Show

De Ridder, La., Minister Advises Boycott Against Sabbath Exhibitor—Even His Bakery Is Affected—Local Newspapers Denounce Move.

DE RIDDER, LA.—Manager Ferd Johnson of the Dreamland theater has just been going through an experience which might have proved disastrous to a man less solidly entrenched in the estimation of his fellow citizens. Recently Manager Johnson conceived the idea of giving the people of De Ridder Sunday picture shows. He went about the project circumspectly, announcing that he would open his show for one Sunday and if there was serious objection, or if it was found that the law was being transgressed, he would discontinue further Sunday exhibitions. This was not satisfactory to the ultra element and one of the ministers of the town instituted a boycott. Manager Johnson is a man of affairs and runs a bakery and another mercantile establishment. The boycott was extended to all of these businesses, with the result that Manager Johnson's trade was seriously affected. Bread was imported from Beaumont, Texas, admittedly a city of Sunday shows and other alleged iniquities.

The citizens of the town took sides in the matter and the local newspaper printed an editorial denouncing the boycott as illegal and ill-advised. Then the matter was taken to New Orleans, where the United States district attorney was acquainted with the facts. This latter action quickly quieted the turmoil, but the final outcome is anxiously awaited.

D. S. Holmes Takes Charge of Greater Vitagraph.

New Orleans, La.—D. S. Holmes, recently with the Los Angeles office of the Greater Vitagraph, has become fully installed in the Greater Vitagraph exchange.

Iowa Film News of the Week.

By Dorothy Day, Register-Tribune, Des Moines, Ia.

Bluebirds Are in Their New Nest.

DES MOINES, Ia.—The Bluebirds have all settled in their new office at 702 Mulberry in the same building with the Standard Film Corporation. Their arrival has livened things considerably in the building and Manager Amos is busy looking after his contracts.

Curly Calvert of the Bluebird office in Omaha was in town last week helping the Des Moines office to get settled.

W. H. Petersen Buys Theater Interests.

Sibley, Ia.—W. H. Peterson, of Sibley, Ia., has just bought for $16,500 cash the theater holdings of Hal Kelley, at Beatrice, Neb., which include leases on the beautiful Gilbert theater, the Lyric theater and the Paddock opera house.

Mr. Kelley, who came to Beatrice from Creston, Iowa, where he was lessee and manager of the Temple Grand theater, has made an enviable reputation as an exhibitor and his Gilbert theater now has state-wide recognition as the home of splendid entertainments. When he came to Beatrice the show game was at a very low ebb and the Gilbert, while a new and beautiful house, was doing practically no business. Soon, however, capacity houses were the rule rather than the exception, and his receipts for the past year total $56,318. The increase in business was accomplished without contests or other give-away methods, solely by the use of plenty of advertising space, a dependable show, good music, and a showman's personality.

Heard at Mid-West Photoplay Offices.

Des Moines, Ia.—A. H. Blank, of the Mid West Photoplay offices, has gone to New York in the interests of the Triangle and Mid West, and will remain in the East for some weeks.

The Mid West local office gave a private showing of "The Barrier" at the Garden theater last Tuesday morning. It will be shown publicly in the early part of June. W. H. Bell, manager of the Kansas City Mid West offices, has been making an extended trip over the Iowa and Nebraska territory and was present at this showing.

Jesse Hartman, formerly salesman for the Iowa and Nebraska territory of the Mid West, has been in the East for some months. He has returned home now and will again take up his duties with the Mid West.

J. S. Skirboll of Metro Visits Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia.—Joseph S. Skirboll, general manager of the Metro Pictures Exchange in Pittsburgh, Des Moines, Chicago and Kansas City, was in Des Moines visiting his brother, manager of the local Metro exchange.

Chas. Werner, manager of the St. Louis Metro offices, was also a local visitor last week.

Harris Bringing Back "Thousand Leagues."

Des Moines, Ia.—After a week's successful run at the Majestic some four weeks ago, Zach Harris, who controls the state rights to "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" in Iowa, has arranged to bring the film back to Des Moines for a second week's run at the Majestic at popular prices. The picture took splendidly in Des Moines and is enjoying a wonderful run over the state.

At the Local Universal Office.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Butterfly offices have been opened and are now busily taking care of all the inquiries that have been pouring in for bookings. The manager of this office has not yet been appointed, but E. Reese is acting as assistant manager until the appointment. It is rumored that the Butterfly pictures will open at the Majestic in the near future in opposition to their Bluebird relatives, since the Bluebirds will open there practically the same time.

Dan Lederman made a trip to Davenport last Tuesday and was in St. Louise over Friday.

J. Bernhein, manager of the Universal offices in Minneapolis, was a visitor at the Laemlle office in this city last week.

Frank Van Hoesen, manager of the Laemlle service in Omaha, telegraphed to Lederman last week that the stork had presented him with a 7½-pound baby girl. Van Hoesen is a happy man.

News of the Iowa Exhibitors.

Des Moines, Ia.—L. E. Williams of Diagonel and Edward Awe of the Strand in Fort Dodge were callers at the Mutual exchange last week.

Washington, Ia.—F. R. Dowell has sold his Garden theater in Washington, Ia., to M. Levine, formerly of Chicago.

Marion, Ia.—G. T. Medhurst has purchased the Garden theater in Marion from Joseph Mulherin.

Des Moines, Ia.—Marty Williams, manager of the local Standard office, ran up to Davenport, Cedar Rapids and Oskaloosa last week.

F. A. Russell of the Opera House in Humboldt was in town last week, calling at the Standard Film office.

CALIFORNIA ITEMS.

Theater St. Francis Has Tea Room.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Theater St. Francis recently tried the experiment of serving refreshments free of charge to lady patrons and has found the plan to be a very satisfactory one from the standpoint of publicity. A section of the mezzanine balcony has been fitted up as an Oriental lounge and here tea is served to those desiring it amid elegant surroundings. This theater, located in the hotel and shopping district, has a large women's and children's patronage and does a good matinee business.

Harry Cornell Back in Oakland.

Oakland, Cal.—Harry E. Cornell, former manager of the Pantages theater, which shows vaudeville and moving pictures, is again in charge of this house, after an extended trip east. After having been in Oakland for several years he was sent to Minneapolis to open a new house there and later visited New York and other theatrical centers, returning to succeed Robert G. Drady as local manager, the latter having resigned to take charge of a new house in San Francisco. When Mr. Cornell was here before he held a position as director of the Merchants' Exchange of Oakland and has always taken a keen interest in civic affairs.

Portola Theater to Show Triangle.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Portola theater, conducted under the direction of Eugene Roth, is to feature the Triangle program in the future, the first showing to be made during the week of July 8. In the past this house has used open market attractions almost exclusively, and Mr. Roth has been a strong advocate of the open booking policy. Conditions have become such of late, however, that he has decided that the Triangle program offers adequate protection and a suitable selection of subjects. He has accordingly booked it for the Portola and the new California theater at Fourth and Market streets, which will be ready for occupancy before the close of the present year.

Celebrates Anniversary.

San Francisco, Cal.—The first anniversary of the opening of the New Mission theater was observed recently by Kahn & Greenfield, the affair taking the form of a celebration given under the auspices of the Mission Promotion Association. Leading city officials were present, as well as guests.

U. C. Theater at Berkeley, Cal., to Open Soon

University of California Students Will Have Splendid New Picture Theater—Seats for 2,000—Manager Is A. H. Moore.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

BERKELEY, CAL.—Splendid progress is being made on the new U. C. theater, University avenue, near Shattuck, and it is anticipated that this will be opened to the public some time in June. The walls and roof are in place and only the interior finishing and the installation of equipment remains to be done. This theater is located near the center of the College City, less than a block from the Southern Pacific and Key Route suburban lines and on a leading cross-town street car line. It is convenient to the new residence districts of Thousand Oaks and Northbrae and will draw particularly from North Berkeley and the college section.

The theater will have a seating capacity of about 2,000, all on one floor, and will have no posts to mar the lines of vision. It has been built parallel to Shattuck avenue, with stores in front, and will thus be removed from the noise of the street. An organ costing more than $30,000 is being installed by the American Photo Player company, whose great plant is located but a short distance from this house.

The new theater will be conducted under the management of A. H. Moore, well known through his former connection with the local house of the Turner & Dahnken circuit, and much of the service to be used has been contracted for. The franchise for first-run Triangle productions in this city has been secured, and in addition it is planned to present one big special production each month. Mr. Moore promises many innovations in the new house, which has been in course of construction since last December and which has received his personal attention since then.

The city of Berkeley is the home of the second largest university in the United States, being exceeded in attendance only by Columbia University. During the college term the moving picture houses are patronized freely by students, and the U. C. theater is expected to become a popular gathering place for them, its location being less than three blocks from the campus.

Mark E. Leichter, Strand Manager.

San Francisco, Cal.—Mark M. Leichter, whose likeness is presented herewith, is a splendid type of the young exhibitor whose influence is now being felt so strongly in this field. While he has been here but a few years he has earned an enviable reputation for himself and is now filling the position of manager of the Strand theater, San Francisco's latest exclusive moving picture house, operated by Sid Grauman.

Mark M. Leichter.

Mr. Leichter first began to attract attention when, with a partner, he took over the Rex theater on Polk street, a small house in a district crowded with theaters. By a careful selection of service and by featuring this theater as the amusement place of the elite, he achieved success where others saw only certain failure. The clever advertising done by this house while it was under his management has probably been copied by more exhibitors in suburban districts than that of any other theater. Last year an opening in the film exchange field presented itself and Mr. Leichter disposed of his theater interests and took up the new line of work. When Sid Grauman decided to change from vaudeville to moving pictures he looked around for an experienced manager with ideas and induced Mr. Leichter to become his assistant. The latter assisted in planning the refurnishing of the house, and since the opening has devoted much of his attention to publicity work.

Mr. Leichter believes in a liberal use of newspaper space and a steady publicity effort, rather than sensational schemes. He feels that a clean house, with clean pictures advertised in a clean manner will succeed, and is putting these ideas into effect in the management of the Strand theater.

M. E. Corey Opens Office.

San Francisco, Cal.—M. E. Corey, formerly vice-president of the Motion Pictures Exhibitors' League of America, has taken space in with the Independent Film and Supply Co., 124 Golden Gate avenue, and will act as booking man for country exhibitors as well as a reviewer of pictures.

Exhibitors Visiting.

San Francisco, Cal.—Among the out-of-town exhibitors who have been here of late arranging for service have been: J. W. Southwick of the Kozy theater, Stockton; C. E. Howard of the Gadella theater, Oroville, and N. Watton of the Colonial theater, Stockton. The latter surprised his friends here by appearing in a new eight-cylinder touring car which he has recently acquired.

T. & D. Circuit News.

San Francisco, Cal.—The construction of the new office building on Golden Gate avenne, between Jones and Leavenworth streets, for the Turner & Dahnken circuit is now well under way and it is hoped to have it ready for occupancy early in August.

The new additions to the T. & D. organ at the Tivoli theater are now practically completed and a patriotic organ recital will be rendered on the morning of Memorial Day. This recital will be free to the public.

The Turner & Dahnken circuit has purchased on trial from Essanay an initial picture through the First National Exhibitors' circuit. This picture will be out very shortly and will be shown at the various T. & D. houses.

The new T. & D. house at Stockton is rapidly nearing completion and the opening is scheduled to take place on the first day of July.

California Film Briefs.

Oakland, Cal.—J. Wiseman, owner of the Golden Gate theater on San Pablo avenue, has joined the brigade of automobilists.

Taft, Cal.—Claude Kennell, who has been conducting the Optic theater, has opened an airdome that seats 500 persons.

Taft, Cal.—C. L. Shirk is planning to erect a moving picture theater here.

Stockton, Cal.—G. W. Dare has opened a moving picture studio and is giving special attention to advertising and promotion work. He will shortly complete a promotion film, "Miss Stockton," depicting the industrial life of the city.

Richmond, Cal.—The Macdonald theater is to be remodeled.

Colfax, Cal.—Robert C. Clendenin and wife, who have been interested in a moving picture theater, have filed a voluntary petition for bankruptcy.

New Theater to Open in Medford, Oregon

Rialto Will Be Ready for Audience in Middle of June—Will Seat 800 Persons—Pretty Morgan-Percy House for Town in Middle of State.

By Abraham Nelson, Majestic Theater Bldg., Portland, Ore.

MEDFORD, OREGON.—The Rialto theater is scheduled to open here in the middle of June. The building housing the theater is new and is up-to-date in every particular. The auditorium seats 800. The lamp room equipment consists of two Simplex machines and double arc transverter installed by Pete Sabo, of Portland.

The Rialto will be conducted by the Moran-Percy Company. The partners recently made a trip to Portland, arranging film service.

More Censorship Queerness.

Portland, Oregon.—An example of the whimsical workings of censorship came to public notice here recently when "The Common Law," played at the Baker theater, also at the Ideal theater. At the Baker, Portland's leading stock house, it was put on by a company of actors and was uncensored; it "got by" big. At the Ideal the film version, featuring Clara Kimball Young, was shown. The "punch," the part of the film that makes the story "The Common Law" and not something else, was cut out by the censors, say exhibitors who have shown the picture, with the result that the spectators had a hard time to follow the story and it failed to be the attraction "The Common Law" was elsewhere.

Senator Chamberlain Backs Exhibitors.

Portland, Oregon.—During the recent efforts to place the exhibitors' side of the war tax question before Congress and to make the senators and representatives at Washington see that a too rigid tax plan would put small theaters out of business and eventually be a loss in revenue to the government, a flood of wires was sent to Senator George Chamberlain, Oregon's lone senator. Mr. Chamberlain has replied to the exhibitors saying that all the points presented would receive careful consideration by him at the Senate hearing.

Idaho Exhibitor Visits Portland.

Portland, Oregon.—N. E. Leigh, who conducts the theaters at Parma and Wilder, Idaho, and at Nyssa, Oregon, across the line, was a recent visitor in Portland en route from Seattle, and had some interesting news to tell about the business east of the Cascades.

Mr. Leigh reports nice business at his theaters, but says that its future depends largely upon the outcome of the war tax questions. Taxes on admissions, footage and express charges will require a considerable adjustment of conditions to make any money, Mr. Leigh maintains. He now pays more express charges than anybody in the territory, the transportation for a show to him costing about five dollars. Ten and fifteen cents is the usual admission price he receives, with 25 cents for special features.

With the Local Road Men.

Portland, Oregon. R. H. Allan, representative for Greater Vitagraph in Oregon, has permanently established his headquarters here. This is possibly the only feature concern doing business from Seattle in Oregon territory that has placed a permanent agent in Portland. The wisdom of having a Portland representative is evidenced by the fact that Greater Vitagraph has an account in nearly every town in the Oregon block.

Fred Simonton, new manager for Mutual, recently made a business trip through the southern part of the territory.

Among the visiting road men during the week of May 26 were W. W. Armstrong, McClures, and W. A. Crank, Metro.

Van D. Brink is Dead.

Portland, Oregon.—Exhibitors and exchange men were recently apprised of the passing of Van D. Brink, of the Lyric theater Prineville, Oregon. He had been sick only a short time.

Mr. Brink was a well-known exhibitor in central Oregon, having been in business there for several years. He conducted the Lyric about a year. W. J. Pancake, the owner of the theater, who has personally taken charge, was a recent visitor in Portland arranging film service.

Interesting Northwest Theater Notes.

Idaho City, Ida.—M. Wiegel has opened his new theater bearing his name. His old showhouse burned some time ago.

Rye Balley, Ore.—The theater maintained by the Rainbow mine for the miners has reopened.

Vale, Ore.—The Rex theater has closed.

Cove, Ore.—Ernest Thorsen has taken over the theater here. F. C. Weskil, the former exhibitor, having gone to North Powder, Ore.

Spokane News Notes.

By S. Clark Patchin, E 1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

Pickford and Clark Pictures as Rivals This Week.

SPOKANE, WASH.—For the first time in their long starring experience in screendom, Mary Pickford and Marguerite Clark, the popular pair of photoplaying misses in pictures, appeared in Spokane this week as rival attractions at the Liberty and Clemmer theaters, respectively. Little Mary began a five days' engagement, her first at the Liberty, in "A Poor Little Rich Girl," her third Artcraft picture.

The Clemmer presented Marguerite Clark for four days, in "The Valentine Girl." Previously both stars appeared exclusively on the Clemmer screen under the Famous Players standard, and close tab used to be kept on the box office receipts to determine the relative popularity of the two little lassies in Spokane. It might be unfair to recall the net result of these various engagements. Managers H. S. Clemmer and Ralph Rumner are sanguine that they have each secured the most popular miss in pictures. They may be said to excel each other mutually.

The Clemmer will not be without its Pickford, however, for Jack, Mary's brother, will be presented with Vivian Martin in "The Girl at Home."

Kerrigan at the Spokane Strand.

Spokane, Wash. — Warren Kerrigan, moving picture star, appeared at the Strand theater, in person, for two days, May 18 and 19. A children's matinee was arranged for and all the children who attended had the opportunity of shaking hands with Mr. Kerrigan. The management cut the admission price of ten cents in half for the children.

Children Rewarded for "Clean Up" Work.

Spokane, Wash.—As the result of a clean-up campaign backed by the Spokane Ad Club and under the direction of the Spokane Board of Health, 2,976 Spokane school children were entertained at the Casino, Clemmer, Liberty and Class A moving picture theaters at the 11 a. m. shows Saturday, May 26.

Previous to clean-up week announcement was made that the Ad Club would, with the co-operation of Managers Dr. H. S. Clemmer, C. E. Stilwell and Ralph Ruffner, each standing part of the expense, furnish free tickets to each child who did eight hours' work during the week. Many of the children made a nice amount of spending money in addition as their time was paid for by those who employed them. Some boys hired wagons and hauled rubbish before and after school and on Saturday. The tickets were distributed through the schools under the direction of Superintendent O. C. Pratt. Good programs were given for the children.

Some of the Recent Film Attractions.

Spokane, Wash.—Girlhood was the prevalent theme at the motion picture theaters for the week of May 27, judging by the titles of the photoplays scheduled at the leading houses. Practically every screen drama was designated by the word "girl" and the stars at all of the leading picture houses for women.

Here are some of the titles and the houses at which they were shown: "A Poor Little Rich Girl," with Mary Pickford, at the Liberty; "The Valentine Girl," at the Clemmer, with Marguerite Clark in the lead; "The Girl at Home," with Vivian Martin, at the Clemmer; "The Small Town Girl," at the Class A theater, and "The Boy Girl," at the Casino.

Amusement Business in Yakima Ably Run

Fred Mercy Is in Supreme Control of Theaters in City, But Is Far From Autocratic with Exchanges and Is Well Liked—Some Ideas.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

NORTH YAKIMA, Wash.—It is very seldom that an exhibitor who controls the motion picture business of his town is really well liked by the exchange men who sell him film. Fred Mercy of North Yakima, however, is an exception to this rule. Mr. Mercy makes a trip to Seattle every week to look after his bookings, and every exchange manager who does business with him says that Fred is willing to play the game fairly. In other words, just because he owns all the theaters in the town, he doesn't say:

"If you don't give me your pictures at my price I won't show them in my town."

Instead he is willing to give a fair price for everything he gets, and the exchange men appreciate it. Yet Mr. Mercy has his business interests lined up in such a way that he could dictate terms as well as many other exhibitors whose power extends over a much larger territory.

North Yakima is a city of 15,000 inhabitants, situated in a very rich and thickly settled section of Washington. All the ranchers in the vicinity own automobiles, and they think nothing of traveling ten miles or more to see the shows, so Mr. Mercy's houses draw from a population of 18,000 to 20,000, instead of only 15,000. He owns four theaters, the Yakima, with a seating capacity of 800, where road shows are booked; the Empire, with a seating capacity of 1,100, where the bill is composed of four days of vaudeville and three days of motion pictures, only the best special features being shown; the Majestic, seating 600, and catering to the higher class of program service, the admission price being ten cents; and the Avenue, a ten-cent house seating 400, where the serials and the more sensational films are shown. This last house is the favorite of the Indians and a great many of the ranch employees. There are quite a number of Indians in this vicinity, and Mr. Mercy says that their favorite type of film is the slap-stick comedy. Stories that try to drive home a great truth go completely over their heads.

Advertising should be a simple matter to Mr. Mercy, if he were willing to jog along at the usual rate; for he owns the only poster advertising business in the in the town and 125 advertising stands, and he is considering the purchase of one of the daily newspapers. At present the only newspaper advertising he indulges in is one ten-inch space next to the daily news column in each paper. This he divides into four equal parts, giving one part to each theater. But Mr. Mercy is not satisfied with such simple ways of advertising. Every so often he wakes up the inhabitants of the entire valley with an advertising idea equal to any circus "stunt." Some of his original ideas have already appeared in the "Advertising for Exhibitors" department in the WORLD.

In his newspaper advertisements this thoughtful exhibitor advises his patrons to 'phone in for a schedule of the shows; but he never places the schedule in the box office window. He says he tried that once and watched the results, and saw people come up in the middle of a show and say: "Oh, let's go home now. Let's go home and come back some other time." And they usually didn't come back at all.

In spite of his evident grasp of the amusement business, Mr. Mercy believes in profiting by other people's ideas. He has a manager and an advertising man with whom he holds council every night, and he often consults the door man and the ushers as to the kinds of pictures the people like, and asks them for suggestions for improvement in service, which they may be able to make because of closer contact with the patrons. He also keeps in close touch with his operators and their problems and often stands at the door himself and asks his patrons what they like and what they don't like about his show. The people have also learned to rely on his word about the shows, for they often ask him which is the best for that night, and he invariably gives them his honest opinion on the matter.

Special Car for Portland Convention.

Seattle, Wash.—Seattle exhibitors and exchange men left on a special car on the night of May 28 for Portland to be present at the Oregon Motion Picture Men's Association convention on May 29 and 30. They were to remain for the Movie Ball to be given at the Multnomah hotel on the evening of the 30th.

J. Warren Kerrigan Draws Big Crowds.

Seattle, Wash.—During J. Warren Kerrigan's personal appearance at the Clemmer theater in Seattle, May 23 to 25 inclusive, there was not an hour of the afternoon or evening that the lobby was not packed with people waiting for seats. Mr. Kerrigan told the WORLD correspondent that he had been treated royally during his entire trip through the United States, but that nowhere had he a greater ovation than in Seattle. The exhibitors and exchange men gave a luncheon in his honor on May 24, and the Seattle Daily Star detailed one of its girl reporters to interview him at a tete-a-tete luncheon and during a horseback ride, and her story appeared on the front page of the paper next day.

From Seattle Mr. Kerrigan went on to Portland to attend the Movie Ball. That will be the last city in his tour of the country, for he will go straight on from there to Los Angeles.

Selznick Office Established in Seattle.

Seattle, Wash.—Ben S. Cohen, personal representative of Lewis J. Selznick, has established the Seattle office at 1214 Fourth avenue. B. R. Keller, formerly salesman for Pathe out of San Francisco, is manager; George P. Ekre, formerly salesman for General out of Spokane, is salesman, and Miss H. Erickson, formerly with Paramount, is booker.

Seattle Parent Teachers to List Better Films

Propose to Publish the Names of Such Pictures as Are Considered to Be Valuable—Is the Result of Local Discussion.

S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Admitting the tremendous hold that motion pictures have upon Seattle, the Parent-Teachers' Association of this city is making a serious study of the influence of different classes of pictures and of the duty of the responsible people of the community to the motion picture question. At each of the regular bi-monthly meetings of the association addresses on this subject are being made by Prof. Knisely, of the University of Washington; Dr. Sarah Kendall, well-known woman physician and social worker of the city, and Edward Hood Watson, assistant manager of the Seattle Vitagraph office.

Prof. Knisely lectures on the pictures as an educator and their possible use in educational work. Dr. Kendall discusses their moral influence; while Mr. Watson's talk is a resume of the other two from the point of view of the industry. By thus creating a demand for good pictures, Mr. Watson assures them, they will solve the question which cannot be solved by censorship.

Following Mr. Watson's idea, the association is considering the plan of publishing the names of pictures to which they especially wish to set the stamp of their approval, after the manner of the Drama League of America, which has posted in libraries and club buildings throughout the country a list of the legitimate dramas of the season which it recommends.

"Womanhood" Receives Official Ovation at Navy Yard.

Bremerton, Wash.—During the recent showing of "Womanhood" at the Dream theater, Managers Jack Rantz and E. Oswald invited Capt. Coontz, commandant of the Bremerton Navy Yard, and several other naval officials to a preliminary viewing of the picture. What they said about it was published in the Bremerton papers, and special permission was given to the under officers and midshipmen to attend the showing of the patriotic feature. Frequently during the performances the crowded houses broke into enthusiastic applause, and the managers state that this was one of the most successful pictures that they have ever shown in the navy yard city.

G. A. Faris, manager of the Seattle office of the Greater Vitagraph, says that "Womahood" was given greater publicity in the Seattle territory than in any other part of the country.

"Maternity" Endorsed by Federation of Women's Clubs.

Seattle, Wash.—When W. H. Smythe, manager of the Strand theater, brought this week's feature, "Maternity," to the notice of the Mothers' Club and the Parent-Teachers' Association of Seattle they approved of the picture so strongly that they enlisted the support of the Federation of Women's Clubs to bring the picture to the attention of women throughout the city and state. The Federation sent out 10,000 letters urging women to see "Maternity." Mr. Smythe gave them a percentage of the gross receipts.

News of the Alaska Theaters.

Seattle, Wash.—The news of the picture business in Alaska which reached the Seattle WORLD correspondent this week is very gratifying.

When W. D. Gross presented "Less Than the Dust" at his 1,000 capacity Coliseum in Juneau recently, every seat was taken.

"Purity" beat everything ever run in Anchorage. When it was shown at A. E. Lathrop's Empress for three nights with two shows each night every seat was sold at least a half hour before each show. Construction gangs for twenty miles around quit work and walked in to see the picture.

A. E. Lathrop advises his representative in Seattle that, from a purely business standpoint, it would be unwise to send up any more such films as "The Battle Cry of Peace." There are only 7,000 people in Anchorage, and if a large percentage of them enlisted in the army, the Empress might be in serious need of patronage.

Pathe Northwest Supervisor Shows British Official War Pictures.

Seattle, Wash.—At the Liberty theater on May 18 Fred C. Quimby, Northwest supervisor for Pathe, personally conducted an invitation showing of the first six reels of the British Official War Pictures, released by Pathe. Bernard Pelly, the British consul in Seattle, and his aides, the Army officers from Fort Lawton, and the Navy officers from Bremerton, the city officials, including Mayor Gill, Clarence Blethen, owner of the Seattle Times, and other representatives of the press, were the guests at this performance. Mr. Quimby will give a similar performance at the Davenport Hotel in Spokane, at the Rialto theater in Butte and at the Columbia in Portland.

Mr. Quimby announces that arrangements have been made with the press in Seattle, Portland, Spokane and Butte to present these pictures under the auspices of the leading newspapers of the respective towns. They will be booked in two-reel installments to the exhibitors of the Northwest through the Seattle Pathe office.

Notes from the Artcraft Office.

Seattle, Wash.—Guy F. Navarre, road representative for Artcraft, has just returned from a trip through the Portland territory. While in the Hood River country, Mr. Navarre sold the George M. Cohan releases to the Red Cross Society of that vicinity. The officers of the Red Cross gave as the reason for their choice the fact that Cohan was the original Uncle Sam of the stage. The features are to be put on at the Electric theater at Hood River. Art. Kolstad is the live wire manager of this theater. He runs a program show, except for Artcraft releases.

K-E-S-E, De Luxe, and the H. A. Johnson Co. Move Into New Exchange Building.

Seattle, Wash.—Another new building has been added to Seattle's growing colony of up-to-date exchange buildings, and the lessees of the latest addition, K-E-S-E, the De Luxe Feature Film Co. and the H. A. Johnson Company, moved into their new quarters this week. The structure is a one-story brick building, finished inside entirely with cement and plaster. It is at the corner of Third avenue and Virginia street, just diagonally across from the new building occupied by the Mutual and Universal offices. Another similar building will be erected next door to it shortly, in which will be housed four or five exchanges.

The suites in the new building are divided into about one-third of the space for offices, a large filing room, fireproof film storage vaults with an extra large air vent in each, and fireproof inspection rooms. There is also an auditorium for private showing of films. Mike Rosenberg, president of De Luxe, is the first to be settled in the new building and he evidently felt that his new quarters deserved dressing up, for the blue silk sash curtains and the blue velvet carpet would do credit to a Wall street broker's office
